Shooting, as listed on the program sheet, will commence at 7 p.m. will end at 11 p.m.

"We should place high in all events entered," said McFarland.

He explained that especially in the women's division, the college should win honors.

Rifle competition has been scheduled to last until Monday at the Armory as many teams are expected to compete.

Bowlers Improve For Meets With Gonzaga, San Mateo

Bowling activities get under full swing this week, with men in the bowling classes improving in practice, and Joseph A. Amori promising to announce the names of the regular Ram bowlers soon. Rains have not dampened the spirits of the college keglers, and they will be in there smashing out strikes when they meet San Mateo and Gonzaga.

Amori hopes to raise the team average from 170, bowled against San Mateo last week, to 180 or 190 by the time he meets Gonzaga. A close fight looms between Jack Schmale and Robert Riordan for top honors this season. In their last match, against the peninsula school, Riordan nosed out Schmale by five points, and it should prove an exciting match when these two hardwood stars get together again.

Meanwhile, Gonzaga is preparing to show up the Rams in a telegraphic meet scheduled for some time next week. Interest lies in discovering how good the northern bowlers are, and whether the Rams do come out of the slump and chalk up scores that will make experts jealous.

The Mare Island Marines defeated the California football team twice in 1918. The situation was well in hand.

Fair In '40

Latin-Americas To Participate In Exposition

Latin-American participation in the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition loomed large this week following the signing of contracts by El Salvador, according to press releases received from the Exposition.

News that El Salvador had agreed to participate during the 1940 season heightened the belief of Major O. J. Keatinge, director of foreign participation, that other Latin-American countries would soon follow suit. Inter-relationship of the Americas will be stressed by the Fair in '40, announced the Exposition publicity department.

Work on the Island was stepped up this week, with large crews of men engaged in paving, plastering, painting and gardening operations.

Construction and enlargement of the stage and sets for America, Cavalcade of a Nation, which will be the successor this year to the Cavalcade of the Golden West, is well under way, while preliminary plans are being made for the aquacade, second large show to be staged by the Exposition this year.

Susanna Foster, 15-year-old Paramount singing starlet, visited Treasure Island last week to rehearse her starring role in The Golden Days of Forty, opening production of the new season of the Fair, according to advices from the Exposition publicity division.

The talented young coloratura soprano was guest of honor at a press reception in the Federal Building after a preview of her latest picture, The Great Victor Herbert.

According to Earl Darfler, Exposition production manager, much of the opening production will be built about the young starlet.

Contracts have been signed for a series of eight symphony concerts during the Exposition season, and arrangements are being made with the San Francisco Opera Association for a number of famous opera stars to appear on Treasure Island, announced Emil O. Bondeson, director of shows.

Announcement was made this week by William W. Monahan, Exposition manager, that more than 100 special days already have been arranged for and applications for others are pouring in every week.

First foreign day arranged is France Day. Members of the California French Colony have selected the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille, July 14, for their celebration.

Colleges Plan April Barn Dance At Peninsula Spot

Working now upon tentative plans to hold a joint San Mateo-San Francisco barn dance late in April is Lyle Shultz, Associated Men Students prexy.

According to Shultz, this joint AMS affair would be the first of its kind for the college.

"I've just written to representatives of the San Mateo student body to find out whether such an arrangement could be possible," he said.

Shultz believes that a joint barn dance would add to the color of the semi-annual affair.

The AMS president said that if plans "go through," the spot selected for the AMS dance probably would be at or near Bay Meadows, located down the peninsula.

'Write Name In Textbooks,' Advises Dean Browne

Advising college students to have their names on all text-books, Dean Edwin C. Browne today revealed the hazards of failure to do so.

For the students' own protection, he said, their names should be written in ink in all text-books.

"On different occasions students have purchased substantial amounts of text-books. Leaving them casually in classes with no identification results in the possibility of their being confused with illegally obtained books," Dean Browne said.

Those students who have unknowingly mixed texts and who are unaware of possessing possibly stolen books are sometimes wounded at the reception they receive when presenting these books for refund.

"To spare harsh words," Dean Browne added, "put your name in!"

Let's Have The Low-Down, Mr. Noble

By MARY FRANCES MALONE

If it takes a charming man to win over an interviewer with sopping feet, a splitting headache, and a drenching new beret, then Ray Noble may safely be said to be charming to the nth degree. For it was on one of San Francisco's all too rainy nights that Noble somehow managed to find time to be interviewed in the Rose Room Bowl of the Palace Hotel, where he and his orchestra are playing nightly.

"Oh, from San Francisco Junior College?" asked Noble, in much the same tone he would use in asking, "Oh, Roosevelt's personal adviser?" Score one for English diplomacy.

Then Noble plunged headlong into a conversation that materialized into more or less of an interview with discussions of such weighty subjects as steaks, college students, and San Francisco.

"College students are really the most critical and the most appreciative of audiences," be began in his clipped English accent.

He went on to say that men and women of college age are naturally interested in new fads, as well as being thoroughly music-conscious and fun-conscious. He enjoys playing for students, as long as they don't catch him on some minor change in one of his arrangements.

Grabbing an aspirin for moral as well as physical support, the interviewer ventured the time-worn query on how he liked San Francisco. Although Form Sheet Answer 283 and an expression of utter boredom were in order, Noble answered quite eagerly.

"I do like San Francisco's stores and sights and things," he said. "And San Francisco has the only real night life on the Coast, you know. Not," he added hastily, "that I'm a madman for night life."

Clarifying a situation that has aroused public questioning, Noble declared that his band actually does fly to Hollywood for a transcontinental broadcast each Wednesday night. At first, members of the band planned to take a special bus, but flying has proved to be more profitable.

"Besides, it's more fun, anyhow," he grinned engagingly.

Noble believes that, song writing usually consists of sitting down with paper, a pencil, and an idea. He doesn't seem to believe in an analytical system of song composing, for often the most popular song is that which violates musical principles. Either a song is good or it isn't, in his opinion. How can one know if a song is a potential hit?

"A successful song just feels good, that's all," he shrugged.

Speaking from his experience as both an arranger and a composer of such favorites as Good night, Sweetheart, Cherokee, and The Very Thought of You," Noble declared that he thinks there is a better future in arranging. An arranger's position is much more permanent, he feels.

"What if you do write one hit?" Noble asked. "If you're lucky, you might live for one year on it, and then you either produce another hit or you drop dead."

Noble is also a firm advocate of hard work in producing a really good band. As a classic example of determination and ambition leading to success, he cited the case of Glenn Miller, who used to play trombone in Noble's orchestra.

Asked whether he still could derive a personal pleasure from music, Noble replied in a definite affirmative. Classical music provides his main avocation, with the exception of amateur moving picture photography.

And was the Hollywood influence responsible for the photographic hobby?

Noble winced as a flash bulb went off, then reluctantly broke down and admitted the truth.

"No, it all started when I gave the camera to my wife for a present. I've been taking pictures ever since."

The location of Noble's next engagement is as yet unknown.

"Frankly, only the agents and kind heaven know," he laughed, "and in just that order."

As important looking people kept coming up and whispering in Noble's ear every two minutes, he decided to take his leave. He left behind an impression of a typical well-bred Englishman whose keynote seemed a happy combination of courtesy and humor.

21 Sophomores Hold College Business Apprenticeships

Listed on the cooperative training program of the college Business Department as holding apprentice jobs in various life insurance companies are 21 high sophomores.

The list is as follows: Elwood Moran, Edward Boese, Audrey Vandor, Winefred Wrede, Gloria Miller, Ted Wrede, Betty Fagersten, Bill Brown, Margaret Somerset, Berty Mentzer, Margaret Wilson, Geneva Catlett, Marian Wilson, Mary Rowan, Margaret Trimble, Warren Nelson, Eva Kronfeld, John Riordon, Herbert Newell, and Julie Bradshaw. More students will be added to this list next week, according to W. C. Marsh, the placement instructor.

"There is 100 per cent placement in our insurance department for those who are well trained, and the insurance firms of the city are interested in our program," announced F. G. Marsh, chairman of the Business Department.

University Head Compares War Propaganda

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — (ACP)—The University of Minnesota's President Guy Stanton Ford, who during World War I conducted as stupendous a propaganda drive as this country has ever seen, looks at World War II and compares it with the first with the searching eyes of an expert.

He finds:

(1) A changed attitude on the part of students and the public—an "awareness" which was not present in 1914.

(2) A more alert student mind—"propaganda must now be more subtle."

(3) A decision on the part of students to "put a ring of iron around the United States" and a refusal to be roused by anything less than what appears, at least, to be "an overt attack upon this nation."

(4) "A general feeling in the United States that we must take some responsibility for peace and reconstruction after the war."

On this first point he says:

"There is anawareness today which was not present during the last war. For instance, when I landed in New York after my trip aboard, the reporters all wanted to know: 'When are we going to get into it? 'Will we get into it?' 'How long will it be?' The war had then been under way about two weeks.

"I said, 'Do you know, gentlemen, that you are asking questions now, after two weeks, that were not asked in the World War until after two years?' And that is the situation that exists everywhere, including the colleges."

President Ford is probably the country's greatest authority on the molding of student opinion. During the last war, he served as director of the division of civic and educational cooperation of the immensely powerful Committee on Public Information. It was his duty to build American solidarity in the schools and universities.

Are today's students ripe for war propaganda? And will it differ from the propaganda of 1917-18? To the first question, President Ford replied flatly, "Not at all. I feel that it would take what appeared to be an overt attack upon this nation now to rouse students to war. But there doesn't seem to be any action in regard to peace—simply a state of mind, a determination to put a ring of iron around the United States."

Stressing the "awareness" which he finds present today, President Ford noted that "there is a much higher level of intelligence in this country. Of course," he added, "there should be. We have more avenues of information open to us.

"There seems," he pointed out, "to be little doubt in this country as to who precipitated this war. Public opinion polls show that the country has already placed the blame. No such situation existed at the star of the last war.

"I think that as a result of all this, propaganda must be more subtle. The old horror and atrocity stories of 1914 won't work any more."

And here President Ford warned against too loose condemnation of that word. "Everything is being labeled 'propaganda'," he said. "Particularly those things we don't like. There is a tendency to believe nothing. There is danger in that direction, too."

Aero Fledglings Get Official OK To Take Air, Weather Permitting

After five months of untangling the seemingly interminable Washington red tape, the college Civil Aeronautics Program is in full swing and the thirty students have at last taken to the air.

Although the official word to start was received last week students were kept on the ground because of the deluge of the past few days.

The present flight plan calls for each student to receive from two to three hours of flight instruction per week, to be given in half hour periods.

For the past five months, while the humerous difficulties connected with the course were ironed out, students have been put through a rigorous ground school course conducted by Captain George Richards, College Flight director. This course has consisted of the History of Flight, Aerodynamics, and the Civil Air Regulations, the class is now delving into the mysteries of Navigation and Meteorology.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (ACP) — Student pilots in U. S. colleges and universities are careful and take no chances.

That's the conclusion that must be drawn from the report of the Civil Aeronautics Authority that colleglans have flown more than 35,000 hours without a serious accident.

Begun in August, 1939, the C.A.A. pilot training program now has 9,310 participants. Exactly 1,200 of these have reached the solo stage of their training program.

Joint College Dances Terminated Temporarily; Crowded Conditions Cause

Because of crowded conditions and the lack of large rooms for dancing, the idea of having joint dances with San Mateo Junior College will be discontinued for the next two Associated Student dances, revealed Muriel Grenelle, chairman.

A joint San Francisco-San Mateo Junior College night at the Palace was suggested and approved, because it is one of the only ways the colleges can get together to continue their good-will policy, declared Miss Grenelle.

Lyle Schultz, AMS president, has been investigating the possibilities of having a joint barn dance, if a country club can be found that is large enough.

more, for a considerable time, the news of the ship's arrival was withheld from the ambassador.

Soviet Russia's attitude toward the United States—ever underhanded and dishonest—will constitute the grounds for severance of relations if and when they are severed.

You question America's "right" to "discriminate" against the Soviet "in the matter of diplomatic relations." If you speak of a practical right, then the United States is limited only by her own resolution. If you speak of a moral right, then surely a breach would be justified; for no other nation has ever contracted such solemn agreements with America, only to so flagrantly and wantonly violate those agreements, as has the USSR.

You see, the crux of the matter is not "Communism!"; nor is it any other form of hysteria or emotionalism. The facts, the bases of the as yet hypothetical breach, are simple and clear-cut.

When you suggest that people will brand you a "red", you do those people an injustice by assuming that they are irrational and unthinking. And when you suggest that only by name-calling can those who disagree refute your ill-founded and somewhat rambling arguments, you injure them again by under-estimating their capacity for knowledge and reasoning.

I do not accuse you of being a "red"; I do accuse you of being singularly misinformed.

Women's College Federation To Hold Sectional Conclave

Sectional meeting of the American Federation of College Women will be at Palo Alto sometime this spring. Representatives of the Women's Athletic Association of the college will be sent as usual, according to Bertha Keller, adviser.

Purpose of the AFCW is to coordinate action and interests, to study problems and to further the opportunities of women in athletics. It is a national organization, having a great deal of influence over the policy and trend of athletics throughout the country. Any college having a WAA may belong to the federation.

The organization was founded at the University of Wisconsin in 1917.

Another purpose is to assist high school girls in athletics by promoting high standards and to subordinate the system of athletic awards. The college is a member and is very interested in the activities of the AFCW, according to Bertha Keller, adviser of WAA.

DON'T BE AN AUTHOR

Here's another warning for you who want to be authors: Some time ago Edgar B. Wesley, professor of education at the University of Minnesota, received an 81-cent royalty check for a book he had helped to write.

By the time he had mailed a share of the check to each of his three collaborators—all of whom live off the campus—he had 11 cents to show for his trouble.

PRACTICAL JOKE

Here's one prank that backfired. One bright person in an Ohio State University house conceived the idea of having her roommate call RA-1191 (institution for the Feeble-Minded) and asking for "Dottie."

The office was called and the nurse in charge cleverly replied that Dot wasn't in but would she please leave her name and phone number? At 2 a.m. she was awakened from dreamless sleep to answer the phone. It was the institution calling in retaliation.

For the last several days the phone has been ringing at 4 a.m., waking up the whole house. But . . . when the receiver is lifted, there's a click heard, and if not that, a fiendish laugh comes from the other end of the line and that is all. The bleary-eyed girls in the house are doing some amateur sleuthing, but so far nothing but some embarrassing situations have turned up.

FOREIGN

AS FAR as the actual tactics of warfare are concerned in the present European war, it looks as if both the Germans and the Allies are following along the same lines as in World War I.

The submarine, mine menace and the sea blockade have a familiar ring.

Latest reports seem further to advance this theory. It seems that neutral military experts (whoever they may be) have advanced the prediction that sometime in March or April, the Germans will again drive through Belgium.

Let us examine the possibilities of such action.

There are four routes Germany may take to attack the Allies—the Maginot line, the Netherlands, the Balkans and Belgium.

Obviously the Maginot line is too impregnable to permit the Germans successfully to use their blitzkrieg methods.

With the acute danger and absolute certainty of the Dutch opening their dikes the moment they are attacked, it is not logical to assume that the Germans would try this point, either.

The Balkans would offer only little resistance and could easily fall before German military might, but to attack there would mean that Italy would immediately go to the side of the Allies, leaving Germany worse off than before. There is a remote possibility that Hitler may make a deal with Italy over the Balkans, but it is very doubtful, when the underlying factors are considered.

That leaves only tiny Belgium. Consequently, through process of elimination it looks as if there is the spot where the attack will come.

This time, however, the Allies are prepared for it, and blitzkrieg or no blitzkrieg, we doubt that the Germans will be able to get through as easily as in 1914.

NATIONAL

CALIFORNIA isn't the only state that has wire tapping of public offices. Rhode Island, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts come under that category, also.

Because of this, a Senate Interstate Commerce subcommittee in Washington, D. C., intends to investigate the affair.

There isn't a much lower trick on the face of the globe than hiding dictagraphs in a man's room or tapping his telephone wires.

When one considers how the Americans have been frowning at the tactics used in foreign nations (Gestapo, Ogpu, concentration camps), it is surprising to discover that all is not pure and saintly in the United States.

Perhaps the actions of foreign dictators have given some wild ideas to our so-called democratic state leaders.

If this is true, they had better get rid of their ideas, because America's favorite pastime at present is, jamming the words of would-be dictators down their own throats.

Welfare

Council Will Begin Semester Activities Soon

A detailed procedure plan for the beginning of the welfare council's investigation of student activities is expected to come out of yesterday's meeting of the group, according to an announcement by Al Williams, ex-officio member.

Williams, revealing that he has made an extensive study of extra-curricular activities as carried on in other colleges, said that the council's plans would be released for publication this week.

Loretta Egan, chairman of the council, indicated that no plans were made, and that the meeting date was indefinite.

In connection with the methods of the proposed investigation, J. Graham Sullivan, assistant to President Cloud, revealed that he had in mind several tentative suggestions which might be of value in conducting the survey.

"I would prefer to withhold the suggestions," he said, "until the objectives and procedure of the welfare council are clearly defined."

Well informed sources expressed the opinion that "graphical psychology" would be employed by the investigating group.

Under this system, psychological analysis of student answers would bring out a true average cross-section of college opinion.

It is also probable, according to this source, that the welfare council will, in the course of its survey, hold student sessions at Powell Street.

Low Freshman Class Will Meet After Rally Friday

Members of the Low Freshman class will hold their second meeting of the semester Friday, March 8 in the Galileo auditorium after the rally scheduled for that date, announced Robert Klitzker, class president.

"We have some tentative plans for the semester's activities that we would like to discuss with the class. Included in the plans are several dances and a swimming party at the Fairmont plunge," Klitzker said.

The main purpose of the meeting is to form committees to work on these plans.

The class is going to attempt to form its own executive board to carry on the activities, remarked Klitzker. "Definite powers and duties of the board will be decided at the March 8 meeting," he said.

"It is our intention of having the class of January '42 go down in the history of the college as the finest functioning class organization," continued Klitzker.

"To attain such an objective, however it is vitally necessary that all members of the class attend these meetings so that we may get a strong organization together, and successfully plan our affairs," he concluded.

The Truth Shall Make You Free

By HARRY FRISTER

No, you're not seeing double and there aren't two "e's" in San Francisco Junior College. Your bewildered eyes are only beholding the last two letters of the motto that will adorn the soon to be completed Science Building at the Balboa Park campus.

Inasmuch as you might be slightly curious anent said quotation and in order to alleviate any overtaxing of your mental faculties, The Guardsman herein presents the whole motto —"Truth Shall Make You Free"—the last letters of which should clear up the mystery and lift the haze from your grey matter.

Across the seas, the dictators three have been obliterating any such nonsense (to them) from the minds of their followers, for such a statement obviously does not belong in the vernacular of those condemned people. Here in America, however, it will be carved in stone to be forever perpetuated o'er the portals of our future home. Thus, out of the Bible (if there is a sceptic in the house, he is referred to the New Testament, John, VIII, 32, for confirmation) comes an axiom that undoubtedly plays its part, imperceptibly, of course, in reminding each of us how fortunate we are to be able to go to school in a land that truth has made free—America.

College Night At Palace Friday To Be Gala Affair

Main attraction at the San Mateo-San Francisco Junior College night at the Palace Hotel, Friday, March 8, will be the singing of brunette Anita Welt with Ray Noble and his orchestra.

Miss Welt, vice-president of the high freshman class, has graduated from George Washington High School, and has sung with several local orchestras.

This affair marks the first time in the history of the college and the hotel that the Rose Room Bowl will be almost completely filled with junior college students. Students will be seated in the Rose Room, even though the adjoining rooms will be opened for additional dancing space, declared Leonard Gross, campus representative.

This dance was planned to put the relations with San Mateo on an even more friendly basis, and there will be many new innovations featured that night, revealed Muriel Grenelle, vice-president of the Associated Students.

Another feature of the evening will be a prize drawing, winners of which will receive complimentary cover charges and perhaps dinners from the hotel.

"All students are urged to make their reservations as soon as possible so that tables may be secured," Miss Grenelle advised.

Campus representatives are Mary Frances Malone, Len Gross and Lee Scarlett.

Campus Ice Skate Stars To Take Part In Play

Under the sponsorship of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and in conjunction with the Skate and Ski Club of San Francisco, Bill Hart, Murray Galbraith, and Ed Bodell, college ice skaters, will participate in a play to be staged on ice.

The play, Cinderella, is the first of its kind ever to be staged in San Francisco.

Hart will play the part of the Prince, and his dancing partner, Stuart Ross, will portray Cinderella. Galbraith, with his brother Sheldon, will do a shadow dance on ice, and Bodell will play the part of one of Cinderella's cruel step sisters.

The ice-play will be staged at Winterland ice rink on March 11, 12, 13. Possibility that performances would be given in Santa Rosa and several other California cities was voiced by Hart, college skate club president.

Meeting Friday for the purpose of definitely deciding upon a date for the college ice carnival, skaters named as the date April 27, from 5:30 until 7:30.

As exhibition guest soloist will be Marcella May, youthful state women's junior champion. Also included in the program will be a 14-step dance number by the advanced skaters of the college club, who have been receiving instructions from Red Glendenning of the Winterland rink; and an all-star broom game on ice.

The price for the ice show has not as yet been set, according to Bill Hart, club president.

March 29 will find Bodell, Galbraith, and Hart competing in the Pacific Coast Figure Skating championships in Oakland. The three college skaters will compete in the men's novice, senior, and junior competitions, respectively. "Galbraith, Hart and Bodell are well qualified to participate in the ice show (Cinderella)," said Joseph Williams, college ice skate instructor, "since they have done so well in the competitions they have entered."

Galbraith recently returned from Cleveland, placing second in the National Figure Skating championships, and champion in the men's senior contests at Santa Rosa. Hart took second place in the men's junior contests, and Ed Bodell took first place in the men's novices also at Santa Rosa.

The next meeting of the skate club will be held at Winterland at 2:30 on Friday, March 8, according to Bill Hart, skate club president.

Positions Still Open For Child Social Service Work; College Women Interested Should See Dougherty

Although response of college women to the request for voluntary social service workers has been satisfactory, there are still positions available for interested women, according to Margaret Dougherty, faculty adviser to the Associated Women Students.

Miss Dougherty urges that all women who would like to donate their services to financially underprivileged children under the care of the Children's Agency see her immediately.

"It is still not too late for volunteers," she said.

First announcement of the need for college women in this work was made in The Guardsman two weeks ago.

Social Committee Discusses Woes Of Exchange Dances

Meeting for the first time last Thursday, the social committee, under the leadership of Muriel Grenelle, discussed the crowded conditions that will be faced if there continue to be joint dances with San Mateo Junior College.

It was suggested that the San Mateo students be invited to one dance and rally a semester to instil the friendly spirit of rivalry between the two colleges, declared Miss Grenelle.

There was discussion on the high freshman dance, and many thought it would be favorable to hold the dance on the east side of the bay. "I have members of the social committee investigating the possibilities of the Claremont Country Club and other places in the East Bay that would be suitable for a dance," continued Miss Grenelle.

Miss Grenelle adjourned the meeting with a reminder that all members of the committee be present at the social committee meeting this afternoon at 2 o'clock in Dean Browne's office.

Photography

Contest Begins First Lap; Deadline Today

To meet the first deadline for The Guardsman, amateur photography contest students should hand in their pictures to Tom O'Neill in the Powell Street office by 11 o'clock this morning, announced Len Gross, editor of The Guardsman.

The best picture submitted each week will be printed in the Friday issue of The Guardsman.

Prizes for the two best pictures turned in are one complimentary cover charge to the Palace Hotel and one to the Hotel Mark Hopkins, respectively.

Judges will be Joan Nourse, editorial adviser of The Guardsman, Daniel Rosenblat, and Louis Goldstone, associate editors, Joe Kurpieski, staff photographer, and Gross.

Following are the rules of the contest:

1. Only students enrolled in San Francisco Junior College are eligible to enter the contest. Contest judges are automatically barred from competition.

2. Any contestant may submit as many pictures as he desires.

3. Name, address, and general data on equipment, camera, etc. must be submitted with each entry.

4. The pictures will be judged for uniqueness, clearness, and relation to college or collegiate life.

5. Only pictures relating to the college or student life will be eligible.

6. The minimum size of the print submitted should be five by seven inches. All pictures submitted become the property of The Guardsman.

7. The decision of the judges is final. In the case of a tie duplicate prizes will be awarded.

High Sophs Make Plans For Semester Functions

With cooperation from its members apparent, the high sophomore class is at present formulating its plans for the ensuing semester. At its last meeting, under the leadership of Art Pomares, class president, the high sophomores organized committees to carry out the activities for this semester.

Chairman of the rally committee is Hal Hoffman, and serving with him are Dorothy Trood, Julie Bradshaw, Shirley White, and Mel Chicazola.

Working with Lee Scarlett on the Muir Woods committee is Julie Bradshaw, and with Janet Fellows, chairman of the publicity committee, is Jay Wright. Adele Kuhn heads the dinner dance committee, and under her are Hank Suerstedt, Bob Jensen, and Mel Chicazola. Pomares and Muriel Nolan are on all of the committees.

"We may have our St. Patrick's Day dinner dance at the Claremont Hotel in Berkeley," said Pomares. "If we cannot have it there, it will take place at the Lake Merritt Hotel in Oakland. The dance will be on March 20 and will only be open to the members of the high sophomore class.

"The plans for our five-hour cruise on the bay are almost definite. The date for this dancing fest has been set for May 1. We have secured a super 150-foot launch for the affair," Pomares concluded.

A Capella Choir Will Present Recital March 12

To give the college voice students a demonstration of formal recital technique, Flossita Badger of the college music department will present a song recital in the Powell lecture hall at 1 o'clock on March 12.

Although the affair is principally for her voice classes, Miss Badger has extended an invitation to all interested students who will be free at that hour.

"I hope that the recital will illustrate the various points I have been trying to teach voice students," Miss Badger said, "It should also be of interest to students who are not enrolled in music courses, and who would like to increase their musical knowledge."

Judicial

Committee To Meet This Week; Decide Future Policy

Initial judicial committee meeting for this semester will be held this week; primarily for the purpose of hearing the cases of two students, whose student body cards were confiscated at recent social affairs, according to Tony Manov, chairman of the newly appointed judicial committee.

Although the act responsible for the confiscation of the cards was not revealed by Manov, he said that rather than punishment, the future policy of the committee in dealing with such matters would entail corrective advice to the offenders.

To sound out college opinion on methods of dealing with violations of college rules, Manov posed the question: "Should students be penalized for the intent behind an illegal act or for the result of the deed itself?" Manov asked students to answer through the medium of Ram's Horn.

"Any suggestions that students might have on this matter will be greatly appreciated by the judicial committee," Manov said.

When queried about the two student body card violations, John E. Ross, recently appointed faculty adviser to the committee, declined to comment, with the statement: "The policy of the judicial committee is not for me to decide. It is up to the members of the judicial committee themselves. All action will be in their hands."

This semester's judicial committee is composed of Al Williams, Associated Students president; Dave Johnson, Richard Kaiser, Adele Kuhn, and Manov.

Lady, How Could You? Such A Nice Man Too

By EVE BURKEY

It is late . . . very late. In fact, it's time all good little college students were in some sort of class. Never mind what class . . . just a class.

The scene is the exterior of Thomas O'Neill's office . . . out in the hall. Two telephone booths are waiting longingly for a stray nickle . . . there's a grating somewhere above, below or between the booths. Anyhow, it's there.

A. Coed prances gaily—so she walked!—down the hall . . . she goes into one of the booths . . . closes the door . . . puts a nickle in the slot. Yes, a nickle.

She talks . . . time passes . . . also a figure in black.

The figure goes into the other booth . . . another nickle is tossed carelessly away. It talks.

Through the grating . . . see, it was there . . . comes the voice of A. Coed.

"You did! . . .

"Read it to me. Don't hurry. I can miss my next class . . . and

"Isn't that cute! Go on. I can cut the rest of them, too."

The figure in black listens no more. Shocked and grieved beyond mere words at the treasonable lawlessness of such words, Dean Edwin C. Browne (what does the C. stand for?) emerges from the second booth . . . totters blindly away . . . just away . . .

You don't believe it?

Well, all right. Please, though, no digs.

Cinch Notice Mailing Dates Withheld By Registrar

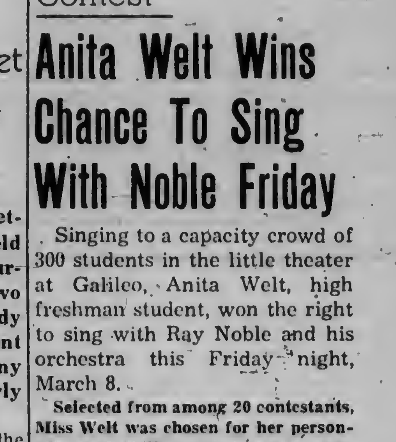
Report that cinch notices would be issued during the week of March 11 or the week of March 18, depending upon the time it took the warning notices to be put through the necessary machinery in the office, was issued Thursday by Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

No definite date for the mailing of the cinches was available, it was learned from reliable sources, because students anticipating cinches usually remained at home to intercept the mail.

Cinch notices are mailed to the parents of first semester students and to the upperclassmen themselves.

Contest

Anita Welt Wins Chance To Sing With Noble Friday



Singing to a capacity crowd of 300 students in the little theater at Galileo, Anita Welt, high freshman student, won the right to sing with Ray Noble and his orchestra this Friday night, March 8.

Selected from among 20 contestants, Miss Welt was chosen for her personality and ability to put over a song, as well as for her singing voice, commented Muriel Grenelle, vice-president of the Associated Students and one of the judges.

Miss Welt has had some previous experience in singing, as she was recently a vocalist with a local band.

After hearing all the contestants, the judges narrowed the field down to six, Miss Welt, Dick Kelly, Bette Nelson, Marion MacKillop, Don Moss, and Don Fields.

Contest Winner

Anita Welt

From this group Miss Welt and Fields were selected to sing again, the result being that the judges with a vote of four against one picked Miss Welt as the winner. Fields will act as alternate in case Miss Welt is unable to appear.

It was hoped that executives of the Palace Hotel would permit both students selected to sing with the band, but it will be necessary to request this from the hotel.

The original plan was that one student from this college and one student from San Mateo Junior College sing with the orchestra. "Whether the hotel will permit two from this institution to sing is doubtful," Miss Grenelle said.

The contest was but one part of the program planned for the joint San Francisco-San Mateo night next Friday. Other features include the playing of the college songs if music can be obtained, and a prize drawing, the winner to receive complimentary cover charges to the Palace Hotel.

All persons who are interested in attending the affair are requested to submit their reservations as soon as possible to Miss Grenelle, Mary Frances Malone, Len Gross, or Lee Scarlett.

Second Sports Rally Friday For Weekend Games

Inaugurating the second sports rally of the semester, next Friday in the Galileo auditorium at 2:20 o'clock, under the direction of Ray Berns, head yell-leader, spirit will be created for the San Mateo and Sacramento basketball games coming up this week-end, Berns announced.

Both local and college talent is expected on the program, in addition to speeches from the coach and the team, Berns revealed.

Jack Schmale, college publicity agent, is originating an idea for an auto caravan to meet here before the game and drive to San Mateo.

Probably the rally committee will journey to San Mateo Friday to bring back San Jose representatives for the rally, Berns said.

Dates for the subsequent rallies of the semester have been set: Wednesday, May 17, for the purpose of publicizing spring sports; Wednesday, May 22, a combined high sophomore installation assembly and block rally. This information was from J. Paul Mohr, college registrar.

. . . The Spectator

GRAHAM BAKER and Gene Towne, erstwhile madcaps of the Flicker Village, have reformed and turned producers. Producing movies must have had a steadying effect on the two playboys, because Swiss Family Robinson, the first release of their "Play's the Thing" company, is drama produced in a serious vein.

In casting Johann Wyss' classic, the two Lotharios took Shakespeare's advice to heart and put in the featured spot actors whose ability does not rest on their glamour or pearly teeth.

Thomas Mitchell enacts the role of William Robinson, the fashionable Londoner who forsook that city's pleasant mode of living in order that his family might live according to the principles for which they were created. Mitchell justifies his selection, for he makes of Robinson a rugged individualist who preferred living on a desert isle to being trampled under the heel of the most infamous dictator of them all—Napoleon.

As the genteel Mrs. Robinson, Edna Best injects sufficient credulity into her part of the woman who cherished a warm fireside and the admiration of her clique more than the love of her husband.

The four Robinson boys are portrayed by Freddie Bartholomew, Tim Holt, Terry Kilburn, and Baby Bobby Quilan. They are convincing as the first selfish, then unforgiving, later proud children whose love for their father ripens into a deeper emotion as life on the island becomes more settled.

Director Edward Ludwig has made of the film an interesting document of life as it becomes adjustable to people accustomed to an entirely different stratum of society. "Necessity is the mother in invention", and the Robinsons had to invent ways of doing things they took for granted in London. Transportation was provided by a turtle and an ostrich; houses had to be hewn from rocks and trees; clothes had to be made from goatskins; and the lady of the island had to stoop to a task as low as cooking food for her five hungry men.

Swiss Family Robinson is simple entertainment to be enjoyed by all. In it, a group of oppressed men finds their Utopia, Paradise where they can breathe the clean air God created for them, where they can build life anew.

There is a message hidden in the picture. It lies deep in the soul of the band of castaways, who find that the simple life is the best for them; that as long as men deify themselves there will always be war; but as long as there are other men with enough courage and foresight to envision a better world, there will always be plenty to rebuild after the Four Horsemen have wreaked their vengeance. It is a message that holds as true for today as yesterday.

Goldstone

. . . Of Sound and Fury

SINCE the term "intellectual", as derisively applied to the Bolo delegation, infers the possession of an intellect, justice requires that a public apology be tendered the persecuted brethren.

It is generally conceded that the prerequisite to intellect is a capacity for objective reasoning: the comrades lack not only the capacity, but also the inclination.

Their mental processes (hypothetically speaking) rotate like the corner barber-pole—leading no place, returning inevitably to their starting point, subsisting on their own exaggerated egotism, their scope confined within the precincts of a dogmatic glass cage. In short, about as objective in validity as a Weimar banknote in value.

Just as the Bolos' allergy to objectivity effectively scuttles their claim to intellectuality, it fosters the development of an arrogant conceit that is as colossal and unmitigated as it is unjustified by the material at hand.

In further conformation with the orthodox cyclic rigamarole, the ballooning ego becomes a defense mechanism, bolstering the Bolos' imperative determination to rely on dogmatic subjectivity, and thus escape the perils of undogmatic reality, to plumb deeper the unsounded pit of their own cerebral bankruptcy.

Clinging doggedly to the gyrating coat-tails of the Kremlin, the comrades make up in maneuverability what they lack in intellect. They nonchalantly negotiate U-turns in the ephemeral party-line, the very thought of which would cause the New Deity to execute a reverse dialectic within his pyrex Valhalla.

Consistent in their inconsistency, they affix terms to readymade definitions, modify ends and means against the middle, peddle ambiguous euphemisms, cash in their status as individuals for pottage with which to feed their ravenous megalomania.

Like contented hop-heads, the Bolos enclose themselves in a turbid dream-world of their own making to battle gigantic straw-men, and rationalize their abnormalities with self-induced visions of their own heroic stature.

It is the philosophy of impotence; the inadvertent admission of mental and moral incompetence to face life as an individual entity and a free agent.

The collectivist movement is the universal refuge for the misfits; it relieves the comrades of concern with ethical standards, indulges their outrageous conceit, and allows them to vent their spleen on a world they hate and fear because they lack what it takes.

The fact that the comrades will fail utterly to appreciate the validity of this apology only serves to demonstrate further the intrinsic soundness of the logical process which inspired the gesture.

In accordance with their whole philosophy, the comrades have slandered the term "intellectual", done their best to destroy it; but they never could, nor ever will, succeed in living up to its standards.

Lambs Break Even; Varsity Bows To Panthers, Pirates

Playing their best game to date, the college Lambs overcame an 11 point tailing at half time to defeat the Live Oak A.C. 28 to 27 in a desperate last second score Friday night at Kezar. Charlie Martin's field goal from nowhere cinched the game, just as the gun popped. Martin, Ryan and Oshida each had six points, Owen five.

Meanwhile, confused and bewildered throughout the game, Ram cagers bowed low and deep to the Sacramento Panthers in the main attraction by a score of 38 to 29. The well oiled machine that is Sacramento's became a perpetual scoring mechanism that only the referee's whistle could stop.

Tasting the bitter sensation of defeat, the Rams once again entered the pavilion Saturday night against the highly touted Modesto team. For 39 minutes the rumbling Ram played inspired ball, only to lose out by a measly three points. "Handsome Sig" Jacobson pulled the Pirates out of a 26 all deadlock with a field goal, and a moment later scored a charity toss.

In the preliminary game, Tom Wilson's Lambs were defeated by the Rough Riders from Napa 26 to 50. Grimoldi of Napa was high with 14, Ryan for the locals with eight.

Tennis Team, Slapped By Cards, Bears Down On Cal

Following a recent loss at the hands of the Stanford University tennis squad, highly regarded nationally, the local tennisers will attempt to cop a practice match tomorrow when they meet the racquet swingers from the University of California at Berkeley, according to Coach Tom Wilson.

Gaining nothing but a shutout at Palo Alto a week ago Saturday, the Ramsters nevertheless showed swiftness but looked faulty at times in the backhand stroke.

Tomorrow's matches will include six single matches and three sets of doubles.

Chosen to start for the Ram tennis team are the two veteran players Ray Berns and Bill Madamba. Also selected are Jack Hare, Charles Mead, and Tony Alagos.

To alternate for the starters are new men—Morris Waxman, Henry Pennypacker, Jack McKay and Ed Boise.

Hank Severeid, who is now a field man for Cincinnati, caught 2,603 games during his 28 years of active catching in the majors and minors.

THE GUARDSMAN SPORTS

Sergeant, Private Tour For Finland

A sergeant and a private—Paavo Nurmi and Taisto Maki—are taken from the embattled trenches of Finland and sent on tour of America to raise funds for Finnish Relief. Nurmi, most famous of all marathon runners, and Maki, his protege, are snapped by The Guardsman camera-eye as they warm up at the Civic Center. Tonight, at the Civic Auditorium, the "Flying Finns" will run before a capacity crowd. San Francisco is turning out to see them, as they do their part in helping their nation carry on its fight.

Dual San Mateo Battle For Conference Rung Climaxes Hoop Games This Weekend

Climaxing the season with exchange games this Friday and Saturday, San Francisco and San Mateo Junior Colleges will battle to beat holy mackerel just for the fun of it.

Neither team has a width of a shadow of a doubt's chance for the conference crown, but both teams are so close to each other at the bottom of the pile that these games should be one of the hottest and fastest. The locations are Kezar, Friday night, and the San Mateo Gym, Saturday night.

With Bob Staynor back in harness, the Conlanmen are once again the same team that defeated the fourth place Marin just a few weeks ago. Should the Rams play as they did in the Marin encounter, the game should be a cinch.

But back of all this, there is Coach Clyde Divine to reckon with. Piloting the Bulldogs for the first time, Divine has a fast and shifty forward wall, a jumper deluxe in Junie Wirth, and guards Sheehan and Cavanaugh are nothing to sneer at.

Also it has been noted by the writer that San Mateo rooters are one of the "rootingest" bunch of men and women seen. The peninsulans have a petite assistant yell leader in Mary Wilber McKee. In other words, this game will not only be a contest in basketball, but also in rooting.

This will be the last time students will be able to see the 1940 basketball team in action.

Ram Nine Plays Commerce Tomorrow, Gaels On 18th

Funston Field will be the scene of a baseball game between the Ram nine and Commerce High tomorrow afternoon at 3:15, weather permitting. Uniforms were issued yesterday for the Galileo game.

Coach Jack Gaddy has been stressing fielding in the last few practice sessions, and the team should function well along that line. A practice game has been scheduled with St. Mary's on Monday, March 18. The game will be played at Moraga, and the team will be served dinner as guests of the university.

Robert Hvidt and Joseph Mezzetti will serve as alternate catchers, and the pitching chores will be handled by Harry Aleo, Joseph O'Neill, Hubert Thompson, Roscoe Wolcott, and Martin Zernike.

Yesterday the Rams met Galileo High at Funston in a practice game. The results of the game were not available at press time. Members of this season's nine will display new sweat shirts, and should be a flashy team, at least in color.

The Mission High game, rained out last week, may not be played. Gaddy is faced with a crowded schedule this year, and may not find time to play the game.

Drying fields have enabled the students to get in a great deal of needed practice at the end of last week. With a little more sunny weather the nine should be in condition to make a good showing against Marin next Friday, when the league season officially opens.

Nurmi And Maki, "Flying Finns", Run Tonight At Civic Auditorium; Exhibition For Relief Fund

By VINCENT VANDRE

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following first-hand interview was granted to The Guardsman by Naylor Stone, manager of the Finnish Relief Fund track tour. Neither Nurmi nor Maki was able to take time out from their practice runs at Commerce Field Friday afternoon; therefore, Stone acted as their spokesman.

Taisto Maki and Paavo Nurmi, the long-awaited "Flying Finns" are here.

From a strenuous two and one-half hour workout at the New York City Armory last Thursday afternoon to a similar practice run on San Francisco's Commerce High School field the next day—three thousand miles across country by sleeper plane in twenty-four hours. This exemplifies a steadfast rule of the Finn speedsters: "to never miss a day of practice"; Maki alone runs nearly three hours every morning and evening. This is the remarkable physical feat accomplished by Maki and Nurmi, who flew here to be present at the P.A.A. Track Meet which opens at eight o'clock in the Civic Auditorium tonight.

World's record holder of the three mile run at 13.24:4, Maki will enter that event tonight a slight favorite against Ted Vollmer, University of California, and the Olympic Club's Ed Preston.

Maki is a deeply-tanned, lean faced, wiry built man of twenty-nine. Leaving a wife and a seven year old daughter in Helsinki, he recently was conscripted from the front-line trenches to accompany former long distance world's champion Nurmi to the United States.

All funds raised by the men in exhibition running are assertedly turned over to the Finnish Consulate for home distribution. In this matter, Maki and Nurmi are scrupulously honest, even to apparent extremes. At all times, while their retinue is privileged to hire cabs or automobiles for city traveling, the track-pair prefer to walk, or ride the street cars; they assume that other modes of transportation would be an imposition on their expenses. Buddy Fogelson, wealthy Texas oil magnate of Finnish stock, has underwritten all costs of the trip.

Random notes concerning the runners may be of interest to technically minded track fans. Maki has been racing for nine or ten years. Buttermilk, hard bread, eggs, potatoes, steaks, dried fruit and fruit juices, oatmeal, and coffee comprise the basic daily diet of both men. Along the avenues of Gotham, dotted with orange juice stands, Maki had to be closely watched or he would have stopped at each one. He had never tasted the delights of orange nectar until reaching America. Following participation in the meet tonight, the party will return to the Middle West, East, and South; thence to the Southwest, and back again to the Pacific Coast at Los Angeles.

Team To Enter P.A.A. Indoor Meet Tonight

After two days of self-debating, Coach Russell J. Sweet stated Friday that "the college track team will definitely enter the PAA indoor meet at the Civic Auditorium, tonight at 8 o'clock."

Sweet left the final decision up to the trackmen, whose consensus, in their own words, was, "It's OK with us."

In short, the college cindermen will be running tonight against high-class competition, including stars from California, Stanford, the Olympic Club, and several other major colleges. Taisto Maki, the highly touted Finnish speedster, has been publicized as the main attraction on the track program tonight.

Consisting of Don Manov, Charles Robin, Jack McMeekin, and Bert Korn, the mile relay team to be entered by Sweet will be at a disadvantage because of the infrequency of practice runs thus far this season. In addition, only two of the men, McMeekin and Korn, have run on pine board tracks such as those used at the Civic Auditorium.

Fred Young and Harry Wong will act as alternates in the mile relay event. Pole vaulting, the only field event in which the local group will compete, is to be handled by Keith Groswird.

Described by Sweet as "swimming weather," the dripping atmosphere has been in no small part responsible for the inability of the track team to anything but limber up in the past week.

To explain why he had considered dropping the PAA events tonight, Sweet stated, "I'm telling the men to regard their event as merely another workout. It would be foolish for them to break their hearts attempting to catch some of the opposition they are sure to encounter.

"By not trying too hard, there will be no chance of having some man laid up for the season. The Civic Auditorium oval is tricky, and naturally there will be plenty of rough jamming on the turns. I hope the boys will do their best, but take it easy."

Riflettes Shoot In State Gallery Championships

Women riflers of the college entered the 4th Annual California State Gallery Rifle Championships held at the National Guard Armory last week end, were the only women shooters entered in the competitions Friday night.

There was a possibility that the women teams would be opposed on Saturday by a squad from the University of California. Incomplete scores from Friday night's shooting showed that the first college team of riflers scored 842 points out of a possible 1000. Women on that team were Marion Schrick, Marion Murphy, Margaret Yeager, Kate Hastings, and Irene Gruenhaum, according to Charles North, team captain.

An extra women's team was entered at the last moment. The second and third team scores were 841 and 827 repectively. Astrid Rogenes, Mary Rowan, Mary Healy, Bette Barlas, and Sylvia Rogenes shot for the second team. Personnel of the third team was not announced.

Men's scores were not given in time to be published. The men marksmen were opposed by the University of California, and it was announced that several other teams might enter the meet at the last moment.

Men representing the college on team number one were Charles North, team captain; Louis Davy, George Humphrey, Art Templeton, and Bill Conley. Shooting on team number two were Myron Pierce, Jimmy Juri, Akimasa Uyeda, Jack Moody, and Albert Razum. The third team was composed of Dan Rhodes, Vernon Humber, Jack Hewitt, Jack Adams, and Russell Weeks.

"There is a possibility that the women sharp-shooters may win a plaque. Awards are based on score, and the highest scoring team receives the award.

While cramming for a midterm, yours very truly was interrupted by a tap on the left clavicle. Looking up, we beheld the sharp features of the dusky Joe Johns. He says hell-o and we say the same, and a monologistic conversation begins. ('S funny, but whenever one is studying for a quiz or such, there is always a friend popping up.)

Joe is a physical ed. major, but he says, "I'll probably end up in barber college." A former student at Modesto, Joe came to San Francisco "cuz I like the weather." (?)

Joe didn't have much to say because the fellows, he fears, will rib him 'til the cows come home. He claims to be backward and bashful, but during the recent Modesto trip, we have seen, and have reason to doubt his veracity. But—quien sabe?

After the midterm, as we were recuperating, a clout on the cranium is the greeting from the towering Garry A. Dudman. (Because of his height, we couldn't pick a fight, but if it was Bob Owen, I betcha we woulda!)

Nineteen, and 6 feet 4 inches, Garry Ashley Dudman is the tallest man on the Ram basketball team. Oakland High is his alma mater, but he says with malice toward none, that "Dutch" Conlan is the best basketball coach he has ever worked under. "Dud's" ultimate ambition is to work in civil service, but he'd rather fish in the old mill stream.

Born in Spokane, Washington, "Dud" will go either to St. Mary's College or to University of California. He now lives in Oakland, and likes it, because "he is a farmer at heart." "Hackenbush," as he is amiably called, prefers to listen to swing music than dance to it, and he'd rather look than listen . . . but best of all, "my ultimate ambition is to dance with—Madeline Carroll."

Bowlers Clash With Alumni And Prepare For Bulldogs

That colorful Ram bowling team of 1938 came back last night to meet the present college team. Taking the name of "Alumni All-Stars," the 1938 boys were expected to show the present team some high scoring.

Members of the alumni team were Frank Manfredi, Benny Papapietro, Harold Cloud, Melvyn Bacigalupi, and Walter Gardner.

This semester's team has finally been selected. Joseph A. Amori, bowling instructor, announced last week that Jack Schmale, Bob Riordan, Norman Guinasso, Lloyd Snook and Zollenbeck would comprise the regular college team.

The Gonzaga match will be played soon after Gonzaga returns from Chicago, where the Washington boys have been competing in the American Bowling Congress. The Gonzaga team bowls 905 as an average. This is exceptionally high for a team, Amori added, however, that the alumni team has frequently bowled that high an average.

The local kegglers rolled a poor average of around 750 against San Mateo, but Amori believes that this was due to the lack of practice and the fact that only three of the men had been picked for the team.

The pinsmashers have shown marked improvement since the San Mateo meet of two weeks ago, and were expected to put up a hard battle against the alumni five last night, results of which were too late for publication today.

WE can sympathize with the Italians for a change. They too seem to be having trouble with the British.

Of course one cannot blame the Britsh for their attitude concerning the seas blockade for it is to be remembered that this is war and almost anything goes.

As to the Italian threats of retaliation, they are but harmless words and mean nothing.

While Italy remains the least self-sufficient of the great national regions of Europe she cannot risk endangering her position in Europe and her colonial empire by breaking off with Great Britain.

This may have been one of the fundamental reasons for the severing of the Italo-German alliance.

BECAUSE of the gasoline conservation decrees handed to the people by the German government, wedding parties are for the most part conducted to and from church in city street cars.

Imagine how convenient it must be to board a street car after being married, ask for a transfer, and travel around the streets of Berlin on a honeymoon.

MANY people in this nation have held high hopes of what Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles might be able to accomplish when he was sent to Europe.

Evidently the nation is filled with optimists for it appears likely that insofar as actually bringing about any peace in Europe is concerned, Welles' mission was a waste of time and money.

It is impossible for any one man, whether he represents a great nation or not, to be able to do anything about the present war.

To begin with, the nations engaged in the war (or perhaps we should say the leaders of those nations) do not want the war to cease.

Secondly, even if they did, there would be nothing they could do about it for Hitler thinks the Allies' demands extremely exorbitant and out of the question. The Allies, of course, feel the same way about Hitler's requests.

In other words you have two factions seated at a checker board, neither able to move, neither willing to quit.

NATIONAL

PLANS for an American expeditionary force (unofficial and independent of course) numbering several thousand men are being made in New York under the direction of the Finnish war veterans in the United States.

No one has the right to tell a man what he can do. If he wants to go get his head blown off it is his business.

It does seem rather foolish however to fight for a country other than your own with the odds against your coming out in one piece, if at all.

Somewhere, we seem to have heard that this nation was neutral. If we are we certainly don't show it. No wonder some of the warring nations get sore at the U.S.

WE have often wondered why the newspapers throughout the nation have never printed much concerning the Russian side of the war. (They no doubt have one.)

This matter was solved quite recently when The Guardsman attempted to secure an interview with the Russian consul for this purpose.

After considerable delay, and passing of the buck, the reporter was informed that an interview could not be granted but that an official government communique from Moscow would be given instead.

Now we know.

STATE

THINGS are certainly shaping up in Sacramento these days. With every hour bringing further revelations in the dictograph scandal, it would seem that California may soon have a new governor.

Of course, this is purely guesswork and impossible to be verified at this writing, but if Governor Olson can be definitely linked to the affair (and appearances indicate as much), then a recall movement will undoubtedly begin.

This is as it should be. For there is no place in a democratic government for a man who rules by autocratic methods.

The Rally

Pep Fiesta At Galileo Today; To Feature Comedy, Radio Guest Star

Plenty of pep and spirit, according to Ray Berns, head yell-leader, will highlight the second sports rally of the semester at 2:20 this afternoon in the Galileo Auditorium.

"Entertainment will be provided by a guest radio star, the name to be withheld as a last minute surprise, a contingent of San Mateo entertainers, a rip-roaring comedy act, and college talent," Berns said.

A definite time will be set for the auto caravan planned by publicity agent Jack Schmale to journey to San Mateo Saturday evening for the game and the big dance feature afterwards. Gaily decorated cars will be the order of the day, Schmale announced.

For the San Mateo rally to be held this morning a group of the rally committee will journey down, providing entertainment for the peninsula group, and in turn bringing a contingent of their group for the rally here. This is one of a series of stunts designed by Berns to bring about "a right good spirit between the two colleges."

Following the general student rally, members of the Low Frosh class will hold their second rally of the semester to formulate plans for future activities, according to Robert Klitzker, Low Frosh president.

Dinner Dance, Bay Cruise Slated By High Sophs For Saint Patrick's Day

Definite plans for the high sophomore dinner dance and a forthcoming cruise around the bay have finally materialized, announced Art Pomares, class president, this week.

First of these affairs to come up will be the St. Patrick's Day dance, which will be held at the Hotel Claremont in Berkeley.

An attendance of 50 couples has been guaranteed by the dinner dance committee, headed by Adele Kuhn, with reservations at $2.80 per couple.

All reservations must be made by March 13, as the tentative date for the night has been set for March 15, Pomares stressed. Dancing begins at 9 and ends at 1.

Asked whether the high sophs will go through with their plans for a six-hour cruise, Pomares said, "Positively!"

The cruise is slated for May 1, and since there is room on the boat for only 200, according to Willie Latz, chairman of the cruise committee, Pomares urged that those who are interested see either Latz or him. The latter indicated that the price for each person will probably be 75 cents, not including lunches, and those who sign up will depart in the boat at 9, arrive at Paradise Cove at 12, leave there at 5, and arrive in San Francisco at 6, if present plans go through.

There will be dancing on board ship, Pomares added, and at Paradise Cove, both swimming and dancing, as well as games.

Other activities for the high sophomore class this semester will be a rally and possibly a swimming party. Sometime next week the rally committee, with Hal Hoffman as chairman, will meet and make more definite plans as to the date and program.

Anyone who is interested in serving on this committee is advised to see Hoffman. The committee for the swimming party, led by Elmer Hubacker, has made no plans at all, but according to Pomares, the plunge may be held at the Fairmont Hotel sometime in April.

Drop Or Flunk

Information from the registrar's office revealed Wednesday that the last day for students to drop classes without penalty would be March 27. Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, also announced that Easter vacation this semester would begin on Thursday, March 21, and extend to March 23, Saturday. Classes will convene Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, Miss Learnard warned.

The last day to file petitions for graduation will be on Wednesday, March 13.

College Women To Have Measurements Taken By HEA

Women of the college are asked to cooperate in an Anthropometric measurement study of women for the purpose of standardizing the sizes of commercial patterns and ready-made garments, according to Margaret Dougherty, women's adviser.

"Measurements will begin Monday, March 11, from 3:30 until 5:00 in the afternoon, in the South Library in the Galileo building," said Miss Dougherty, "and women expert in their field will do this work. Resulting figures will be correlated by experts in the Bureau of Standards in Washington, D. C. The project in the college is under the supervision of the Home Economics Association."

Theresa Guilfoy, Marion Schrick, Stafanie Wassilko, Dorothy Rusk, Blossom Young, Jeanne Arnold, Jean Chesley, and Gloria Miller will circulate sign-up sheets for women students to make appointments for their measurements, Miss Dougherty further commented.

The cooperation of many women is needed. Women in clubs, stores, colleges, agricultural districts, and the Parent Teacher Association groups are being asked to assist by being measured. Mills College is already 100 per cent, Miss Dougherty concluded.

Judicial Committee Set To Find Dishonesty Cause

Technique of faculty members in presenting examinations can be improved, according to a preliminary survey launched by the college judicial committee, revealed Tony Manov, chairman.

"Purpose of the recently begun survey is to discover the underlying causes of dishonesty during mid-term and final examinations," Manov said.

Case of one student whose card has been confiscated has already been discussed, according to Manov, and will be decided upon by next week. Lack of a meeting place was blamed for the delay in the trying of this case, and the case of another student whose card has also been confiscated at a recent social affair.

Al Williams, Associated Students president; Dave Johnson, Richard Kaiser, and Adele Kuhn comprise the judicial committee.

Boo! Here Comes The Cinch Parade

Pegasus, the flying horse, had nothing on Uncle Sam when it came to getting the mail through, even "taboo" mail, a category into which cinches would undoubtedly fall.

Yes, cinches are coming next week—worse luck! As is customary, the first notices will be sent to the parents of the student concerned, who is advised not to lose too much sleep while mulling over the idea of perhaps waylaying the postman and confiscating the dread cinch notice prior to its falling under the stern parental eye.

To be of some assistance, it might be apropos to mention (sotto voice, of course) that cinches will be delivered during the week of March 11 to 18.

Those students who have progressed into the realm of higher education need not worry about their cinch notices being addressed in so plebian a fashion. When men and women reach that stratum of collegiate training the college thinks that they should be able to take the bad news on the chin. So, they mail the notice to them personally.

Anyone who is hopefully praying for an untimely demise of the mailman carrying the cinches will do well to remember that the motto of the United States Postal Service is: "Neither rain, nor snow, nor darkness of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds." Amen!.

On Ice

Cinderella Opens At Winterland On Monday, With Hart

San Francisco, for the first time, will see a play staged on ice when "Cinderella" starts a three-day showing at Winterland Ice Rink, Monday evening, March 11, at eight o'clock.

In the title role will be Stuart Ross, European figure skate titleholder; appearing opposite her in the role of the Prince will be Bill Hart, college ice skater, and second placer in the California State junior men's figure skating competitions.

Ed Bodell, California novice champion, also of the college, will enact the part of one of Cinderella's cruel step-sisters. Murray and Sheldon Galbraith, the former, men's senior figure skating champion of California, will stage a shadow dance which is reputed to be one of the highlights of the play.

Under the joint sponsorship of the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, and the San Francisco Skate and Ski Club, prices for the performances have been set at $1.10, $1.65, and $2.20. Bill Hart, college skate club president, revealed the possibility that performances of the play would also be given in Santa Rosa and other California cities.

Soldiers Schedule Three Trips; Forts Funston, Barry To Be Visited

Three field trips for the military science classes have been planned this semester, according to James S. Hughes, military science instructor.

Approximately 12 to 15 men will make the trips each time, through arrangements made with Maor Philip F. Biehl, unit instructor of the 250th Coast Artillery Corps. Transportation will be furnished by the Coast Artillery on the full-day tours.

March 27, the military science group will be conducted to Fort Barry. They are to inspect defenses, including observation of target practice with large calibre guns.

Firing of mobile Coast Artillery batteries will be watched by the classes on a trip to Fort Funston, April 24.

Demonstration of close-in defense of water areas adjacent to Fort Barry will be the purpose on May 22 of the final field trip of the military science classes.

On each one of the outside trips, the military science men are to be shown provisions for ammunition storage, communications, and fire control systems at the three forts visited.

The men selected by Hughes to make the field trips are Stanley Doughty, Robert Hawes, James Huntsman, Ezra Morgan, William Noble, John Proctor, Robert Raine, Raymond Rhode, Eugene Senter, John Stahmann, Edward Terzian, and Samuel Ware.

All pictures to be eligible for next week's selection in The Guardsman photography contest must be left in Tom O'Neill's office at Powell Street by 11 a.m. Tuesday morning, announced Len Gross, editor of the paper.

"No pictures have been turned in as yet, so there is an opportunity for anyone entering the contest to win," he said.

The contest will close April 9, Gross declared, but he warned all contestants to turn in pictures as soon as possible instead of waiting until the last minute.

There will be two prizes awarded for the best pictures submitted. Prizes are complimentary cover charges for one couple to the Palace Hotel and the Hotel Mark Hopkins, respectively.

Judges are Joan Nourse, editorial adviser of The Guardsman, Daniel Rosenblat and Louis Goldstone, associate editors, Joe Kurpleski, staff photographer, and Gross.

Palace Night

College Dances As Ray Noble Swings Baton

Tonight is Palace night. Hundreds of young people from San Mateo and San Francisco Junior College will dance to the gay music of Ray Noble and his orchestra, campus representatives announced.

It will be gala night for Anita Welt, college songbird who was selected from among 20 contestants to sing with Noble and his orchestra. Miss Welt was chosen for her personality and ability to put over a song, as well as for her singing voice, declared Muriel Grenelle, vice-president of the Associated Students and one of the judges.

The singing contest was but one part of the program planned for tonight. Playing of the college songs, if music can be obtained, and a prize drawing, the winner to receive complimentary cover charges to the Palace Hotel, are among some of the features offered during the evening.

This affair marks the first time in the history of the college and the hotel that the Rose Room Bowl will be almost completely filled with junior college students.

Students will be seated in the Rose Room, even though the adjoining rooms will be opened for additional dancing space, revealed Leonard Gross, campus representative.

If any student has not made his reservations and desires to do so, he should get in touch with one of the campus representatives: Mary Frances Malone, Lee Scarlett, and Gross, Miss Grenelle said.

Hotel Dept. Hails Coming Of Spring With Luncheon

Students of the Hotel Division will demonstrate their skill in restaurant operation before prospective employers on Monday. The occasion will be the third annual spring luncheon of the California Northern Hotel Association.

Complete plans for menu, service and entertainment are in the hands of students, with Davis Carter as manager for the day. Terry Sandelin, student chef, will be in charge of food preparation, and Thomas Caswell will act as master of ceremonies.

Luncheon for 125 guests will be served in the Galileo cafeteria at 12:15 o'clock.

An address by George E. Murphy, president of the hotel association, will be followed by an account of student summer activities by Harold Chavis. Mitchell Hoffman will give a report on the new building and its Hotel Division facilities. Carl Munson will speak on the extra-curricular activities of the Hotel Division.

Selections will be given by a student instrumental combination composed of Lloyd Snook, Lee Scarlett and Dave Carter.

O'Donnell Exhibits First Harpers To English Class

Barry O'Donnell, a representative of Harpers Magazine, was received by the students of the college English department when he gave a lecture on the Problems of Publishing a Magazine, on March 4.

Highlight of the lecture was an exhibition of the first edition of Harpers Magazine, with contributions from such famous people as Charles Dickens and Mark Twain. He also had a number of original manuscripts with all the correction marks on them.

O'Donnell explained the process of selecting articles for publication in Harpers Magazine. He said, much to the interest of the audience, that anyone may submit articles to the editors. Even well-known personages such as Mrs. Roosevelt and Elmer Davis have had articles rejected, so there is hope for hopeful young writers.

Students were allowed to ask questions by writing them on paper and handing them to O'Donnell. At the end of the lecture he chose one of the papers, and the questioner is to receive a six months' subscription to Harpers. Recipient is Priscilla Sangenburg.

Ex Council

Quashes Honor Group, Restaurant Requests For Funds After Fight

Recommendations by the finance committee that petitions by the Alpha Gamma Sigma, college honor society, and the Hotel and Resaurant Division Society for funds be denied, were approved by the Executive Council at last Tuesday's session.

Announcement by Dan Rosenblat, chairman of the finance committee, of the recommendations for denial of funds to the two organizations, brought forth lengthy argumentation by Executive Council members and non-members alike.

Final decision to accept the recommendations came later that same afternoon, at an extended discussion of the regular morning session of the council.

Explaining the refusal of the petitions for funds, Len Gross, member of the finance committee, said that only the nine councils represented in the council itself are eligible for special funds. "This is in accordance with the recently drawn up financial policy," Gross said.

Additional funds for other organizations or purposes may be drawn only in transcending instances, he added.

The petition of the Alpha Gamma Sigma amounted to $60, and was for the purpose of participating in the annual conference of junior college honor societies at Glendale this April.

The Hotel and Restaurant Society requested $25 to finance publicity for their coming dinner given for northern California hotel and restaurant representatives.

Also considered and passed by the council were the recommendations by the Publications Board, which stated that all student publications are to be divided in two groups—official and recognized.

Those having official status are The Guardsman and the college handbook. The Forum magazine is classed as a recognized publication.

Any other publications must be presented to the Publications Board for review before publication. The contemplated organ of the Club Advisory Boards falls in this category.

Forbes Proposes College Course In Technique Of Paint Production

Plans for the installation of a semi-technical course in paint production were discussed by Walter D. Forbes, college faculty member, and 16 representatives of leading bay district paint manufacturers at a dinner held in the Galileo Cafeteria, Tuesday evening.

According to Forbes, originator of the new course, training in paint production will be added to the college curriculum next August.

"It is believed by those present at the dinner," Forbes said, "that the installation of a paint production course in college will prove an aid to those students who wish some day to enter the field of paint manufacture."

General aim of the recent meeting, Forbes said, was to formulate through the advice of paint experts, the types of classes to be offered in the paint production course next fall. That the course will probably involve a study of all phases in paint production, including the raw materials used, was also revealed by Forbes.

Psychological Survey Finds College Students Pacifists

Men of the college are more pacifistic toward war than the women, according to the latest reports of a war survey of attitudes within the college.

Under the leadership of Allen Williams, student body president, this fact was revealed in the survey of the attitudes of 88 students, who were picked at random. Williams stated that this did not hold true among the women enrolled in Pre-nursing, but found them to be extremely pacifistic.

Williams, who has carried on this survey for the last year, found that at the beginning of last semester, which was shortly before the outbreak of war in Europe, that the students were strongly in favor of peace. Yet three months later, just after Russia had bombed Finland and Germany's submarines went into action, the students revealed their intentions of becoming even more pacifistic, added Williams. The results of this survey were very similar to those of other colleges and high schools, which have conducted these war surveys.

Williams in the future plans on conducting a survey on the attitude of students to Germany today. His plans will be similar to those methods used last year, and he says it will demonstrate the importance of measuring social attitudes toward finding the changes caused by propaganda and training.

UC Enters Miniature Cyclotron In '40 Fair

To be continued in the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition is the $250,000 exhibit of the University of California, one of the feature attractions of last year's Exposition.

Announcement of the participation of the university was made last Monday by Dr. T. Harper Goodspeed, professor of botany and chairman of the university's committee on Exposition cooperation.

The entire galaxy of displays that proved so pleasing last year will be repeated for the 1940 season, revealed Exposition press dispatches."

The model cyclotron will continue to disclose secrets of atom-smashing, and included among new exhibits will be a series of actual human foetal skeletons, representing the entire prenatal term.

Visitors at last year's exhibit numbered more than 5,000,000, and included many leading scientists from the world over.

Propaganda Obvious When Not Disguised As Truth; L. A. Daily News Gives Students Discriminatory Guide

STRIP propaganda from its naked shell and it becomes as obvious and undeceiving as the spiel of a circus barker. To be successful it must be disguised as truth.

If everyone recognized propaganda when he saw it, this weapon would become impotent, utterly useless. The difficulty is that sometimes its disguise is pretty clever and can be penetrated only by critical analysis.

Aimed at breaking down just such devices to inculcate opinion among the masses, is a brief supplemental course now being included in school curricula. Schools in all parts of the country are attacking the problem along similar lines. These are courses which a lot of people who have long since left school might well study.

Students are being taught to be particularly on the alert for seven principal devices, commonly known to propagandists and widely employed to influence thought. Briefly these devices are summarized:

1. Name calling—The practice of labeling opposing ideas or persons with names that have acquired an unpleasant connotation. For instance, dictator, Red, economic royalist, big business.

2. Glittering generalities—The use of "virtue words" to describe ideas for which the speaker or writer is propagandizing. For example, loyalty, right to work, democracy, liberty, social justice, the American way.

3. Transfer—Trick of shifting the authority, sanction or symbols of something we accept and revere to something the propagandist would have us believe. Thus, the American flag, symbols of our religion and cartoons of Uncle Sam as representing the mass of Americans may be superimposed on new ideas to give them dignity and prestige.

4. Testimonial—A means of getting people to believe in a policy or a man by getting someone with a wide reputation to say a few kind things about the idea or man. This machinery would start to work if President Roosevelt, for example, could be induced to place his blessing on a new political party.

5. Plain folks—A widely used device to convince people that a person seeking their favor is really one of them. Around election time, rolled up shirt-sleeves, old-fashioned suspenders, candidates pitching hay, jouncing babies on their knees, smoking corn-cob pipes, suddenly appear in great profusion.

6. Card stacking—Use of all known methods to cut off the truth by deception, willful lies, diversion of thought. So have dictators convinced people that the little Caesars have been destined to lead them to salvation.

7. Band wagon—Another favorite method of inducing people to believe everyone else is following a certain leader or principles, and appealing to them to "follow the crowd." This is why candidates always parade about confidently just before election, spreading the idea that they will win and encouraging the people to "put their money on the winning horse."

There are other methods more subtle. These are the most common. They are easy to see through if the persons toward whom they are directed are prepared to analyze them. Especially in an era such as the present one, it is important to differentiate between fact and falsehood in sheep's clothing.

Blame 'Lazy-itis' Of Students For Team Losses; Attendance At Basketball Games Extremely Low

WE CAN'T understand it. Frankly, the matter is very puzzling and deserves the attention of a staff of psychologists.

It is incredible to believe that in a college of 2606 students only a couple of dozen have the decency and school spirit to turn out and support their basketball team.

Perhaps the careless, shrug of the shoulders attitude adopted by the majority of the students comes from some sort of disease called "lazy-itis". Or could it be that the students are too self-centered, or too blase about life to pay any attention to a little thing like their team winning a game or even a championship?

Whatever the cause may be, let us look at the effect.

Instead of having a successful, perhaps championship team, what have we got? An outfit that goes out on the floor, fights like hell, and loses because there is lacking that little spark of inspiration only a cheering student body can give.

After the basketball season has closed, many will make nasty cracks about the "lousy" team. Some are making remarks already.

If the basketball team is a failure this semester, not one ounce of the blame should go to the men on the team or the coaches of the team. It should all go to those students who wouldn't give their team the break it deserved, by attending the games and cheering the men on.

In other words, it wasn't the team that failed, it was the student body of the college. Don't shift the blame onto the team. Put it on your own shoulders; that's where it belongs.

Fellows

. . . The Spectator

THEATRE managers fearfully exhibited The Grapes of Wrath to a skeptical public, but the motion picture proved to be much better than theatre audiences expected — even Steinbeck fans were only mildly disappointed.

Before one criticizes The Grapes of Wrath too severely he must take into consideration that, though extreme sordidness can be told vividly in print, more discretion is necessary in a pictorial account. And where Hollywood's discretion leaves off, public opinion, less severe only to the Hays Office, begins! Handicapped from the beginning by these three elements, the purpose of the Steinbeck story—improved conditions for California's transients—is lost in the cinematic production, and The Grapes of Wrath is merely a pathetic story of man's struggle with the soil, and to a lesser degree, the sharecropper's struggle against the feudal lords—the stock companies that own the large ranches upon which the migrants work for starvation wages.

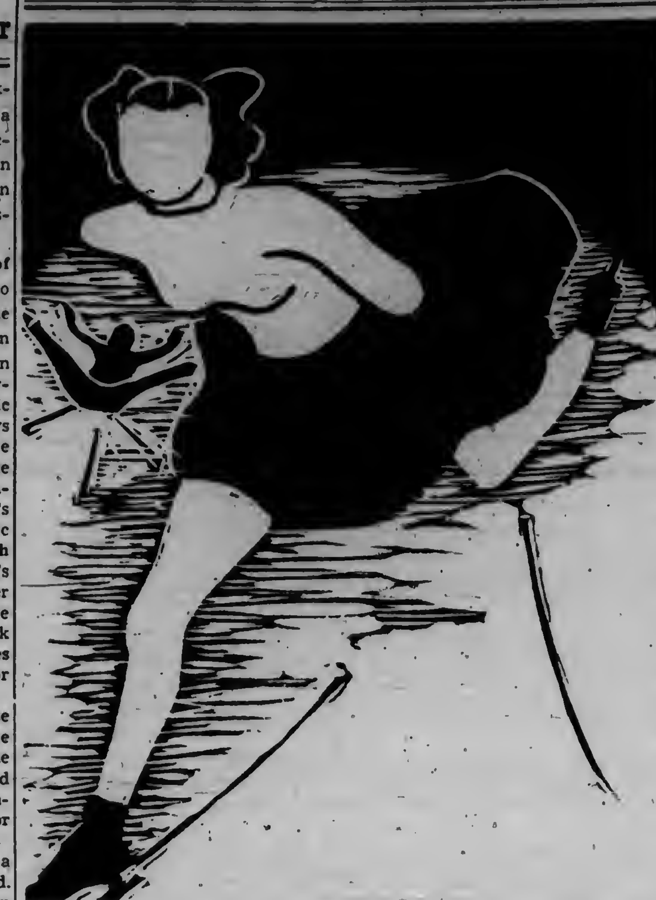
The Joad family is one of these unfortunate migrant families who are ousted from their sharecropper home in Oklahoma. In a dilapidated and overburdened truck of forgotten vintage the Joads hopefully start out for California—"the land of promise."

Their first California home is a filthy camp outside of Bakersfield. There is no work for the migrants in this vicinity, so they travel north where they find work picking peaches at five cents a box on a militarily-organized ranch. When Tom Joad gets mixed up with some strikers and commits a crime, and simultaneously the wages go down to two and one-half cents a box, the Joads move on further north.

The next home of the Joads is a state migratory camp, governed by the migrants themselves, and free from military discipline. These camps are directed by state inspectors who are in sympathy with the transients. This Utopian camp a la Hollywood also detracts from Steinbeck's purpose. Instead of arousing public opinion to improve the conditions of the migrants in this state, the state-run camp gives the impression to the audience that the migrants are already well provided for.

Even here, however, the local police make trouble for the errant fruit-pickers. Fearful of the police, Tom Joad runs away from the camp. The rest of the Joads move on, still in search of sustenance. And so the picture ends, without an ending. It is like showing a track man as he starts the race, and then leaving him while he is only half-way around the track.

From its aesthetic and artistic value The Grapes of Wrath is a better than average production. The photographic technique, although the scenery itself is barren and colorless, is splendid. The acting and casting are excellent. Henry Fonda, in the lead as Tom Joad, John Carradine as the former preacher Casey, Jane Darwell as Ma Joad, Russell Simpson as Pa, Doris Bowden as Rosasharn, Charley Grapwin as Grandpa, and John Qualen as Muley—all presented superb performances, and each and every one seems to be born for his role.



The only negative criticism this reviewer can find in the technical part of the production was the sharp scene changes. The photographic scene changes blended subtly, but the action changes were often too sharp. They seemed to jolt the observer too suddenly out of his contemplation of the picture, so that he leaves the theatre feeling worn out from being pulled this way and that.

The manner in which Hollywood treated the Oakies was extremely subtle. Although The Grapes of Wrath is the story of persons who live like animals, Hollywood treated these characters with extreme sympathy and understanding, presenting human beings who sincerely desire to lead a good, clean life, yet who struggle eternally against adverse environmental conditions which show little promise of ever changing.

Hutchins Presents Classicist's Theory Of Education

"Don't go to college expecting to learn how to make a living. The purpose of college is to train students' minds so that they may intelligently confront any problem. If we cannot develop character and intelligence, colleges should stress mental discipline, simply by means of the three R's—reading, writing and 'rithmetic; and they should pass on to the student the accumulated wisdom of the race." University of Chicago's Pres. Robert Maynard Hutchins summarizes the classicist's theory of education.

Judicial Committee Considered Too Stern By Student

● MOUNTAIN FROM MOLEHILL
Editor, The Guardsman:

Re the judicial committee's proposed punishment of students who dare lend their student body cards to friends, it seems to me that the committee is "making a mountain out of a molehill."

Why shouldn't it be the privilege of the card holder to lend his card to whomever he pleases? It's his card, bought and paid for; he owns it with no strings attached. As the dances seem to be the function which bear the brunt of the committee's wrath, wouldn't it be logical to let people borrow cards? There are only a certain number of cards in circulation, and if the custom of allowing two people admission on one card continues, why couldn't the social committee pick a spot suitable to accommodate twice the number of people for student body cards issued? After all, does it really matter who uses the card as long as somebody has fun? The primary purpose of the dances is to make everybody happy by providing fun and entertainment for all. If a fellow is sick and can't go—and he is not permitted to lend his card to a friend, neither has fun, and both exhibit a sour attitude toward such a system.

Such practice is obviously antiquated because when a person has a desire to see that a friend gets a good time when he is unable to, and the college stifles such a plan, something is definitely wrong somewhere.

The judicial committee has overstepped its bounds in punishing students who have only good intentions as their primary motives when they acquiesce to the cajolings of a friend who asks for a student body card. Who has the heart to turn a deaf ear to the entreaties of a pal? No one has a desire to stop a friend from having a good time, and when the perpetrator of such a dastardly crime is picked up by the diligent officers of the college, what happens? The culprit has to surrender the borrowed card, the card owner is "black-balled" and the judicial committee adds to its record a new student whose only desire was to help a friend enjoy himself. Didn't somebody say once, "Help thy neighbor"? So, take heed, judicial committee, and temper your justice with mercy.

● APPROVES, SUGGESTS
Editor The Guardsman:

Give us more of The Associated Collegiate News. It's the best feature The Guardsman has had in years. If it's made a regular part of the paper so much the better.

Why is it stuck away on the back page though? Put it with the rest of the columns so a reader doesn't have to read the whole paper to find it.

I notice The Guardsman has more features and less news than before. This has livened up the paper but it does give a sort of high school impression in spots. Just read any one of them, compare with The Guardsman and wonder as I did.

Here's the scenario!

Eyes Without Tears! The story of a man's love for a woman and a woman's love for a man, and a man's need for his fellow-man, all against a colorful Vienna background. Here's the story set-up. Franz Deuseidorf has fallen madly in love with the beautiful court favorite, Carlotta LePrinz. Carlotta realizes that she will bring Franz trouble, and she decides to stop seeing him. Franz is furious and . . .

Scene: Vienna, 1800's, The Imperial Palace, German Relief Fund Ball.

The opening camera shot shows a swirl of dancers. Franz is seen advancing through the swarm of people. He suddenly comes face to face with Carlotta, stops, takes a deep breath and says, "Carlotta". She is taken aback, placing her hand at the base of her neck, looks haughty and says, "Deuseldorf," pants heavily, "you . . . here!" They stand looking at one another until a drunk bumps into them and the spell is broken.

Franz takes Carlotta by the hand and leads her to the terrace. Once out on the terrace Carlotta walks defiantly to the grill-work at the edge and throws her face up to the moon. As she is in this position, Franz comes up three steps from behind, pauses, clasps Carlotta and says, "It's rather chilly out here." Carlotta stands immobile until suddenly she breaks, turns, and faces Franz. "Oh," pause, "why did you come here tonight?" (Close up) "Why, why, why?"

Franz looks at her, and his good eye sparkles. They are in close juxtaposition as he says, "Why do you avoid me?" Blood that never moved before begins to race through Carlotta now. But the clinch is broken as a cough is heard from the direction of the terrace door, a double "Ahem". Franz and Carlotta turn, and there in the doorway stands Carlotta's husband, Count Kasnov, a glistening letter-opener in his hand!

Take the scenario from here and submit all entries to The Guardsman office at Galileo.

. . . With Malice Toward None

CONSIDERABLE attention has been drawn to the recent concentration of Allied troops in Egypt, Palestine and Syria. Not only have troops been concentrated in the Near East to the number of nearly 500,000, but the caliber and effectiveness of the forces must also be borne in mind.

Britain has contributed the Australian-New Zealand Army Corps, a group whose hard won reputation as fighters has made the nickname "Anzacs" synonymous with valor wherever military men concentrate—glass in hand. Nor are the French forces any the less renowned—Spahis, Chasseurs, d'Afrique, Tirailleurs, and two divisions of the Legion.

Therefore, it is not entirely presumptuous to consider the possible use to which these troops might be put.

Certain observers have held the eventual goal of the Near East Army to be the oil fields of either Rumania or the Russian Baku area. However, close study of the map may tend to indicate considerable difficulties besetting either undertaking.

Any attempt to strike at Rumania through the Balkans could easily be forestalled by a German counter-attack on the same region. Similarly, a drive on Baku would necessitate crossing the inhospitable Caucasus—at least a month's difficult travel for half a million men—only to be met by a Russian force, well prepared, well entrenched, and on their own ground.

However, there is another possible use for these troops which becomes apparent when it is remembered that they are all of a type well fitted for open desert warfare under torrid conditions. Had the Near East Army been intended for European rather than African service, its composition might well have included Canadians, English, and northern Frenchmen, much more efficient troops for colder mountainous campaigns. It may be that their possible goal is south and west rather than north and east.

As this column is being written, headlines announce strained Anglo-Italian relations resulting from the British blockade. Yet, before relations are strained to a breaking point, the Italian government would do well to remember the Near East Army, and the vision of an Anzac force striking at Italian Libya while the Legion prepares to liberate Ethiopia.

Considering all factors, the adaptability of the troop concentration to African service, the difficulties of Balkan or Russian campaigns, and the recent announcement by the British War office of further British troop concentration in Kenya directly to the south of Ethiopia, it stands to reason—if reason can any longer be considered a criterion in modern warfare that a powerful club has been prepared to force continuation of Italian neutrality.

SPRING, and immediately everyone thinks of that old saying about spring and a young man's fancy turns to love and other things, and it seems that spring is on its way, for flowers of brilliant hue are to be seen on street corners and in the florist's window.

Snappy tweeds for the business man, and white hats with wispy veils for the woman of fashion. Birds trilling their way over the gay afternoon crowds, and that four-letter word that starts out on Valentine's Day in small letters and by Easter has become decidedly bold-faced.

Another aspect of spring is the decided freshness of the clothes after the dark mysteries of winter. Spring colors flash about merrily, and frothy white veils and mists of white chiffon blouses can be seen on many a gay young thing. Be American this year, is the byword of the smart fashion world, and the way to do it is to have a Red, White and Blue outfit.

California may have its spreading acres, and Stanford may have Lake Laguanita come springtime, but this college has Union Square with its velvety green lawns, spreading trees, and the local WPA orchestra which serenades one into a peaceful slumber if nothing else.

One other note of spring and fair weather ahead, are the delightful quiz problems that editors of various magazines get their staff to write about. Such a quiz caught our eye, and since our nature is one of curiosity, we delved in to find out what our "fashionality" was.

What a shock, and we hardly think it's true, but here it is—"Your personality denotes the essence of the smart cosmopolitan. You are inclined, though, to be blase; and you should be more careful to show a greater interest and enthusiasm for what goes on about you. Men like you because of your poise and self-assurance.

"You are the ideal dinner-date because you look so striking in black, sophisticated evening dresses (we don't even own one). Wear extreme clothes, but subdued colors. Make up to accentuate your good features. It doesn't matter whether you are tall or short, but you should be slim."

Ye gods, what a woman! We still don't believe it, and some day we're going to write a quiz for women that is a quiz. Wait until the lazy summer days and midterm, and we'll have something super for you.

DEAR CANVASBACKS:

Activity on the local collegiate front being rather lax this week, we scan the horizon for notes of national, yea, even international interest.

While poring over the sports sheet of one of the local rags the other morning, we ran across an interesting little item on the fine art of boxing.

It seems, according to the local columnist, that "a canvasback is a guy who can recline peacefully in a horizontal position when tapped with the lightest kind of a punch."

The scrivener went on to mention that a young heavyweight hopeful was preparing to make a barnstorming tour and that the "SOS has probably been flashed to have the canvasbacks ready."

We can't understand it! Is said scrivener inferring that young hopefuls are built up into championship contenders by virtue of victories over pushovers? If so, there can be but one remedy—we must chastize these canvas-kissers who are knocked out on the slightest provocation.

Message to each and every canvasback in these United States: Dear Mr. Canvasback, "Youre a bad boy"—signed, "Bugs" Berns, head of the IWDCUTFGIWCUUC (that's short for the "If We Don't Clean Up The Fight Game It Will Clean Us Up Committee). Such going's on, tsk, tsk.

Hm, that does give us an idea, though!

What with all these "white hopes" springing up throughout the country, we see no reason why we shouldn't sponsor one that is really on the level.

Ah ha, we know just the man—165 pounds of brute, and, without a doubt, the next champion of the world. Just call us "Spider" Berns.

Do you think we're going to call our boy the "Peruvian Pummeler," or the "Colombia Clouter," or make him out to be a foreign fistic importation? Not on your life, buddy, he's a homegrown product, and, in the future, will be known as the "Yankee Yahoo."

What with the old "Spider" acting as press agent, hot-air distributor, manager, second, and what have you for the "Yahoo," the lad can't miss.

Okay, okay, okay, okay, so now the old "Spider and his entourage (the entourage, in its completeness, kiddies, consists of the "Yankee Yahoo") are off on a barnstorming tour.

But do you think we're going to match the "Yahoo" against setups, against pushovers? You're darn right we are!

What's this? What are we talking about? Oh ho, our subconscious mind just came in to tell us that for all of our good intentions, we are, nevertheless, going to have the "Yahoo" tread a path of roses rather than one studded with thorns and stickers.

Message to each and every canvasback in these United States: Dear Mr. Canvasback, "We retract our previous statement. Await our appearance as we will be there with bells on. From now on, your theme song will be 'I Surrender, Dear', and you'll be ready to take a dive if my boy so much as makes a face at you. Best wishes for your continued success," signed—"Spider" Berns, head of the WWGTCUTFRBWDCNC (that's short for the "We Were Going To Clean Up The Fight Racket But We Don't Care Now Committee").

COMMENTARY

Dropped into the WAA council meeting the other day, partly because we needed news but most important because we thought it wouldn't be a bad idea to present to the average WAA member some of the inside workings of the organization.

Here they are, SUCH as they are: Council meets once a week, is composed of WAA sports managers, association adviser, and group officials. Purpose is business, discussing forthcoming plans, sport playdays, etc.

The Wednesday meeting was scheduled for 4:30, began at quarter to five or later and developed into a dual battle over the appointment of one of the WAA members to the position of hostess chairman for a forthcoming event. After much wrangling back and forth, a vote (very unorthodox) was taken and the presiding officer won her point. All of which consumed time that could have been used to much better advantage.

With so much business to attend to, it seems unreasonable that some arrangement can't be made whereby gym students who are expected to be present at council meetings can't be excused at the regular dismissal time to be allowed to attend the meeting, especially since there are so many across-the-bayers included in the council.

It's no fun waiting around and then having to take a late train just because of an unnecessary waste of time haggling over minor matters that have no place in an orderly conducted business meeting, which unfortunately cannot be applied to the WAA's council gatherings.

While on the subject of gym, gym instructors, etc., has it ever occurred to you that there are but three gym instructors handling the various and numerous gym classes? There were formerly four, Laurine Bergin, Bertha Mae Keller, Verrel Weber, and Vera Spencer. Since Miss Spencer's marriage last summer, however, and her subsequent year's leave of absence, Instructors Keller, Bergin and Weber have been handling the hundreds of women enrolled in the gym classes, plus the WAA activities. This puts a great deal of responsibility and added work upon their shoulders and accounts for the crowded conditions the women instructors have to cope with.

CAN YOU YELL?

Among the discussed plans for the next few weeks is the coming cheer-leader tryouts scheduled for March 11 at 4:30 in the Galileo gym. WAA yell-leader, upon selection, automatically becomes a member of the WAA council and is unofficially designated as hostess chairman of the various events staged by the organization.

Last semester, out of a possible 150 women students eligible to try out for yell-leader only one woman appeared.

This certainly doesn't speak very highly of the so-called spirit that is supposed to infest the college, particularly among women. It is to be hoped that with the incoming crop of "up-and-coming" freshman women, Monday's tryouts will find at least six or seven aspiring for the job of leading the congregated women in yells, songs, and cheering at the sports playdays that are so numerous and need such support. After all, if other colleges can muster at least two such women, why can't San Francisco keep in step? We wonder!

At last in the field of competitive sports we find an attempt at living up to one of the ideals of the WAA, namely, that of fostering sports playdays among the high schools of the city. Baseball players are rounding out plans for a playday with Balboa high school for a game on March 29. The idea is good; is the perseverance there?

CANCELLATIONS, PLEASE NOTE!

Because of the basketball playday with San Mateo Junior College tomorrow, March 9, there will be no baseball practice. "There's no point in my going out and playing catch with myself, if no one will show up," Bertha Mae Keller, WAA adviser, and baseball instructor, implied. We agree, there's no point whatsoever. Also on the "no practice" list will be badminton today because of a Galileo dance this afternoon. Chalk one up for the high school jitterbugs.

Sweet's Mercuries Practice

Riflemen Cop California State Championship; Rogenes Score Highest

"They came through—didn't they," So said Captain McFarland as he discussed the results of 4th Annual California State Gallery Championships held at the National Guard Armory recently.

Winning first place, was not all the Rams did in entering five separate rifle divisions in the Championships.

The Rams defeated the second place standing California marksmen by 33 points; they won a beautiful first place trophy and were presented with five shiny gold medals.

Art Templeton, who led all shooters, won the first place award for iron sights.

The scores of the winning Ram team read: Art Templeton, 187; George Humphrey, 186; Charlie North, 185; Irving Conley, 185; and Louis Davy, 182.

This was the same squad that carried the burden during the Golden Gate Bridge League competition. It was the same team which had been working hard at the Galileo Armory for the past several months.

The second and third teams shot satisfactorily, according to McFarland, but did not place high enough to win much recognition.

Two women rifle teams from the college copped second and third places, following the winning women's team from East Bay, the Richmond Elks Girls.

Although individual results were not all officially available at the time of this writing, it was learned that Sylvia Rogenes, college sophomore, stole individual shooting honors by piling up an amazing 199 out of a possible perfect 200 at a distance of 50 yards.

"Of course, it was the first time Sylvia shot so brilliantly," McFarland related, "and it was quite a distance at that, for she has always shot at 50 feet at the college."

Awards to the girls were not presented at the end of the Championship meet, but a slight delay seems to mean little to Miss Rogenes, who gave signs of being "extremely happy over the whole thing."

Her score of 199 has assured her of some reward, according to McFarland. He said that all teams entered by the college in the Championships shot up to expectations.

Amori, Browne Help Pin Men Win Over Alumni

Dean Edwin C. Browne and Joseph A. Amori, college bowling instructor, masqueraded as college students in a bowling match held last Monday evening at the Golden Gate Bowling Alleys. The college team defeated the Alumni, 747 to 707.

Dean Browne bowled for the Alumni, while Amori pitched for the college five. Top man for the evening was Jack Schmale with 225.

Several students have been fighting for places on the team. The three regulars, Jack Schmale, Robert Riordan and Lloyd Snook, have been consistently bowling high averages. However, the last two spots have not been satisfactorily filled by anyone.

Amori said that he intends to try out Felix McManus, Lynn Stockwell, Robert K. Barber, Charles Haight, and Harold Wolf for the open berths on the team.

The keglers are also seeking a match with the University of California next week. California has just defeated Stanford in a match held this week.

"The men are all showing improvement, and are expected to show some high scoring in our next few meets," added Amori.

The Gonzaga match is still open. The Washington pinsmashers have just returned from Chicago, where they competed in a national meet, and have not definitely decided when to hold the telegraphic meet with the local team.

College Nine Meets Marin In Opening Conference Game

Marin Junior College is coming across the Golden Gate to meet the Ram baseball nine in a doubleheader tomorrow afternoon at Funston.

The Northern California Junior College Conference officially opens tomorrow, with games scheduled for three fronts. First game of the Ram-Marin encounter is scheduled to start at 12 noon tomorrow.

Slated to do the pitching for the college are Harry Aleo and Martin Zernicke. Fresh from a triumph over Galileo High School, 9 to 3, the Rams are expected to send the Marin Marauders home vanquished, says George Gumas, team manager.

"The team is finally hitting. We are confident of victory against Marin," added Gumas. "Although we should win from Marin, I doubt that we will have an easy time this season. Modesto looks like a good bet. That is the team to watch."

Starting lineup for the game tomorrow, as announced by Coach Jack Gaddy, will be the same as in previous games. Terry McCarthy, first; Mike DeStefano, second; Frank Mullins, short; Roy Micheli, third; Bob Webber, left field; Robert Nishi, center; Al Giovanetti, right; and George Moreira, catcher. Pitchers, as previously mentioned, will be Aleo, first game, and Zernicke twirling the nightcap. All league games will be doubleheaders.

Leading Ram hitters to date have been Nishi, Giovanetti, Webber, De Stefano, Micheli, and Frank Mullins. First-string pitchers are Aleo, Zernicke and Nishi; catchers, Moreira, Joe Mezzetti and Robert Hvidt.

Results of the Commerce High game, played Wednesday afternoon, were not available, but Gaddy believed that the Rams would easily win. Since uniforms were distributed to the regular players last Monday, the Rams should present a snappy colored nine in tomorrow's game.

The players have shown a lot of pep and enthusiasm during practice, and are rarin' to play against junior college competition. The pitchers, Aleo in particular, have shown marked improvement in control and speed. Gaddy is not particularly worried about his pitching this season.

Ski Club Starts Drive For New Members Sunday

Highlighting the month's activities for college skiers will be the buffet-supper meeting to be held this Sunday evening, March 10, at 6:30 o'clock at the club president's home, Bob Ogg, 670 Creston Street, Berkeley, California.

Purpose of the meeting is a get-together for the purpose of starting a new-member drive for the club. According to Ogg, new members are cordially invited to attend the supper and bring anyone interested in joining the ski group. "We expect to present a movie on the educational aspects of skiing," Ogg explained, "preparatory to the scheduled meet with Salinas Junior College on March 17."

Last week-end several of the club members and adviser Alden Smith traveled to Norden for some practice skiing.

The snow, according to Smith, wasn't in good condition because of a Friday night snowfall which made skiing difficult. In addition to that, the ski tow at the Sugar Bowl resort was broken.

With the Salinas meet at Norden, Ogg has planned an interclub meet to be staged upon one of the smaller slopes surrounding the area for novice, intermediate, and advanced skiers. The course to be run will be laid out by club members, and will probably consist of a slalom race and a downhill race.

San Mateo Meets Improved Locals Twice This Weekend

Meeting San Mateo for their last basketball game of the season, the Rams play exchange encounters tonight at Kezar and tomorrow at San Mateo gym.

Since both teams are so near the bottom (although the college has managed to keep above San Mateo in conference standings), tonight and tomorrow night's game promises to be the most colorful of all games, inasmuch as these are the last games to be played.

Counting up the conference wins and losses, the college has amassed four wins and six defeats, while the San Mateo Bulldogs have had but two wins and eight losses. The Rams defeated Marin, who defeated the Bulldogs. Modesto butchered the peninsulars by 13 points, while the Rams lost by a mere three points. In other words, these games should be ones that the Rams should win, although predictions are almost impossible in basketball.

As are the Rams, the Bulldogs are almost all green. Their only returning veteran from last year is the gangly 6 ft. 3 in. center, Junie Wirth. In five of the last nine games, Wirth was taken out on personals. The Bulls have a flash in Hank Janiver, who leads the San Mateo scorers for the season with a total of 257 points, or an average of 11¼ points per game. The other forward position is filled by George Kikes, who is considered as having "no peer" as a ball handler." Guards Bob Sheehan and Cal Cavanaugh, although not exceptionally good, manage to have their good nights.

Coach Clyde Devine, formerly of Oregon State University, succeeded the grayling Murlus S. McFadden, who has coached the Bulldogs for 17 years.

Coach Louis "Dutch" Conlan has Bob Staynor, stellar forward, who was benched because of an infected ear. Morie Cerf will probably be one of the starting forwards, with Mossler or Staynor filling the other position. Vern Genesy, the college's agile six-footer, will likely start at center, and Joe Johns and Red Kerwin will probably fill the guard positions.

Ram Tennis Team Hits New High; Win Match With Fresno State

Either Fresno State was very bad or the local Ram tennisters were tops—but anyway, Fresno was shut out in seven straight matches last Saturday afternoon when Coach Tom Wilson's Swinging Rams went to town at the Palace of Fine Arts.

There was little doubt as to which was the superior team for that afternoon. Seven times the Ram flag was raised in victory. Seven times Coach Wilson smiled broadly, for he appeared happy to witness a "perfect day."

Match of the afternoon was the one in which Hawaiian Bill Madamba, team leader, drove and backhanded his way to a victory over Al St. John, Fresno ace. Madamba won in three sets, 6-2, 6-8, 6-3.

Ray Berns, college yell-leader and veteran tenniser, was given a bad time but finally managed to win over speedy Dick Hammond, after overcoming a two-game handicap in the final set, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4.

Chester Meade defeated Bob Peterson, 6-1, 7-5.

Jack Hare beat Sid Clark in three thrilling sets, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Tony Colagos overwhelmed Sid Phealey, 6-1, 7-5.

In the doubles, the Rams came back stronger than ever. Wilson paired Berns and Madamba, one-two players of the team, who scored an impressive win over Clark and Hammond, batting it out over the net in three fast sets, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1.

A great day for the college was climaxed by Meade and Hare, who scored a victory over Pheale and Paterson to make a clean sweep of the seven matches.

Following a series of practice matches with California, Stanford, and Fresno State, Tom Wilson's tennis kings will begin the 1940 Northern California Conference Season tomorrow afternoon when they meet Marin Junior College at the Palace of Fine Arts.

No information could be found concerning the strength of the Marin racqueteers, but it is believed that the two institutions will be evenly matched, as Marin had a comparatively fine team last year.

Wilson said that anyone wanting to witness the matches may do so free of charge at Palace courts.

Matches will begin, according to Wilson, no later than 1 p.m.

The Guardsman SPORTS

Track Team Takes Thundering Third In Mile Relay And Pole Vault At Track And Field Championships

Each earning a third place the hard way, the college mile relay team, and pole vaulter, performed up to the highest expectations of Coach Russell J. Sweet in the Finnish Relief Indoor Track and Field Championships, held last Tuesday night in the Civic Auditorium.

Don Manov, Charles Robin, Jack McMeekin, and Bert Korn, comprising the Ram relay squad, attempted to speed up their pace to match those of the Olympic Club and University of California teams, but were unable to negotiate the foreign pine board oval in fast enough time to furnish competition for their veteran rivals. Time for the race was 3:39.5.

In the pole vault event, Sweetmen Keith Groswird and Bill Hancock were entered as contenders. Hancock went out of the running when the cross-bar was raised to eleven feet. Groswird managed to clear the top at twelve and one-half, but was unable to make thirteen feet, and one-half, which trick was performed by Ken Dills of U.S.C.

From the announced results, Groswird tied for third place with Tomaso, Stanford, and Sunsiere, San Jose State.

Feature attraction of the meet, sanctioned by the Pacific Athletic Association and the Amateur Athletic Union, was the first indoor track appearance in the United States of Taisto Maki, the "Flying Finn", who has a valid claim on the three mile world record, at 13:42.4.

Paavo Nurmi, the greatest long distance runner of modern times, received a thunderous ovation from the audience as he went through an exhibition of six laps. The veteran, 42-year-old trackster still demonstrated the peerless form that won him international fame in several Olympic Games.

WAA Treks To San Mateo For Sectional Playday

Traveling to San Mateo Junior College for a basketball playday on March 9, will be 18 representatives of the Women's Athletic Association, according to Alma Koopman, vice-president of WAA.

Freshman women of the colleges will compose a team to oppose the sophomore women. This game will be played first and will be followed by a novel game between a team composed of a faculty member of each college and a team composed of students, Miss Koopman added.

Laurine Bergin, faculty adviser, will accompany the group and will participate in the faculty game.

"Swimming and luncheon," said Miss Koopman, "will conclude the program."

General sectional playdays are held every semester to encourage women students to participate in various seasonal sports, to become acquainted with students of other colleges, and for observance of differences and likenesses of participation of women of the various colleges, according to Thursa Scott, president of the Women's Athletic Association.

Recital

By Flossita Badger Next Tuesday In Lecture Hall

Primarily given for students in her voice classes, Flossita Badger, college music instructor, will present a recital on Tuesday, March 12, at 1 o'clock in the Lecture Hall at the Powell Street building, according to Miss Badger.

"This recital will represent the traditional recital program," said Miss Badger, "the purpose of which is to give the students an opportunity to hear such a recital."

Any student of the college who is interested, is invited by Miss Badger to attend.

Following is the program to be presented by Miss Badger:

Group I will include My Lovely Celia, old English; Mary of Allendale, old English; and Alleluia, Mozart.

Group II will include Feldeinsamkeit, Brahms; Ver Gabliches Standchen, Brahms; Im Kahne, Grieg; and Der Erl Konig, Schubert.

Group III will include Green, Debussy; The Maids of Cadiz, Delibes; and Vissi d'Arte, from La Tosca by Puccini.

The fourth and last group will include three early American tunes arranged by Ernst Bacon, Little Mohee, Colorado Trail and Erie Canal, and The Bird of the Wilderness by Horsman.

Gladys Steele will accompany Miss Badger at the piano.

Ohio State Fraternity Holds Anti-Women Week

COLUMBUS, OHIO — (ACP) — Women, an institution hitherto regarded as a necessary factor in the building of happy home life, will have no place in—nay! are strictly prohibited from—the home of the Phi Kappa Tau fraternity—for one weekend a year at Ohio State University.

From the front of the fraternity house hangs a huge sign which proclaims in bold letters to the world that "Anti-Woman Week End" is in progress.

From Friday to Monday, the rules are simple and terse: "No dates, no shaves, no haircuts, no shirts, no ties or pressed trousers, and above all no communication with (and here is listed a classification without a loophole) any girl, maid, or woman."

All pictures of women are taken from the rooms and, following a solemn ceremony, deposited in a safe until Monday morning.

WAA Will Hold Coeducational Playday

Coeducational volleyball will be the purpose of a playday to be held at San Francisco State College on March 30, according to Thursa Scott, president of the Women's Athletic Association.

All men of the college are urged by Miss Scott to attend and should see her for further details.

"In the past, men of the college have shown a gratifying interest in the playdays," said Miss Scott, "and we have every reason to believe that this time, too, the male members of the student body will turn out en masse to cooperate in the spirit of fun."

Crime Detection Head Teaches Police Students

Francis Latulipe, chief of the city's Crime Detection Bureau, recently finished six weeks of instruction to the Police Training students of the college. Under him the advanced class was taught the fine points of finger-printing.

"The college is very fortunate in getting such prominent men in these fields for instruction, and we have already signed up a Mr. McInnery, from the police force, to instruct in an identification-by-photo class," said Harold W. Leuenberger, police instructor in the college.

According to state mineralogist Walter P. Bradley, the total mineral production of the State of California in 1938 was worth $380,414,000. Of this amount, petroleum made up the bulk, with gold second, and natural gas third.

The Evolution Of The Guardsman From Copy To Students - A Pictorial History

From the reporter to the finished paper—The Guardsman presents its autobiography. This is the pictorial story of a college newspaper, the weekly process that a news-story (known as copy) undergoes in its transition into a finished product. In the Guardsman office above at Galileo, reporters gather to await their turns at the two available typewriters. When a typewriter is at last free, they seize upon it avidly, turn out their copy on half sheets of paper, as pictured below.

Above is a photographic facsimile of a piece of copy such as is turned in by reporters for editing by the staff. Editing consists of marking directions for setting the copy (size of type, width of lines, etc.) at the top of each sheet. The copy is then read for grammatical, spelling and punctuation errors, and these mistakes are indicated by the code-like "printer's marks" as shown above. When the copy has passed the test of the editorial staff, it is ready to "go into lead".

A linotype is a complex machine fitted with a typewriter-like keyboard. The operator types out the copy on the keyboard, and within 10 or 12 seconds a solid line of type (linotype) slides into the tray from within the mechanism of the apparatus. By means of the linotype the more than 400 column inches of type that make up an average Guardsman can be turned out in a total of about 15 hours.

From Early Emanon To The Moderized Guardsman

Almost five years ago, San Francisco Junior College was founded. The college did not come into existence alone, though; along with the institution, The Guardsman blew in.

At that time, in the formative stages of the college, a student newspaper was indispensable. Fortunately, the need was recognised at the very outset, and steps were taken in the form of Emanon.

A reversal of the letters in "no name," Emanon served appropriately for a publicity organ which was as yet an unknown quantity in every respect.

After two issues, however, Emanon became The Guardsman. The title was selected by vote of the students from among many names proposed, and has ever since stuck.

The Guardsman, serving as the official newspaper of the Associated Students of the college, has seen a lot of water go under the bridge. And each cross-current and vagrant eddy was reflected in the columns of that newspaper.

As a matter of policy, The Guardsman has consistently held to the theory that it should, to the best of its ability, defend the interests of the students whom it represents.

It has considered itself not as a paternalistic guide and molder of student government, but rather as a voice of the student body; an avenue through which every student can express himself. The Guardsman has attempted truly to represent the students in all matters. Enabled by its position to measure the trend of student sentiment more objectively and accurately than any other barometer, the paper has been all the more suited to undertake such a task.

Guardsman Editor

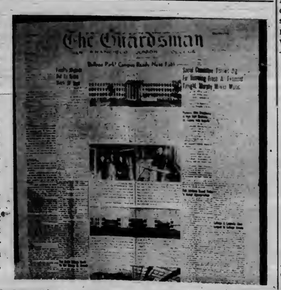
In the matter of make-up, or style, The Guardsman last semester climbed on the "streamline" bandwagon. This system, whose most notable exponent is the San Francisco Chronicle, has brought a new art to the newspaper world. This semester The Guardsman is just beginning to get "streamlining" straightened out, and presents with each issue a more representative example of the system.

As the copy rolls out from the lino, it drops into a tray arrangement attached to the frame of the machine. As the tray fills, the slugs of type are transferred into standard three-sided trays such as are pictured above. The trays are known as galleys. Each is numbered so that it will not be too difficult to discover where the type of the different stories is. Proofs are taken from these galleys, and these galley-proofs are read in order that they may be corrected for typographical errors before the type is put in the forms.

"Forms are the trade name for the large iron frames that hold the actual lead slugs of type. Into these forms in the above picture the stories "in lead" are arranged in the manner that they are to appear on the page. Pictures, linoleum blocks and headlines are inserted in their place according to a prearranged plan made out for each issue, and the pages begin to take form. When all the type is in the forms, and blank spaces eliminated by leading (i. e., inserting lead rectangles between the slugs of type), the forms are tightened.

The presses that turn out The Guardsman are flat-bed presses. Onto their "beds" are laid the forms, and the head pressman gives the order, "Turn 'em over." Twelve hundred times an hour the inkrollers roll over the type, the clamps bring the paper into place, and a copy of The Guardsman rolls off, as the picture shows. From the typewriter of the reporter to the presses of the printer, the paper has progressed through many intermediate steps, is now ready to go to the bindery for folding, after which it will be ready for distribution.



Joe Kurpieski, Guardsman photographer, took these pictures.

The appearance of the completed Guardsman has varied considerably from semester to semester. As the trend toward "streamlining" began to make itself felt throughout the nation, The Guardsman kept pace by gradual modernization of its make-up. The results are shown by a comparison of facsimiles of one of the earliest issues shown on the left and an issue of this semester on the right.

Especially interesting in the comparison of these two copies is the subject matter. The pencil to the left points to headlines that read "Rumor Of $100,000 For Housing Of JC Site Not Yet Selected." Four years later, The Guardsman pictures the newly completed campus.

Just as The Guardsman has pictured the construction of the new campus, so it has pictured its own construction, the process that brings a paper to each student of the college twice a week during the school year, despite late copy, breakdown in linotypes, and the other things that, when considered, show "that when all is said and done, an editor's life is not a happy one."

Dr. S. Winslow Cram believes that students should take his name in vain, for he urges all in his classes not to cram for his final examinations. And to add to the effectiveness to his no-cramming edict at Emporia (Kans.) State Teachers College, Prof. Cram says his students may use "ponies" when they write their answers to his quiz problems.

Says the professor: "This plan serves as an impetus to the student to put in a worthwhile review program. He won't have to clutter up his mind with numerous equations which he can't remember. It makes for more constructive review instead of cramming.

So we hereby initiate a movement to create more Crams and less cramming in all collegeland!

College librarians have their troubles, too—and if you don't believe it, listen to this: A Glenville (W. Va.) State Teachers College librarian recently received a request for a book called "Forty Ways to Amuse a Dog." The person wanted "Forty Days of Musa Dagh."

War and final examinations seem to hold no fear for psychology students of Georgia Southwestern College. In compiling a "fear list" recently, they listed the following as the things they feared most:

Snakes, drunks, water, wild animals, mad dogs, fire, stormy weather, reckless driving, and high altitudes.

WEATHER NOTE: Education took a holiday recently at Connors (Okla.) State Agricultural College—not because it wanted to but because it was frozen out of house and home.

When a sudden cold wave descended, all water pipes in the college buildings were frozen, students and boilers didn't have water—so classes were dismissed until the first thaw. "Thaw, thaw, stay away," was the students' chant for several days.

COLOR NOTE: Superstitions come and superstitions go, claims the University of Idaho's Psychologist Allan C. Lemon, but one that college students stick with is this: Blondes are less trustworthy than brunettes.

CORRESPONDENCE NOTE: Believed the longest personal telegram in history, Alabama Polytechnic Institute students dispatched a 7,000-word wire to Bandsman Kay Kyser inviting him to play on their campus. The wire was signed by every member of the student body.

President Cloud Comes Home From Convention Trip

President Archibald J. Cloud, recent visitor to the National Education Association, Division of Superintendents Convention in St. Louis, Missouri, returned last night to San Francisco.

Leaving Tuesday, February 28, for Missouri, President Cloud attended the convention at St. Louis and then traveled to Columbia, Missouri, where he was a guest speaker at the annual meeting of the National Association of Junior Colleges.

Major Joseph P. Nourse, Superintendent of Schools, and Chief Deputy John M. Brady of the San Francisco schools, accompanied President Cloud on the trip.

Ultimatum From Club Board; Petition Deadline March 12

March 12 is the deadline for clubs of the college to enter petitions for the renewal of their charters.

"All petitions," stated Aiden Thorogood, president, "must be in by March 12, or the clubs will be put on a suspended list. Those on the suspended list who wall to enter new petitions will be put on a list of clubs with low standing with the college."

Long known for their two-bit words and ominous sounding phrases, the medical professors of our institutions of higher learning have come in for a bit of ribbing because of them.

Western Reserve University's Dr. Frederick C. Waite made a special survey and recently found that 55 U. S. medical schools have devised 258 different kinds of titles for their 2,418 professors.

Here are a couple of stumpers from his list: "professor of cardiovascular diseases" and "professor of sterinolaryngeology."

Harvard and Yale naval ROTC students aren't as tough as they ought to be, in the opinion of one member of Congress—and he thinks something ought to be done about it.

At a recent House hearing on navy department appropriations, Representative C. A. Plumley (Norwich '96) told the committee: "I can tell you something that you do not know about the ROTC at Harvard and Yale. They are gentlemen's clubs, and they do not get the hard-boiled training that the navy needs."

Charles N. Pollack, Harvard senior, has a very, very red face—and here's why:

When the Crimson relay swimming team decided to make a try for a new record in the 800 yard distance, Pollack was chosen to call out the laps to the swimmers from the edge of the pool. The first three mermen turned in excellent times, and the fourth member of the team was well on his way to breaking the established record, when—Caller Pollack became over-excited, fell into the water atop the record-breaker!

He fled from the pool—with the swimmers doing some tall calling of their own in his direction!

Editorialists on the University of Minnesota's Daily have a new and novel explanation for the current feminine hat fads. Listen to their spouting:

"With a half-dozen exceptions, the girls all buy hats. And it's no use trying to figure out why. What appeals to the ladies is clearly the indicrous—after all, look at the things they marry."

Illinois Wesleyan University's football manager believes in taking no chances—so he recently wired President Roosevelt: "I and hundreds of other football managers over the country would like to know the exact date for Thanksgiving in 1940." Engineering students are famous for their mathematical approach to all phases of life—and University of Minnesota engineers are no exception. They've started a move to publish a list of all jokes used by their professors, a list that will classify and number all wisecracks and favorite stories of the pedagogues. Chief reason for the project is that it will be a time-saver for all concerned, for in the future professors will merely give the number of their joke when they feel the moment has arrived to spice their lectures with a touch of levity.

Hollywood is having its troubles—and collegeland's experts definitely are of no help in solving them.

When asked to tell movie producers what kind of noise a dinosaur made, they replied they didn't know. The noises are to be used in a screen battle between a tyracnosaurus and a dimenrodon, and when told this fact a University of Texas professor further complicated their problem by replying:

"Since the two animals lived about 100,000,000 years apart, I doubt if they could have heard each other, anyway."

PETITIONS FOR GRADUATION BY MARCH 13

Last day to file petitions for graduation will be Wednesday, March 13, announced Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

BOOK EXCHANGE CLOSES FRIDAY

The book exchange at the Galileo Bank will close Friday, March 15, announced Carl Slough, college instructor in charge of the bank. All students having books in the exchange who have not received either their money or their books, are requested to see Slough immediately.

SCHOLARSHIP GROUP MEETS TODAY

Alpha Gamma Sigma, college honor society, will meet today at 1 p.m. in the Little Theatre at Galileo, announced Alice C. Cooper, club adviser.

WOMEN TO BE MEASURED

Anthropometric measurement study of women, for the purpose of standardizing the sizes of commercial patterns and ready-made garments, will begin Monday, March 11, from 3:30 to 5:00, announced Claire Cuneo, faculty instructor in charge.

Women of the college are urged to cooperate by signing up for measurement with Theresa Galifoy, Marion Schrick, Stafany Wasilko, Dorothy Rusk, Blossom Young, Jeanne Arnold, Jean Chesley, and Gloria Miller.

Class Activities

Freshies, Sophomores Schedule Track Meet, Swim This Weekend

Low Sophs

Participation in an intramural track meet to be held at Kezar Stadium this Friday and Saturday, March 15 and 16, is the first activity in the low sophomore class, announced Dan McHugh, class president.

Referring to social activities, McHugh indicated that the first spring event will be a dance sponsored by his class, bids for which will be one dollar per couple. Time and place, however, cannot definitely be decided until late this week or possibly the next.

The low soph social committee this semester includes, according to McHugh, Vice-President Dolores Dixon, Secretary Muriel Dodsworth, Florence Hansen, Mel Chiezola, and Horace Simi.

Low Frosh

Making a splash in this semester's earliest activities will be the low freshman swimming party which, according to Bob Klitzker, class president, will be held this Friday night, March 15, from 8 to 11 at the Fairmont Plunge.

Sign-ups, said Klitzker, may be made at the Galileo Bank before March 15, the date of the party. An attempt has been made to secure Helen Crienkovich, national diving star, to perform at the plunge, but no assurance has yet been given she will return to the city before that night.

Asked for a further report of his class activities, Klitzker replied that he did not wish to outline any plans until they were definite.

A low freshman meeting scheduled for last Friday after the student body rally, was expected to result in the formation of more specific social policies.

At present, revealed Klitzker, the low freshman class is being governed by a committee which includes previous candidates for offices: Phillip Baril, Robert Koenig, Ed Vigar, Bob Holmes, Mary Bartholomew, Bettie Quadri, Pat Randall, Marlin Malone, Audrey Printzlow, and Klitzker.

Tickets for the swimming party will be sold next week at 35 cents.

Welfare Council Sends Three To Co-op Conclave

Three delegates of the college will be sent to Berkeley for the California Student Cooperative Conference, March 16 and 17, according to Al Williams, ASSFJC president and ex-officio member of the college welfare council.

The delegation, consisting of Williams, Robert Klitzker and Bill Williams, will attend the meet for the specific purpose of studying the college co-op movement, "with an eye to setting up a cooperative in the new building," the welfare council spokesman announced.

Participation in the Berkeley conclave will be the first concrete step in the council's proposed investigation of extra-curricular activities and general student welfare subjects.

As specified in an official booklet, the purpose of the Co-op Conference will be the discussion of "problems of importance to the cooperatives, with attention also given to special problems encountered in different fields of cooperative endeavor."

The three principal topics to be discussed at Round-Table sessions will be (1) Formation of the Cooperative, (2) Consumer Education, and (3) Administration and Finance. All delegates will participate in these sessions, which will be conducted by representatives of the Associated Co-ops of Northern California, Palo Alto Consumer Cooperatives, and UC and UCLA Student Co-op Associations.

Ashman Takes Post At KHUB After College Radio Work

Eighteen-year-old Clarence Ashman, former student of the college, has just received a position as announcer-technician and staff artist for Watsonville's station KHUB.

While attending the college, Ashman was enrolled in Marie Weller's radio production courses. Miss Weller remarked that Ashman was outstanding in the production course work and that he had taken all available radio classes.

Ashman has had actual radio experience before as an announcer-technician for KSAN in this city. In addition, Ashman holds a First Class Radio Telephone Operator's License.

Recital

Badger Recital At One O'Clock In Lecture Hall

Students of the college are invited to attend a recital to be given today by Flossita Badger, college music instructor.

The recital will take place in the Lecture Hall at the Powell Street Building at 1 o'clock, according to Miss Badger.

This program is given primirily for students of music, but the choir instructor has extended an invitation to all who are interested to attend.

"This will represent the traditional recital program," said Miss Badger, "the purpose of which is to give the students an opportunity to hear such a recital."

The following is the program to be presented by Miss Badger:

The first group will consist of My Lovely Celia, old English; Mary of Allendale, old English; and Alleluia, Mozart.

Second group includes Feldeinsamkeit, Brahms; Ver Gabliches Standchen, Brahms; Im Kahne, Grieg; and Der Erl Konig, Schubert.

Third group will consist of Green, Debussy; The Maids of Cadiz, Delibes; and Vissi d'Arte, from La Tosca by Puccini.

Last group will include three early American tunes arranged by Ernst Bacon; Little Mohee; Colorado Trail and Erie Canal, and The Bird of the Wilderness by Horsman.

Miss Badger's accompanist will be Gladys Steele.

Redford Announces Delay On NYA Checks; Sheets Late

Because more than 50 NYA students were late turning in their time sheets, NYA checks for the month of February will not be in the mail until sometime this week, revealed Edward H. Redford, NYA director.

According to Redford, under ordinary conditions students would have received their checks by last Friday or Saturday.

"Responsibility for the turning in of time sheets on the date specified rests entirely with the student himself. He must make the arrangements with his faculty sponsor to have his time sheet signed," Redford said.

Redford also volunteered the following information: "We've decided definitely that if NYA students do not have their time sheets in next month by the April 3 deadline, we will not accept them later."

This month's NYA payroll, Redford also said, is approximately $2,500, the largest in the history of the NYA in the college.

Thus, 275 students are eligible to receive checks.

College No Employment Guarantee—W. C. Marsh

"A college education is not synonymous with unemployment insurance," stated W. C. Marsh in his article entitled "Semi-Professional Training in Insurance," published in the February issue of the Junior College Journal.

In San Francisco alone, which is the largest insurance center of the world, it was disclosed that some 30,000 individuals earn their livelihood through insurance, and that 18,000 of this group represent women, the new tendency in this field being for special vocational training.

The major executives of the insurance business in San Francisco have been contacted, and the results are that the Fireman's Fund places four college students per semester, the Pacific National Fire Insurance places two a semester, Maryland Casualty Company places two, and Sun Life places two, while the cooperation of four other nationwide insurance companies is pending. This is the only cooperative plan of its type in the United States, Marsh pointed out.

AWS Program With Choir

Immediate plans for the Associated Women Students include a program to be given in conjunction with the A Cappella Choir, according to Gloria Miller, president of AWS.

"The concert will probably be given at the Century Club or some such club," said Miss Miller, "and will be given on a Sunday afternoon sometime in April."

Hart, Galbraith Star In Ice Carnival Tonight

Cinderella takes to the ice again tonight at 8 o'clock with Stuart Ross in the title role and Bill Hart, college skate club president, in the supporting part of the Prince.

A shadow dance by Murray Galbraith and his brother Sheldon, and the playing of the part of one of Cinderella's step-sisters, covers the group of college ice skaters participating. Rates for the ice show are set at $1.10, $1.65, and $2.20.

To be staged again tomorrow night at the same time, Cinderella is the first play of its kind ever to be presented in San Francisco.

College ice skaters will stage their own carnival on April 27, from 5:30 until 7:30.

Included in the program, to be staged by the ice skaters, will be a 14-step dance number by the advanced skaters of the college club; and an all-star broom game on ice. The price for the carnival has not as yet been set, according to Bill Hart, skate club president. The possibility that Marcella May, youthful state women's Junior champion, would be exhibition guest soloist, was revealed by Hart last week.

March 29, Hart, Murray Galbraith and Ed Bodell will participate in the Pacific Coast Figure Skating championships in Oakland. The three college skaters will compete in the men's, junior, senior and novice competitions, respectively.

Social Committee Slates A.S. Dance For March 29

Second Associated Student dance of the semester will be held March 29, at the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland, announced Muriel Grenelle, head of the social committee today.

"After considerable discussion and several committee meetings, we have decided to hold this dance across the bay for the benefit of the many East Bay students attending the college," Miss Grenelle said.

Although no orchestra has been selected as yet, it is rumored that Frank Wells, Les Smith and Warren Ringen are being considered.

"The affair will be informal and in keeping with the recently formulated policy there will be no dance bids issued at the door as the students enter," Miss Grenelle said.

No San Mateo Junior College students are to be permitted at this dance, the social committee announced.

Dean Edwin C. Browne warned all students not to lend their Associated Student cards to anyone.

Aeronautics

College-Federal Program Gives Airmen Training

College birdmen are taking to the skies these days.

Sponsored jointly by the college and the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and instructed by Captain George Richards, the flying program is finally feeling its wings after months of preliminary preparation.

Each of the 30 pilots in the course has now had an average of four hours of dual flying time.

After about three hours of level flight, gentle banks and turns, "S" turns and figure "8's", the students are now going into the work of take-offs and landings.

Conceived as part of the United States Government's extensive program of aerial preparedness, the course was awarded to more than 300 colleges and universities throughout the nation. The program was designed to bolster the national defense by giving basic flight training to 20,000 student pilots each year.

First definite announcement that the Aeronautics course was a concrete reality came in The Guardsman of September 22, 1939. At that date, official verification was forthcoming from the office of Registrar J. Paul Mohr.

Two weeks after this first pronouncement, the stringent physical examinations required by the course were begun. Gradually, the number of applicants was whittled down, many being disqualified on grounds of poor scholastic records, temperaments, and physical disabilities.

Looking forward to the day when these pilots, fully qualified to handle planes, might be called upon to defend the United States, the Federal Government provided both funds and equipment for the training course.

Taking their schooling in practical ground and flight work, student pilots of the college Aeronautics course work out at Mills Field under the instruction of Captain George Richards.

In the top picture, Jay Wright swings the prop of a cabin job which seats Gene Powell (vaguely visible through windshield). Jay launches off on the wrong foot, but tries, anyway.

Radio now being an imperative feature of aircraft, Gene Powell and Jack Glosso test their set on the ground before taking to the sky (second picture).

The third picture is misleading. Warner Von Breeenfelt, Jack Glosso, Gene Powell and Jay Wright are not forcibly thumbing a sky-ride. They are making last-minute adjustments on a Ryan speedster owned by the Lyons Air Service. In a few moments more, this ship took to the air, every wire taut, every bolt thoroughly tightened.

And, in the bottom picture, Jay Wright explores the inner workings of the plane's engines, satisfies himself that all is well before the take-off.

Hotel Division Observes Fourth Year; Cites Progress

On March 18 the college Hotel and Restaurant Management Division will observe the fourth anniversary since its inception in 1936, announced Hilda Watson, hotel division instructor.

Since the anniversary occurs during Easter Week, its observance was held yesterday in conjunction with the banquet given by hotel division students to the California Northern Hotel Association. A cake created in the best tradition of fancy cake making was made especially for the anniversary celebration by Sterling Silver, student in the hotel division, said Miss Watson.

In its four years of successful operation, the hotel division has rolled up a record that has gained it national recognition. Its particular courses are unique on the Pacific Coast, and as a consequence draw students from all over California and the western states.

Its initial enrollment in 1936 of 10 students has now in 1940 grown to 57, with an even greater increase expected in the future.

As part of its practical work, the division manages the Galileo High School and the Marina Junior High School cafeterias. Further practical work in the form of employment at various summer resorts or hotels is required before graduation certificates are issued.

The hotel industry of San Francisco is more than willing to grant its employees time to instruct at the college because it realizes the value of such a course to the industry, commented Mrs. Watson.

The current coordinator of the hotel division is Paul V. Wendell. He followed in the steps of J. Graham Sullivan, now educational coordinator of the college. As his title suggests, Wendell is the coordinating factor between the students and the hotel and restaurant industries, and has charge of student placement. A record that speaks highly of the college course, is the 100 per cent placement score now held by the division.

Student luncheon service will be continued in the Galileo cafeteria during the first three days of Easter week, March 18, 19, and 20, although the doors of the school will be closed for the Easter week to the high school students, Mrs. Watson also said.

. . . Of Sound and Fury

THIS column has been rather pointedly requested to concern itself, for once at least, with the birds and the bees and the flowers. It may be safely assumed that the dictum from above was inspired by an innate desire to see the majority pleased in the matter.

As a matter of record, it had been taken for granted that the majority was thoroughly familiar with the birds and the bees and the flowers. As another matter of record, it now becomes apparent that the majority is either thoroughly ignorant of the Tantamount Trio, or is possessed of an insatiable appetite in this respect.

If anything, it is probably the latter alternative; and that's all well and good, because the birds and the bees and the flowers rate a close second in a photo-finish with the instinct of self-preservation, and keep the world spinning to boot.

Armed with statistics garnered from various prosperous industrial sources, this column ventures to presume that the majority is tolerably contented with the current social standing of the Big Three, and would have to stretch its collective imagination quite a space to picture anyone being sore at them.

So thinking, the majority endorses the intrinsic mental incapacity of the Great American Booblie.

For, contrary to prevailing sentimental opinion, there is a man who finds himself out of harmony with nature. He is the Conquering Aryan, and he thinks that the birds and the bees and the flowers—to say nothing of the rabbits—are giving him a dirty deal.

Perhaps Herr Hitler "doth protest too much," but the figures favor his fury. After seven years of Horst Wessel and Strength Through Joy, the First Soldier looks bug-eyed at the census totals and sees that the class of '39-'40 is holding out on him. The Reich is getting short-changed.

What of German efficiency? Herr Hitler is chagrined and angered by the breakdown of his mass-production unit. World War III, reasons Der Fuehrer, will find Germany's legions three divisions underweight!

Herr Hitler wonders why nature treats him this way. He has never even looked for an oppressed minority among the birds and the bees and the flowers, so how could they have anything against Nordic Kultur?

Briefly, he can't see the thing. After urging the perfect Aryan women to be broadminded, after banning Margaret Sanger and whitewashing a seven-letter epithet, still he cannot seem to mobilize the birds and the bees and the flowers for service on the home front.

It might help some if Herr Hitler set an example, for, unless the ersatz foodstuffs of the Reich pack a mighty wallop, the Pure Aryans are willing and able to commune with the Top Triumvirate, but lack merely the necessary initiative.

Perhaps Herr Hitler himself is wanting in initiative, despite his reputation as an opportunist. Perhaps, on the other hand—well, let's hope so, for the sake of the future, if any.

All of which goes to show that the birds and the bees and the flowers are ever with us, indispensable and often elusive—to say nothing of the rabbits.

"AND the temple to his memory shall be the bodies cleansed and pure." This, the epitaph of a great man, marks the finish of an even greater film—Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet.

There was something strangely gripping about this story of a man of science who could envision nothing more sacred than the saving of a human life. Toward that end, Dr. Paul Ehrlich devoted his entire career.

His first effort in behalf of his fellow-man was the discovery that aniline dyes would stain a culture so that even a doctor unaccustomed to the use of the microscope could see the tuberculosis bacilli recently found by Dr. Robert Koch. Later, with the help of Dr. Emil von Behring, Ehrlich staved off a diphtheria epidemic that would have killed many of the city's children.

The major part of the film was concerned with his efforts to wipe out man's most dread disease—syphilis. He set himself to the task of finding an arsenic compound that would cure the affliction but at the same time not affect the brain cells. Days in, months out, years on end, he sought the elusive drug.

After six hundred and five heart-breaking failures, 606 — salvarsan — was concocted. The blind could see once more, the lame could walk again, and men could now hold their heads high—unashamed and unafraid. An absentminded genius had finally rid the world of its most nefarious scourge, and instead of receiving the homage due him, he was slandered by jealous colleagues. Ehrlich, however, was too great a man to let himself be dragged down into the morass of bigotry.

Most impressive are those films which make the audience forget the actors on the screen, leaving it to think only of the characters they are creating. Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet is such a picture. It transcends all celluloid images to rise to a height seldom, if ever, attained by a Hollywood product. Attaining a pinnacle reserved only for the most artistic of films, it nevertheless contains all the emotional power to make it superb entertainment.

Director William Dieterle has produced a fit companion for his previous biographical dramas—Pasteur, Zola, and Juarez. Moreover, he has made Edward G. Robinson a candidate for the crown long worn by Paul Muni.

Robinson is given superb support by Alfred Basserman as Koch, by Otto Kruger as Emil von Behring, and by Ruth Gordon as Frau Ehrlich. Each of them helps convey the message that is Ehrlich's last: "We must rid the world of all its ills as we rid it of disease. We must stamp out fear and greed. We must never stop fighting."

All in all, this is a cinematic adventure that will rank as one of the most outstanding of the year, because it presents life without any frills, with raw power of a sort that has been taboo on the screen for too long a time. It opens a vast new horizon for the film industry that has no room for the hypocrisy of the prude. A masterpiece of motion picture artistry, it is a film that took courage to produce, courage of the sort that Ehrlich needed to fight the skeptics who sought unsuccessfully to down him.

WE HAVE WITH US TODAY two of the college's unsung characters—or better still, consider them as one, for they are always together. Reference is made to Bob Owen and his contemporary, Hugh Ryan—or vice versa. In this attempt to personalize these two, it was necessary to separate them—a thing almost impossible.

Robert Lewis Owen, who is 5 ft. 6 in. with two-inch heels, was born in San Francisco 19 years ago. Attended Leguna Honda Grammar School and then to Polytechnic High. This being his fifth semester in the college, Bob plans to graduate.

Active in extra-curricular activities, was secretary of the AMS and now is vice-president of same, and is a three-year letterman in junior varsity basketball.

As for his likes and dislikes, sweet music and Sterling Young's orch is his favorite—he did not say much about his dislikes . . . in fact, he said nothing. After this semester, Robert Lewis will work—job hunting. "Keep my past out," he said. "My present doesn't matter and my future can wait."

He is a member of the Beta Phi fraternity, and now lives in Metro Oakland.

As for Hugh Earl Ryan, he being 20 (21 in April), will graduate this semester with the above mentioned Bob. Hughie was born and raised in San Francisco, and attended Emerson, Roosevelt and Poly. After six semesters of business, fire insurance to be exact, the college will at last lose his services. He has been member of basketball, tennis and soccer, and was also vice-president of the AMS.

Best of all, he likes fraternity organizations. Hugh is a speaker of the Native Sons History Department, a block member, and likes Sterling Young's Orchestra—just like Bob. All other characteristics are the same as Bob's, so re-read the above and you have the whole story.

M'bye. For now, anyway.

THE GUARDSMAN SPORTS

Basketball

Rams Slaughter Mateans Twice; Hit 56 Point High

Amassing 56 points in their final encounter of the season, the college Rams reached a new high in scoring by a decisive victory over the San Mateo Bulldogs last Saturday night in the Peninsulans' diminutive gymnasium. The night before, Kezar pavilion witnessed the same teams in which again the hapless Bulldog received a short end of the 22 to 45 score.

Playing superior ball in every phase of the game, the Rams took an early lead in both games, and held on until the gun popped. Although they were both hotly contested, Saturday night's tussle was the more exciting in that the Bulldogs were more accustomed to their own surroundings, and therefore put up a better fight. Kezar, it seems, was too big for the visitors, who tired quickly and showed a weaker defense.

First Quarter Lead Early

As for the Rams, they had no trouble in fast breaking the hapless Bulldogs. With Red Kerwin, Ed Cerf and Vern Genesy leading the charge, the college had, within the first quarter, 10 points to the opponent's three. It was not until the middle of the second quarter that San Mateo showed a spark of life, with tall Junie Wirth shooting wildly and accounting for few. As the Rams slowed down, the long shots of the visitors began to tell and at half time the score was 16 to 11.

The Rams' second half was even more cool and deliberate than the first. Although breaking fast occasionally, the college used a rotating figure eight offense, blocking for the ball carrier and working the ball deep into the Bulldog defense.

In contrast, the San Mateans became more excited and lost many balls in trying to dribble past guards Joe Pfanhl and Mossler. Long shots were their only way of scoring, and Genesy, Cerf and Kerwin managed to take most of the rebounds.

Cerf Takes Scoring Honors

Mitchell Hoffman, although he had not seen much action this season, replaced Kerwin for the locals and immediately accounted for two field goals that mounted the score to 45 to 22 as well as playing brilliant ball. In the melee that followed, Bob Staynor received a cut on his forehead and was taken out of the game. Tow-headed Eddie Cerf copped scoring honors as he found his stride, taking 18 out the 45 points.

Feeling sorry for the poor, toothless Bulldog, the Rams, Saturday night defeated them by a mere 12 points. Accustomed to their own gym, the Bulldogs played a faster, more rugged game. Because of its size, the court was ideal for the college's perfected zone defense.

Passing and shooting were extremely accurate, while the trio of Cerf, Kerwin and Genesy was almost impossible to stop. Staynor, patched up nicely from the previous night's tussle, handled the casaba with ease, passing to Genesy or Kerwin, while Mossler's long one-handed shots were down pat. Had the basket been in better condition, the score would probably have been higher. As it was, the bucket was put together with adhesive tape, and many shots refused to go in.

Players Show Prowess

Genesy's delayed shots and spectacular tip-ins, Mossler's looping one handed shots were a pleasure to see. Every player on the team except Joe Johns, who was laid up with a bad shoulder, showed prowess as a basketeer. Although the Bulldogs managed to keep in step, matching buckets with the Rams during the first quarter, it was not long before the Conlanmen began to pull away.

It was Cerf who led the way, stealing the ball off the backboard, running down the sidelines on a fast break. Passing to Mossler, Cerf drew attention away from Bob Sheehan, who was guarding Genesy, as Vern received Mossler's pass to score. It was thus throughout the second half, fast breaking, passing, delaying shots, and driving the Bulldog dizzy.

Although Bob Sheehan led scoring honors with 15, Mossler and Genesy each had 14 to their credit.

The first Olympic Games record for the 400 meter dash was 54.2 sec. compared with Archie William's present mark of 46.2.

Looks Easy Doesn't It?

Attempting to emulate "the cow that jumped over the moon," Keith Groswird is snapped in action above by the Guardsman photographer who happened along on the scene. Although Groswird didn't quite reach the peak of the Commerce High School roof, for which he appears to be reaching, he did earn a third place award in the Finnish Relief Fund PAA Meet, held last Tuesday in the Civic Auditorium.

College Baseballers Wallop Marin In Double Header; Gaddy Has Hopes Of Serious Bid For Conference Lead

Resting in first place after taking a double header from Marin Junior College last Saturday, the Ram baseball team is preparing to make a serious bid for the Northern California Junior College Conference Championship.

The Rams lived up to pre-game expectations, when they took two close games, 6 to 5 and 7 to 5 from the Marin marauders. Sacramento Junior College, serious contenders for the championship, split a double header with Santa Rosa, when the Sacs took the opener 4 to 3, behind three-hit pitching of Kenneth Kipp, and dropped the night cap 8 to 3.

Harry Aleo, Robert Nishi and Martin Zernicke did the twirling for the Rams. The Rams out-slugged Marin in both games, though the score shows close contests. Aleo and Zernicke together hurled an eight hit game, while the Rams came through with fifteen. Marin capitalized on three errors made by the locals in the first encounter.

Nishi, regularly an outfielder, relieved Zernicke on the mound in the second contest, and helped hold the Mariners to eight hits. Joe Mezzetti caught both games. George Moreira, regular starting catcher was unable to play.

Leading batters for the locals were Mike DeStefano, Terry McCarthy, Nishi, Mezzetti, and Al Giovanetti.

Coach Jack Gaddy seemed happy after the game. Although the men had turned in a pair of good games, he felt that there was room for improvement in the fielding.

Gaddy hopes to work on the fielding this week, in order to get the team into shape to stay in first place. If the team continues to hit, and receives good pitching support, Gaddy sees no reason why the Ram horsehide pelters don't stay on top all season.

The Rams will meet St. Mary's at Moraga next Monday afternoon, weather permitting.

Riflettes To Engage U.C. Sharpshooters Tonight At 7

First postal match of the current semester is scheduled to be held tonight at 7 o'clock, when the college riflettes compete against a coed team of the University of California, in the Galileo Armory.

Ten selected feminine sharpshooters will have 20 shots allowed them, while lying prone a distance of 50 feet from the target, according to an announcement made by Captain Fred C. McFarland, college rifle instructor.

The local riflettes will shoot against the Berkeley squad without any direct contact between the two institutions. Results will be exchanged by telephone.

Marion Murphy, one of the leading rifle-handlers, remarked, "The purpose of the shooting engagement is to promote a greater friendship between the college and the University of California."

Golf Team Schedules Games, Calls For Duffers To Try Out

Persons interested in the golf team were advised by Coach Louis "Dutch" Conlan to sign up this week. Practice and matches will be held at the Ingleside Golf Course.

"Matches have been scheduled with Modesto, Menlo, San Mateo, San Francisco State, and Stanford Frosh. The final matches will be the Junior College championships at Modesto on May 16 and 17," Conlan announced.

Bowling Team Quiet; Cal Next On Schedule

Bowling activities have been quiet this week. Joseph A. Amori, college bowling instructor, has been helping the team to perfect a few of the tricks which help the scoring.

A meet, to be held with California soon, will be scheduled sometime this week. There are several matches to be played still, but at this particular time there is no action.

Jack Schmale and Bob Riordan are both turning in good scores. Schmale scored 212 in the Alumni match, but Riordan wasn't able to compete that evening, therefore nothing was settled by that score.

"I was hot that night," exclaimed Schmale. "Every bowler should have a good night once in a while, or he should quit." Schmale has shown steady improvement this semester, and is running a close race with Riordan for the leadership of the team.

Amori had nothing new to report at the end of last week, except that the bowlers will meet California and Gonzaga very soon.

College Skiers To Meet Salinas At Norden

With Norden as the destination, college skiers will leave Friday for an intercollege ski meet with Salinas Junior College.

Scheduled to be held Sunday, the meet will be the first the local skiers have entered. According to Bob Ogg, ski club president, the meet will include a cross-country race, a slalom race, and a downhill race. Reservations are expected to be made for 10 skiers from Salinas.

Sunday, skiers gathered at Ogg's home for a buffet-supper, and moving pictures on the art of skiing, which was followed by dancing.

AMS Fights Planned For Coliseum Bowl

Possibility that the AMS fights to be held sometime in April would be staged at the newly opened Coliseum Bowl fight arena, was revealed today by Lyle Shultz, men's club president.

"It is also planned to open the affair to the general public, and we intend to secure several prominent sports writers and boxers to act as judges," Shultz said.

Inter-Class

Track Meet Friday, Saturday At Kezar

Hop on your hurdles, class presidents, and get your cinder teams organized in a hurry.

"The second annual interclass track meet," revealed Russell J. Sweet, college track coach, "will be run off at Commerce Field March 15-16."

"On Friday afternoon, the 15th, all of the sprints and distance runs will be slated. Following these events, the field program will be completed Saturday morning," Sweet added. Last spring the first interclass contest was inaugurated at Kezar Stadium, at which time the high freshman class copped first place.

Sweet continued, "All of the men in college who are interested in track should contact their class presidents immediately and sign up for the meet. Let's see if we can't get some decent competition out on the field this year."

Included in the meet agenda will be the mile run, 100 yard dash, 440 yard dash, 70 yard hurdles, 880 yard run, 220 yard dash, shotput, javelin, high jump, discus, and mile relay.

As a parting request, Sweet urged fellows who think they can run to come out for the interclass. "For," as he remarked, "that is the only way by which we can build up the nucleus of a strong college track team. Therefore, see your class presidents today!"

College class presidents are Art Pomares, high sophomore; Dan McHugh, low sophomore; Leo Leggett, high freshman; Bob Klitzker, low freshman.

Cal Frosh Defeats College Tennis Squad

Working smoothly, the University of California frosh tennis squad blanked the college team in nine straight matches on the Berkeley courts last Wednesday.

Coach Tom Wilson, commenting on the Bear tennisters after the matches, said, "They just had too much for us."

Waxman and Calagos, local racquetmen, lost the final match of the afternoon, although leading for a time through two sets, 8-6, 5-7, 4-6.

Bill Madamba was praised by Wilson for having played the finest match of those competing. Madamba battled it out with the California team's number one man, Dan Brown, who won in straight sets, 8-6, 6-4.

Results of the other matches were as follows: Meade vs. Spencer, 2-6, 2-6; Berns vs. Tout, 4-6, 0-6; Hare vs. Livingston, 0-6, 1-6; Waxman vs. Bowman, 3-6, 4-6; Calagos vs. Anderson, 2-6, 6-8.

In the doubles, the pair scores tallied: Madamba and Berns vs. Brown and Livingston, 6-8, 4-6; Hare and Meade vs. Spencer and Tout, 2-6, 0-6.

Gross
While Thinking

PERSECUTION

BERTRAND RUSSELL, English logician and free love advocate, last week was appointed a professor of mathematics at the City College of New York.

Russell, one of those few men who say what they think regardless of whether it is according to best ideas of so-called civilized society, is at the present time being called every slanderous name known to man because of his views.

We are most decidedly not a follower of Russell's type of philosophy.

Regardless of our own personal opinion, we cannot but feel that the man has a perfect right to say what he thinks.

One is inclined to recall the words of Voltaire—"I do not agree with what you say, but I will fight to the death for your right to say it."

It is fully understood and recognized by all that the United States is the only place in the world left where man is more or less free and hampered by no narrow restrictions.

The people who are right now yelling about Bertrand Russell are abusing the privileges they are so proud to hold.

It is understandable in a nation where the words "freedom of speech" are but a mockery, but in a nation that has throughout its entire history fiercely battled for that right, it is a disgrace.

Persecution of the minority by the majority has existed since the beginning of man.

Instead of hounding and persecuting this man who has the courage to say his mind, it would be much wiser to turn thoughts and attentions to something that really needs a little work.

It probably never occurred to the critics of Russell to wonder if he were right and they wrong. Who gave them, just ordinary human beings like the rest of us, the divine right to say that they are right and he is wrong?

PHOTOGRAPHY

THERE was recently a picture in Life magazine depicting two Finnish soldiers, one supposedly wounded lying in the snow.

The able Finn was taking a clip of cartridges from his comrade. The caption over the cut said, "Finns Running Low On Ammunition."

The same picture was shown in the London Illustrated News with the caption, "Finn Automatic-Rifleman Turns To Number Two Man."

Quite a difference in the two pictures. The story would perhaps fit in Walter Winchell's syndicated feature, "Debunking the war propaganda."

LOSE THEIR HEADS?

A PROMINENT military writer recently said in one of the daily newspapers that civilians in Europe were in little danger of being bombed if the Allies and Germans didn't lose their heads.

What a laugh. If the Allies and the Germans hadn't lost their somewhat empty heads some time ago there wouldn't be any war in Europe today.

The only hope that civilians in the warring countries can hold is that both sides will fear retaliation too much to bomb each other.

The chances are, however, that the long strain of watching and waiting for a break in the enemy's resistance will compel one side to launch a ferocious air attack in the hope of wiping out the enemy before it can strike back.

Then as usual, the helpless non-combatants will get it in the neck.

Judicial

Committee Sets Up Marking Plan; Hears Offenders

New plan involving the confiscation of student body cards at social functions was devised by members of the judicial committee at a meeting held last Tuesday, according to Tony Manov, chairman.

"In the future," Manov declared, "all student body cards that are picked up at social functions, because of illegal borrowing, will be marked by the identification committee."

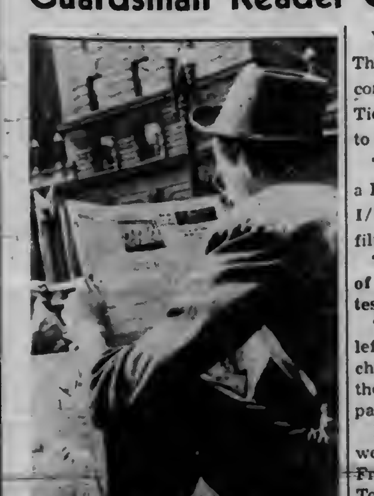
"Then," Manov continued, "when the marked card is presented at another social function it will be necessary for the student to establish positively his identity through driver's license or other means. If he is unable to establish his identity, the student body card will be confiscated permanently."

Also brought up at the judicial meeting were the cases of two students whose cards have been confiscated at previous social functions. One case was postponed for future discussion, while the case of the other offender was discussed with the student himself. According to Manov, the student admitted realizing his mistake in lending his student body card.

In a statement regarding the letter of a student in Friday, March 2, Ram's Horn, Manov said: "As to Disgruntled, the judicial committee only sees that the laws which are made by the Executive Council are enforced, not that the judicial committee does not advocate the enforcement of the laws."

Grenelle Picks Scottish Rite For March 29 Dance

In honor of the high freshmen, the second Associated Students dance will be held March 29 at the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland, announced Muriel Grenelle, chairman of the social committee.



"This is the first time in the history of the college that an Associated Students dance will be held on the east side of the bay," stressed Miss Grenelle, "and it is felt by many of the students that the members from across the bay compose at least 38 per cent of the entire student body, and should have perhaps one affair on that side every semester."

It has become an established tradition that the high freshman dance be an informal affair, and in keeping with this idea, the recently formulated policy of the social committee will be enforced again. There will be no dance programs issued at the door as the students enter, declared Miss Grenelle.

Because of the already crowded conditions at our dances, San Mateo Junior College students have not been invited to attend this dance, revealed the social committee.

Dean Edwin C. Browne warned all students not to lend their Associated Students cards to anyone, as there will be an identification committee at the door to check on the cards.

Guardsman Reader Cops Cake!

Tierney took the winning snap with a Kodak 620, F-16 lens, shutter speed 1/100 sec., Super XX film, and color filter.

Tierney is now eligible to win one of the two final prizes when the contest closes April 9.

"Since there are still several weeks left of the contest, there is still a chance for all camera artists to enter the field," Len Gross, editor of the paper, announced.

Pictures to be eligible for the weekly selection to be printed in the Friday issue of the paper must be in Tom O'Neill's office by 11 a.m. Tuesday.

"Watch Your Step," Police Chief Dullea Warns Students Of College

By VINCENT VANDRE

"Tell the college students that they had better watch their step, as far as parking over the one-hour time limit is concerned," warned Charles E. Dullea, San Francisco police chief, last Monday afternoon.

Glancing significantly at each other, The Guardsman reporter and photographer, who drive on Powell Street occasionally, requested Dullea to explain further.

Being a discerning gentleman, the Chief smiled, then added:

"Junior college students, like you two fellows, often arrive at classes before 8 o'clock in the morning and keep cars parked in one place for two and three hours at a time. Consequently, the tardy business man is unable to find space left to park his automobile."

"Hereafter, parking regulations will be enforced to the letter. In my opinion, local college students will be wise if they either keep their cars moving, in other words, stay within the regulations, or ride the street cars to class. Otherwise, a lot of tags are going to appear on automobiles parked around Union Square and the Powell Street hill!"

Comments on College Course

Pursuing another angle of information, The Guardsman reporter inquired of Chief Dullea his opinions on the practical value of the college Police Training Department. However, Dullea had never heard of the course, having been installed as Chief of Police only three weeks ago. The Guardsman scribe promptly explained the situation; forthwith, Dullea commented:

"The course in police training which the college is offering should be of paramount personal importance to the students concerned. Let me assure you, however, that a diploma of merit from such a curricula is no complimentary ticket to a swivel-chair position in the police department."

Fundamentals Important

To support his rather discouraging statements, Dullea explained: "Here, at the main office of the San Francisco Police Department, we have an excellently equipped laboratory which is used very seldom. In other words, I hope that scientific technique is not over-emphasized in the college course. Fundamentals of police training and drill are highly important.

"Also, one must remember that any able-bodied man, five years a resident of San Francisco and an American citizen, is eligible to apply for the police civil service examination. Therefore, all things being equal, a college student will receive no preference in the selection of prospective peace officers."

Dullea went on: "Nevertheless, I believe, according to what you have told me, the college police training course will prove itself an asset to the young men of San Francisco. And now, gentlemen, I am sorry, but Joe DiMaggio and some friends are waiting outside. Come back soon!"

(Courtesy San Francisco News)

Chief of Police Dullea, directly above, has warned students that their automobiles will be graced with a tag as shown in the upper picture if they are not careful in observing new parking regulations.

Police Class Goes In For Character Study

If members of the college suddenly see themselves being lined up by a suspicious looking character, or if they see notes taken by this character on their appearance, they are asked not to become alarmed, because it's only another part of the police training division's activities this semester, according to Harold W. Leuenberger, adviser.

The division has recently acquired Sergeant Collins, of the police academy teaching staff in the city, who is teaching the descriptions of persons. Among the methods of description taught by Sergeant Collins will be portrait-parle, which is description by photographs, Leuenberger added.

Also, several field trips to the various divisions of the San Francisco Police Department, and to local jails, have been promised to the students by Leuenberger, who is at present working on such plans.

Volz Mosaic Progressively Constructed At The Fair

Of personal interest to those students of the college haunting Treasure Island this summer will be the large mosaic in the Palace of Fine Arts, as it will become college property upon the conclusion of the Fair.

This mosaic, as those with the price of admission will discover, will be constructed piece by piece for the edification of visitors. It will be a daily attraction, and when completed will be transfixed to the South Portico of the college's Science Building.

Every day, skilled artists will work out the mosaic with bits of polished marble and granite, following the design of Herman Volz, its creator.

The San Francisco Board of Education, with the cooperation of the WPA Northern California Arts Project is sponsoring the exhibit.

Tonight!

Claremont Is Scene Of High Sophomore Dance

That reservations for the high soph dinner dance tonight at the Hotel Claremont in Berkeley may be made as late as this afternoon, in spite of previous announcements to the contrary, was revealed this week by Art Pomares, class president.

He added, however, that those who wish to attend this affair should sign up as soon as possible, since reservations are necessarily limited. Bids are $2.80 to $3.00 per couple. Dancing begins at 8:30—to the music of Kaye's Orchestra.

As to the cruise which the high sophs have planned for May 1, Pomares indicated that reservations at 75 cents per person (not including lunch) will be taken soon. According to final plans outlined by the president, the launch will depart at 9 a.m., arrive at Paradise Cove at 12, and leave at 5. Dancing on board ship as well as dancing and swimming at the picnicking grounds will be provided for.

Another outing being planned by the high sophs will probably be announced in April, according to Jim Powell, chairman of the Muir Woods Committee, who reported that fun for this picnic will include swimming and other sports, and certain types of competitions.

As a last reminder, Pomares suggested that those who wish to serve on the rally committee may still sign up with Hal Hoffman, chairman. This group, with a membership of 12 now, will meet at Hoffman's home "some night next week" to formulate a more definite program.

National Junior College Survey Set, Says Cloud

President Archibald J. Cloud, recently returned from the American Association of Junior Colleges Convention in Columbia, Missouri, revealed today that the main outcome of the convention was the installation of a nationwide survey of junior colleges in the United States.

According to President Cloud, the survey will deal mainly with the general field of terminal education. Answers will be sought for questions of this nature: Are courses offered in the junior colleges meeting students' needs? What happens to the graduates? Are colleges equipped to conduct adequate programs? How can the college cooperate with its community?

Housing, technical equipment, libraries and community resources will be subject to investigation, as well as faculty members, themselves, in order to determine whether or not students are receiving the best possible inspiration and leadership. Head of the survey will be Dr. Walter Crosby Eels, executive secretary of the association.

"One of the most illuminating parts of the program at the convention was a series of speeches by young men and women from the junior colleges in Missouri. Each gave his idea of the values of the junior college education," President Cloud said.

Three junior colleges of Missouri were visited by Major J. P. Nourse, Superintendent of Schools, Chief Deputy John M. Brady of San Francisco, and President Cloud. First, according to President Cloud, they visited Stephens College, a junior college for women, which is well known because Maude Adams, dramatic actress, instructs in a course of dramatics there.

Returning by way of Kansas City, they spent a day at the Kansas City Junior College, where, according to President Cloud, there are 1300 students enrolled.

Commenting upon the junior college, President Cloud said, "Although the college covers the range of academic preparatory courses, it has yet very little in the way of terminal courses."

According to President Cloud, students in the Kansas City Junior College are charged a tuition fee of $25 per semester, laboratory fees, and various other incidental fees.

Ssh! It's A Secret!

Welfare Council Won't Say One Word About Its Investigation

Cloaking its activities in a veil of impenetrable secrecy, the college welfare council this week refused to divulge any information whatsoever concerning its proposed investigation of student activities.

"No comment," was the only response of Al Williams, ASSFJC president and council spokesman, to queries on the program for, and conduct of, the probe.

The basic provisions for the welfare council's investigation, as cited two weeks ago by Harold Leuenberger, faculty adviser to the group, included a study of clubs, athletics, and general student welfare considerations.

Now, however, no member of the council would elaborate on the future activities of the group. It had been announced that the council would, at its last meeting (March 4), approve or reject a definite and detailed program and procedural outline. This week members refused to state whether or not the program—if it exists—had even been considered; or whether—if it was considered—it has been approved or rejected.

"I am not free to say anything about it," was the brief comment of one member of the council. No explanation of this remark could be had.

While not caring to reveal to the students the character of the welfare council's probe, Williams did state that it would get under way immediately following the conclusion of the California Student Co-op Conference, which convenes this week-end at Berkeley, and which members of the council will attend.

Would the welfare council make an investigation of initiations, etc., in clubs and social organizations, Williams was asked; and would the welfare council look into the conduct of the student government?

"No comment."

Publicity Group Under Hoffman Replaces Defunct Program Committee

To publicize student activities systematically that definitely pertain to the Associated Students as a whole, a publicity committee under the chairmanship of Hal Hoffman has been organized, announced Hoffman at the last session of the Executive Council.

The publicity committee is replacing the recently organized and still more recently disorganized program committee. Hoffman and his committee members were transferred intact from the program to the publicity committee.

Publicity material in the form of student-made posters will be distributed about the various college locations by members of the committee, Hoffman said.

Those on the publicity committee are William Williams, Robert Owens and Frank Hospodarsky.

So that all organizations may receive adequate publicity, Hoffman warned their officers to hand over publicity requests several weeks in advance.

Stressed by Hoffman was the fact that such organizations as those chartered by the Club Advisory Board are not eligible for publicity unless they are planning an event of college-wide interest.

To attract attention to the posters, Hoffman plans to include on the publicity posters a photograph relating to each event. The photographs will be handled by Art McLain, former Guardsman photographer. George Moreira, of the college, has been commissioned to paint the posters.

The committee is currently publicizing the intramural track meet, the low frosh swimming party, and the high soph dance.

"Fifty dollars has been allotted to our committee," continued Hoffman, "to finance the posters and other publicity activities. We plan to give more than adequate publicity to groups that notify us in sufficient time. Hence there will be no further excuse for student organizations to complain of poor publicity about the college."

Home Economics Association Elects Semester's Officers

Results of an election in the Home Economics Association, after a week of voting, were reported by Claire Cuneo, adviser, as follows: Marian Schriek, president; Stefanie Wassilko, vice-president; Elma Razzano, secretary; Pauline Richard, treasurer; Dolores O'Hara, CAB representative.

Candidates for this election had been nominated at the HEA's first tea of the semester, held March 1 after having been postponed because of the holiday on February 23. To outline the social events of this semester, President Marian Schriek will call a brief meeting of the association in Room 317 at the Galileo Building at 2:15 this afternoon, revealed Miss Cuneo, urging that all members who attend be prompt.

Low Freshmen Have Swim Party At Fairmont Tonight

Tonight from 8 to 11 p.m. the Fairmont Plunge will be the scene of a swimming party sponsored by the low freshman class, according to Bob Kletzker, president.

Kletzker advised all students who planned to attend the affair to sign up at the Bank at Galileo, but they can also purchase tickets at the plunge tonight. The price will be 35 cents, exclusive of the swim suit.

Helen Crlencovich, the national titleholder, whom the class had hoped to get to perform a few dives, will be unable to do so because she is returning from her triumphal tour of the Argentine and will not arrive in San Francisco until next Tuesday, March 19.

"This will be one of the first low freshman functions of the semester," said Kletzker, "and it is hoped that it will be a gala affair. The class is endeavoring to make this one of the outstanding social functions of the spring season, and with the cooperation of the rest of the college, it will undoubtedly be a memorable occasion. Let's all come out and make this party a huge success," Kletzker concluded.

Other low freshman activities will be announced as soon as the committee is able to formulate plans. Kletzker has hopes for a class dance later in the semester. "But," he stated, "it is to the low freshmen to make the swimming party a success first."

Students Have A Right To Know What The Welfare Council Is Doing; Refusal To Talk Is Un-Democratic

THE college welfare council was inaugurated into the constitution for the purpose of serving the students of the college in as best a manner as possible.

If this is true, then why is it the council refuses to divulge for publication to the students any information concerning the activities of the body?

Are we to assume that the welfare council is a secret investigation committee that slinks around corners hunting for evil-doers?

Or is the group a divine body that sits above the common student, deciding what is to the best interests of all but deigning to dents, deciding what is to the best interests of all but disdaining to tell the masses of their plans?

Perhaps the whole matter is a misunderstanding all around. The council may be doing the wisest thing for all concerned; then again, it may not.

It is important and highly necessary for the welfare council to explain to the student body its reasons for remaining silent.

This is a democratic college in a democratic nation. There is no place here for a Gestapo, or an OGPU.

College Financial Policy Bases Distribution Of Funds On The Interests Of The Majority

LAST week, the college Executive Council denied the requests for funds of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, college honor society, and the Hotel and Restaurant society. There have been several queries as to why the requests were denied.

At the beginning of the semester the finance committee submitted to the Executive Council for approval a specific policy in regard to the allotment of funds. This policy was approved by the council and became a law.

One of the first sections of the policy read "As a general policy, only those councils provided for in the Associated Students constitution shall be eligible to receive funds."

In other words, this means that only such organizations as the AMS, AWS, social committee, rally committee, men's athletic council, club advisory board, women's athletic association, publications board, and the welfare council, are as a general rule eligible to receive funds.

This clause was adopted because it was necessary to keep every individual group from clamoring for student funds.

In the case of the Alpha Gamma Sigma and the Hotel Society, both are minority groups and the funds if given would have directly benefited only the members of these individual groups.

Consequently it is plain to see that both groups could not have been conscientiously awarded money for their individual organizations that had come out of the pockets of the majority of the student body.

Then too, once the money of the majority was given to any one minority, every other minority in the college would feel it had an equal right to the funds. This would be perfectly true but would bring about an intolerable situation not only in regard to student finances but student government as well.

Honor System Versus Emphasis On Grades Usually Results In Student Taking The Third Road

THERE has been much talk throughout the nation's colleges recently on this matter of the honor system in examinations.

With the college judicial committee formed and ready for action, perhaps it would be wise to investigate this subject.

It has always been the contention of many that there was something grievously wrong with the present system of education in the United States. This may be quite true, but the most probable reason for nothing being done about it is that no one can think of a better system.

Nevertheless, one of the main objections to the present method of education has been the extra special emphasis placed on grades and the honor system.

Not that students are expected to be dishonorable during examinations, but the idea put forth is that everyone is placed on his honor to refrain from cheating and is a very horrible creature if he breaks this unwritten rule.

The failure of the honor system (and educators throughout the nation agree that it has been a failure) is not the fault of the millions of American students; it is the fault of the many persons who have for years taught their pupils to work hard for grades because they were the highest honor it was possible to achieve.

Thus we find the ordinary average student faced with the prospect of having to get good grades for his self-esteem and the esteem of his parents and associates.

If he were so mentally equipped or otherwise handicapped that he could not secure those grades, his only recourse was to cheat, taking the chance that he would not be caught.

In a great many of the instances where a person was caught cheating, he was treated as a criminal and frowned upon by his friends and classmates. The poor kid, however, was only trying desperately to get a mark on a card because he had been taught that it was the greatest thing he could do.

. . . Counter-Point

LAST week the Senate of the United State arose en masse and bowed in courtly manner to a dark-haired young man in the Distinguished Visitors' Gallery.

It was probably the first time that the Archduke Otto van Habsburg, pretender to the Hungarian throne, has been the recipient of such a courtesy from a legislative body. Yet had the course of history been but slightly different, such honors would have been common-place everyday ceremonies for the head of the proud House of Habsburg whose history is unalterably inter-twined with that of Europe.

When Otto was born his chance of ascending the throne appeared even more remote than it is today. In Vienna, the ruler was aged but seemingly immortal Franz Joseph, great-grand-uncle of the Archduke. But the accession to the Royal and Imperial Austro-Hungarian throne had never followed a regular pattern; mystery, intrigue and sudden death have figured too prominently in Habsburg history for that.

Twenty-three years previous to Otto's birth, the Crown Prince Rudolph had died in mystery and blood at Mayerling; two years after his birth Franz Ferdinand was to die with a little less mystery but no less blood at Sarajevo. For the third time a new Crown Prince was proclaimed, Otto's father, Charles.

Sarajevo was followed by the ultimatum to Serbia, this in turn was followed by war, and for two dark years the aging Emperor guided the course of his tottering nation. Then in 1916, he died after a record-establishing reign of sixty-eight years. In his place—Charles I, Emperor of Austria, Apostolic King of Hungary, father of Otto, and husband of the Princess Zita of Bourbon-Parma, one of the shrewdest and most politically minded women since Queen Elizabeth.

Two more years of war ended in November, 1918, when a defeated and demoralized Austro-Hungary fell apart into four separate nations, and Charles, refusing to abdicate, fled with his family to Switzerland. There he remained while the "Big Four" of Versailles rearranged Europe to their own satisfaction.

But in 1921 surveying the wreckage of what had once been his, Charles noted a gleam of hope. In the general post-war trend toward republics, one nation had consistently refused to change its status. Almost lost in the midst of Central Europe, shorn of nearly half its territory, Hungary yet refused to abandon its standing as a monarchy.

Under the communist leader, Bela Kun, a sovietized republic had been established immediately following the war, but this was shortly overthrown by Hungary's most idolized war-hero, Admiral Nicholas Horthy. Sensing that popular sentiment among the pageantry-loving Magyars who comprise Hungary's population did not tend toward the establishment of a republic, Horthy proclaimed a monarchy with himself as Regent.

From Budapest he ruled, ostensibly until the King should come into his own. In an open vault in the Palace reposed the Crown of St. Stephen, two armed guards standing before it at all times. Never for a moment, not even when the guard was changed, was there a space of time when at least two pairs of eyes did not rest directly on the Crown, guarding it so that it might be there when the King returned.

The picture was too tempting for Charles to resist. He had been crowned with that same Crown of St. Stephen not six years previously, and now it lay there awaiting his reclaiming of it. He arrived in Hungary by plane, placed himself at the head of a small group of enthusiastic students, and marched on Budapest.

There, hope changed to disillusionment. Horthy refused to surrender his Regent's power with the contention that the Allies would refuse their consent to a restoration. Stubbornly, Charles insisted. With equal stubbornness, and backed by the army, Horthy refused, arrested the monarch, and shipped him off to the Madiera Islands where he died the following year.

During the seventeen years that have elapsed since that day, Zita has waited, plotted and schemed for the day when her son Otto would succeed where his father had failed.

Today Otto tours America, would-be-king of a Kingdom without a King, optimistic, a trifle melodramatic, but withal, as Senator Barkley remarked of him, "a charming and very democratic young man."

As pleasant a compliment as might be desired, especially when coupled with the Senate's courteous bow, yet nevertheless it is little compensation for loss of a Kingdom—no more than a seat in the Visitors' Gallery is compensation for an Imperial Throne.

IF it were the custom in Hollywood to present an annual "turkey" award (a "turkey", of course, would be the direct antithesis of the "Oscar" or Academy Award) to the picture that contributed least to the film industry, there is one film that would have no trouble winning this cinematic "boobey prize" hands down—My Little Chickadee.

This Mae West-W. C. Fields vehicle is "the one rotten apple that will spoil the box," meaning that Hollywood's product will not be judged on the merits of the score of superb films now showing, but on this lemon. From every point of view, there is absolutely nothing good about this picture. The script, credited to Miss West and Fields, is sprinkled with lines of a caliber that would make the venerable Rabelais turn over in his grave.

In the histrionic department neither of the stars is of any help in bolstering the weak story. Fields talks as though he forgot to swallow his firewater, and Miss West, who is no spring chicken, clucks in a most aggravating manner. Further barriers are placed in the way of the film's success by Mae and her co-star who try so hard to steal scenes from each other that both seem to forget that the real reason he is there is to act. Even usually dependable Joseph Calleia and Dick Foran could do nothing with the insipid script.

Mae West plays Flower Belle Lee, thrown out of Big Bluff by the irate citizenry because she had been seen having a rendezvous with the infamous Masked Bandit. Arriving in Greasewood, the boudoir butterfly has supposedly been married to Cuthbert J. Twillie (Fields) but it happens that the so-called minister is more acquainted with the black-jack table than the pulpit, so Cuthbert is still a bachelor and Flower Belle hasn't yet become respectable. Sheriff pro tem Fields soon discovers that trying to cross the thresh-hold of his wife's bedroom is as easy as breaking into the Mint, and Mae finds that Calleia has a certain amount of charm.

The film wanders aimlessly on the road to nowhere until Fields, mistaken for the Masked Bandit, is being given a necktie party by the Vigilantes who release him when Mae discovers the identity of the phantom (whom she has never seen) because "a man's kiss is like his signature." The finale finds the audience so groggy that it cares not which of the trio—Foran, Fields, or Calleia—accepts Mae's invitation to "come up and see me sometime."

My Little Chickadee is Hollywood at its worst: a simple plot which intelligent people find moronic; stupid and uninspired direction that fails to make any of the principals call forth any talent whatsoever; and situations which even a large amount of credulity would still make unbelievable. In the whole film there is only one line that is superb, a priceless bit of celluloid wealth for which the audience awaits breathlessly, a gem that finishes this cinematic karat: The End.

THERE was an announcement on the boards this week informing all Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society members that an important meeting was scheduled. We don't know what happens when a bunch of good-grade students get together. Do they sit around for a half an hour and then beat it with the rest of the gang to drop in on Mabel and Eddie? Or, do the honor students really get their teeth into the scholastic problem?

Probably the Alpha Gamma Sigma members discuss the thing they rate next to their mothers, honor pins. In some cases, according to Irish comedians, the pin was placed before mother. However, this is no time to discuss "The Broken Home and The Honor Pin."

Should the Alpha Gamma Sigma gang run dry on topics, let us suggest the following:

1. An evening of gaiety with the alphabet soup containing no letters but A's, prizes for those who display their honor pins more prominently than others, and "pin-the-tail" on irregular Japanese verbs.

2. A scholastic pep talk and rally to help make this "the biggest and the best year Alpha Gamma Sigmas have ever had, and to put things over with a real bang!"

3. A survey of all Alpha Gamma Sigma members four years after graduation. Survey to be conducted along with the 1940 census. How many in this house? Anyone here Alpha Gamma Sigma?

Last Friday afternoon the great Hollywood scenario contest was featured in this column. On Friday afternoon Harry Frister (see Time—April 16, '39, "Man or What?") had his completed scenario in The Guardsman office. Between our mid-afternoon eating of bologna slices we read Frister's bid for the promised land. It is plain to see that Frister is just feeling his literary oats. He is too conscious of the correct meanings of fix, nice, and transpire. But we feel that the lad has talent so we sent him to L.A. in a '32 Lincoln. He's going with a family of 14, named Joad.

YOU have a hobby—well, isn't that nice, but who hasn't? You don't know—well, skip it and tell us about your hobby. Reading funny papers? Oh, do go on, but everyone reads the funny papers. You know that, well how do you make a hobby out if it. By putting real life people into the characters in the comic strip? Well, our curiosity is aroused, so give us the low down on some of your deductions.

Our guide was all smiles as he started his tour of well-known personalities that he had chosen for his hobby. First on his list were those swaggering block boys, Stan Tobiason and Willie Blackfield. "But who do they remind you of," we cried. "Don't you see, they're none other than Hans and Fritz, those two daredevil kids of mischief." "That's right, they do look familiar," was our answer.

"Look, there goes another one of my finds, Little Henry, (Dusty) Rhode scampering away for his early morning coffee and donuts. And here comes those two gals of adventure and fun Dixie Dugan (Jean) Arnold and her chum Mickey (Adele) Kuhn. Aha, what'll the girls do now that their prizefighter has gone back to college. Oh me, what a problem. Let them figure that out.

"Still like to see some more of my hobby," cried this little fellow. "Don't look now, but here comes Little Orphan Annie (Muriel) Nolan and Daddy Warbucks (Frank) Hospodarsky talking a blue streak about Annie's latest episode, or was it Annie?

"Look at those people on yonder block my friends, they're listed in my hobby book as Herby McLain who feeds candy to all the bad boys (yesterday's paper) and his brother Smitty Quandt who is supposed to be stranded on some tropical island, but enjoying it to the nth degree, without a camera, yet.

Oh, oh, here come those comics of comics—the Dagwood family, none other than Blondie, Dagwood and their little brat. "Well, Blondie (Shirley) White, what's that scamp of a husband Dagwood (Keith) Lund and Baby Dumpling (Lyle) Schultz been doing since we saw you last. Fighting with the neighborhood? Oh Blondie White, why don't you train your family:

"What? Dagwood Lund is taking you and Baby Dumpling Schultz to the fights to see Joe Palooka (Meli Chicazola and his manager Knobby Walsh (Ray) Berns do their stuff? Now that's mighty nice, but be careful of that loquacious Knobby Berns. Knobby is about to have another romance (in the funny papers, anyhow).

"Golly, and there's more to come," we questioned. "Yep, have you seen Ella Cinders (J) Livingston and Brother Black (Mel) Jacobs tearing around in that ancient crate of theirs, 'top down on the motor car' . . . and Ella Livingston with curled hair. This modern world.

It was somewhat rude to interrupt our little friend, but as class beckoned he understood and said he would be glad to continue his talk on the comics. "You know this isn't supposed to be an educational thing, this reading of funny papers, but let us tell you, about 90 per cent of the people in the world read the funny papers before they begin the important work of the day," he concluded, "see you tomorrow in the comics."

Do you agree with the Superman?

Pardon my glove, but what kind of stuff is that guy Goldstone handing to us non-intellectual Americans who have to read his double-talk. I have absolutely nothing against Mr. Goldstone personally, but if he can't tell us what's doing in Moscow in English that does not require a dictionary of the English language as well as a copy of "What Every Young Communist Should Know," he'd better confine his writing to the People's World.

Editor, The Guardsman:

This is my first semester at the college. At the outset it seems that this school is more tolerant, and at the same time higher in its scholastic standard than any other I've known. But there is one thing for which I'm sorry. Here, as in high school, the drive is not for truth or knowledge, but for grades.

Education, now at a low ebb, always seems to stand on authority. Instead of stressing learning of an individual, the trend is toward mass production of the students by the teacher. My objection to mechanical education of that sort is that the end of that education is lost.

This is general, I'll grant; but the point is: all truth that has consistency also has a relation to a higher cause. And my humble opinion is that more will be accomplished if the individual is placed on his own.

Still we would be likely to say that we are living under

FIVE FOR FIVE

What ho, prosperity, whose favorite pastime is hide'n'seek, seems to have entered the portals of athletic RAMdom once again.

For on the last weekend, the local athletes went to the starting post five times, and five times the red and white of dear old San Francisco was raised in victory.

"Dutch" Conlan's hoop artists finished their season in a blaze of glory and inaugurated the Ram win parade with two decisions over Clyde Devine's San Mateo Bulldogs.

As the basketeers bowed out, Jack Gaddy's horschiders and Tom Wilson's tennisers scored victories in their initial appearances. Gaddy's willow-pushers eked out a twin-killing 7-5 and 7-6, over Marin at Funston Field, while, at the same time, Wilson's netsters, pointing for their fourth straight conference championship, scored a decisive 7-0 win over Marin at the Palace of Fine Arts courts.

Yes siree, from all indications, the famine is over. 'Tis harvest time. Let us reap, or something. Mostly or something.

MAH FRIENDS

That genial distributor of hot air, the one and only Robbin Fex, past dictator at this institution, informs us that the Newman Club is giving a little show Monday night.

It seems that the American League baseball film, "Play Ball," will be shown, and Robbin tells us that all members of the Ram ball squad have been invited to the performance.

OH, RAHLLY!

The other morning one of the local tabloids carried a picture and a story that amused our easily-amused intellect no end.

According to the story, a young lady, competing in a ski championship at one place or another, had broken her leg.

But, horror of horrors, the picture portrayed a very lovely lassie, beaming brilliantly and seeming in no way to be injured.

We realize, of course, that the photo was probably taken at some previous time when the fem was in good health but, nonetheless, think of the furore such a story and picture might create.

Just suppose some Englishman, already imbued with the idea that all Americans are crazy, happened to run across that paper. 'Twould be just another act to add to the already long list of American frivolities.

MORE HAMATURES!

And speaking of frivolities reminds us of the fact that, in the event another rally is held, a Joe's J. C., featuring the campus characters, will be held.

Aided and abetted by a number of the campus clowns, Jack Schmale, college press impressario, will, according to reliable reports, present one of his famed Joe's JC productions in the near future.

Schmale's latest production, which is said to be somewhat on the order of Moss Hart's and George Kaufman's "The Man Who Came To Dinner" in that it burlesques several of the well-known JC-ers, will include in its cast such experienced hams as Dave Johnson, Hughie Waite, Bob Fex, Stan Tobiason, Mel Chickazoln, Ken Pasqualetti, Elmer Hubacher, and Tony Manov.

It might not be amiss to remark that the group of characters just mentioned were all in the first hilarious episode which was presented some four or five semesters ago.

TENNIS TROPHY RETURNS

Back to the college gym office comes the perpetual tennis trophy donated by the college's official publication, The Guardsman. After lying around in a state of vandalistic disrepair, someone evidently got the bright idea that the trophy was useful and therefore, sent it to a jeweler for repairs. Now that its back, the trophy, donated for the purpose of sponsoring and furthering mixed tennis tournaments each spring, will again be the goal set for an all college tourney week. Matches will start the first week of April.

Re the posture clinic being sponsored by the WAA comes a press release from Bertha Mae Keller, WAA adviser: "No college student need have habitual poor posture. Popular students make a pleasing appearance usually. Is your posture due to "sititis" and inactivity? Is that why dates are few or seldom repeated? Why be vain about some things and miss others? Look in your mirror at your lines, bulges, humps, etc.; practice the correct ways of carrying body weights. Make a better appearance at the High Soph Formal this year! Graduates, remember, clothes cover up many defects and academic gowns do too, but why not walk with ease and grace Commencement night and make the folks and boy friend proud of you?" Add note: Why can't this college boast the best looking student group on the coast?

Track Schedule-Spring 1940

Listed below is the 1940 conference Ram track schedule which has just been compiled by junior college officials:

DATE	MEET	PLACE
March 15	Interclass	Kezar
March 29	S.F. vs San Mateo	San Mateo
April 6	S.F. vs Santa Rosa	Santa Rosa
April 12	S.F., Menlo, and Marin	Kentfield
April 20	S.F. vs S.F. State	Kezar
April 27	Easter Vacation	Open
May 4	N.C.J.C. Conference	Modesto
May 18	Fresno Relays	Fresno
June 1	National J.C. Meet	Modesto

Coach Russell Sweet announced that practice meets would be held with educational institutions other than the ones listed above.

Ram Tennisers Win Seven; Meet Santa Rosa Today

It was a grand slam for the Rams last Saturday afternoon when they won all seven tennis matches from a visiting Marin team in the initial conference meet of the current season.

Playing at the Palace of Fine Arts in a warm dry atmosphere, Coach Tom Wilson's tennisers worked hard all afternoon and won five singles and two doubles matches from a team that was out classed in speed and form.

Bill Madamba, the big gun of the Ram squad, stood up against the finest the Mariners could offer and emerged victorius 6-4, 6-1, to begin the day. From then on it seemed like easy sailing for the locals. Chester Meade defeated his opponent Dan Reeve 6-4, 6-1; Ray Berns bettered Joe Sclaroni in three sets, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1; Jack Hare trounced Bob Immel 6-1, 6-0; and Tony Calogos won out 6-4, 6-2 over Dave Schaal.

With five straight wins, the Rams came back fresher than ever to wallop their opponents in two doubles matches as Madamba palled with Berns to cop a 6-1, 6-1 match from Kryse and Reeve in a short game.

Merle and Hare emulated their team-mates as they set down the third and fourth rating Mariners, 6-1, 6-2.

The win shot the Rams into a first place leadership for conference honors, but has little significance as all conference teams have played in but one meet.

Coach Wilson announced that the next opponent would be Santa Rosa that afternoon at 1 p.m.

Riflemen Fire At Fort Barry; Humphrey High Man

Shooting heavy 30.06 Springfield rifles in the Marin Qualification Shoot at Fort Barry last Sunday, a group of Ram Riflemen garnered split lips and sore shoulders.

The men who made the trip were Captain North, George Humphries, Louis Davy, Irving Conley, Myron Pierce and Art Templeton.

"The 30.06 was a decided change from the 22's we're used to shooting," said North.

Leading scorer for the Rams was Humphrey who shot a total of 214 out of a possible perfect 250. North, Templeton, Pierce, Humphrey and Conley followed in that order.

No medals were given, as the Marin Qualification Shoot was for the purpose of instructing riflemen in the fundamental principles of the military gun, North related.

Ten shots were taken at a distance of 200 yards; 10 shots, slow and fast draw, at 300 yards; and 10 shots at 500 yards were taken for a total of 40 shots in all.

Captain Fred McFarland thought that the Marin trip gave his team the feel of the military weapon and "allowed them more variety in the use of firearms."

Ski Meet At Norden; First For Collegians

Sunday, college skiers will compete with Salinas Junior College in an intercollegiate ski meet to be held at Norden. Expected to participate for the locals are Bob Ogg, Erling Jacobsen, and Stan Pittman, according to Ogg, club president.

The races to be run, Ogg revealed, will be a cross-country race, a down-hill race, and a slalom race. Possible site of the slalom will be the Sugar Bowl area, he said.

Also included in the week-end's snow trip will be an inter-club meet for the purpose of stimulating a friendly spirit of competition among club members. It will probably include a down-hill, cross-country, and slalom race for novice, intermediate, and advanced skiers.

The meet with Salinas will be the first meet the local skiers have competed in. Ten reservations for the Salinas skiers are expected to be made.

DANCE RECITAL

Margaret Jewell and her Stanford Dance Group presented a dance recital in the Frederic Burk auditorium last Thursday afternoon, announced Laurine Bergin, college physical education instructor. College Women's Athletic Association members attended.

The recital was a demonstration of modern dancing technique and composition and was sponsored by the Women's Physical Education Association of San Francisco, according to Mrs. Bergin.

Shadows On Skates

"Shadow Dance" was the earmark for this specialty number which found Sheldon and Murray Galbraith, college ice-cutters, swivelling figure eights in "Cinderella," recent local extravaganza.

Bill Hart, president of the college skate club, played the Prince in this show, leading a group of collegians who participated at the Ice Carnival. The trio will appear again in the college ice club's carnival scheduled for April.

Pin Smashers Feuding; Schedule Still Doubtful

Bowling meets have been livened by the present Bob Riordan-Jack Schmale "feud". Joseph A. Amori, bowling instructor, expressed interest in this type of rivalry on the squad, since it makes all the kegglers try harder.

The "feud" is even now. Riordan topped Schmale in the San Mateo meet, and Schmale came back with top honors in the Alumni meet.

Several meets are to be held in the future, yet none has definitely been scheduled. Gonzaga, California, San Mateo, and San Jose State are tentative, and others will probably be added.

Both Riordan and Schmale bowl high scores consistently. It appears to be a toss-up between the two right now but future meets may elevate one or the other to the top position on the Ram bowling team.

BASEBALL MOVIE TO BE SHOWN

National League professional baseball movies have been acquired for the next meeting of the Newman Club on Monday, March 18 at the St. Mary's Cathedral at 8 o'clock, according to reports received from Thomas O'Neill, Newman Club sponsor.

All members of the college have been invited to see these pictures, which have been widely shown by the San Francisco Chronicle, and also to hear a speech by Eustice Cullinan Jr., of the San Francisco Bar Association, added O'Neill.

Campus Sports Personalities

IN-Tro-doo-sing to the sport enthusiasts and to all who have spare time to care to read about one Keith Groswird, cousin to the man on the flying trapeze and we don't mean a newly hung convict. (Deep apologies, Keith.)

Having attended Richmond and University Highs across the bay, Warren is an Economics major, and plans to carry on in the University of California.

Keith, or Warren, has been keeping a date with the pole and crossbar ever since eight years ago, when in Junior High, he became interested in the sport by jumping six feet in his first attempt. Since then he has been continually jumping higher and higher till now he is in the vicinity of 13 feet.

But to get to the more human side. His hobby is besides track, travelling. Keith followed this urge last summer when he took a trip to the New York Fair (traitor!). On his return trip, via the thumb, he visited Mexico, Arizona and all points west, all in the space of a week.

As for his personal side, our hero is an ardent epicurean, "specially turkey." What he likes next best is turkey, next, also turkey.

Baseballers Battle Santa Rosa Tomorrow On Funston Field

Funston Field will be the scene of a doubleheader baseball game tomorrow between the Rams and Santa Rosa Junior College. The first game starts at noon.

Last Tuesday afternoon saw the Rams tie the California freshmen 8 to 8 in an eight inning game. Rallying at the start of the eighth, the Rams went into the last half of the inning, Harry Aleo pitching, with a two run bulge.

With one man out, and the bases loaded, a Cub batter hit an easy grounder to Aleo, who threw to Joe Mezzetti. The catcher in turn relayed the throw to first baseman George Donovan, who scooped the throw out of the dirt. The umpire called the man safe, and the tying run scored. From the Ram bench it appeared that the Cal runner was out by two strides. However, the umpire called him safe, and the game ended in a tie. Darkness halted the contest.

The Santa Rosa game tomorrow promises to be an exciting and close contest. The lads from the "Rose City" split a doubleheader with Sacramento last week. Coach Jack Gaddy feels that the Rams should win at least one, if not both contests.

"We really have a good ball club this year. The fellows are all trying hard. They have been hitting well. Our only real weakness is in base running. Tuesday's game might have been won if we had not had men caught off of the bases. I feel we should win tomorrow," added Gaddy.

Gaddy also feels that the pitching could be improved. Robert Nishi, a new pitching discovery, promises to give the Rams a lot of much needed pitching support.

Since the Rams won a doubleheader Saturday, while all of the other league teams split their games, they are in undisputed first place. The Santa Rosa games will be a crucial test for the pennant-bound Rams.

Starting lineup for tomorrow's game, as announced by Gaddy and manager George Gumas, will be the same as for previous contests. Pitching chores will be handled by Harry Aleo, Robert Nishi, Joe O'Neill, and Martin Zernicke. The receiving will be handled by Mezzetti, George Moreira, and Bob Hvidt.

Intramural Track Meet 1 O'clock at Kezar; Teams Strong Says Russ Sweet

"Because of a pre-arranged track meet to be held by Balboa High School tomorrow morning at Kezar Stadium, the college interclass cinder meet will be run off in its entirety this afternoon on the Kezar oval, starting at 1 o'clock," Coach Russell J. Sweet revealed Tuesday morning.

Those students who anticipate attending the program are urged to arrive promptly, as the events will be quickly run off to conserve time. College class presidents, according to Sweet, have signified their intention to enter strong teams in the intramural annual track trials.

The tentative running order of the events at Kezar today will be as follows: mile run, 100 yard dash, 440 yard dash, 70 yard hurdles, 880 yard run, 220 yard dash, shotput, javelin, high jump discus, and mile relay.

Wallowing through a sea of mud a year ago today, the high freshmen of the college walked off with first place honors in the inaugural of the local intramural meet. When the final results had been tabulated, the frosh had chalked up 61 points as against 41 for the high sophs, who placed second, 15 for the third place low sophs, and 18 for the entering freshman class.

Bob McGuire and Larry Korchet were the only double winners of the meet, McGuire copping the 100 yard dash in 10.2, and the 220 in 24 flat, and Korchet throwing the discus 134 feet and putting the shot 38 feet 8 inches. Both me were members of the high soph contingent, contributing 20 points between them to the high soph total.

Commenting upon the performances last year, Sweet said, "Because of the fact that the track was muddy, the times were not quite up to par. I do think, however, that the nucleus for an excellent track team was displayed in the field."

At this writing, no definite team placements have been decided by the class captains. However, Sweet has been training the college track squad in preparation for the meet with San Mateo, March 27, and among his cindermen are members of the four college classes who are expected to provide keen competition this afternoon.

Since the specific starting list has not been released, it is impossible to predict favorites in any one event.

WAA Convention To Be Held At Modesto

Associated Women Students and the Women's Athletic Association Convention will be held at Modesto on March 29 and 30, according to Bertha Mae Keller, WAA adviser.

Margaret Dougherty, adviser to women, Miss Keller, and five student delegates will be sent, Miss Dougherty revealed.

Friday afternoon, March 29, at 2 o'clock, delegates will register. Tea will follow registration. After an informal dinner there will be a Little Theatre variety show.

Convention meetings will be held on Saturday from 9 to 10. Topics will concern WAA problems, intramural sports and the organization of clubs. Special topic for discussion, according to Alma Koopman, vice-president of WAA, will be awards, transfer points and the point system.

"From 2 until 4, Saturday afternoon, tea will be served in private homes," Miss Koopman said, "and Saturday evening there will be a formal dinner dance with dates provided for the out-of-town girls."

WAA Yell Leaders Chosen By Council

Yell leaders for the Women's Athletic Association, Jeanne Arnold, head yell leader, Marion Dickie and Priscilla Finley assistants, have been chosen by the WAA Council, according to Alma Koopman, vice-president of the association.

"Last semester was the first time that WAA members felt the need of a yell leader, consequently one was chosen," said Miss Koopman. "This semester since the girls who tried out were so good for this position, the council decided to have a head cheer leader and two assistants."

The Basketball Season At A Glance

By KEI HORI

In looking over the 1940 basketball season, the Ram's record was not as sad a sight as was at first conceived, in that there were five wins and seven losses, or a percentage of .417. With this record, the team managed to get into fifth place.

Coach Louis "Dutch" Conlan was able to build his team of almost nothing into what proved to be a difficult obstacle for the title-holders to overcome. No one of the Ram games were cinches. Molding his team from only two experienced players, Jimmy Kerwin and Joe Johns, both transfers, the team roared its way to wins in the last two conference games of the season.

Officially opening the season with Menlo, who landed in second place in the final league standings, the Rams were defeated by a margin set up early in the second quarter that could not be overcome. As was predicted, Vernon Genesy found his place at center and was high point man.

In what was considered the best game the Rams played the visiting Salinas team struggled through a two overtime period tussle, only to lose at the hands of Conlan-coached Joe Pfahnl, who dropped a 30 footer just as the gun went off.

Placer came down and invaded Ramdom carrying away the laurels that were to place them in third place in the league. Yuba Junior College, no match for the revengeful Rams, bowed low under the pressure of 12 powerful points. The now hot and rarin' Rams overthrew the ambling Santa Rosa quintet by six points, but the spark of fire was partly quenched when the Mariners from across the bay defeated the gloating Ram.

In a non-conference game that followed, Marin was set back in a thriller, as the college quintet threw back the injuries of defeat sustained in the previous game.

But thus ended the winning streak of the fighting Ram, for the next four games with Sacramento and Modesto resulted in defeats that were hard to swallow.

Entered into the PAA games this season, the Rams managed to get up into the quarter-finals, where they met stiff opposition against the highly touted San Francisco State Gators. Fighting tooth and nail until the last quarter, the Rams were handed a crushing blow when Collingwood of State dropped two straight buckets, and their chances for the Denver trip were thrown to the winds.

Then came the final games. There wasn't much one could say about them but that the Rams showed their superiority in every way. Outplayed from the start, the San Mateans could only play a defensive game. Only under the basket had they an even chance, because of the aid of 6 ft. 3 in. Junie Wirth. Both games, however, were hard-fought but well-deserved wins. And there you have it—fifth place—five wins and seven defeats.

Much praise goes to Coach Conlan for his splendid guidance of the green and inexperienced team that was the Ram's. None of the players had worked as a unit before, and showed it during the beginning of the season, but ere the last gun sounded ending the conference the Ram team had been perfected to a smooth-working, well oiled machine.

Kerwin, Johns and Mitchell Hoffmann will be missing from next year's roster, but their places will be well filled by able and stable men. Ed Cerf, Clary Richards, and Alex Spieller will be among the returning forwards while Genesy and Ashley Dudman will more than fulfill the requirements needed to become good centers. George Fossler and Joe Pfahnl will have perfected their long shots by next year in the spacious new gymnasium at Balboa Park.

With all this in the college's favor, there can be but little doubt as to the Ram quintet's position in league standings next year. Unless drastic changes in this country come about, San Francisco Junior College should be resting on the throne of crowned champions in the year of 1941.

Placement

Two Students Of Business Dept. Get Positions

Hugh Earl Ryan and Teckla Regoli, students in the business department, have recently been placed in full-time positions, according to F. G. Marsh, chairman of the department.

Miss Regoli, doing her cooperative sales work for the retail merchandising course, received a promotion to the position of assistant buyer at Sears Roebuck Company.

Ryan, prominent in sports, was placed in the accounting department of the New York Life Insurance Company last Friday through the college employment facilities. It will still be possible, according to Marsh, to earn enough units for graduation in June at the rate of one unit of credit for every three hours' work a week.

Also, a candidate for the position of a salesman in a calculating machine company has just been requested from Marsh.

Making a survey of students who drop out of college before graduation, Harold W. Leuenberger, chairman of the psychology department, discovered that one-fourth drop at the end of the first semester, one-half at the end of the second, two-thirds at the end of the third, and one-third stay four semesters.

"After we have our own campus, and develop more semi-professional courses in such subjects as civil service, landscape gardening, and police training, these occurrences will not be so frequent, for many of these transfer to other colleges, or get positions," Leuenberger disclosed.

Out-of-town students tend to increase the number of drop-outs, but it is about evenly divided between the sexes.

Exposition To Open With Blast Of Bombs, Pageantry

Ceremonies that will focus the attention of the entire world on Treasure Island are planned for the opening of the 1940 season of the Golden Gate International Exposition, Saturday, May 25, announced press releases from the Fair.

Thrill upon thrill will follow in close succession from 12 noon, when an expanding bomb announces the official opening of Treasure Island gate, until 2 a.m., when Expositor lights are dimmed, to signal the end of one of the greatest days the West has known, claim Exposition publicit; dispatches.

Declared by Fair officials the most thrilling of all—challenging the human imagination and almost touching upon the bizarre—will be that part of the program in which Admiral Richard Byrd, in far-off Little America, throws a switch to release the impulse that will set off three aluminum star bombs to burst in the sky high above Treasure Island.

These bombs, developed by General Electric and to be used for the first time at the Exposition opening will burn for three minutes, flooding the Island with artificial daylight. When they burn ont, the spectacular night illumination system will be turned on by electric impulses generated by the voice of President Franklin D. Roosevelt over the transcontinental telephone from the nation's capital.

The formal opening ceremonies will be staged in the Court of Nations, commencing at 7 p.m. with a prologue in which a hundred beautiful girls will participate.

Star of the formal opening ceremonies will be 15-year-old Susanna Foster, Paramount singing marvel. She will render the Star Spangled Banner; and when her voice reaches high B flat above high C—highest note ever achieved, the vibrations will turn on a battery of floodlights on Yerba Buena Island.

Editorial — More On Honor System

Many colleges and universities throughout the nation have shown excellent foresight in abolishing the honor system and attempting to teach the students that grades are not all important.

A student can go to college for four years, getting only mediocre grades and learn more about how to step out in life as a fully qualified member of society capable of earning a decent living, than a person who studies every night late, absorbing book after book, and learning practically nothing that will be of use to him after he has graduated.

Before talking of the evils of honor systems, it would be infinitely wiser to talk of the present educational set up which through forcing persons to work for grades, aims at a great deal but accomplishes very little.

Publications Board Accepts Club Bulletin

At a meeting held early in the week, the Publications Board unanimously approved the first draft and contents of the Club Advisory Board Publication, "Cabby," announced Len Gross, chairman of the board, today.

In compliance with the Associated Students constitution which holds the Publications Board responsible for all printed matter distributed on the campus, the group thoroughly examined and discussed the CAB publication.

Approval of the "Cabby" means that it will be ready for distribution to club members early next week, commented Gross.

The club board publication fulfills a need in the college and has all the earmarks of becoming a vital and important part of the publications system of the college," Gross said.

Bob Schlesinger, editor of the "Cabby," the club paper, announced that the paper would be off the press by next Tuesday or Wednesday. This is to be the board's official paper and has been approved by the Publications Board.

How To Get Along — Slick Subtleties Hook The Prof

FREMONT, NEB.—(ACP)—Hunting for a short-cut to a straight A average?

If you are, heed the following nine-point program to scholastic success—a program formulated for you by the ever-helpful editors of the Midland of Midland College:

1. Don't give your prof apples. Too obvious.

2. Find out his hobby and follow this up with well-planned questions to draw him out.

3. If the entire class walks out of the classroom when the prof is 10 minutes late, be the only one to wait even if it's half an hour. This procedure is good for a B-plus any day.

4. Always greet an instructor pleasantly, never using his first name, but a cheery "Good morning, professor."

5. When sitting at the faculty table in the dining hall or walking about the Administration building, always walk with your head down as if in deep thought, pondering some weighty problems in math or philosophy, for instance. This is highly recommended to get on the honor roll.

6. Offer to wash the professor's car, put up his storm windows or do any little job around the house, but don't accept any money for the work.

7. Apple polishing procedure in classrooms includes sitting in the front row, responding to professorial humor with loud, hearty guffaws and liberal use of big words. This is important—never use a two-syllable word where a five-syllable word will do.

8. Carry a lot of big reference books around. This is tremendously impressive and is worth an A-minus in any class.

9. If you must close your eyes, while in deep thought, wrinkle your forehead and otherwise look worried, or the professor may get the wrong impression—and grade accordingly.

Redford Interviews Negro NYA Students On Monday

As a part of a nationwide survey, a representative of the National Office of NYA has arranged to meet all colored NYA students next Monday in the Galileo building, according to Edward H. Redford, college NYA director.

According to Redford, purpose of the national survey is to ascertain the needs of colored NYA students.

All colored NYA students who are free at 2:30 p.m. next Monday are urged to be in Room 205 for the meeting, Redford said.

Another Universe - Edge On

Edge on, another universe slides out of the darkness and into the vision of men. So far away that light—traveling 165,000 miles every second—requires 50,000,000 years to bridge the abyss between this whirling mass and ourselves, this spiral nebula is studied by means of man's most vital invention—the telescope.

The new 12-inch telescope which is being constructed for Balboa Park will be the largest owned by any junior college in the United States.

12-Inch "EYE" At New Campus Will Probe Depths Of Space; Biggest Junior College Telescope In Nation

Characterizing it as "probably the largest telescope owned by any junior college in the nation," Dr. Louis Berman, college astronomy instructor, announced that the 12-inch refractor for the Balboa Park campus should be ready soon after occupation this fall.

When the college moves into its new home, Berman revealed, the dome which is to house the instrument will have already been completed, and the telescope itself will be installed shortly thereafter.

"The new telescope will represent a real achievement for the college and for San Francisco," Berman said. "On occasions, we will hold open house for the entire community—and this city is a leading center of astronomical interest."

San Francisco, home of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific, is in addition the mecca for a large and enthusiastic group of amateur astronomers.

Referring to a recent proposal for the erection of a planetarium atop Twin Peaks, Dr. Berman opined that the college's new telescope, when installed, would "amply satisfy all the cultural astronomical needs of the city —to say nothing of costing 99 per cent less than the proposed planetarium."

The telescope, 3500 times more powerful than the naked eye, will, according to Berman, have a camera attachment for use in photographing astronomical objects, and will probably be used together with supplementary instruments expected to be furnished in the new "astronomical laboratory."

A "war sidelight" on the telescope —which will cost approximately $12,000—was related by Berman as he commented on the instrument's construction.

"We had ordered the objective lens from a firm in Germany," he said, "but because of the blockade, the order will be delayed—if it gets through at all."

The order for the lens, he concluded, has now been placed with an American firm, making the telescope an "All-American job."

As an affirmation of the excellence of the new telescope, Berman cited the comment of Richard Perkin, of Perkin & Elmer Corporation, one of the nation's leading manufacturers of astronomical instruments.

Perkin, in a visit here, had viewed the plans for, and work on the college "eye" and remarked that it compared more than favorably with telescopes used in the larger universities and observatories.

Already publicized in astronomical journals, the college telescope will, according to Berman, bring wide recognition to the institution when it is finally completed.

"When a new comet appears, or some other celestial event occurs, the newspapers will get in touch with San Francisco Junior College for the information they want," he asserted.

Berman revealed that he had been requested by the editor of "Popular Astronomy" to write an article for that magazine, which is known and read throughout the astronomical world.

Along with the installation of the telescope there is the possibility that the college astronomy curriculum may be expanded to include more experimental courses.

Peace Society To Sponsor Assembly On March 29

Tentatively scheduled for March 29 at the Powell Street Lecture Hall by the Peace Society is a rally designed to acquaint students with national and local peace movements, said Robert Mason, president of the society.

Those planning to speak are Charles Rosenthal, former editor of the University of California daily, and Mason. Rosenthal's topic will be The National Student Peace Movement, while Mason will discuss The San Francisco Junior College Peace Movement Since Its Inception.

A definite time had not yet been set, said Mason, but the rally will be held some time in the morning.

a democratic government. We would say that because our government compared with the governments of most other nations is the nearest approach to a democracy. In other words, the term democracy, for all practical purposes, is relative.

The same method might be applied to the situation now existing between Soviet Russia and the Republic of Finland. Finland is not an absolute democracy. There are none in the world. She is one of the European nations, however, entitled to call herself democrat from even a relative standpoint.

The "New Republic" has some interesting facts about the so-called "Mannerheim Dictatorship." Here they are. The political system of Finland is based on a many party system run-the-gamut from left to right. At the present time the Social-Democrats and the Agrarians have a majority coalition in Parliament. Electricity and transportation are publicly owned. One-fourth of Finland's population belongs to cooperative movements. The Finnish government has adopted much social legislation including unemployment insurance, old age insurance, public housing, and medical insurance.

Against this measure the achievements of Soviet Rusia. The first move of the Russian dictators, when assuming power, was to kill all the non-communist radicals, socialists, and liberals on whom they could lay their hands. They adopted a governmental system pyramiding power in the hands of one man. They outlawed all parties but their own. They abolished the right of labor to strike. The press passed under a rigid censorship, and freedom of speech was completely destroyed. To even mention justice in Russia is to speak with humor and satire and not realism. And were the workers of Russia, at least given some compensation in the form of a Socialist Worker's Government? Not at all. Marx, I have no doubt, has by this time turned over in his grave at the perversion of his pet phrase—Dictatorship of the Proletariat. Rather Dictatorship of the Proletariat!

Ten Hotel Management Students To Tour State In Easter Week

Touring the hotels of California, 10 students in all will be absent from the college next week, according to Thomas Caswell of the Hotel and Restaurant Division.

Two students will stay at the Clark Hotel in Los Angeles as guests of the hotel. The other eight will tour the state with an itinerary which, Caswell said, will probably include Fresno, Bakersfield, Los Angeles, Palm Springs, Arrowhead Hot Springs, Santa Barbarra, Monterey, Del Monte, and Carmel.

The group will leave the 16th and return the following Friday, visiting the leading hotels and stopping at some of the top-ranking ones.

Students were selected for the trip on the basis of seniority and work.

Fazon Bishop and Tom Duffy are the two students who have been invited to the Clark Hotel.

Henri Carbonell, Thomas Caswell, Albert Floyd, Ernest Godfrey, Mitchell Hoffman, John Kay, Sterling Silver, and Robert Walker made up the traveling contingent.

The tour will be sponsored by a group of San Francisco's most prominent hotel men, and each student will represent one of San Francisco's leading hotels, Caswell disclosed.

A banquet, designed to show future employers what they could do, was given by the students of the Hotel and Restaurant Division last Monday at 12:15 in the Galileo dining room. The occasion was the third annual spring luncheon for the California Northern Hotel Association. The association also held its regular monthly meeting at the banquet.

Northern California's leading hotel men, together with members from the Department of Education, attended.

"Since it is through the cooperation of the hotel men with the Board of Education that we have the course, the object of the banquet was to bring them together and show them how the course is progressing and what we can do," Caswell, speaking for the Hotel Division, said.

College Debaters Meet With Student Congress

The University of California was the scene of the Sixth Annual Pacific Coast Student Congress, on last Friday and Saturday, according to an official bulletin from the university.

The objectives and techniques of the congress continue along the lines in which they have developed in the past five years. The aim of the congress is to bring together in a conference, delegates from western colleges, to discuss general subjects of the day.

The two subjects chosen for this Sixth Congress were: American Economic Foreign Policy, and Civil Liberties.

Delegates to the congress met beforehand in committees to crystalize their opinions in terms of a bill or resolution. On Friday afternoon, the committees met to eliminate duplicating bills, and assign each bill to a delegate. The delegates presented the bills at the general assembly on Saturday.

Hyman, De Iongh Elected To Honor Society Offices

Election of Borrie Hyman as vice-president, and Emily de Iongh, secretary-treasurer, were the first items of business on the agenda at the initial Alpha Gamma Sigma meeting of the season, held March 12 in the Galileo Little Theatre.

Alice C. Cooper, college faculty adviser for Alpha Gamma Sigma, discussed the forthcoming Glendale Convention, announcing plans for the six panel discussions which will be conducted by the delegates. Violet Burgess was selected as one of the local members to attend the conclave.

Miss Cooper revealed that five new students, Ruth Altschuler, Shirley Coe, Paula Levlek, Daisy Loule, and Bernice Stroube, have been admitted to the honor society.

Gold and silver pins, costing $1.25 and $1.00, respectively, are now available to Alpha Gamma Sigma members who wish to order them through the hank.

Two Speech Students Selected To Act In Play

In response to a request from Jack Thomas, director of the Wayfarer's Theatre, for junior college students who might be eligible for parts in his coming production of the Passion Play of Oberammergau, two of the college speech students were selected after try-outs.

Cast in the part of John the Apostle, is Earl Pereira; as Joseph, Thomas Redmond. Both men are students of the college who have been trained in Ruth Somer's speech classes.

Advanced Flying Course May Be Offered In Fall

Possibility that an advanced aeronautics course may be offered next semester were announced this week by an official of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, according to Captain George Richards, college flight director.

"Nothing definite has been set yet, but it is probable that advanced training in larger planes will be offered to some of the students after they have completed their primary training and obtained their Private Pilots' certificates," Captain Richards revealed.

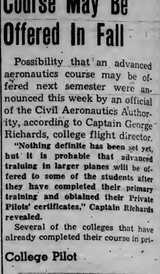
many training are now giving the advanced course, some even offering seaplane training. Because of the lateness of starting the present college program, it will probably run a short way into the summer. However, most students should finish by the end of June.



Rated by flying experts as one of the most promising fliers in this region, Albert Beauford Guinther, college student, holds the coveted Federal private pilot's certificate.

Guinther, who started flying at the age of 16, received his private pilot certificate a few days after his 18th birthday. He has now to his credit more than 70 hours of solo flying and a number of cross-country flights, including a 700-mile hop down from Seattle.

Guinther is the son of Mrs. Dolores Guinther, former holder of the Pacific Coast women's stunting championship.

Cloud Leaves To Preside At Long Beach Convention

In order to preside over a three-day convention of the California Junior College Association, of which he is president, President Archibald J. Cloud left Friday night for Long Beach, where the convention is being held.

Highlight of the convention, according to President Cloud, will be an address by Edwin A. Lee, former Superintendent of Schools in San Francisco, and present Professor of Education at Teachers' College, Columbia University.

In conjunction with the convention of the California Junior College Association, a convention of the Western Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools is also being held. Both conventions began last Monday and will continue through Wednesday.

President Cloud is not only presiding over all sections of the California Junior College Association, but he will also preside Wednesday over a joint luncheon meeting of the two organizations. President Cloud holds the position of Secretary-Treasurer of the Western Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Speaker at the joint luncheon will be Dr. Frank W. Thomas, President of Fresno State College, who will speak on "Characteristics of Democratic Higher Education." Also to speak is the Rev. James A. King of St. Ignatius High School. Title of his address is, "The Product of Our Higher Educational Institutions."

The Dance

Ringen Engaged To Orchestrate At March 29 Hop

Warren Ringen and his orchestra will provide music for the Associated Students dance on March 29, according to Muriel Grenelle, social committee chairman.

The announcement came shortly after Miss Grenelle had revealed that the dance, second of the current semester, would be held at the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland.

"This is the first time in the history of the college," Miss Grenelle said, "that an Associated Students dance will be held on the other side of the bay."

Traditionally honoring the high frosh class, the dance, it was stated, would be an informal affair, in keeping with the revised policy of the social committee.

"There will be no dance programs issued at the door as the students enter," Miss Grenelle declared.

From Tony Manov, chairman of the college judicial committee, came a warning to student body card holders, in regard to the practice of lending cards.

"All student body cards which are picked up at this affair will be marked by the identification committee," Manov said.

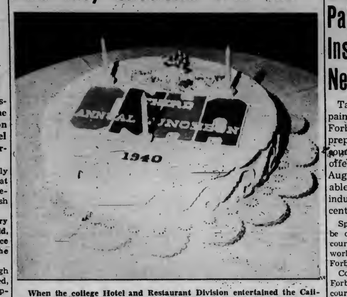
It was stated that all students whose cards are marked will be required positively to establish their identity before being admitted to any future social events.

Forum Magazine Edited By Parkinson; Material Asked

Selection of staff members to assist in the duties connected with the publication of the Forum Magazine took place Wednesday evening, March 13, according to Tom Parkinson, the editor of the current issue of The Forum.

Helene De Bois, Paula Levlek, Sol Lipsitz, Robert Kovacic, and Eleanore Leitner were chosen.

A prize will be awarded to the student who submits the most outstanding entry, which prize will be worth striving for, Parkinson commented.



All prospective authors are urged to submit poems, essays, plays, or short stories on any subject they desire. No entry is to exceed 1500 words.

Outstanding contributions in the past issues of The Forum possessed originality, and many specific examples were given by Parkinson. Parodies on Sir Francis Bacon, the English philosopher and statesman, satires on everyday social problems, and serious essays, as well as humorous events in the lives of working people, were noted for their aptness of thought and their conciseness in previous issues, Parkinson said.

Appearing in the current magazine will be a symposium in the form of essays on the following subjects: The College Student's Reaction To Living Under Three Forms of Government; The Plan Of Cooperative Production; Continued State of Capitalism; and The State Socialism And How It Would Affect The Student, said Parkinson.

Entries should be given to one of the following faculty advisers, Dorothy Mercer, William Goss, Evans Ecke, or one of the members of the editorial staff.

And They Celebrated With This

When the college Hotel and Restaurant Division entertained the California Northern Hotel Association, recently, this big cake marked the triumph of student chefs. It commemorated the Association's third anniversary.

Yesterday, the students themselves threw a party to celebrate their own fourth year of existence. Mrs. Mozelle Milliken, division instructor, in lauding the prospective chefs for their efficiency and finesse, seems to have only expressed the obvious, if we are to judge by this picture.

AWS To Participate In Women's Meet At Modesto

Representatives of the Associated Women Students and the Women's Athletic Association will participate in a convention at Modesto Junior College on March 29 and March 30, according to Gloria Miller, president.

Explaining that the convention was the annual spring conference of women's organizations in northern California junior colleges, Miss Miller said that its primary purpose was to discuss and possibly solve mutual problems.

"In addition we hope to have lots of fun," Miss Miller declared, adding that the convention included social as well as business activities.

Accompanied by AWS adviser Margaret Dougherty and WAA adviser Bertha Keller, the college's delegates will be Miss Miller; Jeanne Arnold, AWS vice-president; Jean Chesley, AWS secretary-treasurer, and Thursa Scott, WAA president. Miss Miller revealed. She said that there was a possibility of several other students attending as well as those named.

Milliken Observes Progress Of Hotel Course In 4 Years

Speaking of the recent anniversary of the Hotel and Restaurant Division of the college on March 18, Mrs. Mozelle Milliken, instructor, commented on the changes the division has had since its inception.

Mrs. Milliken observed, "In noting the fourth anniversary of the division, the incumbency of Mr. Wendell as coordinator and the promotion of Mr. Sullivan to coordinator of educational courses, are the only major changes I can see."

Citing the example of former student Wenzel Peck, who has just secured a position as chef on the Union Oil tanker La Purisma, Mrs. Milliken declared that the division is proud of its record of 100 per cent placement of students.

She said further: "The Hotel Division enters its fifth year with the complete and continued endorsement of the hotel men of San Francisco and northern California, as evidenced by their unanimous vote at the annual meeting last week."

Paint Men Ponder Instructors For New College Course

Task confronting 16 leading paint experts and Walter D. Forbes, faculty member, in the preparation of a semi-technical course in paint production, to be offered by the college next August, is the selection of suitable instructors from the paint industry, Forbes revealed recently.

Specific plans for the classes to be offered in the paint production course have not been completely worked out as yet, according to Forbes.

Commenting upon the new course, Forbes said: "In my opinion, this course will set a new high mark in the junior college field of America for the training of paint technologists."

"The excellent quality of the course we will offer next fall is the result of the fine cooperation of the industry's experts with the college," he said.

Last meeting of the 16 leading paint experts was held March 5, in the Galileo Cafeteria.

Stanford Scholarships Open For Applicants

Stanford University offers eight scholarships for the autumn quarter. All these scholarships are available to undergraduates as well as entering freshmen.

One scholarship, known as the Converse Scholarship, is for three students, each being given $300.

The Hopkins is for four students; each are given $300, also.

The third scholarship is the Yost. This is for $300 and is given to one student.

Awards are made to students after previous record, promise of scholastic success, and financial need have been considered.

All students interested in these scholarships should have their applications in by May 1. For application blanks and further information write to the Scholarship Secretary at Stanford University.

Club Advisory Board Ousts Seven Suspended Organizations

Invoking the provisions of its constitution, the Club Advisory Board last week ousted seven student organizations which had failed to apply for charter renewals.

Dropped from the ranks of club recognized by the Associated Students were Alpha Gamma Sigma, Chess Club, George Washington Society, Iota Chi, Press Club, Tarbuth Society and Le Cercle Francais.

According to Bob Schlesinger, editor of the club board magazine, the seven organizations had been in suspended status throughout the whole of last semester, and, when they did not—as required—apply for charter renewals by the board's third meeting of the current semester, their membership was finally revoked by unanimous consent.

"This means," Schlesinger said, "that these clubs are 'out' as far as the Associated Students are concerned."

If and when the ex-members decide to apply for inclusion in the extra-curricular program once more, it was revealed, they will be required to go through the formal procedure taken by newly organized clubs.

At the same time, the date for the issuance of "Cabby," the Club Advisory Board monthly magazine, has been set for Tuesday or Wednesday of this week, it was announced.

Schlesinger, editor of the publication, stated that each member club would receive a copy.

The paper will contain news of all the organizations represented in the Club Advisory Board, with emphasis laid on notices of club meetings and dances.

Only last week, the magazine was officially approved by the college Publications Board.

Hart, Galbraith To Figure In Coast Skate Championships, March 29

Bill Hart, college ice skate club president, Murray Galbraith, and Ed Bodell will represent the college in the Pacific Coast Figure Skating Championships in Oakland, March 29.

Hart took second place in the men's junior figure skating championships at Santa Rosa recently; Galbraith placed first in the men's senior contest, while Bodell took the novice crown.

Marcella May, women's junior ice skate champion, and Stuart Ross, European titleholder in figure skating, will definitely appear in the college Ice Carnival on April 27, according to Hart.

Marcella May will appear as guest soloist. Stuart Ross and Bill Hart will present a series of illustrative dances on ice. In addition to the two guest performers, the advanced figure skating class will present a 14-step dance number.

Low Sophs To Speed Up On Spring Informal

Word from Dan Mettugh, low sophomore president, revealed that no definite plans have yet been made concerning the prospective informal spring dance which had been announced previously, but, added Mettugh, "The social committee is speeding things up as best they can."

This committee includes Muriel Dodsworth, Dolores Dixon, Florence Hansen, Mel Chicarola, Horace Simi, and Keith Groswird.

McHugh said that he and the committee would like to have student opinion on a dance sponsored by the low sophomore class alone, without the financial aid of the Associated Students.

On The 'Air' Front - Hollingsworth Leads Radio Course At Gompers School

Students See For Selves What Makes Radio "Tick"; Graduate As Engineers

Putting in 4-hour shifts five times a week at Samuel Gompers Trade School, students of the college Radio Engineering curriculum learn the theoretical and practical angles of modern radio under the instruction of Lowell H. Hollingsworth.

Starting in their first semester with 51a, the embryonic engineers work through a two year course concluding with 52b. The studies run from the fundamentals of radio and manipulation of tools to practical investigation of the inner workings of radio and the theory of television.

In the picture at the upper left, a radio student services a set, painstakingly installing filter condensers. At his elbow is a volt-ohm-milliampmeter, one of the most essential instruments for modern radio work.

At upper right, Edward I. Titlow, Jr., working on a single tube receiving set, has enough equipment stacked on his desk to swell the heart of any radio serviceman.

Henry Oksenberg, in the picture at lower right, solders a connection on the frequency standard—the instrument which is used to calibrate the radio dials so that their readings correspond with the frequency of broadcasting stations.

When these students finish their courses, they will be thoroughly familiar with the intricacies of radio, and will be qualified to hold radio-engineering positions.

Club Advisory Board Wise In Dropping Irresponsible Groups

AN excellent example of negligence and lack of interest in the college is personified by the official lists of the Club Advisory Board this week.

Several groups were dropped from the rolls because they failed to comply with the simple ruling that every club must apply for or renew its charter.

After being put on the suspended list, these groups refused to heed the warning and as a result are not officially recognized by the college.

This may not affect them in the least and they may not give a damn whether they belong to the CAB or not.

It does serve to show the rest of the college just how lacking in interest and spirit they are.

Incompetence can be excused once on the grounds that it was a mistake, but when legitimate, live organizations steadfastly ignore the polite but firm requests of the CAB, it is, to say the least, impolite.

Some of the groups that have been dropped are actually inactive anyway. To them, a pleasant sleep.

It is those that are alive that deserve the scorn of the college for their lack of interest, and aloofness from student affairs.

Strangely enough, it will no doubt be some of the members of these officially dead organizations that will whine and snarl at The Guardsman because their club was given no space in the columns of the paper.

Goldstone
. . . Of Sound and Fury

AS A random example of the consummate lengths to which the bigotry of collectivism extends, consider the German-American Bund in this country. The Bund, 10,000 strong, supported by a following at least tenfold the numerical strength of its actual membership, has posts scattered strategically throughout the United States. Its Storm-Troop units march in the streets, flaunting their brown-shirts and swastika flags in the faces of Americans, then practice gunnery and drill with bayonets in their hidden armories.

Herman Schwarzmann, Long Island Bund leader, has this to say anent America: "When we understand how the Germans handled their situation in Germany we shall know how to handle the difficulty which will arise in America . . . When that day comes, and it is probably not far off, we must be prepared to fight for the right kind of government . . . There will be bloodshed and fighting, and we shall have to do our part . . . Then will be the time to wipe out our enemies . . ."

So the Bund, a foreign army stationed on American soil, keeps its powder dry against the day—Der Tag—when its brown-shirted members will help to spill blood on American streets, and will "wipe out" their enemies to establish "the right kind of government."

What the Nazis mean by "the right kind of government" is obvious.

Living under the undeserved protection of the American flag, and traitorously plotting the descruction of the American system, these Bunders have yet the effrontery to complain that their rights as American citizens are being violated, while boasting that they will crush out those very rights, in the next breath.

"Remember that we are still Germans," cries Schwarzmann, "for blood is stronger than paper, even though we are also American citizens . . . And as American citizens we have the same rights as any other citizen!"

So the Bund vows its fealty to Germany, considers its American citizenship nothing but a "scrap of paper"; but a useful scrap, for with it the Nazis are given the freedom to crush Freedom, the right to destroy Rights, the liberty to kill Liberty.

But, concludes Schwarzmann, "Someday that will be changed, for someday we shall demand our rights!"

Yes, the Nazis—like the Communists and the Fascists—look forward to that "someday" when they will demand their "rights"; the rights of collectivism, the rights of force and blood, the rights of the concentration camp, the firing squad, and the headman's axe.

And so America, smug in her imagined neutrality, lulled by a false sense of security, gives thanks that she is at peace.

But America is not at peace. She is engaged in the bitterest, the most brutal war in history. And that war is being fought on American soil—against an utterly merciless foe whose standards are those of the beast.

. . . Sports Personalities

From our only known reader, Oscar, came the word that a touch of the feminine angle on sports was what he wanted, and if he didn't get what he wanted, he will drop his subscription.

This put us in an uncomfortable position no end. What good is a paper without readers? On the verge of a hysterical relapse, it was our luck to come upon charming Lucille Jacke, she who wears the blob of hair just over the horizon of her coiffure. So starts our four-minute interview . . .

Borne in St. Paul, Minnesota, Lucille Ruth Jacke came west after a year of daylights and has been living in Metropolitan Oakland. Athletic by nature, Ruthie enjoys skating, skiing, tennis, dancing and eating, 'specially at picnics. Lu dotes on pastry and creamy things.

As for Lu's aspirations, she being athletic, wants to become an instructor of athletics. Her major is Physical Education and she idolizes Sonja Heinie, and thinks a lot of Helen Crlenkovich, too. Lucille Ruth will go to California after graduation to study Physical Ed. further.

As for dates, she prefers the congenial youth who can enjoy anything and know what to do in any occasion. Although looks is not so very important, he must be athletic, she said.

And so we leave Miss Jacke (or Lu by now), to meet another winter sports enthusiast. We refer to the handsome, wavy-haired gentleman who was born on a ranchero in eastern Oregon. Take a bow, Bill Hart—next week.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN
Takes Yell Kings To Task; Sound & Fury Ires Redhead

● LAZY-ITIS NOT TO BLAME
Editor, The Guardsman:

I see in the editorial column that you blame the "Lazy-Itis" of the students for the team losses of this year. Is it?

How can a group of college students get together and install a little "spirit" into a college without someone to install it into those students?

The last two rallies we had were examples of the lack of organization and "spirit". Except for one yell, which was insufficient, there was none.

What kind of cooperation did the yell-leaders get from the students? None at all. And the reason for this is that they didn't have any themselves.

The blame for the poor spirit of this college cannot be placed on the students alone. It is a result of poor cooperation between the rally committee and the students.

SFJC has the makings of one of the best junior colleges in the state. All that we lack is that certain School Spirit.

It is up to The Guardsman and to the rally committee to take the lead and do something about it. I am sure that with few exceptions you can and will get the full cooperation of the student body.

Ernest James, '42

● OF SOUND AND FURY
Editor, The Guardsman:

The reprinted editorial from the L. A. Daily News was excellent. However, your concern for propaganda does not seem to extend to the contents of the paper you edit.

Goldstone's "Of Sound and Fury" ranting begins with typical Hearstonian satire. There is ample use of names as: "contented hop-heads, Bolos." Generalities unsupported by other than the writer's ego are common throughout. How he seems to swell as he writes his furious cheap little phrases. And the Red Herring stinks as he exhibits it so.

In a letter appearing March 1, Furious Goldstone sounded against the editor for his ignorance of Russia's dealings. Walter Lippman and Charles Mertz completed a three-year study of Russian news some time ago, in which they concluded that "a great people in a great crisis could not secure the truth on a supreme issue." They referred to the lies and propaganda printed in the American and other press.

In "Newspapers and the News," published by the University of North Carolina Press, surveys in recent years show that the same tactics are still continued. On few occasions when the papers have printed the awful part-truth, they have exaggerated and distorted it to extremes. Gunther's "Inside Europe" in no way justifies the general picture of Russia that Hearst, McCormick and Gannett have created. He is much more critical of the Fascists. So your ignorance is forgiven.

Mr. Goldstone at the Forum Club definitely, in no uncertain terms, said that he agreed with Hearst methods. The press, he added, should have no moral responsibility, as it is purely a business proposition. Hearst methods are generally conceded to be the most underhanded and vicious conceivable. It was he who was largely responsible for the Spanish-American war. And the farce that Roosevelt was a communist taking orders from the Kremlin. He hates labor and fosters racial prejudice. Several years ago he advocated war with Japan, as he feared the "Yellow Peril." Now he consistently defends Coughlin and headlines Dies, as well as suppresses the La Follette investigations or distorts them. Time magazine reported that Hearst censors Winchell's anti-fascist writings, and Hearst and his techniques are Goldstone's guides. But he is so concerned about the morality of Russia.

Goldstone favored Fascist Franco, but now his heart bleeds for Finland. Why isn't Goldstone as vituperous of the Fascists as he is of the Reds?

But most important, Goldstone takes college students to be the ignorant fools who patronize Hearst papers. He has no right to use the techniques he does, and the editor should under no circumstances permit such perversions to appear. Let anyone give honest criticism in a fair way. The cheap methods of propaganda and prejudice have no justification whether used by Reds or Fascists, or pro-Fascist Goldstone.

Ram Racqueteers Smash Santa Rosa 7-0; Salinas Next

Out of twelve tennis matches played against Santa Rosa at the Palace of Fine Arts courts last Friday, announced Coach Tom Wilson, the college squad lost but one.

Nine singles encounters, of which five were accepted as conference scores, and one lost, were played by the local tennis men. In the three doubles contests, two, won by the Rams, counted in the conference tallies.

"In spite of the bad weather," Wilson commented, "the fellows played very well, and were never pressed. The four singles and one doubles matches not eligible for the conference were regarded as practice games."

A practice tennis date with Stockton Junior College has been tentatively slated for next Monday at the Palace of Fine Arts; and, according to Wilson, a conference net battle looms with Salinas on March 30.

After being kicked around in a state of woeful disrepair, The Guardsman tennis trophy has been resurrected and sent to a jeweler for badly needed repairs. Donated for the purpose of sponsoring and furthering mixed tennis tournaments each spring, it will be awarded at the end of an all-college tourney week. Matches will start the first week of April.

Two In A Row

High Frosh Annex Inter-Class Track Honors For Second Year

Blanketing the field with stellar performances, the high freshman class again won the college Inter-Class Track Meet, held last Friday afternoon at Commerce Field, with an unofficial final tally of 34 points. The low frosh copped second with 26; the low sophs third, with 19; and the mighty high sophomores staggered across the finish line with 16 points. Virtually a repetition of its victory in the intra-mural program inauguration last spring, the high frosh were never seriously pushed to great efforts in a dull meet, "which," according to Coach Russell J. Sweet, "was nothing more than a workout for the college cinder-men." In fact, only one man, Taylor, was neither on the squad nor connected in any way with track.

Sweet attributed the poor turnout to inclement weather, which threatened all afternoon to send the tracksters to the showers. After the meet, Sweet commented, "In addition to the bum weather, most of the fellows were running in one or two events, besides those in which they were originally placed.

"This situation was created by a lack of student participants from the college classes. For that reason, the results of the meet Friday may not be officially counted, and in that case, another Inter-Class Meet will be held either during Easter vacation, in conjunction with the time trials scheduled for then, or at the end of the season when student interest in track has been sufficiently aroused to warrant a good turnout."

Only double winner of the meet Friday was Vasquez, low sophomore, who broke the tape first in the 880 yd. run and the mile grind. On a very slow track, Vasquez was clocked at 2:36 in the half-mile, and 4:50.4 in the mile run.

Keith Groswird, college pole-vaulter, broke the inter-class record by clearing the bar at twelve feet, and was prevented from soaring higher only because the Commerce Field pole vault standard was tricky and unadjustable. When queried as to Groswird's chances this year, Sweet replied, "If Keith keeps up the way he has been going thus far, he should easily reach 13 feet and better before the season ends."

In a semi-feature race of the afternoon, the varsity relay team, comprised of Korn, Mavor, White, and McMeekin, had no trouble pulling away from an opposing high freshman foursome of Hutchins, Case, Faget, and Rankin. Time was in the neighborhood of 3:40.

Don Mavor, a low freshman team member, and a rising star on the Ram cinder team, according to Sweet, tied Bert Korn in the century in 10.7. The single element hindering Mavor is an awkward arm motion, Sweet revealed, and once this is cleared up he will have easy sailing.

Following are individual, class, and time results of the inter-class program:

70 yd. high hurdles: Rybehsky (HF), Jorgensen (HS), Sparker (LS), Time: 12.6; 50 yd. low hurdles: Raine (HS), Coney (HF), tie for 1st, Jorgensen (HS), Kithlgwa (HS), tie for 2nd, Time: 10 flat; 220 yd. run: Goodman (HS), Wright (LF), Hardies (HF), Time: 25 flat; 440 yd. run: Robin (LF), Hutchins (HF), Faget (HF), Time: 59.2; 880 yd. run: Vasquez (LS), McMeekin (HF), Case (LF), Time: 2:3.6; Mile run: Vasquez (LS), Barrett (HF), Case (LF), Time: 4:50.4; 100 yd. dash Korn (LF), Mavor (LF, tie for 1st, White (HF), Time: 10.7; High jump: Mossler (LF), Hagen (LS), Taylor (HF), tied for 1st, Height: 5 ft. 8 in.; Shot-put: Wagstaff (HF), Groswird (LS), McTavish (HS), Distance: 36 ft. 5 in.; Pole vault: Groswird (LS), Perry (LS), Hancock (LF), tied for 2nd, Height: 12 ft.; Broad jump: White (HF), Taylor (HF), Senter (LF), Distance: 19 ft. 5 in.

Schmale-Riordan "Feud" Continues Tomorrow Night

Tomorrow night at 8 will mark the renewal of the feud between Jack Schmale and Bob Riordan, when the college bowlers meet California at the Golden Gate Bowling Alleys.

California was defeated by Stanford a few days ago, and Joseph A. Amori, bowling instructor, hopes to send the Golden Bears home defeated.

"Since Cal was defeated by Stanford, I feel that we should stand a good chance to defeat them, if our team is hot," added Amori, when asked about a victory.

The keglers are still waiting to hear from Gonzaga about the long-postponed meet scheduled last month. Amori hopes to definitely schedule the meet within a week or two.

WAA Schedules 2 Playdays April 13; Intramural Game To Open Baseball Season

Women's Athletic Association Archery-Tennis playday will be held Saturday morning, April 13, announced Barbara Smith, co-chairman for the event.

Delegates will be sent by other colleges, namely, University of California, Mills College, San Jose State College, Marin Junior College, Stanford University, San Francisco State College, and San Mateo Junior College. Only freshmen and sophomore students will attend, Miss Smith revealed.

Only students who have signed up for tennis or archery are eligible to attend, and all those who are signed up are urged by Miss Smith to see her if they wish to help the various committees.

Coed Volleyball At State

Coeducational playday will be held at San Francisco State College on April 13, announced Thursa Scott, president of the Women's Athletic Association.

Men of the college are urged by Miss Scott to attend this event and to cooperate in the spirit of fun. Members of the executive council are planning to attend.

Baseball

New sign-up for baseball is posted at Powell Street and at Galileo, according to Blanche Noyes, manager.

Monday, March 18, the first Freshman-Sophomore intramural practice game will be held at 3:15 in the afternoon. Saturday practice games will not start until April 6, Miss Noyes announced.

Golf Team Trials Reveal Championship Prospects

"Anyone who was unable to turn out for the college golf team trials last Friday afternoon, and wishes to try for a place on the squad, please see me this week," announced Louis "Dutch" Conlan, college golf coach.

Eight men participated in the trial matches played off at Ingleside Golf Course in drizzling weather last Friday. Individual scores were probably influenced by this factor, according to Conlan.

"However," he commented, "18-hole totals of 73, 77, 77, and 78, turned in by Hamper, Bill McLaughlin, Bill Hoffmann, and Barney Rice, respectively, were exceptional. These four golfers should develop into a championship college foursome."

"Harry Hilp, Turberville, and Cohen, returned cards of 88, 86, and 87. Altogether, the trials Friday revealed the nucleus of an excellent six-man team."

"Although a permanent schedule for this season has not yet been decided upon," Conlan commented, "match play will probably continue until May 17."

A match with San Mateo has been tentatively scheduled for March 29.

Results Of Postal Match With Cal Still Doubtful

Results of the rifle match between the college women and University of California coeds are still in doubt. The local riflettes opposed the Bear team in a postal match over a week ago.

Results of the Berkeley shooting had not reached the college last week. Some of the members of the women's team are beginning to think that Cal didn't do so well.

Scores of the locals, according to Capt. Fred McFarland, coach of the team, were as follows: Marion Schrick, 99; Marion Murphy, 98; Irene Gruenbalm, 98; Alice Rogenes, 97; Katheryn Hastings, 96; Mary Healy, 96; Marion Savage, 95; Betty Barles, 94; and Violet Grassow, 93. A perfect score was 100 points.

Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr., Harvard law student and son of the Ambassador to Great Britain, will be a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. (ACP)

Snow Meet

College Skiiers Run Salinas Team Close Second

Running on soft, wet snow, Bob Stuck of Salinas took first place in the mile downhill race in the Salinas-San Francisco Junior College ski-meet staged last Sunday afternoon at the Sugar Bowl. Stuck's time was 24 seconds less than Bob Ogg's, college ski club president, who took second place with 44 seconds. Third with a time rating of 45 seconds was Dave Gibbs, Salinas ski club president.

The scheduled slalom race laid out on a quarter-mile of rough snow went to Salinas' Gibbs with a 30 seconds rate. Ogg of the locals placed second with 45 seconds.

In Saturday's cross-country race, first place went to Art Meese of Salinas who completed the run in 19.02 minutes. Second and third places were taken by local skiers, Lu Antonicelli and Foster Jessup respectively, with times of 19.43 minutes, and 22.27 minutes.

Jessup, a novice skier, competed Saturday for the first time. Judges for the cross-country were Ogg, and Gibbs who laid out the course.

Diamond-Men Postpone Fracas With Santa Rosans; Championship Hopes Rising

Friday night's rains caused the cancellation of the Ram-Santa Rosa baseball games scheduled for last Saturday afternoon. Even though the sun did shine, officials felt that the field was too soggy for a good game.

The Santa Rosa game has been postponed to a future date, but it may be played sometime this week.

Yesterday afternoon Coach Jack Gaddy's squad journeyed to Moraga to meet the Saint Mary's freshmen. Team members felt that they would win the game if they had the breaks.

Gaddy's batsmen have hopes of high standings in the conference by the time the season ends this year. At least they hope for higher than a next-to-last position like the one they occupied last year.

The cancellation, temporarily, of the Santa Rosa encounter has at least benefited the Ram pitchers. Harry Aleo, Martin Zernicke, and Bob O'Neill will be able to get a well deserved rest by the lay-off, and should show a lot of stuff in the next few game, according to Gaddy.

O'Neill, a new southpaw discovery, has been twirling good ball lately. He would have received credit for the California victory (had the breaks fallen the Ram's way), and should keep opposing batsmen in check this season with his fast ball.

Inauguration Of Boxing Meets Slated For March 29

For the first time in local sports history, junior colleges will hold a boxing and wrestling championships. The event is to take place on Friday, March 29, at Salinas, according to Joseph A. Amori, boxing instructor.

The Northern California Junior College Conference boxing meets will feature all ten northern California junior colleges, as well as representatives from several small colleges.

The schedule of events, as stated by Amori, are 119, 129, 139, 149, 159, 167, 179 pound and heavyweight divisions. Since boxing does not receive an allotment from student body funds, Hugh Ryan, general athletic manager, will appear before the executive council this afternoon to request funds to send a team to the meet.

Amori revealed that there are about 50 boxers at the college. Outstanding among these are William Edwards, a colored boxer of the 149 pound classification; Bud Calliway, 169 pounds, and Bob Paine, twice college champion in the 159, 169, and 179 pound divisions.

Amori remarked that he had been advocating joint junior college boxing championships for at least five years. Salinas Junior College took the first steps and invited all northern California colleges to compete. Both Amori and Louis "Dutch" Conlan are in favor of the event, and all that they need is financial support from the college in order to send a team to Salinas for the meet.

"A PERSON'S intellectual capabilities do not decline after he is 40, if he uses those capabilities. The average person may show a little decrease in speed, perhaps, but in real intellectual accomplishments no substantial decline is indicated." University of California's Dean Frank H. A few nights ago he left his home, "just to mail a letter." When he failed to return, his fearful wife asked the police to search for him, for she feared something dire had happened.

At 9 p.m., however, Prof. Eldridge calmly walked into his home, entirely unaware of the search. He had merely neglected to mention he was going out also to attend a dinner meeting of one of his classes!

Helen Back From Triumphal Tour

Helen Crlenkovich
Back From Argentine

By LU ANTONICELLI

Back Wednesday morning from a triumphal tour of the Argentine and a self-record breaking participation in the national indoor diving championships at Miami, Florida, was the college's famous mermaid, Helen Crlenkovich.

Missing by a few days the surprise reception that had been planned for her upon her arrival here, Helen expressed sincere regret at the delay, but gave as the reason a benefit exhibition in Los Angeles for Georgia Coleman, diving champion, and a train that was four hours behind schedule.

"Because of the lateness of the train's arrival in Los Angeles," Helen explained, "the diving exhibition had to be postponed. That's why I reached San Francisco only this morning."

Helen, who bettered her own 144 point diving record (the greatest number of points ever amassed in diving) made last year in Iowa, by 3 points in the recent Miami meet, said, when questioned about practice diving on the Argentine tour, "I had no opportunity for practice on board the ship and only two weeks when I reached Florida to get into condition for the Miami championships. I never worked so hard in all my life!"

The queen of divers returned to college this week to face a bombardment of final examinations which she had to forego because of the Argentine tour. Eager to hear of college activities, instructors, and classes, she revealed that she was particularly worried about the finals in those subjects that she had, by now, almost forgotten.

"I'll have to do a lot of hard studying," she exclaimed. "I missed six months of college work—but the trip was worth it!"

Helen's next competition will be in Portland, Oregon, in the Women's Outdoor National Championships next August when she will defend her title against some of the nation's outstanding women divers. Meanwhile she expects to get lots of practice diving done.

After little more than a week at home, she will travel to Del Monte, California, this week-end, where she will do exhibition diving for newsreels.

Helen, who is but 19 years, celebrated her birthday on board the ship going south. She is a sophomore in the college, although not registered for the spring semester, another of her worries.

"Do you think it's too late for me to register for this semester?" she questioned, in a tone strong with hope that the answer would be "Of course not!" When told that the first mid-term period was over and cinches already out, she laughed, then paused to reflect worriedly, "But then it's too late to register!" (We hope not, for Helen's sake.)

The diving star's tour in company with the country's foremost mermaids and mermen, included in South America, among other cities, Rio de Janiero, Santos, and Buenos Aires, where, as Life magazine reported, the graceful little diving star won the acclaim and admiration of the entire country with her charm and diving ability.

Helen graciously posed for The Guardsman photographer while an important telephone call waited, then concluded the interview with a twinkle in her eye as she answered the inevitable question, "What do you think of the men in the Argentines, and in Miami, as compared with San Franciscans?" Her answer: "I think San Francisco does all right for itself!"

Peace Society Holds Rally Friday Morning

To acquaint students with national and local peace movements, the college Peace Society will hold its first rally of the semester at 10 a.m. next Friday morning in the Lecture Hall at Powell Street, announced Robert Mason, society president and rally chairman of the day.

Guest speaker of the day will be Charles Rosenthal, former editor of the Daily Californian, who will speak on the National Student Peace Movement, according to reports from Mason. Rosenthal has spoken in several institutions and has been widely acclaimed as an authority on his subject for the day, Mason said.

With this assurance and also a speech by Mason on the summation of four years of the Peace Society's activities in the college, the society feels that it will be able to present more successful rallies this semester.

Classes will not be excused for this rally unless they receive permission from their instructors, announced Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Soph Swim Date Slated For April 5 Or 12

Tentative dates of April 5 and 12 are being considered for the high soph swimming party which is slated for next month at the Fairmont Plunge, announced Art Pomares, class president, and sale of tickets (35c per person) will begin probably this week.

With a challenge from the low freshman class hanging over the heads of the high 'n' mighty sophs, a furious contest looms for those who attend, Pomares revealed. First swimming party of the semester had been sponsored by the frosh.

Other activities on the high soph schedule include an excursion to Paradise Cove on May 1, for which reservations at 75c per person will be taken soon, according to previous plans.

Chairman of the Muir Woods committee, Jim Powell, announced that because there is no date after April 12 available for a picnic, official plans are being cancelled, but, he added, students who would like to get together on a Sunday for an outing should see him, and arrangements may be made for a small affair.

Further hints in the air, but no definite admissions, indicate that already leaders of the high sophomore class are beginning to make plans for high soph week, with special emphasis on the selection of a Sophomore Sweetheart.

Soldiers Visit Fort Barry For Big Gun Test

To observe an efficiency test of large service guns in action, 11 uniformed members of the college military science classes will leave the Galileo armory at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning for Fort Barry, revealed James S. Hughes, college military science instructor. Reconnaisance cars of the 250th Coast Artillery Corps will provide transportation for the men students, who, according to Hughes, are all enlisted members in the U.S. Army Reserve Corps.

Major Phillip F. Biehl, C.A.C. of the 250th Coast Artillery Corps, will accompany the local group on a tour of Fort Barry, which is the first field trip of the military science classes this semester, and explain the function of the service gun test. More than a routine check-up, the results of the trials, which are held but once a year, will be forwarded to Army General Headquarters in Washington, D.C., there to be included in a compilation of the efficiency of national Coast Guard units.

Students in the college military science classes who are to make the trip are Stanley Doughty, Robert Hawes, James Huntsman, Ezra Morgan, William Noble, John Proctor, Robert Raine, Raymond Rhode, Eugene Senter, John Stahmann, and Edward Terzian.

TOMORROW LAST DAY TO DROP CLASSES

Last day for college students to drop classes will be tomorrow, March 27, announced Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. Students who have failed to drop courses officially, and do not attend class will receive a final grade of "F", Miss Learnard warned. Students who received cinch notices are requested by the registrar's office to report to their faculty adviser and discuss their troubles.

WSS BOOK EXCHANGE CLOSES

Deadline for receiving money for books sold by the Women's Service Society book exchange or to get unsold books will be next Friday, March 29, announced Annette Schunick, president of the society.

"After next Friday," Miss Schunick said, "the bank will accept no responsibility for these books."

The Fair

Books Of 130 Admissions To Sell For $3.75

Sale of the special junior admission book of tickets to the Fair to students of the college was announced last week by J. Graham Sullivan, college coordinator of educational management.

These books of 130 admissions selling for $3.75 are ordinarily designed for use by students from 12 to 18 years of age, but by special arrangement with the Fair authorities, the privilege of their use has been extended to the college.

"We have not yet received definite information as to when the ticket books will be placed on sale at the college, but I expect it will be within a week or two," said Sullivan.

Regular price of 130 admission books for persons over 18 is $7.50, so the use of the junior books will effect a very substantial saving.

Other special ticket sales announced by the Fair management include a transferable book entitling the bearer to five admissions to the Island and admission to five shows, all for $2.50, but inasmuch as only 20,000 of these will be sold, students of the college will have to purchase these direct from the Fair management rather than through the college.

Humor Magazine Comes Out In May; Contest Opened

Scheduled to break into the college publishing scene around the middle of May is a humor magazine promising to contain approximately 50 pages of comic cartoons, humorous stories, articles, and poems, Edward E. Sandys, English instructor and faculty adviser for the new magazine, announced this week.

Approval of the magazine must come from the Publications Board before actual publication may begin, Sandys said.

A contest, opening this week, will be held for the purpose of choosing a title for the magazine, and a best short story and cartoon for the first issue. As an inducement to students three prizes will be awarded at the close of the contest, said Bob Hawes, publicity manager-elect of the magazine.

Until improved facilities are available, Hawes said, the magazine will be published but once a semester.

The editorial staff for the first issue is as follows: Jerome Flax, editor; Hawes; Frank Felice, managing editor; Martin Stolin, and Sandys.

Hawes urged that all interested college students turn in personal anecdotes, short stories, "screwball" articles, and everything serious or even silly in the literary line to him, Sandys, Flax, or Felice. He also commented that positions are now open on the staff.

An idea entirely new to the college, the first edition of the humor magazine will serve as a "feeler" for future issues, commented Hawes. As far as possible he added, costs will be kept at a minimum enabling local students to purchase copies for not more than 10 or 15 cents.

"This magazine will be published," said Hawes, "for the entertainment of the student body. We have no desire to make money one way or another in the process of publication. In the near future, we hope to make it a monthly on a comparable par with the University of California's humor 'mag' The Pelican."

Low Frosh Parley On Activities Tomorrow

Meeting tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, in the outside court at Galileo, will be the freshman committee of the low freshman class, announced Bob Kletzker, class president, today.

Plans for future activities of the low frosh will be discussed at this time. "We want to get the ball rolling," Kletzker said. "At the low frosh swimming party held at the Fairmont Plunge last week, only 13 showed up," he further stated.

Those members who were appointed at the class meeting last week are as follows: Mary Bartholomew, chairman; Philip Bell, Bob Koenig, Ed Vigor, Bob Holmes, Bettie Quadri, Pat Randall, Marin Malone, Audrey Printzlow, and Kletzker.

Low Sophs' Informal Off, Plan Muir Woods Picnic

After a recent conference with Dean Edwin C. Browne at which low sophomore officers were advised of the impossibility of staging a spring informal independent of financial aid from the Associated Students, as had been previously planned, Dan McHugh, president, reported that plans will go forward for a picnic instead.

Weather permitting, this picnic will probably be held in the middle of April, month of showers, either at Muir Woods or Searsville Lake, according to McHugh.

An auxiliary committee to work with the social group has been appointed, and includes Mel Chicazola, Florence Hansen, Herb Nickel, Ralph Ogler, Jane Shapter, and McHugh.

Long Arm

Judicial Group May Try Photos On Student Cards

With the intent of arresting further illegal borrowing and lending of Associated Student cards, Tony Manov, chairman of the judicial committee, introduced, at the last Executive Council meeting, a plan whereby each Associated Student card would be accompanied by a picture of the student.

"Such a plan," Manov said, "is the most effective means we know of to prevent further misuse of student body cards. We have suggested it as a last resort, for it is physically impossible for identification committees at various student functions to identify everyone with certainty.

In the past an identification committee has been on hand at the entrance to all dances and other student's events to check on the identity of card holders. Thus far this semester two Associated Student cards have been picked up by the committees and passed on to the judicial committee.

Novelty photograph machines, similar to those seen at last year's Exposition, were suggested by Manov as a means for taking the pictures.

As yet the plan is in its formative stages, and, among other considerations, the judicial committee is working on a plan which would involve no expense on the part of the students for photographs.

Forum Magazine Short On Material; Deadline Near

Commenting on the fact that so few entries have been received for publication, Tom Parkinson, the editor of the current issue of The Forum, stated that many blank pages in the magazine will be the result, unless a great majority of students submit short stories, poems, essays, or plays, immediately.

The last day for submitting material will be April 19, commented Parkinson. Originality should be stressed and the subject matter is left up to the student's own discretion, added Parkinson.

Men Students Select Alvarado Park For Dance

Richmond's Alvarado Park has been selected for the Associated Men Students' barn dance scheduled for Friday, April 19. All members of the college student body are invited to attend and the activities will begin at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon with various outdoor games, announced Lyle Shultz, AMS president.

Early in the evening there will be a weinie roast and general picnic supper to be followed by the barn dance itself. Eddie Tiecolet, a former college student, and his orchestra will play for the barn dance.

Warner First College Aeronaut To Fly Alone

First of the college cloud-busters to solo, Walton Warner ventured into the ozone for the first time on Tuesday morning, March 19. His flight consisted of merely circling the field once and landing, but according to his own testimony "that was plenty, at least for the first time."

Although Warner, at the present time, is a little more advanced than the rest of the students in the college flying program it is estimated that most of the students will be soloed by the end of this week, according to Captain George Richards, college flight director.

"It is generally understood that after a student solos he is then turned loose to do what ever he wants. This, however, is not the case," Richards revealed.

"The first solo flight serves only to mark the progression from the first to the second stage. This stage includes takeoffs and spot landings, field approaches, glides, and banks and turns. All of these maneuvers must be perfected from the pilots certificate."

The Welfare Council

Takes Quickie Quiz Of 1300 Students; More In Offing

In a surprise move, the college welfare council last Wednesday submitted a searching questionnaire to 1300 students.

The quiz, dealing with student evaluation of, and participation in, more than 70 extra-curricular organizations and activities, was administered to the 10 o'clock classes at the various college campi.

As late as last Tuesday, Registrar J. Paul Mohr announced that his office had approved the questionnaire, but said that it would not be given until March 27 or 29. At the same time, welfare council sources declared that no definite date for the quiz had been set.

Coming suddenly and unexpectedly, the entire process of questioning was completed within half-an-hour after it was begun.

According to Al Williams, Associated Student president and council spokesman, results of the survey will be made public immediately upon compilation of the data.

Informed circles predicted that this questionnaire is only the first of several contemplated by the welfare council, although Williams, commenting on this possibility, said that no plans for future student surveys of a similar type are being considered at the present time.

"We hope," declare Williams, "that this questionnaire will yield some concrete expressions of student evaluation of, and participation in, extra-curricular activities."

Pointing out the remarkably accurate results of the Fortune and Gallup public opinion polls, Williams opined that a compilation of the opinions of 50 per cent of the college population (much greater proportionately than the usual polled cross-section) should be truly representative of the whole student body.

As a result of its attendance at the recent California Student Co-Operative Conference, the welfare council will recommend to the Executive Council that the co-operative movement be fostered in the college.

The council's intention to report favorably on the question of co-operatives was announced by Williams.

"There were many things taken up at the conference," Williams said, "that are of no concern to us. The idea of establishing certain kinds of co-operatives, however, is a good one."

Ex Council Okays Finance Committee Veto On Backing For Student Social Events

Class organizations and other student groups will have to look elsewhere for financial backing of their social events by reason of a ruling of the financial committee set forth at last week's Executive Council session.

The formal text of the resolution passed by the council is as follows:

"Whereas, The finance committee has met for the purpose of formulating policy relative to the underwriting of school functions.

"Therefore, Be it resolved that it will be contrary to the policy of the Associated Students to sanction the underwriting of a special event.

"In other words," said Daniel Rosenblat, acting chairman of the finance committee, "the practice of extending short time loans without interest and with risk is terminated by this resolution.

"It has been found that when the Associated Students have underwritten social events there is a general feeling among the organizers of a particular function that they need have no worry about the financial success of the event since the Associated Students, and not they, bear the financial responsibility," Rosenblat declared.

Following this report, the financial committee asked that the council pass a request for $7.80 by the hygiene staff to pay for rental of moving picture films to be displayed in the hygiene classes. The recommendation was adopted by the council with the sugestion that that money for the films be taken from the Executive Council fund.

Still in the committee stage is a proposal to bar students on the Executive Council from serving as representatives of business firms.

Extended to all Executive Council members by Capt. Fred McFarland, rifle instructor, was an invitation to a party on his yacht April 14.

WOMEN MEASURED IN GALILEO SOUTH LIBRARY

Requesting special cooperation from women students, Margaret Dougherty, Associated Women Students' adviser, revealed that this would be the last week for Anthropometric measurements.

"As it has been previously announced, measurements will be taken in the Galileo south library," Miss Dougherty said.

She expressed her gratitude to those women who have already responded and urged that all other women do so before Friday of this week.

Civil Service Recreation Course May Be In Offing

A Civil Service course in recreational leadership may be offered to the women students of the college next semester, according to reliable sources.

This course has been approved by the Recreation Commission. It will be a two year course and will be closely correlated with the city program, aims, and standards. An effort will be made to place those who qualify in local positions.

The course will provide the necessary training in special athletic skills and personality development. Individual guidance to meet the personal needs of the student will be given, and courses will be carefully selected.

Enough Of Dick Tracy; Time For Welfare Council To Doff Whiskers

TO THE "wondering student" and those who feel as he does.

You probably feel that The Guardsman has failed as an organ of information by not disclosing the program of the welfare council. No doubt you were completely baffled by the questionnaire which was thrust upon you without warning last week.

To you we offer our apologies.

There is no objection to the welfare council playing cops and robbers, but the sentiment expressed in the letter appearing in the Ram's Horn column this issue indicates that there is objection to inflicting childish devices upon serious minded college students.

The Guardsman has made every honest effort possible to function as an organ of information. In the instance of the welfare council's "investigation", information when given was misleading and ambiguous because members of the council itself were apparently uninformed as to their purpose, functions, and objectives.

Whoever did outline the council's purposes could answer the questions presented by the students and The Guardsman if he wanted to do so. Obviously the council does not. Nor is it willing to say why it will not answer the many queries.

Nevertheless, a member of the Associated Students has requested information of the welfare council through the columns of The Guardsman and it is therefore incumbent upon the council to provide a prompt and complete reply.

As to the questionnaire given last week to one half of the students enrolled in the college, its validity is debatable. Was it necessary that students be asked such personal questions as age, weight, height? Had it been truly objective there would have been no necessity of names on the quiz.

Of more importance however, is the method involved in the presentation of the questionnaire. Had students known the interests of the welfare council they would have been able to consider the relative values of the extra-curricular activities, and then might have been able in less than half an hour to itemize intelligently their opinions—rather than spending that time in reading and trying to figure out the instructions.

As to the questions asked in the letter concerning the purpose, records kept, money allotted and future plans of the welfare council, answer must be made by the council.

Would it be too much to ask that Associated Student committees cease adapting Dick Tracy methods to their activities?

"Ssh, it's a secret! No comment."

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Welfare Council Called "Gestapo"; Peace Revelation

Editor, The Guardsman:

As a student of the college I would like to ask a few questions concerning our "Welfare Council," or judging by their actions, our local "Gestapo".

First: What is their purpose and why were they organized?

Second: Are they allowed any money from student funds? If so, how much and for what purpose is it used? Also do they keep responsible records and books and are they available to the proper school authorities.

Third: What is this survey that every student was requested to fill out on the morning of March 20, in the middle of his class, regardless of how important his studies might be? I have always understood that when a person filled out a questionnaire he usually did not have to sign his name to it, much less his height, age, weight, sex, and what his private plans are after leaving college.

Fourth: If this "extra-curricular activities" questionnaire were honest and above board and for the benefit of the students why are all those connected with it so secretive about the entire thing, refusing to answer any questions?

And fifth: Are there to be more questionnaires of this sort, and are the questions to be even more personal, even to the point of being embarrassing?

Since our student body government is of a democratic type, I believe we as students should be given the truthful answers to these questions.

A Wondering Student

• PEACE GROUP COMMENTS

Editor, The Guardsman:

This is a commentary on the Junior College Peace Society's stand regarding a movement that involves the United States in war. By taking sides in the Russian-Finnish situation, the membership recognizes an inconsistency with the spirit of peace.

While a feeling of humanitarianism predominates in the support of this Finnish Aid Fund, the society feels that this sudden burst of enthusiasm on the part of certain finance-pressure groups comes as a possible spearhead attempt to beat the drums for American participation, rather than as a result of a spirit of true humanitarianism.

At a rally to be held during the early part of the month of April, the Peace Society will attempt to expose some of the unpublicized aspects of the present war and bring to light those American personalities who carry their dove of peace on the end of a bayonet.

Debaters Plan Panel Talk; Map Collegiate Contests

Four college debaters will participate in a panel discussion scheduled for Monday, April 22, and to be held in the Galileo cafeteria as part of the junior college council program.

The panel is being organized by Lloyd Luckmann, debate coach, and the topic to be discussed is the difference between college and high school. Another feature of the evening's program is the probability that some member of the board of education will be speaking.

Students participating in the panel discussion include Janet Fellows, Rema Corbit, Howard Latcher, and Bill Hall. Everyone is invited to attend the program and to partake of the refreshments later. The program begins at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Challenged to a series of debates by three junior colleges in the Northern Division of Junior Colleges, the college debate team is considering plans for meets with Santa Rosa, Modesto and Sacramento Junior Colleges, announced Lloyd D. Luckmann, adviser of the debate team, today.

Santa Rosa has recently inaugurated a debate class and is anxious to stimulate forensic competition with other colleges. The topic proposed for debate with the college team, is the present National one: "Resolved, That the U.S. should follow a policy of strict isolation, both military and domestic."

A proposal from Modesto invites a debate on the same subject.

The discussion team at Sacramento Junior College proposes to hold a joint symposium discussion, sometime after the Easter Intermission on the subject, "How May American Youth Help Themselves?"

They ask that the meeting be held as a symposium rather than a debate in order to enlighten the audience so that they may be better able to form judgments concerning the topic discussed.

Tentative plans to schedule meets with these colleges are now being considered, Luckmann declared.

quarters as problems of relatively little importance, Williams emphasized rather the stimulation of student hook-stores, and other scholastic aids, as projects of immediate significance.

Held at Berkeley on March 16-17, the Co-Op Conference featured representatives from the California, UCLA, Palo Alto, and Northern California Co-Op Associations.

Ram Nine Invades Salinas Saturday For Crucial Game

Still resting firmly in first place after splitting a twin bill with Santa Rosa Junior College last Thursday, the Ram baseball nine will invade Salinas next Saturday.

The Rams took the first game in a free hitting, error laden contest, 4 to 11. However the Santa Rosa club managed to check a last inning Ram rally in time to escape with a 7 to 6 victory in the second contest.

The first contest was literally a comedy of errors. Santa Rosa made eight of them during the game, and the Rams were never headed after the fifth inning.

Al Giovanetti started the fireworks in the fifth by reaching first on an error. Frank Mullins sacrificed him to second. Roy Michell reached first on another error and Giovanetti scored. Then Roscoe Wolcott, second baseman, blasted out a booming double to score Michell.

Bob Webber, left fielder, was safe, when a Santa Rosa fielder failed in his attempt to retire Wolcott at the plate. That finished the scoring in that inning, and Harry Aleo, pitcher, coasted home to victory.

The nightcap was a different story, however. Entering the seventh with a five run bulge, Dowling, Santa Rosa hurler, had a difficult time escaping with a victory.

Robert Hvidt, third Ram pitcher, reached first on an error. Wolcott came through with a triple to score Hvidt. Giovanetti reached first on the second Saint error, and Wolcott scored the second run. Mullins, not to be outdone by his teammates, blasted out a terrific line drive to right field. When the dust had cleared, Mullins was resting on third base and the third Ram run had tallied.

Mullins scored when Michell reached first base on a fielder's choice. Then Dowling bore down to retire the next three Ram batters in order, and end the game.

Introducing Bill Hart, who is—

An even six feet, weighing a solid 170; there isn't enough fat on his body to fry a fly.

Bill has been skating only three years, and at the present time holds the second place title in the Pacific Coast Championships.

A graduate of Lowell High in San Francisco, Bill has attended about 35 different schools before coming to the college. At present, he is majoring in Pre-Legal, and will carry on in U.S.F. He likes to travel and go to different towns and is proud of being a San Franciscan.

Bill is a bon vivant too. He likes a good "New York steak" but won't eat fish. His idea of a good date is an attentive listener. She must have fairly good looks too.

Sonja Henie and Murray Galbraith are tops to him, and he remembers his first competitive performance. How could he forget, because, after completing his spin, Bill found he was spinning on the seat of his trousers!

As for Roosevelt's third term, it doesn't make much difference to him, as long as he gets his three squares a day.

Bill's hobby besides skating is hunting, having spent considerable time shooting coyotes in his native state. Bill is one of the best shots in the college.

In reference to his wavy locks, he said, "every time it rains, it waves . . . (pennies from heaven).

Netmen Meet Salinas Friday; Doubles Team To Play Armstrong

Varsity

Announcing their first competitive contact with other teams, the college mixed doubles Tennis Team looks forward to playing the Armstrong Junior College Tennis Club, Bertha Mae Keller disclosed.

From the feminine side, practice has already been resumed in the form of the intra-mural tourney. Eliminations will have four rounds, to be played on March 23, April 6, April 27 and the final eliminations to be played during tourney week, around the 1st of May, Miss Keller said.

Miss Keller also revealed that sign-ups will be taken either at the tennis courts at the Palace of Fine Arts, or at the Powell Street building.

Adding to this, Tennis Manager Rosamond Patterson said that the perpetual trophy has been dug up and will be circulated once more. Any tennis enthusiast can enter the tourney, and every one has a chance to have his or her name engraved on the plaque, which was donated by the college publication, The Guardsman.

As yet teams have not been definitely chosen, but college champions Bill Madamba and Ray Berns expressed their desire to enter.

Out of the largest women's sport class, there are many excellent players, said Miss Keller. Anyone is eligible who has enrolled in the college. At the present time a tennis stroke and serve developer is being utilized to the full extent for the players. The developer allows the player to watch his own form without fear of missing the ball.

Tourney

Results of the Ram tennis battle against a strong Salinas squad in the Pajaro Valley city this Friday afternoon will definitely indicate the probable fate of the college net team in conference standings at the end of the season, was the opinion expressed by Coach Tom Wilson last week.

"So far," commented Wilson; "our men have defeated Marin and Santa Rosa by large margins, but they are the weakest teams in the conference. If the college net men are able to take Salinas in their stride Friday, and the scores of the various other college matches pan out as expected, the Rams should find themselves climbing the ladder to a championship."

To explain his rather mysterious logic, Wilson said, "Sacramento, Modesto, and San Mateo, the three most powerful teams in the conference, are evenly matched, and will therefore probably split their contests. In addition, if one of the smaller squads pulls an upset on a conference-leading group, the locals will benefit just that much more."

Chester Meade, Wilson revealed, has been dropped from the tennis ladder temporarily because of grade deficiencies. Meade, Ram number two man, therefore relinquishes his position to Ray Berns for the time being.

In answer to a question concerning the strength of the San Mateo Bulldoggs, Wilson remarked, "San Mateo's team is no stronger individually or as a unit than the college squad. In fact, man for man, we have a slight edge. However, a tennis ace from Oregon, Neal by name, has enrolled at San Mateo, and rumor has it that he will give Bil Madamba a run for his money."

Yesterday afternoon the Rams played host, in a practice match, to an invading net team from Stockton Junior College.

Riflemen Awarded Medals For State Match Victory

Medals were presented to Ram rifleers last week by officials of the California State Gallery Rifle Championships, held at the National Guard Armory recently, announced Captain Fred McFarland, college rifle instructor.

Because of the keen competition offered by McFarland's marksmen, 13 medals were won by the local squad, in addition to a trophy.

Marion Murphy, Alice Rogones and Pat Finley were recipients of gold medals.

In the college division for men, the Ram first place champions, Art Templeton, George Humphrey, Charles North, Irving Conley, and Louis Davy, received gold medals. In addition, a 15 inch trophy was given to the fiven man squad for winning the college crown.

Akimasa Uyeda and Jack Hewitt won sectional gold medals. State individual championship honors in the collegiate division were taken by Templeton, who was presented his second medal. Humphrey, who followed Templeton, earned a second place silver token.

Climaxing the grapple for prize awards, team-captain North was crowned king of the Individual Target off-hand iron sights division shooting at a distance of 50 yards. His award, number two of the championships, was a gold medal.

College Women In Employ Of Recreation Commission

A number of women students enrolled in the Community Recreation course are employed by the City Recreation Commission on local playfields, according to Bertha Mae Keller, instructor.

"These women are continuing their college education and are planning to take additional courses next fall when the course will be expanded," Miss Keller said. Local courses help students prepare for Civil Service examinations, and in further education while in service."

A meeting for graduates of high school interested in Recreational leadership, will be called this spring, at which time the courses offered will be explained by instructors and members of the Recreation Commission who will discus vocational opportunities and problems, concluded Miss Keller.

Play Date Change

Coeducational volleyball playday will be held at San Francisco State College on March 30, announced Thursa Scott, president of the Women's Athletic Association.

Last Tuesday's issue of The Guardsman contained an error stating that the playday would be held on April 13, but according to Miss Scott, the playday definitely will be held on March 30.

Gridders Report For Practice; Eisan Hopeful

With an approximate turnout of some 65 promising aspirants, the season of spring football has officially begun for Lee Eisan, head coach of the college Rams.

With these men, Coach Eisan is ready to fill the gaps left open by graduated students of last year. Although still too early for any sort of positive prediction, Coach Eisan noted the men, as a whole, look better than those of last semester.

Although this is his second semester as head coach for the college football team, Eisan has been with the college as assistant coach since the inauguration of the institution. The techniques of the gridiron are not new to Eisan, since he has played the game during his college career.

With the aid of many returning veterans, Coach Eisan has begun actual practicing, although teams have not yet been formed. Most of the backfield is still intact, except for the fullback position that was ably filled by Johnny Gray. However, with the aid of Art Ekdall, all-city back from Polytechnic, or Red Jensen from Mission, the position is of little worry. Other backs are Leo Legget, Cunningham and Al Nauman, last year's spark.

Weakest spots are in the wing positions, left agape by the graduation of two of the college's best ends, Frannie Gray and Jim Molich. Molich was on the receiving end of practically all of Nauman's touchdown passes, while Gray was credited with catching two passes over the goal in the L.A.C.C. game, putting the Rams on the higher end of the score. Because of their absence, Eisan has been concentrating his search for talent in that position.

"I honestly believe that our chances of a great team is better than ever this year. The boys look good. We shall have better facilities. There is no reason why we shouldn't be on top!" Eisan concluded.

WAA Baseball Practice Starts Today At Funston

Baseball practice will begin on Tuesday, March 26, at Funston Field at 10:30 in the morning, announced Alma Koopman, vice-president of the Women's Athletic Association.

Practice will be held at 10:30 on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, and new sign-ups may be made with Blanch Noyes, manager, or with Bertha Mae Keller, adviser of the association.

Track

Cinder Prospects Appear Favorable At Speedy Trials

Individual performances in the running events appear to hold the spotlight in the Ram track picture at the start of the season, according to Russ Sweet, college cinder mentor, when he disclosed the results of team track trials held last Thursday and Friday at Kezar Stadium.

Don Mavor, mercurie freshman sprinter, blistered 100 yards of the Kezar oval in 10.4 seconds, and is working hard to lower that mark to 10 flat.

In the 220 yd. run, Bert Korn traveled the distance in 22.4; in the quarter-mile lap, Don White, who is still far from top form according to Sweet, was clocked in 54 sec. even.

An important cog in the 1940 track machine, Sweet revealed, will be former college trackster Bob Klinger, a Hotel and Restaurant Division student, who is at present recuperating from an appendectomy.

"Although he will not have much to back him up if he does try out for the team," Russ remarked, "Bob should be able to handle his specialty, the 440 yd. run, in 50 sec."

Lowry, an up-and-coming local track tyro, encouraged college track fans considerably last week, when he loped over the mile stretch in an easy 2:8 clock-stopper.

"However," Sweet commented, "the man to keep an eye open for in the 880 and mile runs is Louis Vasquez.

"Louis," Russ continued, "is developing fast, turning in a 4:50 mile during Easter vacation. He is also capable of running the half mile in 2:14 or better."

During practice and time trials sessions, Keith Groswird, top pole vaulter, was off form, and unable, therefore, to reach 13 feet in the tests.

No hurdle races or field events were run off last week because of inadequate equipment.

The Ram relay squad, composed of McMeekin, Korn, White, and Lowry, negotiated the turns in a satisfactory time of 3:39.

Russ Sweet further revealed that the Ram's first match may be held at Commerce High School Field Friday afternoon with the University of San Francisco team.

Amori Expects Close Till With Cal Bowlers Tomorrow

Keglers will bowl tomorrow in a Ram-California match at the Golden Gate Bowling Alleys, according to instructor Joe Amori.

Announcing that it will be the third match of the semester, Amori indicated that the meet "ought to be close."

"Our boys are hitting the pins with consistency—there's no reason why an edge should be given to the Bears, although from what I hear, the Berkeley boys are pretty good."

To compete for the locals will be Bob Riordan, Jack Schmale, Felix McManus, Dick Gastalgo and Lloyd Snook.

Schmale and Riordan, who have been rumored to be "a-feudin'" will make things interesting for the Californians—for these two pin-smashers will grapple for high score honors and thereby possibly elevate the team average for the Rams during competition, Amori believes.

Tomorrow's match will be the first for the locals since the San Mateo meet three weeks ago.

Boxing Fund Request Comes Before Ex Council Today

Hugh Ryan, general athletic manager, will appear before the executive council this morning to request funds to send a boxing team to Salinas next Friday afternoon, announced Joseph A. Amori, college boxing instructor, last week.

Ryan was originally scheduled to appear last week, but the Easter vacation made this an impossibility.

With the proviso that the Executive Council would tender them funds, Amori accepted the invitation to compete in the Northern California Junior College Boxing Championships. Amori feels confident that the council will allot the team the necessary traveling expenses.

All students interested in making the trip to Salinas with the team are urged to see Amori and try out with the team. Eight events will be entered by the boxers, and two or three are still open.

While Thinking

FOREIGN

WITH France's new premier, Paul Reynaud, promising to push the war, things might soon start popping on the Western Front.

It is possible, however, that the French people who so violently clamored for a vigorous campaign might get more than they bargained for. The Germans are no slouches when it comes to warfare, and if an active war begins, plenty of Frenchmen will also be among the missing.

Of course you have to fight and kill people to win a war, but we wonder if it isn't better to let matters take their gradual course rather than try to speed them up and maybe get tripped.

MANUEL QUEZON, president of the Philippines, last week admitted his country's inability to repel aggression by a first-class power, but reiterated that the islands be given their independence.

That sounds like an invitation to be conquered. It is human nature to pick a ripe plum from a tree unless someone else already has the plum.

The Philippine Islands have a right to their independence but it is doubtful if it will do them much good, especially with Japan near by.

Past experience with Japan has proved that the Nipponese are not behind the door when it comes to grabbing worthwhile land from a more or less defenseless neighbor.

NATIONAL

A MAN by the name of Lester Barlow may go down in history as one of America's foremost inventors.

Recent tests of Barlow's invention, a liquid oxygen-carbon explosive, have proved very successful and will be inspected by the government soon.

The force of this explosive is claimed by Barlow to be the deadliest ever devised by man—a crushing power that can wipe out all life within a 1000 foot radius.

First tests with a five pound charge clearly demonstrated the power of the explosive, as the force was clearly felt 1000 feet away. Barlow claims that bigger bombs will retain their power for 80 hours.

If the inventor is correct in his theories (and army engineers will soon find out), then perhaps the invention that so many have been seeking has at last been made.

It is the opinion of some that a powerful weapon like this will end war because other nations will be afraid of it.

It is only a matter of time for some other nation to find a weapon equally as potent, but Barlow's invention if successful should at least make the United States safe from aggression.

SOME of these people who are objecting to the census questions are really funny.

They claim the government has no right to ask personal questions, as it is none of its business.

Yet some of these people who so loudly object to census queries have been nosing into their neighbors' private lives with personal questions for years. When the government asks questions in an attempt to make a complete and accurate survey, these persons get highly insulted at someone turning their own guns on them.

The whole thing depends upon who is asking the questions.

Six More Clubs Are Suspended From Club Board

With their charters revoked this semester for failure to apply for renewals, seven clubs of the college which were ousted from the Club Advisory Board have yet made no move to reinstate themselves, reports James S. Hughes, CAB adviser.

Those clubs now definitely out are Alpha Gamma Sigma, Chess Club, George Washington Society, Iota Chi, Press Club, Tarbuth Society, and Le Cercle Francais. To be restored to good standing in the CAB, they will be required to go through the formal procedure taken by newly organized clubs of applying for a charter and being on probation.

Six other clubs reported at the last CAB meeting on Tuesday as being suspended for this semester unless and until their representatives apply for renewal this week were Home Economics Association, Japanese Students' Club, Music Club, Peace Society, and Phi Rho Pi. Two organizations suspended last semester and now reinstated are Alpha Delta Epsilon and Beta Phi Beta, making a total of 25 clubs now recognized in the CAB.

Business of the CAB meeting on Tuesday included approval with amendment of rulings drawn up for the CAB basketball league by Art Pomares, chairman of an athletic committee which has been appointed to arrange intramural sports among the various clubs.

At this last meeting appeared CABBY, new CAB bulletin approved by the college publications board. With 16 pages in the first issue, this paper will be circulated among the various organizations as soon as all 700 copies have been put together, Editor Robert Schlesinger announced.

Other business of the afternoon included reports from the various cabinets and discussion as to how the $100 allocated to each shall be spent. Aside from the statement that the group of restricted social organizations, headed by Adele Kuhn, is considering a tea dance for April 25, no other plans were revealed.

The first game this season, announced Pomares, is scheduled for April 8, and will probably be played by Beta Tau and Block SF. Other teams which have entered the tournament are Phi Alpha Omega, Foresters' Fraternity, Ski Club, Beta Phi Beta, Hotel and Restaurant Society, and Tri Epsilon. Gyms available for this series of games are those at Galileo and Marina.

At the last CAB meeting, the set of rulings drawn up by Pomares' athletic committees which were approved, provided that registered players be students in this college, hold a student body card, and be not one of those receiving a block for Jayvee basketball.

"All students interested in following the CAB tournament are very much welcome as spectators," Pomares said.

Spring Sports Rally Scheduled for April 10

Next rally of the semester, tentatively scheduled for April 10, according to Ray Berns, committee chairman, will feature a repeat performance of Jack Schmale's perennial "Joe's Jaycee."

A jam session, and pep talks by the coaches of the various spring sports will round out the program, Berns said.

A second invitation from the San Mateo Junior College, for the college rally chairman to bring San Francisco talent down to the peninsula college for an exchange of programs, was recently received.

There is a strong possibility that sometime in the near future, Berns said, there will be an exchange program with San Mateo.

At present, he revealed, the rally committee is working on a plan whereby next semester there may be inserted a new office, that of Rally Commissioner, into the constitution. The commissioner, Berns said, would take over the responsibility of staging rallies, acting as master of ceremonies, if he so desires, and taking over some of the duties formerly performed by the head yell-leader.

University Of Chicago Offers 24 Scholarships

Twenty-four scholarships to the University of Chicago are now being offered to junior college students of the entire country, Alice C. Cooper, of the English department, announced this week.

Scholarships will be awarded to junior college graduates on the basis of competitive examinations to be given April 20. It is believed that Miss Cooper will supervise the tests.

Students desiring to compete for the awards should contact Miss Cooper immediately.

The following awards are available:

Twelve full tuition scholarships of $300.

Twelve half tuition scholarships of $150.

In past years, two students of this college have gained University of Chicago business scholarships.

Posture Clinic Will Test Women Next Week

Posture clinic, under supervision of Laurine Bergin, physical education instructor, will test women in freshman activities next week in the gymnasium at Galileo, Mrs. Bergin announced.

Tests will be given at 2:30 o'clock, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons, April 2, 3 and 4.

A total of 10 tests will be given besides the silhouettes that will be taken of each woman. Physical education majors will help give the tests, Mrs. Bergin revealed, because this will be along the type of work in which they will be engaged later.

Guardsman Photo Contest To Close Next Week

Third weekly winner of The Guardsman camera contest is Arthur L. McDermott, whose archery shot is featured in today's issue.

Next week The Guardsman will print the fourth and final winning picture, and on the following week the grand prize winner will be announced.

Winning pictures to date have been a shot of a student of the college reading The Guardsman in Union Square, sent in by George Tierney, and a picture of an ancient college jalopy in some difficulty at the corner of Sutter and Stockton streets, submitted by Thomas Davis.

These two pictures, together with the archery shot and next week's winning photograph will be judged for final selection by a committee composed of Joan Nourse, editorial adviser of The Guardsman, Editor Leonard Gross, Associate Editors Louis Goldstone and Daniel Rosenblat, and Staff Photographer Joseph Kurpieski.

Hotel Division Students Return From State Tour

Eight Hotel students, with chauffeurs Paul Wendell and Dean Edwin C. Browne, returned to college last Monday, enthusiastic over their tour of the state and the possibilities of summer positions it opened for them.

The group visited Palm Springs, Los Angeles, Santa Barbara, and Del Monte hotels, as well as some of those in smaller communities.

Mitchell Hoffman, publicity director of the division, said of the tour: "Paul Wendell, coordinator of the Hotel Division, deserves much credit for planning a trip that the students will never forget and will never try to forget."

George Hjorth, son of Chef Ernest Hjorth of the college, and the "Roger" of the Jones Family pictures, entertained the group at Chef Hjorth's Beverly Hills home. Students said it was "very interesting."

Dean Browne proved himself another college aquatic star when the group went swimming at the Hotel Biltmore in Santa Barbara.

Insurance Man Lectures To Business Classes

Lecturing on the subject, Ocean Marine Insurance, G. Ingram of the Hartford Insurance Company spoke to college insurance classes recently, outlining the various features of the policy, defining difficult technical terms, and commenting on various difficulties which ship owners must look out for, according to F. Grant Marsh, chairman of the department.

Students wishing to enter the marine insurance for a livelihood, were given many valuable pointers by Ingram, concerning the many factors which would confront them.

Social

High Freshman Dance Tonight In Oakland

With Oakland's Scottish Rite Auditorium as its locale, a dance honoring the High Freshman class will feature the orchestra of Warren Ringen this evening, according to a statement by Muriel Grenelle, social committee head.

The dance will be the first Associated Student social committee affair scheduled for the East Bay area, the location having been selected in order to accommodate those students of the college residing in Berkeley, Oakland, and nearby cities.

In keeping with the idea that the high freshman dance be a traditionally informal affair, no dance programs will be issued at the door as students enter, Miss Grenelle said.

There will be someone to keep an account of how many students from San Francisco and how many students from the East Bay attend, when the student cards are checked at the door.

"This is the first time in the history of the college that an Associated Students dance will be held on the east side of the bay," Miss Grenelle said. "It is felt by many of the collegians that the members from across the bay compose at least 38 per cent of the entire student body, and should therefore be entitled to at least one affair on that side every semester."

Because of the already crowded conditions at local college dances, San Mateo Junior College students have not been invited to attend this dance, it was revealed.

Dean Edwin C. Browne warned all students not to lend their Associated Students cards to anyone, as there will be an identification committee at the door to check on the cards.

Chamberlain, Adolf Make World Peace

Hugh Fuel, the erstwhile newspaper correspondent, yesterday sent a report which has since become to be regarded as unimpeachable. From Paris out of London by Copenhagen it has been reliably stated that Adolf and "the Umbrella Man" were seen strolling down the Wilhelmstrasse, apparently having a tete a tete.

Hugh also reports that he personally saw the order by Goering requesting that Artur Rubinstein play at Munich at the earliest available date.

Need the fact that Monday was the first of April be mentioned?

The custom whereby the more intelligent people of this universe exert their superior wit upon those unfortunate enough not to possess such an amusing sense of humor, dates back to 16th century France. At that time it was the custom to celebrate New Year's Day on the 25th of March. When it was moved back to the first of January, the village wags had to have something to while away idle hours, so they began sending servants to the blacksmith for a "little shoulder strap oil." And he of "the large and sinewy hands" was only too glad to play the game by vigorously applying to the shoulders of the unfortunate servants a strap, used without discretion and usually good for a laugh or two.

So, if somebody asks you to buy them some striped paint or a left-handed monkey-wrench, remember that "poissons d'Avril" has penetrated into America, to be long revered by the younger generation as April Fool's Day.

Incidentally, Roosevelt's running for a third term!

Modesto Debate Scheduled For Today Cancelled

Cancellation of the scheduled debate between the college and debaters of Modesto Junior College was announced by Lloyd Luckmann, debate coach. The speech meet was set for this afternoon and the topics was to be Isolation.

Luckmann was not sure whether or not another debate with Modesto would be undertaken. Lack of speakers was given as the reason for today's cancellation.

Peace Society

Assembly In Powell Lecture Hall This Morning; Rosenthal To Speak

Today, at 10 o'clock in the Lecture Hall, the college Peace Society will present its first assembly of the semester, according to Robert Mason, society president and chairman of the day.

Speakers will be Charles Rosenthal, former editor of the Daily Californian, and Mason, who has been closely connected with the society in the college for several semesters.

Rosenthal has been widely acclaimed as an authority on this subject of peace, and has spoken in several other institutions. His subject for the day will be: The National Student Peace Movement. Mason will speak on his subject: Four Years of Participation in the Peace Movement at the San Francisco Junior College.

Commenting on his speech, Mason said, "A few years back the student body was not as favorable toward a peace movement as it is today, and anything that dared to stimulate sociological discussion was immediately counteracted by those who were afraid of controversial issues. Today, these issues are more than controversial issues," he added, "and war is a fact we must face."

Classes will not be excused for this rally unless they receive permission from their instructors, announced Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Welfare Council Will Travel To Berkeley Conference Sunday

Embarking on a new investigation, the college welfare council will send representatives to Berkeley this Sunday, March 31, to the Student Civil Liberties Conference.

According to Associated Student President Al Williams, the welfare council will attend for the purpose of obtaining an idea of the function of the convention and of the status of civil liberties in the colleges and universities.

The Civil Liberties Convention, a northern California group, was initiated at the University of California, and is sponsored and endorsed by numerous individuals, including Jim Keene, California student body president; Ken Cuthbertson, Stanford student body president, and John Darnell, president-elect of the National Student Federation of America.

Regarding the far-reaching questionnaire on student activities, taken last week by the welfare council, no definite information was forthcoming. Well-informed sources, however, indicated that tabulation of the results of the quiz had not yet been started.

It was understood that the matter of the Student Civil Liberties Convention came to the attention of the college originally by means of a letter addressed to the Executive Council. The Executive Council then referred the enclosed invitation to the welfare group.

Several clubs of the college have also received similar invitations to attend the convention.

Executive Council Grants Funds For Boxing Team

Despite an eleventh hour request for funds by the boxing team, the finance committee last Tuesday waived formal procedure and recommended that the Executive Council grant the $20 required to send the boxing team to the Northern California Boxing Championships to be held at Salinas March 29.

The request was granted with the understanding that approval of the late petition was not to be considered a precedent. Future petitions for funds will not be recognized unless they are first handed to the finance committee for consideration, Daniel Rosenblat, finance committee chairman, warned. Following consideration by the committee, the request will be presented to the Executive Council for approval or rejection.

Police Captain Layne Receives Promotion

Captain Arthur Layne, who has been instructing students in the college police division, has just received a promotion to Supervising Captain of the San Francisco Police Department, according to word received by Harold W. Leuenberger, college police division head.

"Layne has done a great deal in coordinating the police division in the college, and has started many men on their way to careers on the side of the law," said Leuenberger, "and we are all glad to hear of his promotion." This new position will relieve Layne of the personnel department and the police academy departments of which he was head.

Receiving more good news at the same time, Leuenberger was informed that 10 of the 25 men enrolled in the division are planning to take the test for State Highway Patrol, and a few will take the test for the State Narcotics Bureau. Commenting on the tests, Leuenberger said that the men are all qualified and predicts that a majority of them will rank high.

He said that this is the first examination to which the college has ever sent representatives, and that the experience acquired from taking this test and other civil service tests will help them a great deal when the test for the city police comes up next year.

Guardsman To Sponsor Fashion Show In April

Sponsored by The Guardsman and presented with the cooperation of the City of Paris, a fashion show is scheduled for next month, according to an announcement by Leonard Gross, editor of the college publication.

It is planned to hold the show, which will feature clothes for men as well as women, in the Galileo Auditorium during the third or fourth week of April, Gross revealed.

"We feel that a show such as this cannot very well fail to be of interest and entertainment to the students of the college. Inasmuch as it will be held on a Friday, date of publication of The Guardsman, a special insert containing fashion news will appear in the issue of that day, with photographs of the models in a few of the outfits that they will wear.

"Incidentally, all models for both men's and women's clothes will be chosen from the college," said Gross.

Cooperating in the production of the show will be the Associated Women Students, the Associated Men Students, and the Home Economics Association.

NYA Time Slips Due On April 3

All NYA time sheets for the month of March are to be handed in by April 3, to Thomas O'Neill of the Powell Street office, announced Edward H. Redford, college NYA director.

According to Redford, unless NYA students, who are working for the college faculty, have also turned in to him by April 3, a certification sheet verifying the type of work they have done, pay will be withheld.

"Deadline for this month will be observed," Redford said, "and no time sheets for the month of March will be accepted after April 3."

Women Representatives Leave For Modesto

Leaving this morning to attend a conference of junior college women in Modesto, were representatives of the Associated Women Students and Women's Athletic Association, according to Gloria Miller, AWS president.

Those representing the college include Margaret Dougherty, AWS adviser; Bertha Keller, WAA adviser; Miss Miller; Jeanne Arnold, AWS vice-president; Thursa Scott, WAA president; and Jean Arnold, WAA vice-president, Miss Miller announced.

Although the primary purpose of the conference is to discuss and offer a solution to problems confronting women in northern California junior colleges, a social program has also been scheduled, Miss Miller revealed.

Tentative plans, Miss Miller added, call for the delegates to stay in Modesto until Sunday morning.

Peace Society Assemblies Are Steps To Constructive Program

THIS morning the college Peace Society will hold an assembly to further the efforts of peace.

Much has been written on the subject of peace by persons in all walks of life. If there is to be any real peace however, it will have to come from the present generation of college students since they are the ones who will suffer through war.

Assemblies have been held from time to time to make the college "peace conscious" but have resulted in nothing but the impression of an interesting speaker being left in the minds of the audience.

It does no good to hold innumerable rallies and assemblies to boom the idea of universal tranquility unless there is a concrete program for the attainment of this object adopted.

It is the opinion of many that there will never be peace as long as human nature remains as it is today. All things seem to point to that conclusion but there is no necessity for adopting it until an effort for peace has been made.

One single organization can do little but one organization in conjunction with others may accomplish something. The Peace Society within the college can help by presenting the students of the college with ways and means of preserving peace.

No one wants war or death and destruction. Everyone is willing to work together when it comes to a matter such as peace. It is up to the Peace Society through constructive assemblies to lead the way.

Walter Winchell Article Shows Unreasonable Attitude That Is Prevalent In America Today

A FEW weeks ago, Walter Winchell, America's ace columnist, featured an article both in his newspaper column and his weekly Sunday broadcast that was so accurate and true to life that The Guardsman asked for permission to reprint the item.

Although many persons have already read the article, it is worth reading again, and those who have not read or heard it should derive considerable enjoyment from it now.

It is as follows: " . . . It should make you glad that you are not a column writer, a radio commentator, or a newspaper editor . . . Because, if you don't denounce the 'Ism' racketeers among us—and what they are plotting against the United States—you are accused of not caring much about what might happen to your country—If you get indignant and angry about these bums, you are hysterical . . . If you rap the Nazis, you're a Communist . . . If you attack the Communists, you are charged with being in the employ of the Dies Committee . . . and if you criticize the Dies Committee, you're un-American! . . . If you don't knock the Nazis, you're a Red . . . If you don't jab the Reds, you are a Fellow Traveler . . . If you boost the President you are reminded that 17 million Republicans voted against him the last time . . . If you knock the President, you're an economic royalist . . . If you don't applaud the G-Men for doing their duty, you're against law and order . . . If you applaud the G-Men you're John Edgar Hoover's stooge . . . If you refuse to take a stand against the persecution of Catholics, Jews, Protestants and others in Europe, you're an atheist and against religion . . . If you oppose such barbarism abroad—and the oppression of human rights—you are trying to get this country into the War . . . If you say you're a liberal, you're a fence-sitter . . . If you warn the people about the ingrates, among us, you're a rabble rouser and trouble-maker . . . But if you simply repeat column after column, and broadcast after broadcast that you are against all the isms, except Americanism, you are nothing but a professional flag waver."

As Mr. Winchell so adequately puts it, "And there you are . . . If you don't take such criticism seriously, you won't go to heaven . . . If you do take it seriously, you'll get there sooner than you expected."

Long Awaited College Building No Longer Mythical As Progress In Construction Makes Dream A Reality

ALTHOUGH much has been said and written in the past five years about the occupation of the new college building, it has seemed to be almost a myth and something to hope for but never have.

Now the dream is about to become a reality. The fact that the college will soon have its own building does not seem real until one travels to Balboa Park to look at the rising edifice.

If one is interested in a thrilling and awe inspiring sight, the new building on a moonlit night will provide that effect.

In the daytime the campus has the air of a substantial, materialistic construction by man. At night it assumes a ghostly aspect as if it would disappear from human view at any moment (Let's hope it doesn't.)

The campus may not affect everyone who sees it in this manner, but those persons who have been vitally connected with its construction from the very beginning cannot but get such a feeling. feeling.

After viewing the new home of the college, the realization is driven home that it will be so pleasant not to have to run from one building to another in all kinds of weather but instead remain contentedly in one of the nation's most modern college buildings.

. . . Counter-Point

IT HAS been a long time since the Admiral Graf Von Spee went down in South American waters—nearly 26 years. True, it is only a few months ago that the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Von Spee was scuttled in Montevideo Harbor, but there was another Graf Von Spee whose final resting place is under the waters of the South Atlantic.

When the World War flamed across the horizons in 1914 it brought to the attention of the world the name of a German naval officer, Vice-Admiral Graf Von Spee, commander of the German Asiatic fleet. Based at the former German colonies in the East Indies, this fleet was composed of the heavy cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, and the light cruisers Leipzig, Nuremberg and Dresden. Operating from its usual base during war time, the fleet could have been of little value, but as a raider squadron operating off the coast of South America it was a potent striking force at British trade and commerce.

EASTWARD across the Pacific, Von Spee led his little squadron. He knew well that word of his progress had reached British ears, that the British South American squadron would give him battle, and that even should he win a preliminary bout, retribution in the shape of half the British Navy, if necessary, would fall upon his head. But Von Spee was a combination of three things: he was a Prussian, an aristocrat, and a naval officer of the old school. For such as his kind Tennyson wrote "Theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do or die."

Waiting for him off the Chilean coast was Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Craddock, commanding the sorriest conglomeration of vessels that was ever glorified with the title of British Naval Squadron. His flagship was the ancient and decrepit battleship Good Hope. The rest of the squadron consisted of the even older monitor Monmouth, the armed merchantman Otranto and a single modern unit, the light cruiser Glasgow.

Craddock's order from the Admiralty had been highly ambiguous. No one had intended that his wretched, unreinforced squadron should actually give battle to Von Spee's superior fleet, but the spirit if not the letter of the order mistakenly so implied. As a result, Craddock was waiting off Coronel on the coast of Chile during the late afternoon of November 1, 1914.

USING his superior speed, Von Spee so maneuvered as to place Craddock between the setting sun and himself. Thus, with the British silhouetted against the sunset and himself hidden in the approaching dusk, Von Spee's advantage was immediate, and the end was not far off. Under the raking fire of the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau, crack gunnery ships of the German Navy, and the sharp attacks of the light cruisers, the Good Hope and the Monmouth had been sunk with all hands, ensigns still flying, by nightfall.

The armed merchantman Otranto had slipped off earlier, her four-inch guns as useless as her sacrifice would have been. The Glasgow, too, having seen the end of Craddock, made good her escape to the south at full speed.

Possibility of defeat of a portion of the British fleet is not approved by the Naval Regulations, therefore retribution was swiftly prepared. From Portsmouth, two powerful battle cruisers, the Inflexible and the Invincible, headed across the Atlantic under Vice-Admiral Sir Doveton Sturdee, finally anchoring at the Falkland Islands in company with half a dozen light cruisers already stationed there.

MEANWHILE, Von Spee, completely ignorant of the arrival of the battle cruisers, had conceived the idea of seizing the hitherto weak naval base at the Falklands. On December 8 his scouting force sighted the islands, and at the same time sighted that which was to be their death warrant, the tripod masts signifying the presence of battle cruisers.

The battle of the Falklands was almost a repetition of Coronel with the roles reversed. Here again the superior speed and armament left one side at the mercy of raking, destructive fire, without hope of adequate retaliation, and by mid-afternoon the entire German squadron, with the exception of the speedy Dresden, had been sunk. In the tradition of Craddock and many another before him, Von Spee went down with his battered flagship.

When, 25 years later, the action of three British cruisers forced the scuttling of the Admiral Graf Spee, it was more than the first major naval engagement of the present war, it was the closing act in a drama of the last one. The British Navy has had its revenge on Von Spee and all that bore his name.

. . . The Spectator

TOO MANY HUSBANDS is a marital mix-up de luxe. The eternal triangle theme has been repolished, reset, and revamped so that it fairly sparkles by virtue of its brilliant repartee and amusing situations.

Somerset Maugham's play has been brought to the screen with all the finesse and debonair nonchalance that the talented trio of Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas can call forth. Director Wesley Ruggles and Claude Binyon, the scripter, who are fast becoming as famous as the Dudley Nichols-John Ford or Frank Capra-Robert Riskin combine, manage to squeeze every last laugh out of the somewhat complicated incidents.

Miss Arthur, the widow of MacMurray, Douglas' former business associate, thinking her husband dead, has allowed herself to be consoled into marrying Douglas. Fred, however, pulls an Enoch Arden and turns up from the grave, prepared to reclaim his spouse. Alas and alack, Melvyn is in no mood to give up his beloved Jean, so the husbands have to fight for "our" wife. After that, it's every man for himself, with first one getting the inside track, and then the other, until, at long last, Jean has to make the selection. One of the boys will be her husband, and the other will get the gate. But which is which?

Jean Arthur is one of the most delightful comediennes on the screen today. Her sense of timing and delivery is superb; her badinage keeps her right apace with her lawfully wedded husbands. Hers is a performance that helps the picture get over the thin spots upon which it occasionally stumbles.

The long lost voyager finds body in Fred MacMurray. His acting is credible and he delivers his lines without apparent effort. He obviously enjoyed playing his part, and he does it with a light-hearted air, giving one of his finer characterizations.

The dull, stodgy business man, Melvyn Douglas, who could find no time for his wife prior to the return of his rival, finds plenty of time for her now. And does she love it! Douglas is especially effective in the scene where he learns that Fred is alive. He just gets a wan, sick look on his face and keels over in a dead faint.

As "Poppadaddy," Miss Arthur's father, Harry Davenport is outstanding in support. This crotchety septuagenarian is fast becoming one of Hollywood's outstanding character actors.

Too Many Husbands is an actors' picture. They bear the brunt of the story, which begins to get monotonous after eight reels. The trio seldom has trouble rescuing the film at those times when it finds itself embroiled in a rather stale situation.

Columbia has a reputation for producing some of the fastest moving comedies in Hollywood. Somehow the happy-go-lucky attitude that prevails in its films must be credited to the studio. It buys the stories, casts the picture, and with an eye on the box-office, manages to produce the most ingratiating comedies of the year. For, having just lost Capra to Warners, it must cater to the masses, and there is none who can deny that the flotsam will enjoy Too Many Husbands.

. . . shots at RAMdom

IN THE last issue of "Shots At Ramdom" there was an item suggesting several things that the college honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, could do. Connecting Irish comedians, irregular Japanese verbs, and Mabel and Eddie with Alpha Gamma Sigma was a connection received unfavorably by the honor faction.

Specifically the recent article suggested, "A survey of all Alpha Gamma Sigma members four years after graduation. Survey to be conducted along with the 1940 census. How many in this house? Anyone here Alpha Gamma Sigma?" As a reply to this suggestion, Miss Alice Cooper, adviser to AGS, presented the writer with a booklet entitled, What Becomes of Our Phi Beta Kappas? There is no need to go into a detailed account of what happens to Phi Beta Kappas. Suffice it to say that they do very well, indeed. Anyone who would like to read the booklet should make contact with The Guardsman.

To Miss Alice Cooper go thanks for an answer to our suggestion and to all AGS members go expressions of regret if the recent writing caused any hard feelings.

With a non-plagiaristic wink at Will Connell's satire, "In Pictures," the following may be considered as representative of a motion picture story conference. The scene is the bridal suite of a Hollywood hotel. The characters are Max Chaucer, Ben Hardy, and Angus Stein, surnamed "Fire".

The three great Hollywood writers always take the bridal suite because business firms continually send up presents when the suite is occupied.

Since the beginning of the conference, Max, a baldheaded fellow with a gyro waistline, has been standing on the bed giving the razzberry to a bas-relief of Cupid. Ben and Fire are sitting on brocade trying to think of something sensational enough to make them get up.

Ben: Here it is. We'll do a documentary film of the Morris Plan.

Fire: No, we need something that will go right into people's hearts and take them away. Something that will move them!

Ben: I still say the Morris Plan!

Max: We could adapt Forty Days of Musa Dagh, do it two days at a time, and sell it to radio.

Fire: We could change the locale to a sort of a Lone Ranger place and conduct a nation-wide talent search for an Armenian cowboy.

Ben: Gentlemen, we can't write for radio. We must support that great entertainment medium, the screen! Celluloid pathos, piles of salty tears, surges; they'll eat it up.

Fire: Since we have no story, why not do a musical?

Ben: Supernacular!

Max: The possibilities intoxicate!

Fire: It'll make a million!

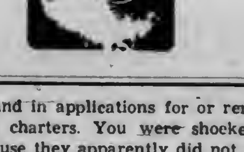
WHAT'S going on, anyhow? There is usually some dissension with the minority group, but politics around the campus has caused quite a bit of rumor and gossip, and bluntly we'd like to know what's up, if anything.

If memory serves correctly, there was quite a lot of discussion about a body to take up any grief or trouble that presented itself to the officers of the student association last semester. A guest speaker was called in to give all the details to a group of students about this type of council, which was established in an East Bay college.

Everything was fine. The group liked the idea of setting up a similar body in the college and decided to let the incoming officers handle the situation. Well, the committee has met, but what has it discussed? Is there anything important to discuss at the present, and if there is we'd like to know about it.

Someone wrote a letter about the lack of spirit about the college—a few weeks ago the freshmen had a swimming party and a mere handful were there for the fun that issued forth from the livewires that were out to make it a successful evening. This is one illustration, but, of course, this takes in only a few of the students who wish people to recognize the college.

At a meeting of the high sophomore rally committee, the other night, great plans were made for the future, but if this committee does not receive the backing of its classmates—well, you know the answer. It's up to you as a student to back whatever class you are a member of to make whatever is attempted a success.



Perhaps we're assuming a lot or there's been a lot of malicious gossip going around for the benefit of certain people, but why not get some feeling of good will for the people around you. Things would be run on a smoother basis and there wouldn't be a lot of hard feelings if everyone were a bit more friendly to his neighbor.

It's only natural for a college to grow and expand, but while the growing and expanding is taking shape it is up to the students to want to aid and better the whole standing of the college. The good name and spirit of a college needs the complete backing of every single person and not just a few.

Remember—the next time someone says something bearing ill-will, stave it off with a good word and be willing to spread good-will.

Williams To Answer Wondering Student, Editor; Club Board Denounced

• MEMO FROM MR. WILLIAMS

Dear Wondering Student:

All wondering shall come to an end if you will step into the student body office anytime after 3:30. We appreciate your interest in the activities of the welfare council. It is truly heartening when students do take an interest in their government. You may bring Len Gross with you—he too is looking for a few answers.

Editor's Note:

Dear Mr. Williams, thank you very much for wishing to clear our puzzled minds. Don't you think you ought to let us poor, hard working journalists print your story, since 2000 wondering students might be too much of a crowd for the student body office?

• WHAT HO, CAB!

Editor, The Guardsman:

In a somewhat vituperative editorial in the issue of March 19, you flayed the clubs for neglecting to hand in applications for or renewals of charters. You were shocked because they apparently did not give a damn whether or not they were under the maternal protection of the CAB.

I am not defending any of these clubs, but I would like to know what they miss by not being members of the CAB.

In other words, what is the express function of the CAB, and what benefits do its members gain?

I would also like to know for what purpose the $500 generously awarded to the CAB by the Ex Council is being used.

Editor's note:

Perhaps the Club Advisory Board president, Mr. Thorogood, would care to use this column to answer the above query.

• I. Q. IN COLLEGE?

Editor, The Guardsman:

The I. Q. of the average adult American is said to be about 14 years of age (or is it 12?). It seems that the average rate of intelligence among college students is a shade lower.

I am referring, of course, to the stupid campaign to impose moronism on this college by certain half-morons; the most recent being a certain Jack Weicker. Mr. Weicker doesn't like Mr. Goldstone's double talk. It's too intellectual for him. He can't understand it. He doesn't know whether Mr. Goldstone is talking about a herring factory or about "reds". And, above all, he wishes that Mr. Goldstone would discuss Moscow in language which the everyday American could understand. All of this is really too bad.

Now, the issue is not important enough for me to arise to defend a certain superficial brilliance of the Goldstone style. Nor is it, at this time, even a question of prime importance whether newspaper columnists, if only of the college variety, be given a degree of freedom in the composition of their style if not in the content of their articles. The question, as it seems to me, is whether we are going to allow the submerged tenth among the college's mentally incompetent to dictate the terms under which the remainder of us are to write, live, and exist!

Sol Lipsitz

Editor's Note:

Come, come, Mr. Lipsitz, it isn't as bad as all that.

SALINAS SCENE OF THREE TILTS

Diamond Champs?

Ram Nine Treks To Salinas Saturday For League Tilt

Tomorrow afternoon the local baseball nine will journey to Salinas to resume play in the Northern California Junior College Conference.

Tied for first place at the present time with San Mateo and Modesto, the Rams are expecting a battle from a hard fighting Salinas club.

The Salinas nine has played a very successful practice season, and split a double header against a powerful Modesto team. Last week the lettuce lads barely lost to the Santa Clara varsity, one of the leading teams of the Pacific Coast Conference.

Coach Jack Gady, when asked about the team's possibilities, replied that he was enthusiastic about its prospects.

"If our pitching is good, we should be able to retain our lead in the conference. Some of the players are hitting, but others are not yet up to their hitting form."

Batting averages for the current league season were released this week by Gaddy. Harry Aleo, leading pitcher, is also leading batter with an average of .600. Other leading hitters are as follows: Roy Wolcott, .500; Frank Mullins and Mike Destefano, .428; Roy Michell, .412; and Leo Mezzetti and Al Giovanetti, .312.

Although rains halted practice the first of this week, Gaddy has recently stressed competence in the finer points of batting. He feels that the layoff shouldn't affect the men, as long as they keep up the spirit that they have shown in previous games. The rain has even helped, he said. The pitchers, Aleo, Martin Zernicke, and Robert Nishl, have benefitted by the rest.

The boys are "rarin' to go" against Salinas. They, at least, are confident of victory.

"Admiral" Gaddy hopes his pitchers hold up.

University Hot-Shots Wary Of Local Deadeyes Refuse To Enter Meet

"Indefinite" was the answer to an effort made recently by Captain McFarland to enter the college rifle and pistol team into the annual National Intercollegiate College Meet at Berkeley.

A letter from California stating that "We're sorry but your institution has been the only one seeking entrance," invited belief that other universities, viz., California, Stanford, and U. S. F. are not too anxious to shoot against the highly regarded locals.

McFarland recalled the victory California riflemen enjoyed over his own team last year in the National Intercollegiates.

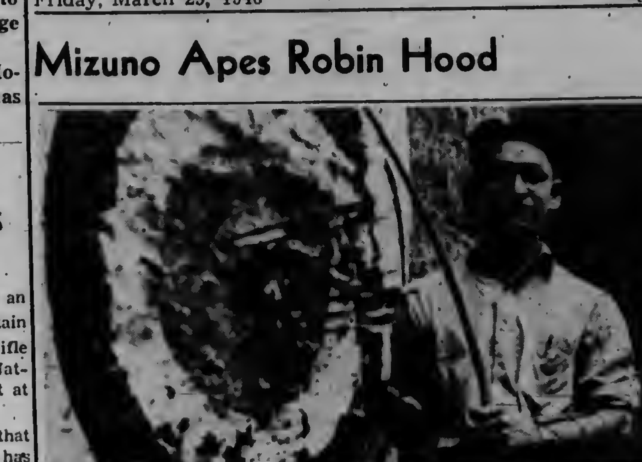
"It was only by 6 points that they beat us—we felt that the tide would turn for us this year," he said.

Only recently the Rams have defeated California and U. S. F. in the State Championships. The local rifleers are throughly disappointed because of the unwarranted cancellation according to McFarland.

He revealed that the Rams have worked hard for a chance to cop the Intercollegiates this year, that they are in fine shooting condition.

Blue Devils Win First Hunch Game On Opening

Officially opened by the Blue Devils' defeat of their five contenders, the college inter-period hunch games are well on their way.



The 2:30 Blue Devil gym period team is composed of George Thorne, Darrel Samuels, Victor Zoonareff and Geppert.

In second place are the Ramrods, who lost but one game. The team is composed of Tad Kimoto, Ray Kelly, Dave Hughes, and Bob Landucci.

The two teams will meet the winners of the 3:30 tournament in a two out of three game series, Lee Eisan said.

In the first 50 years of its existence, the State College of Washington granted a total of 10,099 degrees.—(ACP)

Mizuno Apes Robin Hood

William Mizuno, college archer now attending Miss Weber's archery class, is shown with his "perfect end"; a feat accomplished only twice in the five year history of the archery class.

College Skiers To Enter Vanderbilt Memorial Trophy Meet April 12-14

With but one intercollegiate ski meet behind them, college skiers are preparing to enter the Vanderbilt Memorial Trophy Meet to be held in the Sugar Bowl at Norden, April 12 to 14, according to Bob Ogg, local club president. "An eight man team," revealed Ogg, "will compete in the name of the college."

The list so far consists of Falk Falkenburg, Stan Pittman, Bill O'Neill and Ogg. Races to be run include a slalom on Saturday morning at 9:30, with a descent of approximately 500 feet, a 2 mile relay race, which is replacing the cross-country race, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and which will include a four man team for each lap.

Sunday at 10 o'clock, a giant slalom, replacing the usual downhill race which has been considered too dangerous, will be run down Mt. Disney. Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock the jumping contests will be staged on the newly developed Sugar Bowl Hill.

The Vanderbilt Trophy Meet, with courses laid out by Dr. Joel H. Hildebrand of the Sierra Club, annually draws contestants from the entire Pacific Coast Ski Conference. Probable entries, according to Ogg, will include Stanford, UCLA, California, and Washington. Scoring will be according to the Pacific Coast Ski Union system.

Possibility that a car may be rented on one of the Southern Pacific trains so that college students desiring to see the meet on Sunday would be able to, was revealed by Ogg, Wednesday, when he said that all the arrangements had not yet been completed but that club members were working on the trip. Anyone desiring information, he referred to Earling Jacobsen, club secretary.

As a direct result of the Salinas-San Francisco ski meet held last week at the Sugar Bowl, plans to make the affair an annual event, with a sponsor to donate a trophy, were being discussed by ski club presidents Bog Ogg and Dave Gibbs, of San Francisco and Salinas, respectively.

This would mean that in addition to the other regular meets, the skiers would reeserve a date especially for competition with Salinas. Also, according to Ogg, contacts are being made to find someone to sponsor a trophy to donate to the winning ski team.

Archer Scores "Perfect End"

William Mizuno, high scorer for the past two weeks in the college intermediary archery class, accomplished a "perfect end" last Wednesday, according to Miss Verrel Weber, college archery instructor.

An "end", in bow and arrow parlance, is a sequence of six arrows released at the target; "perfect end" is accomplished by all six arrows hitting the target's bulls-eye, a feat which has ben reported only twice in the five years that archery has been taught in the college, declared Miss Weber.

Junerose Bellew and Margaret Rand were the local archers skillful enough to score "perfect ends."

Mizuno is shooting Junior Columbia Rounds, remarked Miss Weber, and his scores have compared favorably with those of advanced archers shooting Columbia Rounds.

"In addition," commented Miss Weber, "a 'perfect end' is quite an accomplishment. Good archers do it occasionally, and when they do it is in a major tournament. They are usually admitted to the 'Six Golds Club', the most coveted distinction of archers."

"It is," concluded Miss Weber, "similar to the 'Hole in One' club in golfing circles."

Boxers At Salinas For First Junior College Match

Joseph A. Amori and his boxing team are on their way to Salinas today, to compete in the Northern California Junior College Boxing Championships.

Amori raised the money to send the team, and expects to win a few of the events this afternoon.

Those who will make the trip are Frank Matsomoto, Bill Edwards, Bud Callaway, Jim Robinson, and Bob Paine, Amori announced. The fighters wil be weighed from 12 to 2 o'clock this afternoon, and the bouts will start immediately afterward.

These championships are the first in Northern California junior college history. Salinas has sponsored the event, and all fights will be held in the Salinas gymnasium, Amori added.

"We have two boxers who should win in their divisions," he commented. "Bud Callaway and Jim Robinson are both excellent boxers for their weights. Even though the boxing team is something fairly new here, we should walk off with our share of the honors this afternoon."

Because boxing is new, no provision for funds had ben made by the finance committee. Amori hopes however, to have a regular boxing budget included next semester.

Kegglers Intramural Meet Starts Monday

Having acknowledged the difficulty of getting outside meets with bowling teams, Joe Amori, college bowling coach has decided to hold an intra-mural meet for his 60 kegglers starting next Monday at the Golden Gate Bowling Alleys.

For the duration of the week, there will be narrowed down through an elimination process a team of three men, the first-place man being claimant to the college championship title.

Also to be determined, Amori indicated, is a championship squad of five men, as well as a doubles and singles championship unit respectively.

Local bowling enthusiasts have given the opinion that the intramural events will prove interesting insofar as keggler Jack Schmale and George Riordan are concerned. For this will be a continuation of a feud in which Riordan and Schmale have been alternating in leading Amori's bowlers for highpoint honors throughout the current semester.

Schmale, much shorter but more experienced than rangy Riordan, explained that he thought "there'd be little trouble in his (Schmale's) outbowling Georgie."

Riordan was asked his opinion about the affair but refused comment.

With April showers in March, unexpected drizzlings and pea-soup fog outside, your pencil-pusher ran into Bob (no pun intended) Raine. Oscar immediately fired away and got the following results:

High jump king of the college, and one of Coach Sweet's beloved hurdlers, little Bobbie stands 6 feet 2½ inches from the cinder.

Bob high jumps around 6 feet and has aspirations of being a naval flier. He also does 15.7 for the 120 yd. high hurdles, and plans to go to Pensacola after graduation.

He enjoys eating and amuses himself with anything legal, his favorite menu being T-bone steak and likes to study Physics and Mathematics.

Bob also enjoys dancing, has held the title to the 169, 179 and the heavyweight boxing crown for the college, and prefers swing to classics.

My man Oscar (no relation to Levant) brought in a story apropos in that this gentleman also pushes leather. Known as the Japanese sandman, Frank Matsumoto is one of the college's best in his division.

Frank wishes to go into civil service work, consequently is majoring in political science. Having won a scholarship to the University of Pennsylvania last year, Frank has toured the country boxing all over the east coast.

He approves of mixes and socials and thinks a lot of Doc Sewell.

Anticipating the Salinas trip with the college boxing team, Frank dotes on Sukiyaki. "I'm glad I'm gonna go," he said. He also said his pet hate is midterms and finals.

When asked who Jos Louis' closest contender was for the crown, Frank mumbled a dubious "Lee Savold."

Oscar never heard of the guy.

Co-educational Volleyball Playday Slated Tomorrow

Coeducational volleyball playday will be held at San Francisco State College tomorrow, Saturday, March 30, announced Thursa Scott, president of the Women's Athletic Association.

"Registration will start at 9 in the morning after which two games will be played," Mis Scott explained, "and each game will have 15 minute rest periods. A total of 12 students will be sent to represent the college, six women and six men."

The game will be played acording to a special set of coeducational volleyball rules.

Lunch will terminate the activities of the day, Miss Scot said.

Netmen To Invade South In Court Crown Battle

Leading the week-end athletic invasion of Salinas, the college tennis team will fight to retain first place in the conference standings tomorrow afternoon.

Having won a decisive victory of seven in a row, the Ramsters go forth with confidence. Should the college win these matches, by way of the new point system the Rams are practically cinched for the title.

The new point system is different from the old in that in each match both singles and doubles collect points. The Rams have amassed enough points so the the possibility of other teams catching up with them is almost beyond their hope.

With the aid of Ram number one man Bill Madamba and his contemporary Ray Berns, the college has the possibility of returning home with the crown. Although the Ramsters are excellent players, the ability of the Salinas team is still unknown, so that predictions are imposible.

"The team has done well so far and we hope to swamp the opponents as in other games. The game will depend upon the construction of their court, because we are used to the perfect conditions which the courts of the Palace of Fine Arts afford us," manager Bob Owen said.

The trip will be made by the following, as announced by Owen: Jack Hare, Tony Calagos, Chet Meade, Bob Waxman, Howard Pennypacker, Madamba and Burns. The team will leave Saturday morning from First and Mission, the time to be announced by Coach Wilson or Owen.

Results of the Stockton encounter last week are as follows:

Madamba d. Brown 6-4 7-5; Burns d. Hunefield 5-7 6-1 9-7; Meade d. Traphagen 6-3 6-4; Hare d. Smith 6-1 6-0; Calagos d. Hamm 6-0 6-0.

Doubles were even more a victory as can easily be seen by the following scores: Madamba and Burns d. Brown and Traphagen 3-6 8-6 6-1; Meade and Hare d. Hunefield and Smith 6-1 6-4.

Track Team To Take Time Trials At Kezar In Preparation For USF

Time trials again this week-end on the Kezar track, weather permitting, are scheduled for the Ram cindermen in preparation for a run-in with the Dons of USF next Monday or Tuesday, Coach Russ Sweet announced this week.

Last Friday and Saturday afternoons at Kezar Stadium, the college runners demonstrated the results achieved by two weeks of hard practice. If, during the trials this week-end, the tracksters improve their times and form sufficiently, the locals may have a chance against the University of San Francisco squad, Sweet opined.

Furthermore, according to comments made by Sweet last week, a few individual stars on the Ram squad should be watched closely during the season. Among those whom he expects to "go places" are Louis Vasquez, miler; Bert Korn, 220 yard sprinter; Bob Klinger, ace quarter-miler; Keith Groswird, college champion pole vaulter; and Don Mavor, who has consistently been creeping close to 10 seconds flat in the century.

The Ram relay team, comprised of McMeekin, White, Korn, and Lowry, is attempting to cut its time of 3:39 to a minimum and, according to Mentor Sweet, should place high in the mile lap events this season.

Originally scheduled for today, the USF meet was moved up to next week because of outside track engagements in which individual Dons are competing. Heroes of the gridiron and hardwood, including Bill Preston, Olympic Club distance runner, and Pete Franchesi, USF pigskin star, make up the bulk of the University of San Francisc contingent.

Sweet concluded, "The meet with the San Mateo Bulldogs, first scheduled during March, will not be held until an open date near the end of the conference season. This change was due to a mix-up in schedules."

Rain Halts Football Practice

Because of rain and a slushy field, reports from the spring football section were practically nil. However, Johnnie Bareis announced that the position of assistant football manager is open for applicants.

Mid-Semester Resume

After the usual re-adjustment period in which newly-elected officers and managers, and instructors get caught up in the WAA maelstrom, the Association's council meetings have finally settled down into a state of calm, efficient, business-like affairs.

Council meetings come off as per schedule at 4:30 on Monday afternoons with a conspicous lack of the former characteristic mental and power battles. There is still, however, a decided tendency toward laxity in attendance upon the part of club managers. They too, (we hope) will soon come down to earth and honor the official meetings with their presences — or are we being just a mite optimistic? No matter. It's spring, and with yon fair damsel comes a general relaxation of winter's taut nerves. Which accounts, no doubt, for this tremendous amount of very irregular cooperation being shown by the entire council personnel. It's sure funny how much "un-thawing" a few sunny days can do.

Count before the Jump

Perhaps a trifle in advance of the scheduled dates but not too early (or late) to cover the WAA's spring sports thus far, before all the hustle and fanfare of Tourney Week starts.

In brief: GOLF . . . newly elected club manager, Jane Young, will, starting March 30 and continuing every other Saturday thereafter, maneuver her group of club-swingers down to the Lincoln Golf Course for practice or what-have-you. Price: 75 cents. Time: 9 o'clock.

SWIMMING . . . the first semester for life-saving classes has progressed to the point of preliminary life-saving before entering upon practice for becoming Junior and Senior life savers. There's a question about this, but your columnist ("columnist" isn't the question) was given to understand that once women have fulfilled the Senior life-saving requisites they are eligible to become regular lifeguards. Whoever heard of a woman lifeguard, anyway. We haven't but then . . . Anyway, women in Laurine Bergin's life-saving classes study a booklet about the subject, then go to class and practice what they've learned (?) Homework, no less!

TENNIS . . . The Palace of Fine Arts as a drawing card for collegiate sports is rivaled only by Winterland Ice Rink, where Joseph Williams' ice crews work out. The racquet-ball game has long been the college's outstandingly popular pastime. Now, as Tourney Week rears its head over the horizon, sign-ups for mixed doubles begin. Incidentally, this semester the rejuvenated Guardsman tennis trophy once again goes up as booty for tennis victors.

RIFLE . . . has had a good turnout which makes it possible to formulate a first and second team. WAA vs. regular rifle classes are latest plans.

FOLK DANCING . . . Laurine Bergin's terpsichoreans have developed an interesting pastime which, for lack of a better name, we'll call a "lab". The dancers visit one of the folk-dance halls in the city to watch and participate in real-honest-to-goodness old-fashioned and native dances. Nothing better than first hand instruction, they say, and these gals really get it—from Europeans who gather in their national costumes to dance the traditional dances of their countries.

BASEBALL . . . started out with two strikes on it; practice on Saturday, which conflicted with the varied playdays, and a deficient enrollment. Practice has been moved to Thursdays at 10 o'clock. Hope it doesn't fan out. Baseball always was our favorite sport—almost.

RAMblings

by Ray Berns

John Steinbeck's not so imaginary playground, Salinas, will play host to the local athletes this week-end when four Ram teams invade the "Lettuce Capital" to compete in athletic events.

Tonight, Joe "Seabiscuit" Amori, boxing mentor extraordinary, will parade eight of the local punch absorbers in the junior college conference boxing meet.

Jack Gaddy's horschiders and Tom Wilson's tennisers encounter rival teams from Salinas Junior College in conference events on the morrow.

Joe informs us that, although he is certain the Ram rowdies will come through in fine style in the fisticuffs festival, he is, nonetheless, taking precautions to see that the canvasbacks are taken care of in case of unforeseen accidents, sometimes referred to as knockouts, technical knockouts, and massacres.

Nine local yokels who masquerade under the name, San Francisco Junior College baseball team, 1940 edition, engage in a pellet-swatting exhibition with nine Salinas local yokels on the diamond tomorrow. Each team having nine men and one coach, the contest looks to be about even, with the edge, if any, going to the University of California.

Whilst the willow-pushers are pummeling the pellet and the cinder-dusters are dusting up the cinder (they're rather dirty these days—need cleaning), "Atlas" Wilson's racquet-wielders will be wielding their racquets.

Billy "Flash" Madamba, ace of the Ram net forces, is said to flit about the court with all the grace of a wounded antelope. Reliable sources disclose that Madamba has been offered a position with the —— Ballet (name withheld for obvious reasons, and besides, we couldn't think of one). Madamba has really got it, though, and looks to be, even at this early date, the winner of the individual singles tournament at the end of the regular season.

To use our favorite punch line, while poring over the local dailies the other morning, we ran across, no, you guessed wrong, not an item, but, some heads that amused us no end and provided food for thought (we're always hungry).

"Coliseum Bowl Fights This Evening"—well, for gosh sakes, what d'ya know.

Judicial Committee

Student Body Card Confiscated For Infraction Of Lending Rule

Permanent confiscation of a student body card was decided upon by members of the college judicial committee at a recent meeting, according to Tony Manov, chairman.

The case was frequently postponed in the past, for the student was unable to appear at his trial because he was either working or attending classes, Manov said.

"This student lent his student body card to someone else, although he knew very well that if he were appre-hended, he might have to forfeit his privileges of admission to social dances, athletic contests, as well as cut-rates to ice skating rinks, and his privilege of voting in college elections. Consequently, the judicial committee felt compelled to confiscate his card permanently," Manov explained.

"If students will think twice, weighing the privileges gained by possessing student body cards, they will not be tempted to lend their student body cards to anyone," he added.

Also revealed by Manov is a plan whereby identification photographs for student body cards may be taken without extra expense to students.

Instead of novelty photograph machines, similar to those seen at last year's Exposition, Manov has suggested that two photographs of students be taken upon registration, next semester: one for the college files, the other for identification purposes.

This new plan was presented as a means of positive identification at social affairs, since, according to Manov, it is impossible for any committee to identify everyone with certainty.

Forty Fair Plans Huge Program Of Entertainment For Summer Months

When the curtain unfolds on the Golden Gate International Exposition on May 25, there will be more than $2,000,000 worth of shows on Treasure Island all primed for their premieres, declare Island press dispatches.

A. L. Vollman's America, Cavalcade of a Nation, will be produced at a cost in excess of $425,000. Reconstruction of the vast outdoor stage alone will cost $1,000,000 and the production figures approximate $325,000. The cavalcade is a historic epic of America in the making.

Billy Rose will spend more than $600,000 on his Aquacade production, in which 250 persons will be featured in swimming, dancing, and singing numbers. Cost of building a tank in International Hall and of rounding up the show will run above $250,000; an additional $350,000 will be spent on operating and maintaining the show.

Clifford C. Fisher's New Follies Bergere, by far his most extravagant production, will be worth some $350,000 from start to finish. The initial cost of production will run over $100,000. Fisher will assemble his most beauteous talent, his most startling acts for the Treasure Island presentation of follies which will outdo either of his last year's efforts, Exposition dispatches claim.

A fourth major entertainment feature will be Salici's puppets. At a cost exceeding $50,000, the puppets, which have been in the Salici family for more than 200 years and through five generations, will be brought into the Hall of Western States Auditorium.

These attractions are valued at well over $1,500,000. Outdoor amusements, aerial acts, and other entertainment with a price of more than half a million dollars on their collective heads assure Fair visitors of shows to fit every taste and pocketbook.

Forum Contributions To Be Judged By Staff

Literary contributions to the Forum Magazine will be judged and read by every member of the editorial staff and by the sponsors of the publication, so that a fair evaluation of the quality of the submitted material may be rendered, announced Dorothy Mercer, Forum Club sponsor.

A meeting of the editorial staff will precede the Forum Club meeting on Friday evening, March 29, to contend with various problems which have arisen in connection with the publication of the magazine.

Students who wish to submit material should do so at their earliest convenience, Miss Mercer added, to avoid the last minute rush and in order to have their work scanned more carefully.

A lack of contributions still prevails, and those who desire to submit an entry must take into consideration the fact that Friday, April 19, is the last day on which entries will be accepted. Positively no contributions will be accepted after that date, Miss Mercer warned.

Eastern Colleges Set Up Radio Broadcasting Chain

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—(ACP)—Radio-minded students in a dozen eastern colleges and universities are working overtime these days to bring about an initial interchange of programs over the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System, first undergraduate network of its kind.

The system was organized last month at an Intercollegiate conference sponsored by the Brown Network at Brown University, which brings daily programs to dormitories and fraternity houses by lowpowered short wave over a 30,000-foot web of transmission lines. The Brown Network, pioneer in campus broadcasting, is headquarters for the new intercollegiate organization.

Charter members of the "IBS", as its organizers call it, include Brown, Cornell, Columbia, Holy Cross, Pembroke, Rhode Island State, St. Lawrence, University of Connecticut, Wesleyan, and Williams. Fifteen other colleges and universities extending as far west as Colorado either have campus stations under construction or projected.

According to the executive committee of the IBS, the first intercollegiate broadcast is scheduled for about April 15. At least five eastern colleges, including some of the charter members, will be linked together by a combination of telephone lines or short wave. Experimental exchange broadcasts of recordings are now being tried among the member colleges which have their stations finished.

Action On College Parking Site Soon

Definite official action on the proposed plan to provide adequate parking space on the Balboa Park campus probably will not be taken for at least two weeks, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, revealed last week.

At the present time, according to Mohr, there are two proposals for parking facilities up before the Board of Education, on whom final decision rests.

The first contemplates the widening of the streets surrounding the campus site so that diagonal parking would be permitted on both sides of the streets. Under this plan, space for about 700 cars would be created.

Utilization of a parcel of land due north of the science building large enough to accommodate about 400 cars is embraced in the second plan.

"I feel reasonably sure that, of the two proposals, the second one will be adopted by the board," Mohr said, "for, in view of all the factors involved, a parking lot on the campus site proper would be more convenient."

English Universities Much Stricter Than American

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—(ACP)—"English universities are more concerned about students' 'nights of residence' than about their 'days of attendance'."

So says Dr. A. McKinley Terhune of the Syracuse University English department, who recently returned from a year in Cambridge, England.

Class attendance is not required, and no records are kept, but rules fixing students' night hours are rigid, he said. Gates of the colleges are closed at 10 p.m., and lodging house doors and windows locked at the same hour.

A central office to dispense information is non-existent in English universities. The only source of information is the university calendar, whose contents have so accumulated through the years as to present a confused mass of data which Dr. Terhune calls "as helpful as an unabridged dictionary."

The English course of study is only three years. The college year is divided into three semesters, each consisting of approximately 10 weeks, known as Michaelmas, Lent, and May semesters.

Students take only one subject, although brilliant students may take two. A student hands in a weekly paper to his tutor, who discusses it with him. Examinations are confined to one at the end of each year, the first two being merely "warm-ups," with the third year's known as the "tripos," being the most difficult and important of all.

In contrast to the American procedure, English universities have jurisdiction solely over academic matters, the "colleges" roughly controlling the social life of the students, he said.

Town ordinances do not apply to students, and the universities maintain their own police systems to deal with lawbreakers, Dr. Terhune mentioned.

"Students must wear caps and gowns at all university appointments, including dinner, and after dark to distinguish them from townspeople," he stated, in pointing out the contrast in formality of dress in English institutions.

When questioned about the place of women in English universities, Dr. Terhune said that their status is inferior to the position occupied by men. Although the amount of work requisite to a degree is the same for both sexes, women's degrees are not so highly credited as men's.

Sadie Hawkins Day Is Scheduled For Richmond Barn Jig

Sadie Hawkins will have her day at the college when the AMS holds its traditional barn dance April 19 at the Alvarado Barn in Richmond.

On that day of days, according to Lyle Shultz, Associated Men Students president, all college women are invited to ask, push, or drag their bashful boy friends over to Alvarado Barn.

This day when all men run for their life from old maids etcetera originated in the comic strip, Lil Abner. Since then, Sadie Hawkins day has been the life saver of social functions.

Admission will be free to all students bearing their own Associated Student cards, Shultz said. Music will be furnished by Eddie Ticoulat and his orchestra. Ticoulat is a student of the college.

Preceding the dance, on the same day at 4 p.m., will be a weenie roast, Shultz added. At the same time facilities for tennis, softball, and other sports will be available.

Old clothes should be donned by all students planning to attend the dance, Shultz advised. "Remember that this is a barn dance. In the past, couples who have come dressed up were sorry for it."

Location of Alvarado Barn is in the hills overlooking Richmond. Students driving cars are to continue nine blocks past the Richmond sign on San Pablo Avenue, then turn right to a fork, then left and follow the road until the barn is reached, Shultz said.

A Cappella Choir Will Travel To Stockton

Participation in a Music Festival at the College of the Pacific in Stockton on May 6, will be one of the A Cappella Choir's major activities, announced Flossita Badger of the music department.

Arrangements for the trip will be made by Robert Dudley, choir manager, Miss Badger revealed.

"All junior colleges in northern California are represented in this annual festival," Miss Badger said. "I feel it very beneficial to hear the work being done in other colleges and to present our own choir."

Among the events scheduled for the festival are selections by all the choirs present, luncheon, dinner, and an evening concert by the College of the Pacific Choir, according to Miss Badger.

"We consider this one of the semester's outstanding musical and social events," Miss Badger added.

Tentative plans are for the college choir to present three selections.

Poster Campaign Begun By Publicity Committee

The recently organized publicity committee, under the chairmanship of Hal Hoffman, has started on its program of publicizing student activities within the college.

Student-made posters announcing current activities are being distributed about the various college locations by members of the committee, Hoffman said. He requested that any student with classes at Samuel Gompers who would be willing to take posters there, get in touch with him, or with Tom O'Neill at Powell Street.

The committee, consisting of Robert Owens, William Williams and Frank Hospodarsky, is allowing publicity to those organizations which present publicity requests several weeks in advance of the event.

High Sophs Sponsor Swim Party; Pomares Reminds It's Leap Year

Hoping to attract more students to their swimming party at the Fairmont Plunge on April 12, high sophomore leaders revealed this week that the swim will feature competitive contests between low frosh and high sophs. Art Pomares, class president, announced that many of these will be stunt races.

An effort to secure Helen Crlenkovich, college mermaid and national diving star, to perform will also be made, said Elmer Hubacher, swim committee chairman. "Furthermore," he added, "we're planning to put on a JOE'S J.C. AQUACADE!" This, he grinned, will be performed by the "village boys."

Tickets for the swim party at 35 cents will be on sale the early part of next week, Pomares revealed. Added Hubacher, "We're going to have a big time."

Another high soph event (a picnic to Muir Woods), which had been canceled because no date on the official social calendar was available, has caused Gene Powell, picnic chairman, to consider an unofficial outing. High sophs who wish to participate in a picnic at Muir Woods are asked to see Powell and help formulate plans.

By THEODORA WONG

When President Roosevelt endorses Farley for president, it's news.

When Mrs. Roosevelt reveals her liking for blue, that's fashion (not spinach).

But when Art Pomares, high soph president, and Gene Powell, president of the Muir Woods Nature Lovers' Union, Local 2468½, put their stamp of approval on Leap Year dating, what is it?

Whatever it be that ails these two, they wish to go down in history as pioneer advocates of Sadie Hawkins dates.

"Girls," sing they to the tune of spring, "here is your chance to show the boys a good time and some appreciation. Now is the time for all good women to take it upon their shoulders to do something for which they have an opportunity but once every four years!"

Finally, this reporter asks them what they have in mind, and answer they with a query: "Why don't the local co-eds date up local boys for the May 1 excursion? Leap Year won't be here again 'til 1944!"

Just publicity hounds . . . and we thought they were telling, from pure goodness of heart, what every young girl should know.

Bids for the dance may be secured at the college bank at Galileo or from any hotel division student at $1.25 per couple.

Chuck Foster and his orchestra will be the highlight of the evening, according to reports from the hotel division society.

Amendments

Rally To Decide On Constitution Change Friday

Four amendments to the Associated Students' Constitution will be voted on by the student body at a special assembly to be held at Galileo at 2:30 p.m. Friday, January 12.

J. Paul Mohr, Registrar of the college has announced that a rally will be called for that hour in order to permit the vote. "Four amendments to the constitution have been passed by the Executive Council, and will therefore be presented to the student body next week for the approval of the students," said Elmer Hubacher, President of the Associated Students.

The four amendments as announced by Hubacher are as follows:

"The President of the Associated Students shall give public notice of his intention to appoint the chairman and members of the Judicial Committee, the Social Committee, and the Welfare Council, at least one week previous to the time the appointments are made."

"Any student desiring to run for office as President of the Associated Students shall be required to have completed Political Science 92 with a grade of "C" or better during or previous to the semester of his candidacy."

"A Welfare Council is hereby installed as extra-curricular activity. The purpose of the Council is to make investigations, conduct drives, or to undertake any duties that concern the welfare of the college; either of their own accord or at the request of the President. The Welfare Council shall be composed of a chairman appointed by the President from the student body at large, of the four class presidents, the president of the Club Advisory Board, the chairman of the Judicial Committee, and four students to be appointed by the President from the student body at large. This committee shall be appointed within the first three weeks of the semester. A secretary shall be elected by the committee."

The fourth amendment will be a proposal to rescind Article V of the By-Laws of the Associated Students. The article in question reads as follows:

Allotment of Funds

1. The Music, Forensic, and Publication departments shall be alloted funds from the Associated Students budget.
2. The Alumni Association of the San Francisco Junior College, shall be eligible to receive funds from the Associated Students.

Twelve Piece Band Featured At Soph Formal Tonight

Blue orchids, dazzling formals, and tuxedos will be the order of the evening when Mr. and Miss San Francisco Junior College will invade the palatial Marine Room of the Aquatic Park Casino for the semi-annual Soph Formal tonight.

Located at the foot of Polk Street, the Casino will echo with the soft music of Gordon Burdge and his twelve piece orchestra supplemented by a feminine vocalist.

Scene Popular

A popular dancing rendezvous and the scene of many University of California dances, Aquatic Park should prove a fine background for the smooth rhythms of Burdge who has played for many of the local Junior Leaguer's dances.

Dancing at the Formal, climax of the local social season, will be from 9 'til 1.

The affair will be dedicated to, and is in honor of the graduating high sophomores.

Attendance Urged

Bill O'Neil, High soph prexy, said, "we know that you will really enjoy the music of Gordon Burdge, and the Formal is the last dance of the semester. We would like to have as many as possible attend. Speaking for both myself and the sophomore committee, we feel that we can promise you a swell time."

Patrons and patronesses for the occasion will be President and Mrs. A. J. Cloud, Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Mohr, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Sullivan, Miss Mary Jane Learned, Miss Margaret Dougherty, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Agosti, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Neill, Mr. Joseph Amori, and the class advisers, Miss Claire Cuneo, and Mr. John B. Ross.

Bids will be on sale today and may be obtained from O'Neil, Wilton Latz, Ray Berns, Elmer Hubacher, Dolores Dixon, Adele Kuhn, Dorothy Trood, Tony Manov, and Louise DeLare, members of the sophomore committee.

NYA Students Asked To See Redford For Time Makeup

All NYA students who have not already done so must contact E. H. Redford, NYA director, before the end of the semester. This must be done whether or not students are returning to school next semester.

"Because of the holidays many students did not get all their hours in during December. If the student wishes these hours may be made up during the ensuing months providing the student does not work more than eight hours a day or fifty hours per month," Redford stated.

Students returning next semester who plan on continuing their NYA work are reminded that they must turn in their new schdule at the beginning of the semester.

Which One Do You Choose?

Harold Hoffmann makes his bid for the presidency backed by his experience as head of the Club Advisory Board for the past two semesters. He has been a member of the executive council for two semesters. Hoffman is a pre-medical major and was president of the Pi Mu Gamma, pre-med society. This is his fourth semester in the college.

As Associated Men Students' Vice-President, Hugh Ryan's capability was proved when he took over the AMS Orientation Week during President Lee Scarlett's absence. He was captain of the junior varsity basketball team for the past two years and was a member of the Men's Athletic Council for two semesters. Ryan was also manager of the soccer team. This is Ryan's fourth semester in the college.

Al Williams is the present chairman of the college judiciary committee, and his past positions include AMS president and yell leader. This semester Williams made an investigation of the honor system and he was also instrumental in forming a Student Welfare Committee. The 149 lb. boxing championship once belonged to Williams. A psychology major, Al Williams is now in his fifth semester at the college.

AMS Completes Year With Bouts; Events Recalled

When the Associated Men Students present the annual pugilistic elimination championships, the male organization will bid finis to a semester packed with activity.

Recalled are such events as the AMS annual Barn Dance, the Halloween spectacle which was regarded a hit by Leland Scarlett, Men Students' prexy and the men students of the college.

The presentation of Father-Son Night, held for the first time, at the Scottish Rite Auditorium three weeks ago, was voiced by Scarlett as "something that the college may be proud of." Attendance at the Father-Son Night banquet at 150 lived up to expectations of the men who took efforts to make it a success.

Joe Amori, AMS adviser, said that much credit should be given to Al Williams, sophomore, for his work in making the banquet successful.

Asked whether the Father-Son Night will be a permanent AMS annual affair, Scarlett remarked that he hoped it would.

"The Men's Club fights, to be staged at the Verdi Club next Tuesday, will probably be packed with 'thrills and spills' as it has been in the past.

"We hope to end the Fall semester with a large fight audience at hand, for there will be no admission to the fights," Scarlett said.

Further information on the fights will be found in the sports section, page three.

Civilian Pilot Program Shows Steady Progress

The Civilian Pilot Training Program seems to be progressing very favorably despite the vast amount of work involved, the lack of precedent in handling such a project and the inexperience of most colleges in aviation matters.

Naturally mistakes have been made. But they are, for the most part, quite excusable in view of the many ramifications of the innovation. The Private Flying Development Division has done an outstanding job, and its record is all the more commendable since it has not had all the cooperation that might have been expected.

One of the most important aspects of this training program is the pilot aptitude research to be conducted under the auspices of the National Research Council. This study is to seek the principles of "Personal airworthiness" comparable to those that have long been established in regard to the airworthiness of aircraft. The flying habits of instructors as well as of students will be investigated, as will the amount of time required for the perfection of various maneuvers. It is expected that a definite increase in the quality of instruction and a much improved safety record will result.

Sophs Discuss Dance

Sophomores complete a busy social week tonight at the semi-annual Sophomore Formal. Week's activities were organized and directed by the committee pictured above, which committee sees its work culminate at the Aquatic Park Casino tonight. Left to right they are Lou Delare, Dorothy Trood, Dolores Dixon, Elmer Hubacher, Adele Kuhn, Wilton Latz, and chairman Bill O'Neil.

Rally To Be Held Next Friday At Galileo; Four Subjects To Be Featured

Scheduled for next Friday, January 12 a huge four part rally will be held in the Galileo Auditorium at 2:30 p.m. according to Registrar J. Paul Mohr, Dean Edwin C. Browne, and Elmer Hubacher, Associated Students' president.

The affair will be a combination Block SF Society Rally, Pre State basketball game rally, Amendment to the Constitution rally, and an introduction of next semester's officers.

The portion of the rally devoted to the Block Society will deal with the presenting of awards to prominent college athletes.

Important changes in the Associated Students' constitution will be submitted and include two amendments, the first designed to introduce a Welfare Council, the second to make the course in Political Science 92, Student Government, a prerequisite to candidacy for the office of Associated Student President instead of the present arrangement wherein student body officers are required to take the course only after having been elected to office.

Five New Courses To Be Inaugurated Into College Curriculum Next Semester

New courses will grace the college's curriculum next semester, according to Mary Jane Learnard of the registrar's office. These new courses are the following:

Biology 11a and 11b for biology 11;

Landscape Architecture 81a and 81b for LA 81 (Floral Shop);

Speech 25 in spring and fall semesters;

Speech 32 and Speech 33, advanced script and radio broadcasting respectively;

History 46b without prerequisite of History 46a;

A remedial course for students who have trouble in mastering foreign languages.

Special Guardsman On Registration Day

Students, as they purchase a Student's Association Card on January 30, will receive a special edition of The Guardsman, according to Bill Frantz, editor of the college paper.

"The edition will contain special news about registration, classes, Orientation Week, and additional information to facilitate registration for new students as well as returning college members," said Frantz.

News of changes during the period of final examinations and latest sport data will also be contained in the issue.

This will mark the first time an edition shall have been published at the time of registration.

It Would Have Been A Swell Rally But . . .

What's a day more or less, unless, of course, it's New Year's.

Some 500 students inspired to take their part in the coming student elections, and another 150 stragglers who aimed to make the Galileo balcony a haven of unrest, gathered last Wednesday to hear the candidates speak their pieces and incidently—but most incidently— to vote for the sophomore sweetheart.

But no. Something slipped. The rally, like the well known little gentleman, simply wasn't there. Schedules, the things colleges live by, showed remarkable disagreement.

The official schedule, however, indicated a rally on Thursday, January 4, all too clearly identified as a Nominations Rally. Calendars, announcements, special editions of The Guardsman, rain that failed to daunt a surprisingly large turnout of students, and not to be forgotten, the candidates, bowed to circumstance.

A rally, bravely bearing the title, Nominations Rally, was held (or so Guardsman reporters were led to believe it would be held) Thursday afternoon—yesterday in the vernacular. Too late for publication were the results of the Sophomore Sweetheart contest. Another day—today, at the Sophomore Formal—students may discover the winner.

Days come, days go, but the college learned Wednesday that some things don't happen unless definite arrangements are concluded well ahead of the time for them to happen.

Hoffman, Ryan, Williams Battle For President; Students Urged To Vote

Hang onto your hats folks, the last act in the great American masterpiece called students politics is about to take place.

In other words today is the day students of the college go to the polls and cast their ballots for the fellow or girl who gave them the glad hand most.

At the Powell Street building voting will be carried on by means of voting machines placed in the mezzanine floor near the checkroom. The polls will open at 9 a.m. and close at 1 p.m.

At Galileo machines will be in Room 150. The polls will be open from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Voting at Girls High and 58 Sutter will be carried on by means of paper ballots.

Aspirants to the office of President of Associated Students are Harold Hoffman, retiring president of the Club Advisory Board, Al Williams, head of the college judicial committee and originator of the proposed Welfare Council, and Hugh Ryan, present vice-president of the AMS.

Lee Scarlett, regarded as a sure candidate earlier in the semester, revealed that he would not seek the presidential office because of the pressure of his work with the Hotel Division next semester.

Other candidates for political office are as follows:

Vice-president, Muriel Grenelle, present secretary of the Associated Students, and Muriel Nolan, head of the AWS.

Secretary, Florence Hansen running unopposed.

President of the AMS, Lyle Schultz, prominent student leader, and Robert Owens, secretary of the AMS.

There is no candidate for the office of vice president of the AMS.

Secretary of the AMS, Harold Unterberger running unopposed.

President of the AWS, Marion MacKillop, Guardsman staff artist and present vice-president of the women's organization, and Gloria Miller, head of the Women's Service Society.

Vice-president of the AWS, Jean Chesley, and Jean Arnold.

Secretary of the AWS, Dorothy Mills running unopposed.

Ray Berns, yell leader is running again for the same post he has so adequately filled this semester.

There they are. The students voted most likely to succeed in the grand old game of politics, otherwise known as back-slappers deluxe.

One thing the college can be thankful for and rather proud of is that in contrast to state, city or national elections, there was no mudslinging during the recent campaign.

The light of ingenuity shines proudly above all others when the campaigns of the various candidates are glanced at. It can never be said that the students of this college were behind the door when ideas for making people sit up and take notice were handed out.

Whoever wins the election, it is safe to say that the actual victors were the students of the college who were literally bathed in a shower of gum, cigars, nail polish, etc.

In an address to all voters Elmer Hubacher, president of the Associated Students said, "We feel that it is the job of every student holding a student card to turn out and give his support to the most qualified candidate. I should also like to caution all students to bring their cards with them Friday as no one will be allowed to vote unless he has an Associated Students' card."

Dean Edwin C. Browne recently said in reference to today's elections, "I sincerely urge that every student cast a vote for every office. The prevalent practice among colleges is a small total vote in comparison with the registration. While this is to be regretted, all students are asked to exercise the time honored privilege of voting for the persons of their choice and urging their friends to vote."

Varsity Basketball Team Faces S.F. State In Opener At Kezar Tonight

By RAY BERNS

Old Man Misfortune has thrust his pesty head once again into the realm of local athletics.

Ramdom has again been visited by that demon old man in the form of ineligibility, sickness, and work on Coach "Dutch" Conlan's varsity basketball squad.

Team Crippled

And so it is that the local aggregation will go into tonight's and tomorrow night's crucial hoop contests with San Francisco State minus two of their first seven men.

Prepare to shed a tear or two as we list those that will be unable to cavort on the hardwood for the locals: Sid Kevich, classy forward, has been stricken with appendicitis, while Mario Salcone, sharpshooting little guard, has been forced to quit the squad because of work. Although Joe Johns, guard, and "Red" Kerwin, forward, are ineligible, they will be used because it is a non-conference game.

Conlan will be forced to open tonight's game with a makeshift lineup reading something like this: Clary Richards and Tommy McCarthy at forwards, with Bob Stayner at the pivot position, and "Red" Cassidy and Bill Minus at guards.

While not usually given to crying, we are afraid that we shall be forced to the towel after the two contests with State.

State Wins

Both outfits, State and the Rams, have played one mutual opponent, the New Domestic Laundry team. State drubbed the Washboys, 54 to 32, while the locals lost to New Domestic, 34 to 32. And the horrible aspect of the whole situation is the fact that all of the aforementioned players who are out for the State games played against the Laundry squad.

With all the crying that has been done so far, one would think he must look for a lop-sided score in favor of State. These contests with State, however, are traditional battles, and, in a game with the Gators, anything can happen.

High School Seniors Will Attend College Council Vocational Program

"Career Opportunities Through the Junior College," is the unusual program to be presented by the San Francisco Junior College Council on Wednesday evening, January 10, at the Central YMCA auditorium, 220 Golden Gate Avenue at 8:15 p.m. It is a program designed for mass vocational guidance of high school seniors and their parents.

Five outstanding instructors of the college will analyze various career opportunities, pointing out qualities needed for each and explaining principles that should guide selection of careers in different fields. Then they will discuss the various departments of the college, showing what results may be expected from each. All January and June high school graduates and their parents are invited to attend.

If students here have a brother or sister that is a high school senior, Claude A. Shull, president of the San Francisco Junior College Council, asks:

"Will you please pass this word on to the folks at home, and ask them to set aside Wednesday evening, for this purpose?"

Whether or not the high school senior plans to attend San Francisco Junior College next semester this meeting will help him choose and prepare for his career, Shull believes.

Dr. F. Grant Marsh, head of the business department, will cover the field of business; J. Graham Sullivan the hotel field; Louis Conlan, police and civil service; Lloyd Luckmann, courses leading to the university upper division, and John Ross, survey courses leading to terminal work. Also opportunities in the fields of music and art will be discussed.

The Junior College A Capella Choir will sing and President Cloud will give the latest information concerning the new college building now being built in Balboa Park and the modern educational facilities to be offered.

The Junior College Council was organized several semesters ago by faculty and students for the purpose of sponsoring the interests of the college within the community.

Guardsman Staff Joins In Tribute As Assistant Editor Isadore Maloff Vacates Post With Graduation

WE bid a fond farewell to the shy, lanky, dark-haired Isadore Maloff, who has served as Assistant Editor and Feature Editor on The Guardsman during the graduating columnist's two of the finest humorists the college has known. His Shots At RAMdom contained material better than that in some magazines.

Maloff's rise to literary power reads somewhat like a correspondence school advertisement. His compositions have improved in the two short years he has been in the college from his English teacher's nightmare to the best in The Guardsman.

It is the privilege now of the graduating columnist to write the last editorial of the semester. It is also the privilege of the graduating columnist to write all and anything he wishes in his last column. That is, provided he keeps within the bounds of decency.

The Guardsman staff joins with the students of the college to wish Isadore Maloff the best of everything in the cold, cruel, hard workaday world he describes in his final column.

Graduating Class Reviews Happy Days In Retrospect; Foresees Brilliant Future In Store For College

IN a few short weeks some 75 students will receive their final degrees toward graduation from this college. Some, of this group, will go out into the business world; some will continue their vocations at higher institutions; others will go into specialized fields.

Most of the friendships, sacred traditions, and mutual tastes, that each of these students has built up in these two short years are soon to be shattered. All of these to be broken by a simple graduation ceremony.

Though each individual member of the graduating class will go out on his own road to success; roads which may eventually become widely separated; all have some mutual bond that will hold them closely knit together no matter how widely physically apart.

Each of these graduates can proudly say that he was a graduate of this college while it was just emerging from its pioneering stage. It helped to mould the traditions and the traditions which in future years shall be even more stable, still better established.

In writing this as a member of the graduating class, we feel confident that we are expressing the views of the entire group when we say that our stay here has been most pleasant. After two years the things for which this institution stands, finds a cherished place in the heart that no graduation ceremony can tear from its lodging.

The turnover of students at this college is exceptionally large. But as one student drops out another enrolls. As one class graduates, a new group comes in. Those who shall take on from here may soon forget us. They shall be absorbed in building a still sounder foundation; but those who leave here now feel a tremendous loss at what is being left behind. That loss can be satisfied only by the realization of the great good that has come to them from their associations here and by the pleasant memories of the college that was.

As the curtains are about to close forever on our stay here, we see a new and brighter horizon opening for the college at its new setting in Balboa Park.

InTROODings . . .

By Dot

WE trust that everyone had an excellent time during the last few days, but at least one-fourth of the college lads and lassies worked either in a department store or for Uncle Sam and Mr. Farley.

"Gee, I sure was tired the first few nights when I came home from work, and some of the customers, wow, spch demands," remarked one of these hard-working lassies. "I think the nastiest customer is the young man buying something for the young lady and he lets the salesperson do all the thinking, finding and finally saying he'd like one herself." All this type needs is a gentle shove and he'll start buying right and left."

Then of course there is the scholarly type of gentleman who comes in and knows what he wants and won't take a substitute if he can't get what he's after. One gentleman in particular stands out in this young salesperson's memories of working. A big, shuddering man with a business came striding up to me one morning and said in the loudest imaginable voice, "I'd like to see some cook books," yes sir, replies the young lady, here they are. "Well, I'll take the Boston Cook book, no wait a minute, I'll take two of them, ought to get some good food from now on don't you think?"

Well, now these types are not very rare but again they are. And there is the woman that is buying books for the children next door and she doesn't want to spend more than fifty cents on each book but wants something with a good cover, easy print to read, and something of a new book. After going through the pile of books on the fifty cent table, she finally decides to take the one on top, no matter if the salesperson has used the best methods of salesmanship on her, it just doesn't seem to take.

"What? You still have something more to tell us," we politely asked the young lady. "Oh, my yes, I haven't told you about the motherly type who is so sweet and wants to know if we get very tired. You know the type—they tell you at 5 o'clock at night that you look as fresh as a daisy, and you feel like sinking through the floor." Well we did'nt want to hear any more, so we wandered on to other parts of town where other industrious people were wrapping packages quicker than a flash of the eye.

And then we remember the afternoon we went to buy Dad a present and the salesman tried to sell us everything in the house, cuff links to silk lounging robes. It was easy to get out of buying everything because it was a young man of, the college giving the best salesmanship talk ever heard. Ah, me, and wasted on the likes of some people. Of course one can't forget those that slept till noon and then went out and saw the gang or played tennis, or went ice skating and just forgot all about philosophy, and the romance languages.

Cabbages & Kings

By Blue Pencil Bill

THE LAST great flurry of student activity for the semester finds the various and sundry politicians digging up newer and phonier methods of getting votes. Chief examples are Hal Hoffman and Lyle Schultz. Hal announces himself as "Stable Head" on the samples of chewing gum he distributes while Lyle put on a direct mail campaign any advertising man would be proud of.

HOFFMAN'S ANNOUNCEMENT featuring himself as "Stable Head" has it's humble beginning in this equally humble column when we quoted Dean Browne's comment, "The Club Advisory Board is now under a stable head." The Dean meant Hoffman who had been elected president of the CAB.

Why Schultz put on the campaign we couldn't figure out—unless it might be that he wants to beat little Bobby Owens for AMS president.

THE FOLLOWING might have happened. At least that's what Jack Bruton of the USF Foghorn leads us to believe.

The street car was crowded and a young man stood where an attractive girl was seated. From time to time he stared at her out of the corner of his eye. She looked up and caught him after a while. He turned a deep scarlet, coughed, and said apologetically. "Pardon me, but you look like Helen Brown."

She gazed at him and answered sadly, "Yes, I know—but I look worse in white."

HAPPY THOUGHT of the day: It is leap year but we predict that there will be few "fifty-fifty" dates—the fellows will continue to foot the entire bill as usual.

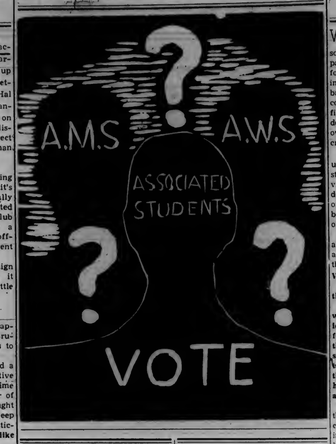
When she asks you out this year, be discreet. Ask her who's going to pay—but bring your mad money just in case.

While we're on this line of thought we might suggest one of the social events this semester be a Sadie Hawkins affair. How original, Bill!

IN ORDER that we keep peace within the college we are going to mention those politicos who are not depending on fancy campaign stunts to win the election for them. They are basketballer Hughie Ryan of the AMS and Al Williams. 149 pound boxer who led yells, headed the AMS and chairmanned the Judiciary Committee.

Then there are the beautiful blonde twins running for vice president, Grenelle and Nolan. We don't have to mention Flo Hansen's name because she is running for secretary unopposed and she is our friend anyway. We don't have to mention Ray Berns for the same reason and furthermore his work as yell leader this semester speaks for itself.

Now let's see—whom did we leave out? Marion MacKillop and Gloria Antonicelli and Harold Unterberger and so forth. Please note that all names for competing positions are in alphabetical order.



LOOKING AT the roster of basketball players we find none of the familiar names that graced our former teams. All the characters have graduated or dropped out. The only old timer left is Willie Blackfield—and he's ineligible. O woe! O misery!

A PROFESSOR at a southern university has figured out that every time a college student cuts class, it costs him (the student) approximately $1.20.

Hm! If that's the case, then we're making $22.10 by merely going to school. And a 17-hour week at that! Not so bad for a single man, eh wot?

FOREIGN

Military experts last week believed that the first large scale battle of the Russo-Finnish war was about to take place.

Russian veteran troops are being massed along the vital Leningrad-Vilpuri railroad where active fighting is still in progress.

Is is of course difficult to attempt to analyze the outcome of a pending battle many miles away in a foreign land. We are inclined to believe that the pendulum of victory which has swung heavily toward the Finns during the past few weeks, will reverse itself this time.

Reason for this supposition is that the Russian troops who will be engaged in the battle are all veteran soldiers, not raw recruits. Then again, the overwhelming odds in men and the added force of bombing planes may turn the tide. It should also be noted that the Russians are this time fighting on their own soil, certainly unopposed and the is our friend anyway. We don't have to mention Ray Berns for the same reason and furthermore his work as yell leader this semester speaks for itself.

Now let's see—whom did we leave out? Marion MacKillop and Gloria Antonicelli and Harold Unterberger and so forth. Please note that all names for competing positions are in alphabetical order.

The . . . Spectator

By JANET FELLOWS

There is an abundance of comedy at the Curran these first two weeks of the year, where the theater's outstanding actress, Katharine Cornell, is starring as Linda Esterbrush in No Time For Comedy. Miss Cornell's superb performance does not overshadow that of her leading man, Francis Lederer, who is acclaimed by no less than the late Czechoslovakia, Berlin, Broadway, and Hollywood, and who is magnificent as the moody playwright, Gaj Esterbrush. No Time For Comedy is a chapter out of the hectic between-plays life of the stisti and clever actress Linda Esterbruch, and her tempestous and temperamental husband, Gaj.

Gaj, seeking inspiration from the beautiful and intellectual Amanda Smith, nearly breaks up his marriage, but is saved by his tranquilly tolerant wife, just in time.

Wife Amanda and Gaj are carrying on their profoundly intellectual rendezvous, Amanda's husband, Philo, the monotonously methodical banker, falls in love with Linda to such a degree that he not only becomes impulsive for the first time in his dreary life, but he also abandons his infallible routine for her. John Williams leaves nothing undone in his performance of the respectful (?) banker, nor does Margalo Gillmore fail to present an excellent characterization of the aesthetic and intellectual Mrs. Smith who loves to bring out the "latent talents" of interesting young men.

Gee Gee James, as the Esterbruch's colored maid, dominates nearly stole the limelight from the rest of the cast, however. She executed her part perfectly, with ease and fluency that her numerous lines were always greeted with long and hilarious laughter—only the actions of Lederer seemed possibly to parallel the comedy of Gee Gee.

The versatile Miss Cornell, who three years ago stirred San Francisco audiences with her dramatic performance of Saint Joan, has returned to wipe away the poignant tears her 1937 production left and replace them with unforgettable laughter in 1940.

There is not a single flaw in this latest Cornell production. S. N. Behrman has produced a clever play with charmingly witty, yet subtly thought-provoking dialogue, and then he has added to this some boldly risque lines which have all added up to a merry play that will suit any mood. Because the dialogue is clever and humorous it is impossible to describe the play, but it is easy to guarantee that everyone who sees No Time For Comedy will come away with a smiling face, still laughing at the funny quips yet pondering a little about life as it is today, in this war-torn world.

The splendid direction of No Time for Comedy is by Guthrie McClintic —one of Broadway's finest directors and the expressive settings are by Jo Mei Mielziner. The other character in the cast is Tom Helmore, as Makepeace Lovell, who does very well as the "small-talk" play-boy friend of Linda. The color and style of the costumes personified the characters who wore them and carried out the mood of the scene. No Time for Comedy is

. . . By Isadore Maloff

WITH a tear in our eye, a sob in our throat, and a hole in our sock, we take pen in hand and prepare to turn out this, our last column for the SFJC Guardsman. We're finding it rather difficult to realize that barring any conditions beyond our control such as flunking a couple of finals or suddenly meeting with our demise we shall soon be out on our own to cope with the problems of a cruel, hard, work-a-day world.

Because the editor has forbidden us to reminisce on our prolonged stay here or to bid fond farewells via the columns of the paper we have decided to answer the many requests of students who in past weeks have beseeched us to disclose the secrets of column writing.

Sometimes writing a column can be a most pleasant pastime like changing a flat tire in the rain or like ringing the neck of a consumptive pullet.

WRECKING A NECK.

That last simile brings up a point that may be of interest.

We don't know if you've ever wrung the neck of a consumptive pullet but we assure you it's really great fun and quite simple to execute. Although systems of approach vary in some cases, we always perform this trick by closing our right hand over the diseased pullet's head, lifting the bird into the air, and then twirling in a circular motion like cranking a car.

With the neck acting as the axis, the body goes around in a beautiful circle while the head remains intact in our hand. All of which proves some kind of law we once learned in high school physics but have since forgotten. Because few farms can boast electric fans, this form of amusement is especially appropriate on hot days, as the revolving body creates a cooling breeze. The more revolutions per second the body completes, the more gratifying and odorous the breeze.

When sufficiently cooled, we fling the dead hen away, watch it's muscular reactions for a moment, and then casually walk up to the farmhouse where our Aunt Agatha is usually engaged in baking corn meal muffins.

Mooching a hot muffin from her and a good book such as "Raising Chickens For Profit" from our Uncle Ulysses' book shelf, we then skip down to the alfalfa fields to lie in a pile of newly-mown alfalfa and muse on the vagaries of life.

Try it the neckst time you're down on the farm. (And we don't mean Stanford. The boys and girls down there are already well versed in the art of necking.)

But to get back to our original subject. You can see by the forgoing analogy that column writing is sometimes pleasant but at other times is repulsing as stepping on a live snake or disposing of a mouse once you've caught it in a trap. Especially if the spring is new that the catch eats its way half through the mangy mouse's body.

Whether or not a journalist's task as column writer will be pleasant depends on three things. Said factors being (1) kind of column he writes, (2) kind of topics which he deals with and if he has something better to do at the time of writing.

REVEALS ALL!

At the risk of being the recipient of physical mayhem we are going to disclose how some of our colleagues go about writing their columns. Take a column like Kenard Grossman's "Wild Thinking" for instance.

Twice a week through the courtesy of the Emerson Radio Corporation with models as low as $21.40 plus any city or state tax, Mr. Grossman listens to Elliot Roosevelt's inspiring talks via the airlines. Once a week he parts with two-bits to gather in the latest news at Ellis Levy's Newsreel Theatre with selected shorts. With said impressions in mind, it is a comparatively simple matter to type out his views of the world on parade.

Or consider Juliette Bellows' "Spectacled Spectator" column. Juliette has only to go up to the manager of any big theatre in town and pipe up in that delightfully succulent voice of hers, "I'M Juliette Bellows, drama reviewer for the Guardsman", and right away the manager bows from the waist and invites her in. Just like that. As Miss Bellows eats her corn on the cob at a nearby restaurant after the show and ponders on what to write about this particular film she perhaps glances down at the piping hot corn reposing in the plate or unconsciously scratches the corn on the little toe of her left foot, and lo! comes it inspiration. The show, Miss Bellows' weekly column will reveal, was corny. Just like that.

MISS CLUDE INCLUDED

Then there is a column like Hotty Cludey's, "InCLUDEings" which includes all the latest dope on self-analysis and how to tell whether romantically you're as hot as a frying pan handle or cold as your dog Rover's nose in the wintertime. For her information Miss Clude makes good use of her own experience and also utilizes the pointers she gets from meeting The Right Kind Of People. Ain't it the 7rood (th), Miss Clude?

Unlike these columnists we can rely on no such sources for our material. Our stuff comes partly from our own noggin, partly from such assorted magazines as "Ballyhoo", "1001 Jokes" and "Eye Opener", and partly from the boys at the gas station across the street who can always be relied upon if other methods fail.

To give you an idea of the type of joke we pick up at gas stations, we've bothered to forward this typical one:

Question: What did the drunken cigarette say to the bartender??

Answer: Shay, put me out before I make an ash of myself.

GETTING INSPIRED

Armed with such sure-fire laugh getters we buy a couple of cokes to cokes the jokes from our memory (or paper (get it?), sit ourselves at our typewriter, tune the radio to a station that plays recordings like Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and Verdi's "Aida", and then proceed to go into our super stupor.

As we gaze at the wall directly in front of us, the wallpaper seems to take on strange and fascinating designs. Indeed by squinting through the bottle we are creating with the tablespoon from which we've just consumed our daily dose of cod-liver oil, we can actually see the little man who wasn't there and all sorts of shapes and figures like Ann Southern and Dorothy Lamour.

Suddenly we become aware that our mother is shaking us gently by the shoulder and saying, "Sonny, you've fallen asleep at your work." Our mother always calls us "Sonny." She's quite affectionate.

So we mutter, "To h— with the d— assignment. We'll write it at school tomorrow."

COLUMN IN PRINT

Whoever said that tomorrow never comes ought to be shot. He's all wrong. We know. When the editor stands over us and bellows, "Where's your copy?", we know that tomorrow definitely has come. As it slowly dawns upon the editor that we haven't as yet written our column he flys into a rage, (we have the only editor who can fly), drags us to a typewriter and leers over us, while we type out the first thing that comes into our mind but never what we had been planning to write all week. And that's the way our column usually appears in the paper. . . Devoid of everything he had originally intended for it.

What's that? You'd still like to be a columnist? Why, you poor nut. Better you should want to be President.

But if you're desperate and out of work don't let us discourage you. Remember the words of the immorial sage Confucius, "Tis better to be hot columnist than shot Communist."

RAM'S ...HORN

Editor, The Guardsman:

Will someone kindly tell me the reason that we must be tortured throughout the Christmas vacation with the thought of finals?

Why couldn't things have been left as they were? Finish school in December and then we would have had the Holidays to relax and think of the semester as a good job well done, or a good job badly done, or a bad job badly done, or maybe not think of it at all.

Now don't get me wrong, I like

Ram Hoopmen To Collide With Staters In Ancient Rivalry

With the clinic series at the Modesto tourney still hanging fire, Coach Dutch Conlan's Ram casaba artists are looking forward to the beginning of the regular season's long, tough grind.

The young Red team, inexperienced and jittery, but hard-fighting in its practice games, meets its first regular opponent on January 8. The game will be played at Berkeley, against the University of California second team, Little-i.

hope is held in local sporting circles for a Ram victory in this match, but the evening is expected to furnish valuable playing experience for Conlan's warriors.

Traditional Battles

Next in line on the schedule—and by far the most important to the Rams—is the series against San Francisco State, on January 11 and 12. Both games will be played at Kezar.

Having played since early December, the Staters will be backed in these forthcoming contests by a considerable edge in experience over the Reds, who are expected to be in the underdog spot in both tilts.

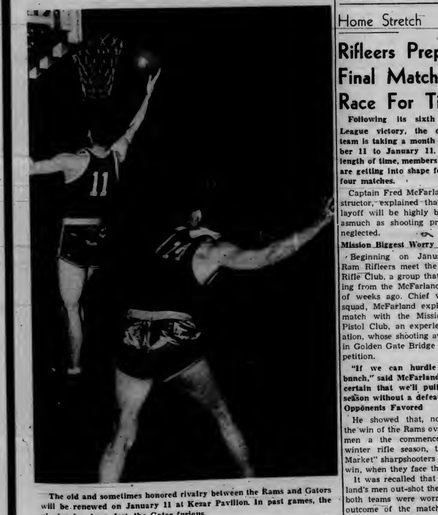
An impressive record was also piled up by Dan Farmer's hoopmen in the southern "clinic" in which the Gators participated. While dropping a couple of the twenty-minute games, the boys from the fog belt showed well, with such stars in their lineup as Lounsbury, Collingwood, and Kerwin—all of them former Ram players.

These men will all see action against the locals on the 11th and 12th, and are expected to figure prominently in the State offensive.

The State-Ram games bring to mind the friction of last year, when, in order to save the first stringers for conference games, the Ram coaching staff played the entire game with the second team. A hot discussion was the result, followed by recriminations and a demand by the State newspaper that athletic relations be severed between the two colleges.

In the end, the troubles blew over, and Ram-Gator relations are now as placid as ever.

Advance publicity hails this season's Gator outfit as the most potent in the school's history, and talks an irresistible scoring attack.



Still Battling

Following the traditional battles, the Rams engage the Athens Club—an aggregation of former college stars —on January 16.

A game with the Italian Athletic Club is tentatively set for the 19th, but there is no certainty that it will come off.

And, to round out the first month of 1940, Menlo and Salinas play hosts to the Rams on January 26 and 27, respectively, in the first conference games.

Right In The Old Buck-Buck-Bucket!

The old and sometimes honored rivalry between the Rams and Gators will be renewed on January 11 at Kezar Pavilion. In past games, the playing has been fast, the Gator furious.

Caught in the act in the above photo, is a precocious Stater tanking two points.

And next Thursday and Friday, the Gators are planning on tanking the Rams. The odds are all in favor of their doing so.

Ski Club Trip Fails Because Of Rain

As a dismal ending to an otherwise successful semester, the Ski Club's snow trip was rained under in the holiday deluges.

The expected and hoped-for Christmas snow refused to fall. Instead, Lake Tahoe, Norden, and the surrounding vicinity received snow-melting rains. However, some enthusiastic members did take a chance on going up to the Sierra Club at Norden and did get some skiing done before the rain of Thursday, December 28.

These members were Ray Berns, who skiied on the summit of Mount Rose near Lake Tahoe; Stanley Ward, who did a bit of snow flying on the slopes of the hills surrounding Tahoe; Helen Van Fossen; Alden Smith, club advisor; and Bob Ogg, president of the group.

Enjoyable Time

The group, with their guests, used four cars to make the trip. They all stayed at the Sierra Club and had a "highly enjoyable time in the clean, invigorating mountain air" according to Ogg. Members heard from Miss Pinky Smith, U.C. student-skiier, and Bill Klein, a ranking Pacific Coast champion, on the practical side of using the wooden wings. Everyone enjoyed ice skating at the skating bowl of the luxurious Sugar Bowl Lodge at Norden.

"On the whole," said Ogg, "everyone enjoyed themselves. We are

AT THE SOUND OF THE BELL

It's AMS Fight Time again, and, in keeping with the spirit of the occasion, The Guardsman Sports presents, above, a series of selected action shots taken at past performances of the semi-annual saturnalia.

The pictures themselves are self-explanatory. They illustrate the color (see Amori's zebra shirt), the variety (see impromptu rassling bout in upper right), and yokel atmosphere (see haymaker at lower right) which are always part of the fights.

Next Tuesday, January 9, the collegiate pugilists are at it once more, offering a bigger and better show than ever.

The AMS Fights have always given the students the best: everything from thrills to bloody noses, thrills to concussions.

So don't take a chance of missing out on your share.

Rifleers Prep For Final Matches In Race For Title

Following its sixth consecutive League victory, the college Rifle team is taking a month rest, December 11 to January 11. During this length of time, members of the squad are getting into shape for their final four matches.

Captain Fred McFarland, team leading scorer, would like the month-long layoff will be highly beneficial, inasmuch as shooting practice is not neglected.

Sunday Bigzess Events

Beginning on January 11, the Ram Rifleers meet the Independent Rifle Club, a group that took a lickin' from the McFarlanites a couple of weeks ago. Chief worry of the squad, McFarland explained, is the match with the Mission Rifle and Pistol Club, a powder-puff aggregation, whose shooting average is tops in Golden Gate Bridge League Competition.

"If we can hurdle the Mission bunch," said McFarland, "I'm almost certain that we'll pull through the season without a defeat."

Opponents Favored

He showed that, notwithstanding the win of the Rams over the Mission Reds at the commencement of the winter rifle season, the "South of Market" sharpshooters are favored to win, when they face the locals.

It was recalled that when McFarland's men out-shot the Mission Club, both teams were worried. The final outcome of the match showed that the Rams won by a mere point.

The Last Two

Shooting their second match during the period of final exams, McFarland's men will meet the American Legion Post 429 on January 24. Termination of League competition will occur on the first day of February when the Rams and the 159th Infantry tangle.

Last Tuesday McFarland sent entrants to the University of California for the purpose of participating in the National Shoulder to Shoulder Team Championship to be held on March 30, 1940.

Schedule:

Rams vs. Independent Rifle Club—January 11, at California Hall; Mission Club vs. Rams—January 18, at Galileo high school Armory; Rams vs. Post 429—January 24, at Lowell high school; 159th Infantry vs. Rams —February 1, at Galileo High School Armory.

Leather Carnival At Verdi Club January 9; Amori Masterminds

Champions will perform next Tuesday night in the college's Hit Parade, the semi-annual AMS fights. The Verdi Club, scene of last semester's massacres, will once again be the locale of the battles.

Joe Amori, Men's Club mentor, has lined up a special bout for the enjoyment of the spectators, in the form of a fight between a couple of flyweights. The names are to be announced, and will come as a surprise.

In addition, Amori said that an exhibition might be had between Bob Peacock and some unselected opponent. Chicazola is a Golden Gloves champion and a college football player.

Ex-Champs Enter

Former college glove champions will be seen in action, when Al Larson, Jack Weicker, and Bob Raine, 149, 159, and 169 pound champs and ex-champs go into the ring in their efforts to add to their laurels.

Opposing these men will be the pick of the battlers from Joe Amori's and Jack Gaddy's classes of instruction. Gaddy is the manly art. Amori's boys will be in the higher weights, and are well trained in this sport. Jack Gaddy is sending in one or two of his boys who he can be fairly sure will give good account of themselves.

Tuesday Or Never!

Amori asked that all those students of the college who are invited to participate see him before Tuesday, so that matches could be figured.

A further announcement by Amori concerned spectators: "This event should not be missed by anyone who can possibly make it. That goes for women too. The presence of a packed crowd will make these fights far more exciting, and who wouldn't fight better with the campus beauties watching him.

Boys Will Be Fed

As a further incentive to enter the fights, Amori said that participants would be given a feed at some restaurant, and as an added attraction for the spectator, refreshments of some sort would be served.

"All in all, we expect a big evening," concluded Amori. "All the AMS officers are working hard to make this a success. I don't see how they can fail."

Wilson's "Pink' Casabans Divide Pair; Meet State Goofs Next Week

Playing fair basketball as the hell-days came to an end, Coach Tom Wilson's Junior Varsity Basketballers managed to split even in two interesting battles.

They gave the Napa high school varsity a sound shellacking to the tune of 34 to 23. It seemed that all men on the Ram squad did everything right. Passing, dribbling, underhand shots, feinting, speed—it all worked smoothly and brilliantly.

Backjaugh! High Man

Joe Backjaugh, tricky forward, led his Junior Varsity team with ten points. The Junior Varsity B team eked out a win from the Napa lightweights in a thrilling preliminary tilt, 15 to 14. Highpointer was Al Rosenberg, local hoopster, who tanked 5 digits.

Defeat came to the college lightweights last Wednesday when a stubborn 130 pound unit struggled through a 16 to 12 victory in a game that was slow and insipid.

Two men were tied for high-point honors which incidently was only 4 digits apiece. Credited for tanking two field goals were Mike Spillane of Poly and Francis Cristman, college sophomore.

Ball handling by both teams was smooth but attempted shots were far and few. Not only that, but no one seemed to have an "eye" in the fray as the score proves.

Coming Up!

First league tilt will be played by the J.V'ers when they travel to Manlnes soon with their big brothers, the Conlan men, to play the preliminary. Opponent will be the Alhambra Athletic Club.

Next Thursday and Friday, Wilson will send his men against the San Francisco State J.V. squad.

Selected to start against the Gaters are the following: Charles Martin, guard; Russell Grote, guard; Bobby Owen, center; Eddie Backjaugh, forward; and Hugh Ryan, forward.

State Offensive Experienced

It was learned that in practice, the Statesmen have proven quite effective in their offensive tactics. They are composed of a group of men who have all had previous experience.

Wilson stated that he would be highly pleased if his men can make an even break out of the double-header.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Start the New Year right, we always says, so—on into 1940 with, first, a rousing cheer for ex-prexy Luellie Jacke, and her co-officers, Marjorie Radke, Dorothy Nelson, and Helen Godman, who put the WAA on a streamlined basis last semester and ably carried it through to a smashingly successful finale. Orchids too, to Bertha Mae Keller who became the new college WAA adviser and learned the ropes with a minimum of time and a maximum of gruilfying results.

And now as the new year beams on the world, we beam too—on a staff of new officers chosen to carry on the work of providing extra-curricular activities for the women of the college (athletically inclined). To incoming Spring WAA leaders, Thurza Snell; president, Alma Koopman, vice-president; Dorothy Nelson, re-elected secretary, and Dorothy Behrman, treasurer; goes our New Year wish (rather late, but the idea is good) for "smooth sailing" and an ever-increasing WAA membership. Enough of that.

FALL '39 IN REVIEW

Before we start the 1940 column WAAambling (clever, no?) why not review last semester's WAA activities—as a tribute to the outgoing officers and an incentive to the incoming leaders. (Or is it just because we like to see what we've written?) Anyway, Fall '39 in retrospect—

September—Vera Spencer, former WAA adviser and gym instructor married during the summer and left her advisorial position open. Bertha Keller, college gym instructor took over WAA managership.

Ice-skating is offered for the first time as a fall sport . . . WAA handbooks, covering every phase of the women's athletic association are offered for the first time . . . (quite a few "firsts" here) . . . Fort Mason lost the sound of thundering feet when college Robin Hoods retreated to the Palace of Fine Arts for instruction in archery (and it wasn't because of California's sunny skies—much) . . . Helen Crienkovich performed at the WAA initiation ceremonies, which, incidentally, was the first deviation from WAA tradition, being held in the evening at the YWCA pool, followed by dinner . . . fall officers were installed and new members initiated . . . sports signups closed with a larger enrollment than ever before . . . after much fussing and many delays fall sports finally got under way . . . volleyball, tennis, badminton and rifle predominant . . . ice-skating acquired an ever-growing popularity, skaters made plans for an ice-breaker . . . fencing and archery classes were slower than usual in getting started . . . 181 students (count 'em) were enrolled in WAA, men and women alike, by September 22, which is pretty much all right, don't you think? . . . elections for club managers began . . . Maxine Turner (in case you don't know, she's a drum-majorette) performed at the splash party . . . ice-skaters held their ice-breaker (no comments, puh-leeze) . . . and that takes care of September.

TWO FOR THE SHOW

October—and we find the WAA off to a flying start—no less. The occasion was the beginning of intercollegiate playdays, and as we look back, we find that the local women athletes were way up there in front when it came to winning in competitions. The first contest was an archery and tennis meet in which nine colleges competed. It might be added that it was also the first intersectional meet this college has held.

Women marksmen applied for admission into the San Francisco Rifle Association—whatever came of that, anyway?

Hockey players staged two play-days with San Francisco State, Folk dancers went down to the Russian Dance Hall for instructions, and volleyball players separated into two teams named (we still can't get over those names) the Volleyteers and the Smackeroos. All in all, October saw quite a bit of action.

THREE TO GET READY

November—now the WAA is in full swing . . . already we see groups here and there with their heads together planning for you guess what—Tourney Week, of course! . . . a novice tourney for putters was initiated in the golf class . . . council members went by a bicycle ride, quite a long one, too, we've heard . . . Freshmen women, at this point, were pointed out to have an unusual athletic ability and great spirit . . . tennis and archery were postponed in favor of a hotcrage show at the PFA . . . college riders burst into print with the news that they were rarin' to go for Tourney Week . . . ice-skating still held the lead as the college's most popular sport . . . a date bureau came into being for Table Tennisers without partners . . . basketball practice was tentatively scheduled for Mondays and Fridays . . . a new office was formed—that of yell-leader, with Priscilla Finely doing the honors . . . the new office resulted in the necessity for a new constitution which was drawn up and recently adopted . . . Helen Crienkovich crashed the Olympic Club pool . . . surprise of the semester was sprung about this time when the announcement came that the semi-annual Tourney Week banquet, usually held in the Galileo cafeteria would be changed into a mother-daughter affair to take place at a downtown restaurant . . . Tourney Week, a short time off, was rapidly taking shape . . . ice-skaters made plans for a big show to be held during Tourney Week . . . ice-skaters had their show . . . first basketball playday for the season came December 1. Which brings us to . . .

December—and the grand finale . . . another "first"—the issuing of Handbooks before the end of the semester so that potential sportsters might line up a pleasing array of extra-curriculus . . . WAA invited Santa Rosa to compete in the ice-skating contests against the locals . . . Tourney Week arrived! . . . emphasis this year rested upon "oomph" (or so the paper claimed) Tourney Week as a whole was a great success . . . 111 mothers and daughters attended the Tourney Week banquet topping other years' most successful banquets by a large number . . . Blazers, the highest award a woman athlete may get at the college, were awarded ex-prexy Luellie Jacke, new president Thurza Scott, vice president Alma Koopman, and secretary Dorothy Nelson.

It was a successful year, yes; a very successful year. Amen.

RAMS AT MODESTO

Well, our local hoop artists are up at Modesto this week end engaging in a few basketball games with junior colleges from other parts of the state.

If we didn't know how good the lads were up to the present writing, we certainly will when the casaba tourney is over.

Conlan's Ram hoopsters will meet, in the valley town circus, the outstanding teams in the state, and, although we don't expect the boys to come home with the championship, a fine showing is, we hope, in the offing.

NEYLAND COMMENT

What to us was perhaps one of the most pathetic statements we have ever seen appeared the other morning in one of the local dailies.

Coach Robert Neyland, in commenting upon the defeat of his Tennessee Volunteers by the Southern California's mighty Trojans in the Rose Bowl, said, "We were beaten badly by a superior team. I want to congratulate Howard Jones and his staff for the fine team they have turned out."

In those two lines may be found all the heartbreak, disillusionment, and drama of a football team.

Gallant Tennessee, unbeaten in two years and unscored on in fifteen games, bowed before the might of El Trojan in a contest that left no doubt as to the superiority of the victor.

Such was the might of the hordes of Troy that the Vols not only were unable to score but were scored upon twice.

A rather interesting little item appeared alongside of the Trojan-Tennessee story.

JUGBOWL GAME

It seems the Caledonia Prison Farm overwhelmed Central Prison, 30 to 0, in the annual North Carolina "Jugbowl" Game. Eight hundred spectators were present, five hundred of whom were prisoners.

What, you expect us to inject a little something in this column about the game in the form of a comment. Sorry, souls, but I'll have to disappoint you this time. Just couldn't think of anything to say.

Registration, Exam Data Listed

Warning came from Mary B. Perry of the registrar's office that those students who did not take entrance exams at the beginning of the semester would not receive credit for work done in college unless they make up these tests.

They will be able to take the tests which will be given to entering students on January 10 and 11. This is the last chance for such students to make good their work.

Students who are not going to return next semester and wish to obtain their grades for this semester's work should leave stamped, self-addressed envelopes, large enough to accommodate enrollment cards, at the registrar's office.

Acquisition

By JACK WESTLAKE

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Guardsman herewith presents the final story in a series of interesting attempts at literature by students of the college. The editor wishes to express to Edward Sandys, English instructor in the college, appreciation for his cooperation in making this feature possible.

In the year of our Lord 480, Clovis assumed the kingship of the Salian Franks. He, shortly thereafter, adopted Christianity in the form of the Roman Catholic Church. Clovis, like so many rulers before and after his time, had an insatiable desire for power. He extended his kingdom into that portion of the Roman Empire known as Gaul. The Roman Empire now at the height of its decline was ripe for invasion. Clovis, glutton that he was, plucked this luscious morsel, and tucked it safely under his scepter thereby founding the Frankish Empire.

Clovis was broadshouldered, and yet slender, the tallest and strongest man in the land. Piercing eyes under shaggy brows, the forehead wrinkled by great muscles, lips hiding the firm set of despotic rulers, face haggard—with hollows at the temples where the cheek bones protruded—all these in a body of dynamic energy made him every inch a leader. The softer curves of his body had long since disappeared to be replaced by muscles strong as steel. He had a ruthlessness of character which is best portrayed in his lust for land and power and the means, fair or foul, he employed to acquire them.

Clovis to add to his glory must have the rival Franks, Ripuarian, under his control. The Ripuarians were led by a powerful tribal chieftan, and were not to be as easily annexed as Clovis hoped for.

One day, in the seventh year of the campaign against the Ripuarians, Lord Alfred, commander of the Army, burst into the tent where Clovis made his headquarters.

"Sire!", Lord Alfred flashed. "Your men grow weary of this battle and are becoming mutinous."

Clovis frowned, then spoke, "Begone for I too am weary of this battle. Little I care for their petty troubles."

Lord Alfred nervously toying with his sword hilt started to speak, "But Sire — — —."

Clovis, who had his back to Lord Alfred, turned and said, "Enough. We hold a council of war tonight to decide the fate of my Army."

That night in the tent the general staff of officers had gathered. Clovis, Lord Alfred and Duke Mangrove, the advisor to the king, were also there. As the council got under way the babble of incessant affirmation in the true style of noble "Yes men" became audible. Duke Mangrove silenced this useless chatter by exclaiming, "My Lord, as we all know this campaign has been a fruitless one!"

Clovis angered by this observation but still respecting the advice of Mangrove, sarcastically said, "Dear Mangrove you have always given such wise council."

Duke Mangrove, with little regard for his King's evident displeasure, continued, "Would not the Ripuarians be more easily conquered by the removal of their Chieftain?"

Clovis in the magnanimity of conceit declared, "So it shall be done, for the glory of the Roman Catholic Church I swear that these barbarians shall be under my rule ere the moon sets thrice."

With this oath goading him on Clovis cudgelled his brain for a suitable plan. When at last the plan, like Minerva, sprang into being it was destined to be one of the most malicious acts in its concept and ultimate fulfillment to be noted in the annals of history.

The rival chieftain had a son, who was weak and easily influenced but who, nevertheless, had a strong desire to have power and personal achievement. He could get neither of these things from his own people because they would never elect him, as custom dictated, to be their chieftain.

Clovis, arch schemer, invited this boy to come to his court. The boy flattered by the invitation of such a powerful ruler as Clovis, accepted without hesitation.

The boy was shown all the pleasures to be had at such a large court, as Clovis then had. The weeks slipped by, and Clovis did nothing towards fulfilling his promise. One day when Clovis and the boy were strolling through the royal grounds Clovis turned to the boy and said, "Let's see son, you are about eighteen, the right age to marry my daughter and become one of the court."

The boy, overwhelmed, stammeringly replied, "I don't understand your generosity."

"Well boy," Clovis explained, "for the return o fa very small favor on your part I shall make you a Duke, and give you my daughter's hand in marriage."

The boy glowing with anticipation exclaimed, "Anything Sire, you have but to name it and it shall be done."

Hiding his disgust in a frown, Clovis growled, "I want you to return to your home and kill your father."

The boy was speechless at this sudden cruel request. He found himself torn between his insatiable longing for fame and a rather cold feeling of filial pride and devotion. However the latter instinct was too weak to cope with the former, and the boy droned, "It shall be done my Lord."

The lad returned home to faithfully carry out his share of the bargain. With the blood of his father still wet on his hands he returned to Clovis for his reward. On hearing of the boy's return Clovis received him in the privacy of his personal chambers. Kneeling before Clovis the boy related his gruesome crime. He began his tale, "I waited until the court had retired and the castle was still throughout."

Clovis, feigning surprise, said, "Lad, what is this you tell me?"

"Sire," the boy frightened by the turn of affairs exclaimed, "you petitioned me to do this deed."

"Little I know about your ravings," countered Clovis.

"But my Lord," muttered the boy, "I killed my father for the reward you promised me."

Clovis, shocked by the revelation, knitted his brows in a tangled knot and shouted, "You did what?"

"I killed my father," cried the boy.

Clovis who throughout this entire interview had portrayed no recognition of the boy asked, "Why do you come with this tale to me?"

"But Sire," stammered the boy.

"Silence fiend, you killed your father, for that crime you shall be justly punished," thundered Clovis. "Who is your father, so I can set the payment of your crime at the right price?"

The boy losing control of his already insipid courage wailed, "He was chieftain of the Ripuarian Franks."

Clovis displaying unreserved disgust frowned, then spoke, "For this dastardly crime you too shall die." Clovis called the guard stationed at the door of his chamber and had the cringing wretch imprisoned.

The boy a few days later, completely divorced from his sanity by this betrayal, was hanged, the most despised criminal in the land, as Clovis recited from the scriptures, "Thou shalt not kill."

Clovis, with no compunction, set foot on the land and peoples he had so cowardly conquered with but ten days remaining before the third setting of the moon.

200 At AWS Tea Gathering; Soph Sweetheart Attends

Two hundred students, a record crowd, attended yesterday's Associated Women Students tea dansant held in the Century Club according to Muriel Nolan, Association president.

Highlight of the day was the introduction of the college sweetheart who was presented with a bid to the Soph Formal by Bill O'Neil, president of the class.

school, I think school is lovely, I think my instructors are lovely (?) but a person can get too much of a good thing (now how do I mean that?)

Every time I went out during the vacation I was assailed with the thought that I should be home studying, and when I blew the dust off my books Tuesday morning my conscience pricked me so bad that I began to bleed internally.

Now that finals are almost upon us I find that I don't know a Damn thing (of course, I wouldn't have known anything anyway but at least the suspense would have been over).

Now, what I am trying to get at is this: Why should the state (I guess it was the state, I don't think it's important enough for Roosevelt to play with) change the semester around? After all this isn't Thanksgiving (far from it).

Cannot somone devise a plan to get us out of this dilemma.

Presidential Notes

By ELMER HUBACHER

"ALL good things must come to an end." This maxim well expresses our thoughts at the time of this writing, for we feel that having had the pleasure of serving as your president for this semester has been a "good thing."

We say this perhaps from a selfish viewpoint. We know that we as an individual have more than benefitted from this opportunity. Our only hope is that you the students have been satisfied.

To those persons who have felt that this semester has been a successful one, we can only say "thanks" as a humble token of our gratitude.

To all those individuals who have by their cooperation and service contributed to the success of this semester we give our deep and heartfelt thanks.

To our successor and the other members of his executive council, we sincerely tender our wholehearted wishes for a very successful and prosperous semester in office.

In closing we wish to leave with this thought. 1940 will be a year long to be remembered in the annals of the college. You students who will still be here will have the privilege of attending the college that will be—and we say this with a feeling of surety—the best on the Pacific Coast in every respect. The ensuing semester is to be an important one. Support your new officers, and we assure you, that your support will make for a Junior College that will be second to none.

sorry that circumstances and the weather caused a calling off of a mass movement of the club to the high altitudes, but we can hope for beter breaks next semester. The best season for skiing in California is from January to the first week in March. We're lookink forward till that time."

Other members of the club found themselves sick, in other places of the State, and just pessimistic as to the presence of snow in the Sierras, explained Ogg. Erling Jacobsen, club secretary, went down to Long Beach and there had a try at dry-skiing on the sands of Southern California.

Ogg said that the group was planing to go up to the snow, if it exists, immediately after finals. According to Ogg, the skiing conditions then should be at their best.

FOREIGN

"TODAY'S lesson — American diplomats are dangerous, criminal and not to be trusted, and remember, Der Fuehrer is greater than God himself."

Thus goes the lesson now probably being taught in German schools after the Nazi denunciation of American diplomats several days ago.

Who curtails freedom of speech, press and religion?—The Germans Who promised to respect the frontiers of Czechoslovakia and Poland?—The Germans. Whose official word is least trusted in all the world?—The Germans. Who have in their employ such vicious mobsters as Goering, Goebbels, Himmler and Streicher, disguised as diplomats?—The Germans.

That's what we like about the Nazis. They are so swift to reveal to the world anyone who is dishonest or worthless.

Great people, those Nazis. We wonder how the world would get along without them.

SPAIN celebrated the first anniversary of the end of the civil war with a victory parade in honor of General Francisco Franco.

Although the war is no more, the more difficult task of reconstruction still remains. Strangely enough, in a year of peace but little headway has been made in this direction.

Perhaps the rumors of inefficiency in the Franco regime are the cause.

The Spaniards celebrated the end of the war, yes, but when will they be able to celebrate a reconstructed Spain?

When that happens then there will really be something to shout about.

REPORTS from London indicate that, contrary to popular belief, the European war has not hurt the United States film export business.

Which just goes to show you that even in wartime people can take time out to laugh at Bob Hope or sigh at Clark Gable.

Sounds like British morale might be pretty good.

LOOKS as if the American people have another champion of liberty. John L. Lewis, the labor big shot, has threatened to start a third party if the Democrats don't come to heel and present a platform that meets with John's approval.

It is really quite nice of Mr. Lewis to take such an interest in the welfare of the people.

Of course, it looks a lot like John L. is determined to run things his own way, even if he has to start a new party to do it.

Lewis demands that the Democrats select a presidential candidate and a platform satisfactory to labor and the common people. No doubt Mr. Lewis' only definition of a satisfactory presidential candidate is John L. Lewis, and as for satisfying labor and the common people, we haven't noticed that John has done such a hot job along those lines.

Yes, sir, Boss Lewis is certainly looking out for us people.

CITY

IT IS a well established fact that since Police Chief Dullea took office, there has been a widespread campaign against traffic violators.

The police are so zealous, however, that they overlooked a most glaring example of something or other recently when a green coupe sailed blithely past several peace officers with five passengers in the front seat and one in the trunk.

Incidentally, the coupe defiantly sputtered past the Hall of Justice, otherwise known as the local Bastille.

Interconnecting Roads To Connect New Buildings

Recently approved by the Board of Education was the new college building architect's plan of interconnecting roads from the science building to the gymnasium, according to President Cloud.

A plan of roads and pathways is very necessary because the science building rests on the crest of the hill, while the gymnasium is farther down, President Cloud said.

"We are convinced," President Cloud added, "that we will get into the new building for the fall semester."

The Exposition

Wednesday Set As Deadline For Fair Ticket Orders

Bargain tickets to the Golden Gate International Exposition must be ordered before Wednesday, April 10, J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of education, announced.

Order blanks which were inserted in last Tuesday's Guardsman should be filled out and returned to the bank at Galileo or to Tom O'Neill at Powell Street on or before April 10, Sullivan said.

Students can call for their tickets at the Galileo bank during the week of April 22 to 26. Also, students who have not filled out blanks will be able to purchase books at the bank during this week, according to present official plans.

Through special arrangement with Fair authorities, Sullivan indicated, junior college students can purchase a book of 130 admissions for the price of $3.75, or a book, which is transferable, of five admissions to the Fair and five admissions to special attractions for the price of $2.50. Either book affords a substantial saving.

Those who failed to obtain order blanks may do so in Room 204 at Galileo, Sullivan added.

Forum Magazine Leaders Ask For Short Stories

Requesting that more short stories be entered for consideration, Dorothy Mercer, sponsor of The Forum, college magazine club, revealed that there has been a continued lack of short stories submitted for publication.

A sense of timidity which many of the students possess concerning their own work, is probably responsible for the shortage of material submitted, Miss Mercer said. "Students should remember that the time is getting short before the deadline of April 19," she continued. "No entries will be accepted after that date."

Commenting further, Miss Mercer revealed that many of the students who have had the least actual experience in writing often possess a natural and flowing style, which makes for good literary work and entertaining reading. Many poems of worthwhile caliber have been entered for the publication. Several of the entries indicate that the student authors seem to possess the makings of real poets, she said.

Short plays and other works of literature will be especially welcomed, Miss Mercer believes.

Extra Work For Some NYA Students, Says Redford

Students having difficulties in making up NYA hours are advised by Edward H. Redford, college NYA director, to consult with him for additional work.

There are a number of students, according to Redford, who have not thoroughly completed their working hours, and it is necessary that they do so.

"However," Redford said, "there are also some students who are doing too much overtime, and it would be advisable for them to slow down, as there will not be sufficient funds to pay them."

Rally Next Friday Will Feature College Clown Act

Feature of the spring sports rally scheduled for April 12, at 2:30 in the Galileo Auditorium, will be a completely new performance of Jack Schmale's "Joe's Jaysee," according to Ray Berns, rally committee chairman.

According to Berns, principal players in the skits will be Elmer Hubacher, Ken Pasqualetti, Mel Cicazola, Tony Manov, Dave Johnson, Bob Fex, Stan Tobiason, and Bobby Lowell.

Also included in the rally program will be short "pep" talks from Coach Tom Wilson concerning tennis, Coach Russ Sweet on track, and Coach Jack Gaddy on baseball.

"A local student organization," Berns said, "will provide music for a jam session at the rally."

According to Registrar J. Paul Mohr, all 2:30 classes will be excused for next Friday's rally.

Business Department Scores Again, Places Two Students

Recent job placements for two students of the college, were announced by F. Grant Marsh, head of the business department.

Margaret Wilson is now working with the Curry Company in Yosemite National Park. Betty Erickson is working for the Edgeworth Tobacco Company, Marsb said.

Because of the trouble which prevails concerning the right type of students for the right type of business openings, William C. Marsh, in charge of the insurance classes, cited several reasons why students are unable to get positions.

Inability to do simple arithmetic, ratios, and per cents, Marsh pointed out, handicap the individual to a great extent, and the ultimate result is they are unable to get positions in the business world.

Big corporations offer a series of tests, conducted by the personnel departments, to test the clerical skill of the applicant, as well as tests recording their skill at arithmetic, spelling, English, shorthand, typing, and accounting ability. Often clerical aptitude tests are conducted, as well as various intelligence tests, Marsh explained.

A major item to consider when applying for a position, Marsh finds, is the student's personal appearance, and his method of approach to the employer in charge, and these two vital details usually equal more than 50 per cent of the basis upon which the prospective employer judges an applicant.

Ski Club Fund Request Shelved Until MAC Action

Until further information can be gained from the Men's Athletic Council relative to the current status of the college ski club, a request of that group for funds to participate in the forthcoming Vanderbilt Memorial Trophy ski meet at Norden on April 12, has been temporarily shelved by the Executive Council.

Since the ski club is not apparently designated as a representative college team, Executive Council members debated whether or not they could allot the organization its request, recalling the recent denial of funds to the Alpha Gamma Sigma and Hotel and Restaurant Society.

A petition, however, that the ski club be recognized as a minor sport is now before the MAC.

Earlier in the council meeting a further impediment to the grant arose in the form of an adverse recommendation by the finance committee advising that the money be "regretfully denied" on the grounds of insufficient funds. "The only possible source of money at this time is the Executive Council fund," Daniel Rosenblat, finance committee chairman, said.

In response to a subsequent motion from Mel Chicazola, MAC head, that money be granted from the council fund, in spite of the finance committee's recommendation, Len Gross, Guardsman editor, declared: "We cannot be passing out money to every club that calls on us. These various groups must be recognized by the proper authorities before we can consider granting them money."

The motion was withdrawn and, at the advice of Alden Smith, council adviser, it was agreed to defer action until aforementioned consideration be taken by the MAC.

Big Turnout Expected For Sadie Hawkins Dance

More than a thousand students are expected to attend the Associated Men Students barn dance set for Friday, April 19, at Alvarado Park in Richmond.

Lyle Shultz, AMS president, anticipates the big crowd and wants several things made clear as regards the occasion.

1. The dance theme is Sadie Hawkins Day, and the women are urged to act accordingly and date the men.

2. Devonshire is not available for the barn dance, but the distance from here to Alvarado Park is not as great as from here to Devonshire. The shorter distance to Alvarado Park, plus the transbay fare, just equals the cost of going to Devonshire.

3. Hot dogs, buns, and coffee will be supplied free of charge by the AMS, and those who want more to eat may bring it.

Dean Edwin C. Browne will organize and call a square dance. General barn dance activities will start at 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon with games, and weinie roasts.

The Guardsman will publish a map showing the college students how to get to Alvarado Park in Richmond.

Shultz also emphasized that since it is to be a "barn dance," everyone should come attired appropriately.

"Warren Decree Won't Affect College"—Cloud

Free education in the secondary school system, as expounded by State Attorney-General Earl C. Warren will have no financial effect upon students of the college, President Arcbibald C. Cloud declared this week.

Under the provisions of Warren's ruling, all student body fees must be optional to the student, there must be no laboratory or locker fees, gym suits must be furnished free, and it was quite possible that schools would be required to provide paper and pencils.

"We have no definite information yet as Superintendent Joseph P. Nourse is still compiling a survey of the local situation, but I can assure the students that this ruling definitely does not apply to junior college textbooks," President Cloud said.

Questioned about the paper and pencil provision, President Cloud said it was possible that the college might be affected. However, he added, any additional costs would be carried by the Board of Education.

Gloria Miller Honored At Modesto Convention

Associated Women Students President Gloria Miller was made chairman of the resolutions committee of the northern California junior college women's convention at Modesto recently, according to Margaret Dougherty, AWS adviser.

"Despite the fact that Miss Miller was not notified of her appointment until she was actually called upon, she presided at the committee meeting and took charge of drafting various resolutions," Miss Dougherty said.

Miss Miller was also among the delegates selected to represent women at the convention in a radio broadcast, Miss Dougherty said.

Ex Council

Recommends No Representative Posts For Members

Opining that student officers should not be allowed to represent business houses that may have dealings with the college and proposing a constitutional amendment to that effect, a special committee of the Executive Council presented the following text to the council at last Tuesday's session:

"The committee agrees that officers of the Executive Council should not represent a business house that at some time or another may be called upon to enter into business transactions with the Executive Council. These business houses, we feel, should include, among others, athletic supply houses, jewelry firms, and hotels. We feel that since hotels are used for school functions, financed by school funds, that they, too, may have a representative on the Executive Council that may be in a position to exercise influence on the council on their matter of choice.

"Since the Executive Council has already voiced an opinion on this whole matter, we feel that about the only way that something can be done is to submit the whole situation to the sudent body in the form of a constitutional amendment. It is our suggestion that the following paragraphs be amended to Article 3, entitled, 'Executive Council':

"'The officers mentioned in Section One of this article (i. e., members of the Executive Council) shall not be a representative of any place of business that might be at some time or another be called upon to enter into business transactions with the Associated Students. Should an elected officer during his tenure associate himself with such an aforementioned "Business House" his office can be declared vacant by the president of the Associated Students, providing that the officer has been found guilty of violation of this section by the Judicial Committee'."

This was signed by committee chairman Alden Thorogood, and committee members Lyle Shultz, Wilton Latz, and Melvin A. Chicazola.

The recommendation and proposed amendment were referred to the constitution committee, headed by Al Williams, Associated Students president.

AWS To Present Program For College Parents

Honoring parents of women students, the Associated Women Students will present a program and tea at the Century Club at 3 o'clock on Sunday, April 21, according to Gloria Miller, AWS president.

"I should like to stress the fact that fathers as well as mothers of the college women are welcome," Miss Miller declared.

Program for the affair will be provided by the college A Cappella Choir under the direction of Flossita Badger of the music department, Miss Miller announced, adding that there is a possibility of having a prominent faculty member speak.

Welfare Council Compiling Questionnaire Statistics

Beginning this week, the college welfare council settled down to the task of compiling the statistics gathered in the recent questionnaire of 1300 students, according to Loretta Egan, council chairman.

Miss Egan could set no approximate date for the completion of the study, and release of the council's findings, but stated that the work would be carried out as quickly as possible.

Regarding the welfare council's proposed representation at the Student Civil Liberties Conference, held last Sunday at Berkeley, Miss Egan cited the reason for the final decision not to attend.

"I investigated the conference," said Miss Egan, "and came to the conclusion that we have no student civil-liberties problem at this college. Therefore, there was no reason for us to attend."

According to reliable sources, the welfare council has not planned any further activities for the remainder of the semester, beyond the compilation of the results of the student questionnaire.

Army-Navy Assembly Today

Col. Perkins Speaks On National Defense In Lecture Hall At 10

Celebrating Army Day in traditional style, the college Army and Navy Club will hold an assembly in the Lecture Hall this morning at 10 o'clock, according to advices received from Rogers Black, president of the organization.

Appearing as guest speaker on the program will be Colonel George T. Perkins, recruiting officer for the Ninth Corps Area, who will talk on the subject of National Defense.

Commenting on the assembly, Black urged students to attend in the interests of being informed on America's defense situation.

"Now, more than ever before," Black said, "we want to know the strength of our country's defenses. Colonel Perkins will present a full picture of how we can protect ourselves, if the need should ever arise."

President A. J. Cloud, it was revealed, will deliver a brief address introducing the speaker.

Colonel Perkins, who was graduated from West Point in 1900, and took his commission serving in the Artillery Corps the next year, has a long record of service with the armed forces.

A distinguished graduate of the Army War College, the General Staff School, and the Army School of the Line, Perkins also attended the Artillery School and the Naval War College.

Today's assembly will mark the continuation of the Army and Navy Club's practice of sponsoring two programs a year, one on Navy Day and the other on Army Day.

Hotel Dance At Mark Next Friday

Chuck Foster's opening night at the Hotel Mark Hopkins next Friday night will be the date of the Hotel and Restaurant Society's annual semi-formal dance, according to an announcement by the division.

The dance will be open to all students of the college, and the price will be $1.25 per couple. A Hotel Division spokesman noted that this price is probably the cheapest at which any student has ever been able to attend a first-class hotel. Regular price of cover charges is $1.66, including Federal tax, so the dance bids will effect a saving of more than 40 cents per couple.

Bids to the dance are being sold in advance, and may be obtained at the Galileo bank or directly from members of the Hotel Division.

"I wish to remind all students of the college that April 12, the date of our dance, is Chuck Foster's opening. An opening night for an orchestra so well known as Foster's is always an event worth attending, especially when the price is as cheap as it will be that night," said Lee Scarlett, publicity director for the dance.

Sponsors for the affair include Dean Edwin C. Browne, and Joseph D. Sullivan, Paul Wendell, Ernest Hjorth and Hilda Watson, all of the Hotel Division faculty.

Contributions Sought For Humor Magazine By Editors

Contents of the college humor magazine scheduled to come out about the middle of May will be "light, humorous things," such as cartoons and sketches of students and instructors, or of incidents, Edward E. Sandys, faculty adviser for the new publication, announced.

Titles sent in for the magazine are now being considered, added Sandys, who indicated that students will be asked to submit material on college life, athletic angles, and other fields that may be used as a source of humor.

The call for contributions was extended by Sandys, who hoped that a representative cross section of the students would submit work for the magazine.

When enough contributions are on hand, a rough draft of the magazine will be compiled and submitted to the Publications Board for approval. This procedure is necessary because the Humor Magazine is not yet an officially recognized publication of the college, and as such must be passed by the board.

Hygiene Classes Will See Nutrition Pictures

Motion pictures on the subject of nutrition and digestion will be shown to hygiene classes on next Wednesday and Thursday, April 10 and 11, announced Terry Dearborn, college health coordinator.

These sound films are among the dozen pictures which are being used this semester in the hygiene courses.

"All students of the college who are interested, are welcome to attend the Thursday showing of these films at the Powell Street study hall at 8 and 9 in the morning," Dearborn said, "even though they may not be enrolled for the course."

Paint Experts To Discuss New Course April 8

To complete preparations for the curriculum of the paint course to be installed at the college next fall, a dinner meeting of 15 paint experts will be held April 8, at 6:30 p.m. in the faculty cafeteria, Walter Forbes, college instructor revealed.

After selection and approval of the curriculum, there will probably be a discussion, by those present, of the content of the chosen courses, Forbes said.

Final selection of the classes to be included in the paint technology course, which is the first to be offered in any junior college, will mark the end of many months of cooperative work on the part of the 15 local paint experts, according to Forbes.

Rally Today To Stress National Defense Aim Toward World Peace

LAST week, the college Peace Society presented a rally dedicated to world peace. This morning, the Army and Navy Club will hold an assembly dedicated to national defense.

Although, perhaps, the methods may differ, the underlying purpose is the same. It can be safely assumed that no one (munitions makers excepted) wants war.

It is the opinion of some that war can be averted only through adequate arms and national defense preparations. Others feel that this is the worst course to pursue and that disarmament and complete isolation will procure peace.

It is not for anyone to condemn one side without hearing the other. It is therefore wise to attend the assembly this morning and compare notes with that of last week.

It might be well to remember that here in the United States it is possible to hear both sides of an issue and draw your own conclusions, a liberty that is not enjoyed in any other nation in the world at the present time.

The adherents of the Peace Society feel positive that their course is the only sure and wise one. The members of the Army and Navy Club feel the same, but it is only decent and honest to listen to the other fellow's point of view.

The peace assembly last week was supposed to lead the way to peace in so far as the college youth is concerned. Maybe it did and maybe it didn't. Perhaps the assembly this morning will shed some light on how to be safe, sane, and healthy for the next 20 years.

It's food for thought, anyway.

Democracy Means Participation In Government Following Election; Students Urged To Attend Council Meetings

IT'S STRANGE. People fuss and fume about electing officers to rule them and then turn right around and ignore the government they voted into office.

Specifically the above refers to the students of this college who attend nomination rallies, listen to campaign speeches, go to the polls and vote, then forget the whole matter.

Democracy is supposed to let the people rule. This doesn't mean however that they should elect officers, then promptly dismiss the whole matter from their minds as though it were a closed incident.

The election of leaders and the formation of a government or administration is not the end of the efforts of the majority; it is the beginning. The officers are put there to serve the majority in as best a manner as possible, not to be forgotten and left to their own devices.

A chronic example of the lack of interest in the student government within the college is demonstrated at student Executive Council meetings.

Instead of having the room filled with the students of the college interested or at least curious about the workings of their government, the meetings are empty of all save council members and students enrolled in the class in student government.

Such a situation is comparable with the Congress of the United States in session without a gallery of interested spectators.

The Executive Council itself does not need an audience before which to work, but the students at large for their own education and enlightment should attend the sessions occasionally and learn for themselves how the college is run.

Try it some time. The Executive Council meets every Tuesday at 12 M in Room 102. It is surprising how many things can be learned at these meetings.

The students put the Executive Council in power. The students ought to see how that power is handled.

Inclusion Of College In Secondary School System Allows Student Purchase Of Reduced Fair Tickets

THERE have been many times during the past five years when students of the college have objected to being classified as attending a secondary school.

They have felt that their being listed under this category is a distinct slight to their exalted position as college students. We will not attempt to comment at this time on whether or not students of the college are justified in their claim to social and intellectual ascendency. We simply hope, for the sake of the college's reputation, that there is justification.

Last week, however was one of the few times when the college could be thankful that it was a part of the secondary schools system, for because of that students are to be allowed to purchase Exposition script books for the same price as high school pupils.

However aggravating this may be to personal vanity, it is highly gratifying to the personal pocketbook.

The $3.75 script books will effect a considerable saving to all taking advantage of the Exposition's generous concession to the college.

Any student of the college who fails to avail himself of the opportunity of seeing the 1940 Fair at these reduced rates is either impervious to the beauty of our Exposition or a confirmed stick-in-the-mud.

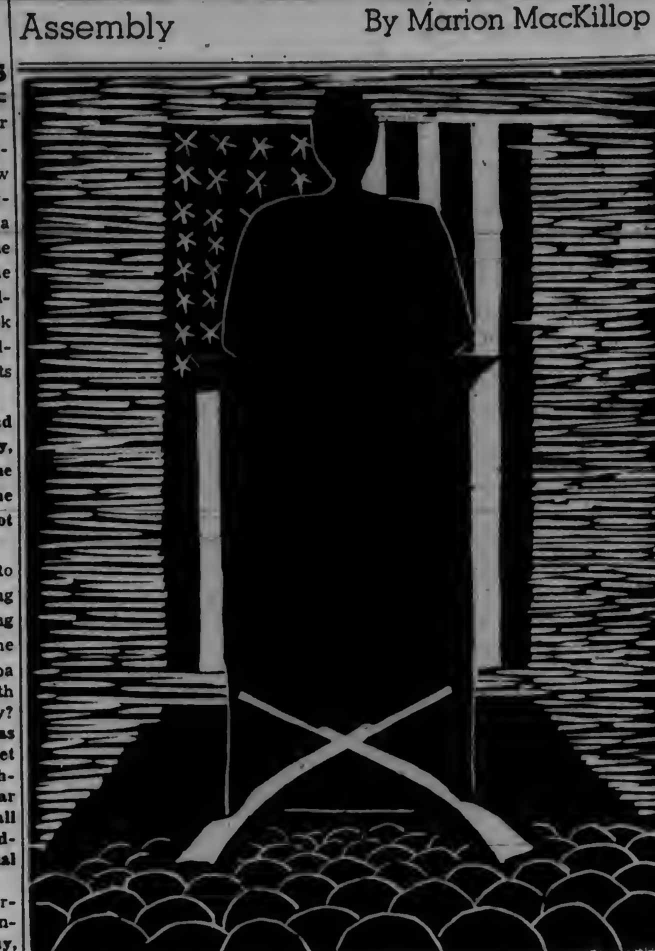
THIS isn't going to become another movie review column, but the funniest thing happened when we saw the picture Rebecca, currently playing at a local show house. It's a very stirring picture and in the scene where the second wife visits the room of the first wife, the iron bindings of the open windows click against the wall, and the entire audience just about jumps out of its seats.

The tension of the people around one was felt by many, and honestly, when those windows bang against the house, one feels as if there is some unseen object behind them. (And not the person in the next row).



But enough on Rebecca, and into the more usual things that are going on around us all the time. Running around the campus now without the benefit of wooden supports is Lyba Mackie who had quite a time with that foot, a Dodge and a Mercury?

AMS prexy, Lyle Schultz, has started out in plenty of time to get everyone prepared for the approaching barn dance.. Old clothes we hear are quite the proper attire for all young ladies and gentlemen attending this gala AMS semi-annual affair.

Personal to Blue Pencil Bill (former columnist)—that famous columnist of by-gone days Fashion Fanny, who it is said, when down in the dumps always got herself a hat, is now working in a local millinery shop!!! It just goes to show you what some people will do.

When a snappy little roadster flits up Powell Street, usually there are many heads that turn slightly and wishfully hope for the day when, but a few weeks ago on the crowded hill three young women saw this car whiz by and actually turned all the way around to gaze wistfully at a passing fancy.

. . . shots at RAMdom

FROM a conscientious reader, Paul Loze, comes the following statement: Shots At Ramdom is o.k., but what's it all about?? What does it mean? Good God! Does Loze expect everything to mean something? There's too much meaness in the world. And what is there to write about? Everything has been written about; and if you write about nothing, that's plagiarism. Tooshay, Mr. Loze. (Note: Since the printer has no French accent marks, all French words will be spelled out as they sound in English.)

No sooner does Shots At Ramdom come out with the tabline, "—the nation's number one Pullman Porter, Alexander Woollcott," than an airline company advertises, "Go by plane and miss Woollcott!" Best radio remark of the week is the answer Oscar Levant gave Bing Crosby. Crosby wanted to know the name of the next Levant book. Quipped Levant, "A Smattering of Ignorance Finds Andy Hardy."

MATERIA CRITICA . . . nay George Jean Nathan, by Alfred Knopf. How you Finns say, "a Molotoff breadbasket" of comments? Eh? Oh, that's o. k., Vladesky, we don't want to know how the Finns say it. It's all a joke old man, just a way of introducing random criticism and comment.

—Tone poems which are explained with the introduction beginning, "In these troubled times," and which feature 50 men and women in ensemble bellowing. The poems always contain words such as rebellion, courageous, and freedom.

—Motion pictures that try for collegiate atmosphere by having a fellow with a turtle-neck "blazer," lettered "M", and a hat turned up at the front. This "typical" collegiate is shown either advocating that swing be taught in college or running around shouting, "Yahoo, beat State!"

—Students who get together and decide to put out a college humor magazine. The planned magazine will include cartoons just like Petty's, lightly riskay stuff, high-class advertising, and peppy, smooth-paper writing. Everything goes well with the magazine until it publishes an imaginary drawing of the Provost shown with a beautiful blonde who says, "Don't you remember? You kissed me when I was a baby." Such a joke in itself is harmless, but when the Provost elopes one week-end with a woman who is beautiful and blonde, the humorists are forced to announce thusly: "Laff-Lyfe, college humor magazine, is anxious to have several faculty members serve on a 'review' board. The Editors of Laff-Lyfe want it understood that the review board has nothing to do with censorship, but—."

For a man whose wife nags him, whose friends shun him, and whose significance is pretty ln, a general survey of moral, booster-bulletins is recommended. Every corporation is filled with poster-advice, signboard steps to positions of importance! "Envy never takes the place of application. He (the boss) came from where you ($18.50 per) are, by dint of HARD WORK." There was an instructor who continually quoted such incorporate trivia. The front of his coat contained a pin which urged everyone to vote for Landon, and various organization pins. When the class was noisy this instructor would say, "Where do you think you are? In high school?"

Frister
. . . The Spectator

WALT DISNEY'S creations are endowed with a certain lovable quality that makes them universally adored by all who have a touch of sentiment lingering in their hearts. Now, to take its place along side of Snow White, comes the enchanting Pinnochio, full of charm and containing more than its share of laughs and tears.

Collodi's immortal fable of the little puppet who wanted to be a boy has been faithly reproduced by the cartoon virtuoso, Disney. The adventures of the marionette and the wicked Stromboli; his hegira to Pleasure Island, where had little boys turn into donkeys; and finally, his futile search for Geppetto and his ultimate discovery of the old wood-cutter in the belly of Monstro, the whale, have lost none of the endearing attributes they hold for children the world over. Now on the screen the tale has been supplemented by some of the most fascinating characters ever to step out of fairy-land. Of course, there's the wooden-headed hero himself, trying so hard to justify the "Blue Fairy's" faith in him that he goes off the deep end; then, there is Jiminy Cricket, that sprightly "conscience" of Pinnochio's, that ubiquitous wraith who is supposed to help the puppet differentiate between right and wrong, but who isn't quite sure of the difference himself; Figaro, Geppetto's feline shadow, always prancing around like "Puss-in-boots"; Cleo, the amorous gold-fish, who goes into a tail-spin every time somebody glances at her; J. Worthington (Honest John) Foulfellow, a charlatan not lacking that merry twinkle in his eye; and the enormous Monstro, whose sneezes would undermine the Rock of Gibralter; making as delightful a group as has ever been encountered on the screen.

Of the lot, who steals the film? Who is the Dopey of Pinnochio? Undoubtedly, Jiminy Cricket is entitled to that honor. Having been given a soothing voice by Cliff Edwards, a fluidity of movement by the staff, he walks away with the film by singing, dancing, and spouting homely philosophies and witticisms. Yes, omnipresent Jiminy certainly climbs to the pinnacle of celluloid fame in Pinnochio.

This cartoon is a decided improvement over Snow White except that it doesn't seem to have quite the "heart appeal" that the Grimm tale had. Aside from this minor point, it is obviously better. Technically, it is unsurpassed; the multiplane technicolor camera has caught the deep rich hues of the full colors; the chiaroscuro, with its subtle shades and magnificent tinges, is blended into an artistic masterpiece, more beautiful than anything the cartoon world has seen.

Rosenblat
. . . Counter-Point

AS MARCH of this year drew to a close, and April made its appearance, press association cable wires brought to the headlines a report that awakened memories of another April, twenty-five eventful years ago.

The report embodied a rumor that Turkey would grant passage through the Dardanelles and into the Black Sea for Anglo-French navel units destined for blockade duty; the memory was of another April in 1915 when the Allies undertook what has been described as "the War's most glorious disaster," the attempted forcing of the Black Sea Passage, the famous Gallipoli campaign.

Gallipoli—a narrow, barren peninsula forming one shore of the Dardanelles Straits, the channel joining the Black Sea to the Aegean. As the first year of World War I came to an end, it was increasingly apparent that Turkey's control of this channel was effectively preventing the import into Russia of vitally necessary supplies, might eventually paralize the entire Czarist war machine.

In an attempt to alleviate this condition, the British Admiralty and War Office combined in the daring scheme of forcing through the heavily defended Dardanelles, thus clearing a passage for shipment of goods to Russia. To effect this they proposed to land troops on Gallipoli, seize the Turkish shore defenses, and eventually gain control of the entire area.

AS WAS considered benefitting for the Senior Service, the Navy undertook the first move. In February, a British naval squadron of heavy-gun ships appeared off the Turkish coast, began to shell the shore batteries. The move was a fatal one. Had it been followed immediately by the landing of troops there is a possibility that success might have followed, but no troops were on hand, and the shelling served only to warn the Turks of approaching attack.

The chief of the German military mission to Turkey, Marshal Liman von Sanders, was appointed to command of the defending force, and under his instructions preparation was made to repulse further attacks. Heavy batteries were hastily rushed into position, the Straits were thoroughly mined, and 11 divisions of Turkish and German troops transferred to the threatened area.

MEANWHILE the British War Office belatedly began to assemble an expeditionary force in Egypt. To their command was appointed a grim, fierce-eyed old Scotsman, General Sir Ian Hamilton, a man whose determination of purpose can be attested to even today by his recent storming into the office of the Secretary of War, attired in the gorgeous full-dress uniform of his Highland Regiment, to protest loudly the abolishing of kilts in the British Army. The men he was to command were worthy of the old warrior; a division of French colonial troops, a division of British regulars, and two divisions of the ever-since-famous Anzacs—yet despite this strength and later reinforcements, the cause was a lost one.

In April, Hamilton's men were landed on the shores of Gallipoli, all the while under a merciless fire that decimated their numbers. Nevertheless a landing was effected at several points, and having established bases, Hamilton proceeded with the attack. Time after time he threw the Anzacs against Von Liman's carefully prepared defenses, and time after time they were repulsed with severe losses.

THE NAVY, meanwhile, had fared little better. Attempting to cover the land attack by their fire, ships ventured into the mined area, beat a hasty retreat after the loss of two vessels.

Throughout the whole of 1915 the bloody attacks continued without avail, as score after score of Australians fought and died with a hopeless, almost suicidal nobility that gained the admiration of the world.

It was in a sense sheer satire—that man as a whole be so base as to tolerate a warfare wherein men as an individual was capable of the heroic heights of gallantry attained by the Anzacs in storming the impregnable cliffs of Gallipoli.

By the early part of 1916 even the War Office realized that the task was impossible, and immediate preparations were made for evacuation. Under cover of night the troops were withdrawn, such of them as still lived, and Gallipoli became no more than a bloody page in history.

If, in the months to come, British ships steam unimpeded through the Straits of the Dardanelles, past the bleak shores of Gallipoli, perhaps some of the thousands who are buried there may stir restlessly at the sight. They died, vainly seeking to aid Russia—tomorrow their comrades sail blithely by—to blockade Russia.

Such is the course of human events.

RAM'S HORN
Peace Rally, Club Initiations Share Criticism

• SPINACH PREFERRED
Editor, The Guardsman:

With approval we read your editorial in last Friday's issue of The Guardsman on the Peace Society assembly. Hopefully I attended the assembly expecting to hear some sane formula or at least a policy with peace as its goal. Although the word "peace" was used freely and often, and although speakers assured us the aim of the local, as well as other peace societies, was to stay out of the war, no constructive plan was offered.

Instead, a lot of time was wasted expounding on the society's past activities (which have been so much wasted time, in our opinion), and criticizing the present administration. We, too, have not always approved all of the New Dealers' actions and we do heartily approve of constructive criticism, but when supposedly unbiased students make an issue of U.S. minister to Canada James Cromwell's provally speech of last week and do not give all the facts—only the unfavorable ones—this is out and out propaganda.

The uninformed student left the lecture hall with the idea that all of official Washington had the same sentiments as Cromwell. Cromwell took the full responsibility of his Toronto speech, and the administration denied knowledge of what the minister had planned to say. Whether that is true or not I do not pretend to know, but it was ludicrous of the Peace Society speaker to consume such valuable time throwing mud at the administration, hinting that NYA students would be thrown into the army at the first sign of war, accusing the government of militaristic regimentation, etc., and then saying the American Youth Congress in Washington was a highly successful and splendid example of what our and other peace societies and youth congresses in colleges all over the nation were accomplishing!

I was surprised that the young man who spoke to us (he evidently believes in the Hollywood statistics about the average mind being that of a 12 or 14 year old!) didn't take out a red flag—at least bandana—and shout, "THE RAVELOUTION, SHE COMES. JOIN NOW! WE SHALL HAVE PEACE NO MATTER HOW MUCH BLOOD MUST BE SPILLED TO GET IT." Where was the constructive plan for peace?

If that is an example of our, or any other, Peace Society — I'll take Spinach.

• TWO CENTS' WORTH
Editor, The Guardsman:

Speaking from the masculine viewpoint, I would like to get in my two cents' worth concerning junior college club initiations.

In the first place, what is feminine or attractive about a nervous woman juggling eggs, jars, ash trays and sundry articles? Nothing that I, or any of my friends, can see. As far as the ban on lipstick and make-up is concerned, what fellow is going to be interested in a deglamorized pledge who seems to be in the final stages of some horrible disease? We don't expect Hedy Lamarr, but then little Annie Rooney doesn't cut much ice.

It seems that the girls being initiated aren't to be blamed, but the girls doing said initiating ought to get onto themselves. They aren't helping their own stock any by making their pledges look ridiculous. After all, this is a junior college, not a junior high school. Or is it?

Maybe I'm wrong, but it seems to me that these gals ought to take a friendly tip from an impartial man.

Sincerely,
A Mere Man

Netsters Down Salinas To Retain Conference Lead; Menlo Tomorrow

Looking forward to the encounter with a potent Menlo tennis squad at the Palace of Fine Arts tomorrow afternoon, Tom Wilson's Ram netsters barely managed to eke out a four to three decision over the Salinas racket-wielders at the Panther courts last Tuesday.

The locals dropped two singles and one doubles match of the seven played, but, nevertheless, managed to retain a slim lead in conference play with a record of 18 victories as against three defeats in contests played with Marin, Santa Rosa, and Salinas.

With the count standing at three matches a piece, the Ram-Salinas affair was in doubt until the final match when the local No. 1 combine of Bill Madamba and Ray Berns took the court against the Panther duo of Gerald Hansen and Spencer Kern.

The outcome of the fracas was not long in doubt as the Rams applied the pressure and subdued Hansen and Kern, 6-2, 7-5, in a surprisingly easy victory.

Madamba and Berns supplied the locals with three of their four wins inasmuch as they not only teamed together to win the deciding doubles but also won their singles, Madamba administering a 6-2, 6-1 walloping to Hansen and Berns defeating John Lasich, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Jack Hare, No. 4 man on the local team, came through with the other singles victory in a hard-fought 7-5, 6-4 decision over Bill Hyatt.

In other matches played, Chet Mead went down to defeat before the slashing drives of Spencer Kern, 6-4, 6-1, while Tony Calagos bowed to George Murray, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, and Mead and Hare lost to Lasich and Hyatt, 6-2, 6-4.

Menlo, tomorrow's opponent, is reputed to have excellent Nos. 1 and 2 men in the persons of Andy Roberts and Ben Olsen, who, incidentally team together to form the first doubles team, but, there, the peninsula aggregation's strength stops. A decisive victory in the Menlo match will insure Wilson's tennisers of a substantial lead in league play.

Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, in 43 fights has won 36 by knockouts, six by decisions, and lost one by a knockout.

AMS Fight Plans Under Way; Scene At Coliseum Bowl

Despite the crushing defeat at the Salinas tourney, Joseph A. Amori, college boxing instructor, has continued confidence in the college boxers who will venture to the wars in the semi-annual Associated Men Students fights to be held at the Coliseum Bowl in the latter part of April.

The material is exceptionally fine this semester in that the athletes are evenly matched, hence the fights should be thrillers, according to Amori.

The complete schedule was not revealed by Amori or Lyle Shultz, AMS prexy, but will be available to the students in the near future.

Bill Edwards, the most promising boxer for his weight of 155, is considered the most colorful of all boxers in the college. It was he who was dubiously decisioned at Salinas during the tourney.

Bud Callaway, the 165 pounder, and Jim Robertson are both considered good fighters, and Bob Raine, the flying boxer who holds the title to the 165, 175 and heavyweight divisions, will also probably defend his crown.

Frank Matsumoto, the Japanese sandman who won a scholarship to the University of Pennsylvania last year, is considered by Amori to be another colorful boxer. Tak Momii, the other Japenese, of the 105 division, is one of the highlights of the fights.

The new location of the fights is the Coliseum Bowl, the Verdi Club of former encounters having been considered too small by Shultz. The fights will be open to the public, Amori announced.

Track Team Wins From USF; Santa Rosa Next Meet

Russ Sweet's victory predictions struck home with a vengeance last Tuesday afternoon at Commerce Field.

The college Rams, in a cold, windswept workout with the University of San Francisco Squad, came out on the long end of a 58 to 44 tally.

Contending that although the college runners would drop most of the first place honors to the Dons, Sweet, college track coach, maintained last week that the superior numerical strength of the locals would enable the Ram team to obtain the majority of second and third berths in the track events.

Although Sweet labeled the Dons-Rams contest merely "another day of time trials," the keen competitive spirit evidenced in the efforts of the two contingents belied his statement.

Santa Rosa Next

Santa Rosa tomorrow afternoon is the team, place, and time for the Rams' first conference meet of the season.

Mentor Sweet revealed that he will probably enter the same runners who participated in the USF meet. No definite "dope" has been secured concerning the abilities of the Santa Rosans, but, according to local opinion, they are not of championship caliber.

Turning in an excellent time of 3 minutes 37 seconds, the Ram mile relay squad of White, Lowry, McMeekin, and Korn ran the Don quartet into the Commerce oval.

White, sprinting against a strong wind, picked up a lead of 30 yards and negotiated the quarter mile in 55 seconds flat. Lowry followed with a champion's stride, outdistancing USF's Ed Preston by a wide margin. By all appearances, Sweet commented, Lowry is destined to become a star distance runner.

Pete Franchesci of USF hung tenaciously to the heels of Bert Korn in the century, and up to the last 30 yards the race was a dead heat. Don Mavor forged ahead and broke the tape with a time of 10.5.

In the half mile run, Ed Preston, Olympic Club star, admitted afterwards that he was sure that Lowry, college 880 man, was going to "take me." However, Lowry faltered in his stride in the last lap, and Preston went all the way to win in 2:3.5. Lowry's time was 2:5.5.

Kearney, Mavor In Dead Heat

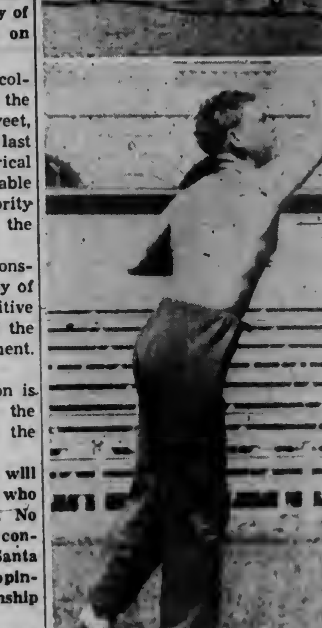
A speedsters' duel developed in the 220 yard dash between Kearney, highly touted Don flash, and Don Mavor, finally resulting in a dead heat. 23.7 was the established time.

Despite the fact that the college men won the meet by a margin of 14 points, the USF squad garnered a total of seven first places out of 12 events.

Both teams scored complete sweeps in one division: A distance of 39 ft. 7 ins. was put by Lawton, USF 16 lb. shot artist, pressed in order by Donmen Franchesci and Haley.

Rams Sweep Pole Vault

Groswird, Hancock, and Perry blanked the pole-vault field for the Rams with a final height of 12 feet.



The broad jump was eliminated from the meet because of lack of time. Gangly Rob Raine, of the local team, doubled his winning capacities Tuesday by skimming the 80 yard high timbers in 10.6; moreover, Raine high jumped 5 ft. 10 ins. to win that event.

Louis Vasquez fell down on form noticeably, and was satisfied to grab a second spot behind Ed Preston in the mile run. Straggling into third place position was Case. Time was 4:34.

Complete results of the USF track meet — 440 run: Kearney (USF), White (JC), McMeekin (JC); time, 53.4. Mile run: Preston (USF), Vasques (JC), Case (JC); time, 4:34. 100 yd.: Mavor (JC), Korn (JC), Franchesci (USF); time, 10.5. Half mile: Preston (USF), Lowry (JC), Vasquez (JC); time, 2:3.5. 80 yd. h.h.: Raine (JC), McClennan (USF), Jorgensen (JC); time, 10.6. 220 yd. run: Mavor (JC), Kearney (USF), tie for first, Franchesci (USF). 110 yd. l. h.: Taylor (USF), Sparher (JC), Raine (JC); time, 12.7. Mile relay: White, Lowry, McMeekin, Korn (JC); time, 3:37. Shotput: Lawton, Fanchesci, Haley (USF); distance, 39 ft. 7 ins. Pole vault: Groswird, Hancock, Perry (JC); height, 12 ft. High jump: Raine (JC), Genesy (JC), Le Francis, Hagen, Mossler (JC) tied for third; height, 5 ft. 10 ins. Discus: Mohr (USF), Wagstaff (JC); distance, 128 ft.

Warming Up For Santa Rosa

By beating USF in its second practice meet, the track team is on its way towards the conference championship. Helping to bring victory to Ramdom are the men pictured above: Foster Jessup, Jim Chew, Cassanares, and Keith Groswird, and Jim Wakstaff to the left, who came in second in the discus throw in the USF encounter.

The first conference meet is with Santa Rosa. Mentor Russ Sweet revealed that he will probably enter the same runners who participated in the USF meet. No definite "dope" is available concerning Santa Rosa, but according to local opinion they are not of championship caliber.

College Ice Skate Stars Feature Second Ice Revue

With such ice headliners as Stuart Ross, Marcella Mae, Murray Galbraith and Bill Hart, college ice skaters will present their second annual Ice Carnival, April 27, at 5:30 at Winterland Ice Rink, according to Joseph Williams, college skate instructor.

Already swinging into the final weeks of preparation for the carnival, the program to be presented, as outlined by Lucille Jacke, skate club vice-president, will consist of the following numbers:

Solo by Ed Bodell; a dance exhibition composed of a Viennese waltz, fox trot, tango, and swing 14, by Bill Hart and Stuart Ross, and Murray Galbraith and Marcella Mae; a solo by Hart; a balloon race with 10 women; a comedy act by Ed Bodell, Bud Vodden, and Fred Quandt; a solo by Marcella Mae; a broom ball game by the college men skaters; and a solo, or possibly a repetition of the shadow dance they performed in "Cinderella of the Silver Skates," by Galbraith and his brother Sheldon.

Tickets for the carnival, according to Hart, club president, will be on sale for 65 cents to include skate rental, 50 cents for those with skates, and 35 cents for spectators.

A 14-step dance will also be included in the evening's program, composed of college skaters, Miss Jacke said.

Those taking part will be couples Fred Quandt and Margaret Meader, Patricia McKenna and Bud Vodden, Lucille Jacke and Ed Bodell, and Dorothy Jacke and Wiley Burnett.

Campus Sports Personalities
By KEI HORI

As far as the skiers are concerned, the diving team, ice skaters and archery club can have their Crlenkoviches, Galbraiths and Harts and Mizunos. With malice toward none, they quote the infamous Rhett Butler, for they proudly present Norway's contribution to the college, Falk Norman Falkenburg.

In the traditional manner of a champion, Falk modestly declined to give any information about himself until Oscar (God bless him!) turned on the heat. (Oscar is no relation to Mr. Wilde, incidentally.)

Detective O. found that Falk is 6 feet 3 inches tall and likes to eat apple pie, good solid food, and fly upside-down in airplanes. He has his private license.

Falk hates trolley cars, likes milk, and shaves every day because he likes to be clean. He is at present majoring in mechanical engineering.

Falk was born in Oslo, Norway, and has already received his American citizenship papers. He has attended Cornell University in New York. Having hitchhiked to Los Angeles last summer, Falk likes San Francisco much better, "because it is hilly!"

His urge to travel he calls a "devil within himself." Athletic, Falk went out for crew and ice skating as well as skiing. Somewhat afraid at first of the immensity of America, Norman has gotten over the impression, although sometimes he often wonders how the 102-story-high Empire State Building holds together.

Compared with the simplicity of Norwegian life, Falk thinks that the Americans are in too much of a hurry to get nowhere fast. But, says he, the food of America is excellent, and is happily content because it is thus.

Mechanically minded, Falk is working on his jelopi, in which he commutes to school daily.

His pet gripe is to see women smoking, but he must admit that the American girl dresses "pleasantly," and says "they're swell to look at."

In concluding, Falk says, "Adjo og takk skal du ha!"

(Oscar is still at the dictionary.)

Conlan Golfers Exchange Divots With Peninsulans

Today and tomorrow, the Ram divot diggers tangle with San Mateo, at Ingleside, and Menlo, at Crystal Springs, respectively.

Coach Louis Conlan remarked, "San Mateo has a few good golfers, but they are not particularly dangerous. Menlo, however, always has a strong squad and will be hard to beat."

Conlan listed his top foursome as Bill McLaughlin, Bill Hoffman, Jimmy Camper, and Barney Rice.

Mixed Tennis Doubles For Guardsman Trophy

Bertha Keller, faculty adviser, announced that the Women's Athletic Association will hold its annual college mixed doubles championship at the Palace of Fine Arts courts in the near future, in contest for The Guardsman trophy.

Outstanding teams already entered included Bob Kun, last year's victor, and Louise Hinterman, Bill Madamba and Estelle Mouridan, and Ray Berns and Marian Graven.

Entries may be submitted to Miss Keller or Tom Wilson, varsity tennis mentor, and should be handed in as soon as possible.

Eisan Foresees Successful Spring Practice For Rams

Concentrating mostly on fundamentals of blocking and tackling, the college gridders, according to Coach Lee Eisan, look forward to a successful semester of spring football.

Rained out for the past week, the gridders at present are getting into shape by these fundamentals, and working on correct form. It will be at least a few weeks before actual scrimmage will begin, Coach Eisan announced.

This semester will be spent solely on development of ability shown during scrimmage and fundamentals, so that next term's team will practically be formed. Little dependent upon incoming students, Eisan hopes to create material already in the college.

Baseball

Horsehiders Play Menlo Saturday; Double Header

Tomorrow noon, at Funston Field, the Ram baseball nine resumes play in league competition, when the local nine plays host to a weak Menlo team.

Coach Jack Gaddy feels that the local batsmen should take both of the afternoon contests, since Menlo is currently occupying the cellar in league standings.

"We will have to play good ball to beat Menlo," Gaddy said. "All of our pitchers have had long rests, and there is no excuse for poor performance on the mound. I hope that the two-week layoff hasn't affected the boys."

The Rams have spent the past week practicing batting. Many of the players have shown marked improvement in batting form, while others have gone into a slump.

Roscoe Wollcott, second sacker, has shown unusual skill in hitting between the fielders. Wollcott is also one of the leading Ram batters.

Gaddy commented this week that his infielders have been doing all of the hitting. If his outfielders would start to hit, Gaddy feels certain that the Rams would be a tough team to beat.

Because last week-end was a rainy one, no league games were played. The Rams are still in first place, and are expected to remain that way after tomorrow's twin bill. The playoff of the Salinas games has not been definitely scheduled. It is difficult for the teams to schedule the games at a time that will be agreeable to both colleges.

Gaddy invites all students interested in baseball to come to Funston tomorrow and witness the two games. There will be no admission charge.

Vanderbilt Meet At Norden; Second Contest

After two weeks of practice, college skiers leave tonight for the Vanderbilt Memorial Trophy Meet to be held at Norden this week-end. Entries consist of Bob Ogg, ski club president, Falk Falkenburg, Stan Pittman, and Bill O'Neill.

Its second competition as a group, the ski club will enter contestants in a slalom race on Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock, with a descent of approximately 500 feet, a two-mile relay race, replacing the usual cross-country, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

A giant slalom instead of the usual downhill race will be staged on Mt. Disney, Sunday at 10 o'clock, and Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock the jumping contests will be held on Sugar Bowl Hill, Ogg said.

The proposed trip for spectators by Southern Pacific train on Saturday was called off, but Ogg said that anyone who wished to see the locals compete, would be able to obtain tickets for $4.58.

In commenting upon the meet, Alden Smith, ski club adviser, said: "With the new snowfall last week-end, we are confident the slopes in the area will be in good condition for racing. Norden reported five feet of fresh snow, and although skiers last week-end found it slow and wet, by this time it should be well enough packed to make downhill racing fast."

WAA Cancels Trail Ride Arrangements

Women's Athletic Association members in riding have tentatively canceled arrangements for a Trail Ride on Saturday, April 6, at Marin Junior College, announced Laurine Bergin, riding instructor.

"Dates for various playdays were made last fall," Mrs. Bergin said, "but since that time we have heard nothing from the other junior colleges who were to attend this Trail Ride, so our students have canceled their arrangements."

Bowling Business Booms; Amori Extends Time Limit

Changing the limit of time to "indefinite," Joe Amori, instructor, announced recently that the bowling intramural tournament, now under way and originally scheduled for a week only, has been a booming success.

Rehashing his Monday, Wednesday, Friday and his Tuesday, Thursday bowlers into a total of 12 groups of 5 man teams, Amori has put a total of 60 keglers to pin-smashing.

"It's developing into something big," Amori said. "Each team will be given a name soon, and a team captain will also be selected."

The bowling instructor plans to have all teams vie against opponent units at least three times before the climax of the tournament. A schedule showing the number of victories and defeats will be drawn up shortly, according to Amori.

RAMettes
by Lu Antonicelli

The fact that the local college offers its women students one of the most lenient, and most varied extra-curricular sports calendars in California, was brought out recently when women from 25 colleges and junior colleges gathered for a "problem" conference in Modesto.

First and foremost in the list of discussion was the basis of awards used by the different colleges, long a sore spot on the local campus, where the final decision for the highest award a woman athlete may receive is based entirely upon the instructor's decision.

Of the 25 colleges present, there were only two, Sacramento Junior College and San Francisco Junior College, who leave the awarding of blazers to the faculty. And Sacramento has awarded only two blazers in the last eight years! Commenting on this situation, Thursa Scott, WAA president here, revealed that many of the representatives from the other colleges felt that the local system of awards was a bit lenient, but on the other hand, would be quite desirable when and if the Women's Block Society is allowed to sit in on the final judging of blazers.

Sacramento's WAA bases its activities on the interest shown by the women of the college for the various sports. There is no system of points, such as is found in San Francisco. The only award available, and the highest, is the blazer. The Pantherettes belong to the WAA for the enjoyment they get out of participating in a sport, not just for whatever award they may receive.

Most vigorously asserted argument of the conference was the fact that women should not be allowed to enter into competitions with men, the reason being that sports are harder on the women. Co-educational sports should be social not competitive activities, they say.

Most informative facts from the conference came when it was learned that for the local college's average semi-annual enrollment in WAA, 150, there are only, on the average, 30 women enrolled in a large number of the colleges which attended. Perhaps the basic rason for this lies in the fact that they do not have the large number of activities that are open to the women here. Where ramettes have on the whole a list of about 17 different activities in which to enroll, the other colleges have a considerably smaller group in which to engage.

Outcome of the conference are tentative plans to hold an all-college Sports Day in which collegiennes would be excused from classes to attend sports activities, a barbecue, and later that evening a dance.

News Notes:

Last week's co-educational playday was called off because the Staters didn't receive replies in answer to their invitations. However, it is expected that it will be held sometime later in the semester.

WAA archers are having postal matches with Salinas, Stockton, and Bakersfield colleges . . . there was no council meeting Monday because of a lack of business. This Monday, however, council members will meet at 4:30 in Room 317. . . . Saturday, at Mills College, there will be an archery and badminton exhibition by professionals in the two sports. Anyone interested is welcome to attend from 9 until 2 o'clock.

College riders will participate in a Junior College Horse Show to be held at the Stanyan Street stables at 7:30 o'clock, Saturday evening, April 13, Marjorie Radke, manager of riding, announced early this week.

Three riders from the following colleges, San Francisco, Marin, Sacramento, San Mateo, and Santa Rosa, will perform, according to Miss Radke.

Was talking to a former student a while ago and he wondered why the crew was cut off the college sports program. He claimed that California, at one time, was willing to present the college with one of its older barges or shells.

Of course, there is the matter of financing sweeps. They are always being broken by the green oarsman. Then, too, to enter any races across the bay would necessitate transportation charges of the crew, shell and sweeps. Oh, well, when it rains and the bay fills up, our thoughts turn to crew.

Saw Captain McFarland down in the study hall, and he said that the rifle team had been willing to pay part of its expenses to Washington for the Intercollegiate Rifle Championships. Probably not all the facts are out, but as it stands it seems rather a raw deal.

The team has one of the best reputations for consistent class A shooting in northern California. The men are proved shooters.

Now, alongside of this, compare the boxing team. The men want an appropriation to Salinas and they get it. What is this, discrimination? We think not but would like to know the facts.

The rifle team, no doubt, would have brought home at least second or third place and given the college an added and favorable national reputation.

Stayed Outside

Pictured above are random shots taken by The Guardsman's ace photographer, Joseph Kurpieski, at the High Frosh Dance last Friday night. The dance, the first college affair of its kind held in the East Bay, apparently suffered but little from the effects of a very considerable downpour. The upper picture shows the umbrella rack in Oakland's Scottish Rite Auditorium, well filled and dripping. The second picture is a shot of the dance floor, featuring Associated Students President Al Williams, in the center, watching the "little birdie" with rapt attention. The third picture was a candid shot taken in the darkened balcony with the aid of a flash gun. The persons pictured will remain anonymous. Fourth picture shows Associated Students Vice-President Muriel Grenelle, who was forced by her professional duties as chairman of the social committee to spend part of the evening at the door checking student body cards.

Student opinion on the dance was very favorable. It was felt that everyone had adequate room in which to dance. Strangely enough the heavy downpour kept only a handful from attending the affair.

High Sophs

Crienkovich Will Dive In Class Swim At Fairmont

Helen Crienkovich, college mermaid and national diving star, will perform at the high soph swimming party which will be held April 12 at the Fairmont Plunge, Art Pomares, class president, promised this week.

Miss Crienkovich has but recently returned from a good-will tour in South America, stopping off to perform in Florida and at Los Angeles.

Other attractions at the swim, Pomares said, will be various stunt races between the low frosh and high sophs, and an aquacadic version of "Joe's Jaysee." The swim contests are slated as a result of a challenge from the low freshmen to the sophs.

Tickets at 35 cents will be available at the pool on the night of the swim, Pomares added.

High soph plans for their climax week, May 28-24, are not yet definite, as far as action of the rally committee is concerned, according to chairman Hal Hoffman. Questioned as to results of the rally committee's meeting last Tuesday, he explained:

"We don't want to release any plans because they are not definitely set. However, everyone can look forward to the fact that the high soph rally is going to be long remembered in the history of the junior college. We're not promising anything spectacular, but we are promising a good rally. However, to make this a good rally, I'm going to need the support of every member in the high soph class. If anyone has any ideas that would contribute to the rally, please get in touch with me."

USF Players To Present Drama For Polish Relief

To aid Polish refugees inside German-occupied Poland and in other countries, the University of San Francisco College Players are producing Cyrano de Bergerac in the Little Theater, Fulton and Cole Streets, April 9 through April 13, Richard M. Tobin, former United States Minister to the Hague, and director of Polish relief here, recently announced.

"Groups of American people have decided to demonstrate this country's love and admiration for Ignace Jan Paderewski in his 80th birthday year by raising at least $1,000,000 in 1940," Tobin said, "and for this purpose, the entire profits from this dramatic production are to be turned over to the fund."

Cyrano de Bergerac was an actual person, a French cavalier, in the accepted manner, who would rather write poetry than fight a duel, and would rather fight a duel than eat. His love affair was complicated by his stupendous, unbelievably large nose. How he wins his Roxanne in the last moments of his life produces one of the greatest dramatic thrills in the history of the theater.

"The production, according to James J. Gill, director of the USF College Players, is one of the most ambitious productions ever attempted by the group.

There are numerous technical difficulties connected with the staging of the play that must be overcome, such as the Little Theater, for instance, is much too small for the large cast of more than 75, and the entire stage must be built over, Gill revealed.

Low Sophs Change Plans Again; Now It's Alum Rock

Completely throwing over their previous plans, the low sophomore picnic committee has decided on an outing to Alum Rock on April 28, according to Dan McHugh, class president.

An informal, inexpensive time, including dancing and swimming, is promised to all who join the excursion, McHugh said. Automobile accommodations will be investigated by the picnic committee, which includes McHugh, Al Podesta, Ralph Igler, Horace Simi, Mike Barrier, Bert Nickel, Bole Dodd, and John Hansen.

Collegiate Mixer Dances To Be Held Friday Nights At Aquatic Park; Joe Luke's Orchestra To Play

Collegiate mixers were inaugurated last Friday night at Aquatic Park by Joe Luke and his orchestra.

"Friday night the first dance was a success," Luke said. "The dancers seemed to enjoy themselves, and if they were as pleased as they seemed, the dances will continue for a long time."

Several students of the college have heard Luke, and from all reports he has a very good orchestra, with a vocal trio of girls and a 14-year-old boy vocalist who is a new "find".

By special arrangement, students of the college will be allowed a 10-cent reduction for student body cards, Luke revealed. The regular admission price is 40 cents for women and 60 cents for men.

"We have played in other locations, but none known as beautiful as picturesque Aquatic Park," said Luke, "and it is a real pleasure to play for the young people of the bay region."

Guardsman Fashion Show To Be Held On April 26

Date of the Guardsman fashion show has been tentatively set for April 16, according to information from Daniel Rosenblat, associate editor of the publication.

Rosenblat said the various women's groups of the college, including the AWS and the HEA, have been contacted and are cooperating with The Guardsman. Joseph Amori, speaking for the men's groups, promised support. Tryouts for models are now being held, Rosenblat said.

The City of Paris will furnish both men's as well as women's clothes to be modeled.

As planned, the show will be held in the Galileo Auditorium.

Club Advisory Board

Ex Council Okays Ouster Of Seven Clubs, Suspension Of Three More

Approval of Club Advisory Board action in revoking the charters of seven clubs ruled as inactive and in suspending three other clubs for failure to apply for renewal of charters, came this week from the Executive Council at its last meeting.

Those clubs now ruled out of the CAB had failed to contact the board concerning their charters for two successive semesters, and to be reinstated must go through the probational procedure of newly formed clubs.

As listed by CAB president Alden Thorogood, the "inactive" clubs are: Alpha Gamma Sigma, Chess Club, George Washington Club, Iota Chi, Le Cercle Francais, Press Club, and Tarbuth Society.

Three clubs on the CAB suspension list are Music Club, Peace Society, and Phi Rho Pi. These still have an opportunity to renew their charters this semester, said Thorogood.

Two other clubs which were reported last week as suspended have since applied for renewal of charters, added Thorogood, making a total of 27 clubs in good standing in the CAB. They are listed as follows:

Alpha Delta Epsilon, Alpha Lambda Chi, Alpha Phi Omega, Army and Navy Club, Astronomy Club, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Block Society, Chinese Students' Club, Foresters' Fraternity, Forum Club, Hotel and Restaurant Management Society, Home Economics Society, Japanese Students' Club, Newman Club, Nu Epsilon Sigma, Omicron Phi Pi, Phi Alpha Omega, Phi Beta Rho, Physical Education and Recreation Majors, Pick and Hammer, Pi Mu Gamma, Rifle and Pistol Club, Skating Club, Ski Club, Tri Epsilon, Women's Service Society.

Next meeting of the CAB will be held at 1 o'clock next Tuesday, the place to be announced later.

College Survey To Be Conducted

As part of his nation-wide survey of terminal education in the junior college, Byron S. Hollingshead, acting as a representative of the American Junior College Association, is visiting San Francisco this week to study the college's many semi-professional courses, President Archibald J. Cloud announced.

During his stay here, President Cloud said, Hollingshead will be conducted on a tour of the various campuses, at which time the workings of the hotel division, police training department, florticulture classes, radio production group, insurance and business courses, and civil service classes will be explained.

Yesterday Hollingshead was honored by a luncheon in the junior college cafeteria prepared by the hotel and restaurant division. Guests were prominent local business men, and college officials.

Hollingshead is the present president of the Scranton-Keystone Junior College of Pennsylvania and is junior past president of the American Junior College Association.

The University of Wisconsin boxing team has been unbeaten in 32 consecutive home matches.

This Collegiate World . . .

Dictionary Dope: The newest volume of the Dictionary of American English being published by the University of Chicago is handing down to posterity many words and phrases dear to the hearts of slang-minded collegians.

For instance, "flunk" is defined as "complete failure in a course, examination, or an etcetera." "Gas" is unpretentious talk, especially of a political kind.

"Flumaddle" is also included in the latest volume, which includes words from "flinty" to "gold region." It even includes "gin palace," which is a "grog shop of a pretentious or gaudy appearance."

Wonder if they've added the latest fad of the collegians, "goldfish eating?"

If you are addicted to reading the daily paper in your morning classes you'll understand the plight of a Dartmouth College junior who sat in the last row in one of his lectures reading a story which began on the first page and was continued on page eight. He couldn't lift the paper in order to turn the pages and he didn't have room to turn them if he kept the daily down out of sight.

He sat there for five minutes trying to turn the pages slowly so that they wouldn't crackle and was just about to give up in disgust when the man sitting directly in front of him turned and gave him a paper which was already arranged at page eight. The man in front had already read the story. "Thought you might be having trouble," he said. "I had a bit myself."

"The problem of the liberal college is the preservation of liberalism. If the liberal colleges are to fulfill their functions, they must be liberal in the truest sense of the word, and know what liberalism means in the truest and broadest sense. Liberalism is not a one-way street. It is necessary we tolerate the points of view and the opinions of those we do not agree with," Dartmouth College's President E. M. Hopkins defines the duties of the liberal college in the world of today.

Forum Magazine Requests Art Material By April 19

New art material will be especially welcomed for the Forum Magazine, according to Robert Kovacic, art director of the current issue of the magazine. Deadline for all material is April 19.

Pictures should not exceed the dimensions of 6 by 8 inches, commented Kovacic, but pictures of half that size or a quarter of that size will be gladly accepted.

Because of the added expense of printing, no colored pictures will be included in the current issue of the Forum Magazine.

No wash drawings will be accepted, added Kovacic, but etchings will be considered. Because only a short time before the deadline remains, no stories themselves will be illustrated, but art work will be inserted in the space available through a scarcity of short stories, Kovacic commented. Many block prints will be included in the current issue.

Several good etchings have already been submitted, and we are looking for the arrival of several more, Kovacic added.

Short plays are desired, the Forum staff indicated, as well as poems, essays, and other forms of literature.

Art entries should be submitted to one of the following faculty advisers: Dorothy Mercer, Evans Ecke, Fred Bracher, and William Goss, or to one of the following members of the editorial staff: Eleanore Leitner, Sol Lipsitz, Paula Levick, Helene Du Bois, or Kovacic.

Motion pictures on nutrition and digestion will be presented in the Powell Street Study Hall on Thursday, April 11, at 8 and 9 in the morning. All students are welcome to attend.

SOCIAL COMMITTEE CONVENES IMPORTANT MEETING

Social Committee members are urged to attend a meeting at Art Pomares' home, 1441-4th Avenue, Oakland, at 7:30 tonight, according to Muriel Grenelle, Associated Students' vice-president.

"I cannot overemphasize the importance of having all members present to discuss possible changes in committee membership and policy," Miss Grenelle said.

NYA Sponsors To Submit Personal Reports For File

New feature of the NYA is the filing of rating forms by NYA sponsors, which contain their impressions regarding the personal qualifications of their respective NYA student workers.

These forms, which will be filed in the Galileo office, will become permanent records of the NYA students. They will serve as a basis for future school recommendations to prospective employers and other colleges, becoming also the first record of actual work done by students of the college.

Since each NYA student has now worked a whole month, his sponsor should be able, according to Edward H. Redford, college NYA director, to give his impression of the student as an individual and as a product of the college.

Personal qualifications upon which each student is rated are voice and speech, appearance, alertness, ability to present ideas, judgment, emotional stability, self-confidence, friendliness, and personal fitness for chosen life work.

"This record is being kept mainly for the benefit of the NYA students themselves," Redford commented.

In a later statement Redford said, "I would like to see, as soon as possible, the first 20 students on the waiting list, as I have possibilities of jobs for them."

Select Hostesses For AWS Program At Century Club

Hostesses for the Associated Women Students' program and tea for parents of college women, at the Century Club on April 21, have been chosen, according to Gloria Miller, AWS president.

"I should like to ask women whose names appear on this list to meet with me in Room 212 at Galileo on Thursday at 2:30," Miss Miller said.

Those selected include Jeanne Arnold, Jean Chesley, Barbara Walsh, Barbara Cochran, Julie Bradshaw, Virginia Sini, Marge Lowson, Betty Mentzler, Muriel Grenelle, Florence Hansen, Adele Kuhn, Muriel Nolan, Dorothy Trood, Jeanne Kelly, Mary Jane Moore, Loretta Egan, Vorghilde Thorsen, Marian Murphy, Delores Dixon, Shirley White, Lyba Mackie, Ruby Klitsief, Marian MacKillop, and Mildred Bartoslewski.

"This list is only partially complete, and it will be supplemented by names of additional hostesses and several hosts at a later date," Miss Miller added.

Grenelle Reveals Low Soph Dance As May 3

Sponsored by the Associated Students, the low sophomore class dance will take place on May 3, Muriel Grenelle, Associated Students vice-president, recently revealed.

"Although we are still undecided as to where the dance will be held, it will be in San Francisco," Miss Grenelle said.

Also unchosen as yet is the orchestra for the affair, but several are being seriously considered, Miss Grenelle announced.

Students Invited To Art Exhibit In City Hall

Students of the college are invited to visit an exhibit to be held April 15, at 4 p. m. in the Registrar's Office at the City Hall, according to President Archibald J. Cloud.

On exhibit will be a completed model of the plans for development of the city.

Pieces At Art Exhibition Art Students To Show Ten

Beginning April 22, the annual Northern Junior College Art Exhibition will be held at the Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco, Richard Allman, college art instructor, announced recently.

Quota for the college has been set at 10 pieces, with the type of work and size of mat optional. The exhibition will remain here for one month, and all work must be in by April 16, Allman said.

"The exhibition is the culmination of a year's preparation," he added, "and all work done by students during the period has been with this in mind."

The college group will include landscapes, water colors, and modern posters. All entries will be judged by the museum staff.

Because of the ever increasing popularity of photography, Allman believes that next year a definite space will be allotted to this field.

April 28 Low Soph Picnic Accommodations Settled

Promise of a good time to all who attend the low sophomore picnic on April 28 has been made by the class president, Dan McHugh, who revealed that automobile accommodations to Alum Rock will be made by his committee.

Dancing at Alum Rock will be 25 cents, McHugh said, but other than this sum, there will be no expense, since all picnickers are asked to provide their own lunch.

Picnic sports, McHugh revealed, will be swimming and baseball. The committee is planning a game between the men and women, or between two fraternities to be selected, according to Hert Nickel, member of the group.

Those who wish to join this outing are asked to meet at Sloat Boulevard and 19th Avenue at 9 o'clock.

Yell-Fest

Spring Sports Rally Friday Features Show, Pep, Music

All 2:30 o'clock classes will be officially excused Friday for the spring sports rally to be held in the Galileo Auditorium, according to Registrar J. Paul Mohr.

It is requested, however, that all students first report to their classes before attending the rally, Mohr said.

Main feature of the coming rally will be a completely new performance of Jack Schmale's "Joe's Jaysee," brought back by popular demand, according to Ray Berns, rally committee chairman.

According to Berns, principal players in the skits will be Elmer Hughes, Mel Chicasola, Tony Manov, Ken Pasqualetti, Dave Johnson, Bob Fox, Stan Tobiason, and Bobby Lowell.

Coach Tom Wilson will give a short "pep" talk on tennis. Coach Russ Sweet will discourse on track, and Coach Jack Gaddy will discuss baseball potentialities, Berns said.

"Music for a jam session," he promises, "will be provided by a local student organization."

"Main purpose for Friday's rally is to work up college enthusiasm for the spring program of sports," Berns added.

Tomorrow Last Day For Fair Ticket Applications

Bargain tickets to the Golden Gate International Exposition can be ordered until tomorrow, April 10, according to a report received from J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of educational management.

Order blanks which were inserted in last Tuesday's Guardsman should be filled out and returned into the bank at Galileo or to Tom O'Neill, in charge of the Powell Street office, before tomorrow, Sullivan said.

Students who applied for their tickets can call for them at the Galileo bank during the week of April 22 to 26. If students have not obtained their books by that week, they will be able to buy them then; in fact, after tomorrow, the bargain books can be bought without blanks, Sullivan indicated.

Sullivan urged all students to take advantage of the Fair's generosity in offering 130 admissions for $3.75, or a transferable combination admission-special attraction book containing five admissions, and five tickets to outstanding shows, for $2.50.

Rains Fail To Halt Construction On Campus

Construction on the Balboa campus has continued in spite of heavy rains, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, announced.

"After looking at the buildings and noticing how well actual construction is progressing, I feel very confident that the campus will be ready for occupation next semester," Mohr declared.

Low Freshman Will Answer Soph Challenge To Swim Meet April 12

Announcement was made today by Bob Kletzker, president of the low freshman class, that the low frosh would participate in the forthcoming high soph swimming party to be held at the Fairmont on April 12.

Competitive contests in swimming and diving between the two classes are now being planned. "All those who can swim or dive in the low freshman class are asked to sign up on the bulletin board at Powell Street, to compete against Art Pomares' high sophs," said Kletzker.

Athletic Council Postpones Ski Talk

Cancellation of a proposed Men's Athletic Council meeting for the purpose of determining whether the Ski team shall be regarded officially as a "minor sport" division was made by the head of the council, Russ Sweet, last Friday.

Sweet said that the MAC would decide on the "current issue" sometime this week. It could not be held, according to Sweet, last week because Al Williams, Associated Student president, and member of the council, was unable to appear.

The problem of the future standing of the ski team as a minor sport unit will have an important bearing upon whether the skiers will be able to appropriate funds for a scheduled trip to Norden on April 12, according to Bob Ogg, ski club president.

To date, the ski group under the supervision of instructor Alden Smith, has had but six months' experience behind it. Whether this amount of time is sufficient to make it eligible for minor sport recognition is to be one of the main questions to be discussed, council members said.

CAB Intramural Sports Program Gets Under Way

Yesterday saw the start of the CAB basketball tournament when the Block Society played Beta Tau at Galileo, according to a schedule drawn up by Art Pomares, chairman of the CAB athletic committee.

Other college organizations which have signed up for the tournament are Phi Alpha Omega, Foresters' Fraternity, Ski Club, Beta Phi Beta, and Tri Epsilon.

Games are scheduled every day in the week, to begin at 4:10 o'clock at either Galileo or at Marina Junior High, Pomares said. Because of the early starting time, the Hotel and Restaurant Management Society has withdrawn from the CAB games.

At the end of two or three weeks, depending on the time needed to run off the entire schedule, the winning team will be awarded either a trophy or individual medals for the players, Pomares announced, with possibly a plaque for the second team.

"This is the first year a basketball league in the CAB has been tried out," he added, "and we hope to make a success out of it."

Alden Thorogood, CAB president, declared all students in the college are cordially invited to attend the games as spectators.

Pomares Opens Contest For Soph Sweetheart

Art Pomares, high sophomore president, this week asked that all college sororities begin plans for selecting their candidate for a queen to reign during Sophomore Week, May 20-24.

The contest for a Sophomore Sweetheart, he added, is open to other classes than high sophs, following a precedent of earlier semesters.

With this announcement came also his suggestion that the fraternities give their opinions on the selection of a king. "This has never been done before, but we think it will be something new," he explained.

While this idea is percolating, Pomares added, the social committee will go forward for a formal on May 25 to climax High Soph Week. Both the Lakeside and the California Country Club are being considered as possible places at which to stage this affair.

Tickets for two other high soph events will, in the meantime, be available soon, Pomares revealed. Those for the May 1 excursion to Paradise Cove are expected to be on sale the latter part of this week or the early part of the next, at 75 cents, which includes rental of boat and of picnicking grounds, but does not include lunches. As to the swimming party scheduled for April 12, admissions will be 35 cents per person, to be paid at the Fairmont Plunge's Swimming will be from 8 to 11.

Mark's Peacock Court Friday Dance Scene

Friday night will be the date of Chuck Foster's opening at the Hotel Mark Hopkins, and in addition the date of the Hotel Society's annual dance at the same hill-top hostelry, announced Terry Sandelin, president of the society.

The affair, a semi-formal occasion, will be open to all students of the college wishing to participate, said Sandelin, who expressed the hope that students might not be under the impression that the dance was open to the Hotel Society alone.

"I wish to emphasize that this dance is open to all students, and more than that, the price is only $1.25 per couple, forty cents cheaper than the regular cover charge for any first class hotel in San Francisco," Sandelin remarked. "The tickets may be obtained from any member of the society or from the bank at Galileo," he added.

Pictured to the right is the Peacock Court of the Hotel Mark Hopkins where a representative of the society's dance committee is shown making final preparations for Friday's dance.

Friday night, in addition to the dancers, Peacock Court will play host to Chuck Foster and his band for the first time.

RAM'S HORN

Guardsman Rapped; Weicker No Moron; Spectator Asleep

(Editor's Note: In fairness to writers to the Ram's Horn, no letter is corrected for grammatical errors or edited in any way by members of The Guardsman staff.)

● HO-HUM!

Editor, The Guardsman:

In Steinbeck's Grapes of Wrath, little Winfield developed a good case of the "howlin' Skitters" from eating green apples. This reminds me somewhat of ace city editor Lou Goldstone, whose pen has developed the same affliction. Whether he acquired this affliction from eating apples I do not know. However, it is becoming more and more acute.

So Goldstone does not approve of being kept out of the Welfare Council's meetings. And our editor, Len Gross, does not approve either. Its "not democratic" they shout. It's not the way things ought to be and they are mad. In fact so mad that they are just going to take it upon themselves to, to—well, they're just mad enough to do it.

Perhaps the Welfare Council members have good reason for their "No Comment." As I understand the situation, the Council is making a survey of extra-curricular activities which will of extra-curricular activities which will include a measurement of participation in the activities by each student and a poll of student opinion on the various school affairs. This type of a survey sounds like a pretty good approach to proper Student Government. Naturally a committee which is making a scientific survey does not divulge its findings until it has its report completely compiled. That also sounds pretty sensible.

It might be well to inform Comrade Goldstone that survey does not, in any way, mean "probe" or "investigation." I would recommend he invest in a "Rogers Theosaurus." According to authoratative sources, the work of the Welfare Council is to be, in no sense, a "probe." They are not going to "investigate" subversive activities —in fact they probably will not even investigate why the Guardsman Editor is not elected rather than appointed by the faculty advisor (if they are so anxious about democracy), or what the motives of Mr. Goldstone were when he got all excited about the Finnish Relief situation or why he attempted to bribe the ex-council last semester into sending him to Los Angeles to cover a football game. His attempted bribe was highly unsuccessful. No, the Welfare Council will not even investigate "subversive activities." The whole attitude of Goldstone toward the good work of the Welfare Council, to quote Hilaire Belloc, is "damn funny."

Affectionately yours,
Hugh Waite

P.S. Len, You believe in democracy—well I wonder if the Guardsman staff has what it takes to print this one.

● WHO'S A MORON?

Editor, The Guardsman:

I, described quite recently through the Ram's Horn as a moron, have found it necessary to protect myself from the attack of one Sol Lipsitz. I dislike to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose, but I would like to tell Mr. Lipsitz that his letter is unfair, without reason, and downright insulting.

Mr. Lipsitz has no definite knowledge that I am a moron. He does not know my I.Q. rating. I don't myself. He does not know me personally. I have not got a reputation for having moronic tendencies, and I know damned well that I'm no moron.

Mr. Lipsitz stated that the purpose of his letter was to ask that the reading matter of The Guardsman should not be written to please the lower half (or was it 10 per cent?) of the student body. I agree with him there, but when he calls all my classmates and schoolmates the moronic half of the student body, he's gone too far. Everyone I spoke to about my criticism said that they agreed with me 100 per cent. No one told me that I was a moron, and I have few, if any, moronic classmates. Alpha Gamma Sigma members felt the same way I did, and they definitely are not morons.

Furthermore, anyone who read my letter who had a grain of common sense could see that I was making a plea for good American language. Mr. Lipsitz's letter was, in reality, a defense of hyper-intellectuality. I don't claim to enjoy reading such intellectual pap that Mr. Goldstone included, and in my opinion anyone who claims to enjoy it and can write a letter defending it, is nothing but a pop-off inclined to be an egotistical exhibitionist.

● THIS ISN'T CRICKET

Editor, The Guardsman:

In reading Harry Frister's column, "The Spectator," in last Friday's Guardsman, I noticed that Mr. Frister failed to give any credit to Figaro, the woodcarver's kitten.

Mr. Frister has written many good reviews in the past (at least, I think so), but I do think that he slipped up on Pinocchio.

All of those who have seen Pinocchio will agree (I hope) that Figaro steals at least the first two reels of the film. Walt Disney has created a masterpiece in Pinocchio, but I feel that his creation of Figaro is by far the greatest stroke of his genius.

When I saw the picture, a week ago, the audience was convulsed with laughter at the antics of Figaro. I saw the picture twice, and both times the audience reacted the same way.

Does Mr. Frister mention this? No. Could he have slept through the first two reels? Or did he just read the reviews of other local newshawks?

His selection of Jiminy Cricket as the star of the picture seems to substantiate my claims. Every review that I have read does that. It may be true that Mr. Cricket does steal the honors (I personally don't think so), but Figaro should have been mentioned—no matter how biased the reviewer might have been.

This all sounds trivial, but I believe in being fair to everyone, even if it only be a pen-and-ink drawing.

Here's hoping for justice in the future, Mr. Frister.

Your reader and critic,
Philip Kline

● RAH, RAH, RAH!

Editor, The Guardsman:

"Counter-point," Rosenblat's column, is becoming one the best features in the paper. It is succinct, to the point, and extremely informative. "Counter-point" is worthy of being kept in someone's scrap book.

Aside from Rosenblat's work, I think that the paper on the whole has improved from last semester. The news is more informative, the features more lively, and the editorials interesting. It seems to me that people have been taking too much time to damn The Guardsman without taking a little time off to give praise where praise is due. It's really a good paper!

College Radio Group Aids In Pageant Repeat In May

Commemorating four great periods in the history of California, the pageant, Span of Gold, will be presented May 23, in the Opera House, by students representing Mission, Washington, and Galileo High Schools, and the Junior College, announced Marie Weller, radio broadcasting instructor in the college.

The pageant, which was last year presented before the National Education Association during its convention here, is to be open to the public at both the afternoon and evening performances.

The history of California has been divided into four periods as a means of presentation. The periods being the eras of Fremont, Wells and Fargon, Judah, and Strauss.

Ram Rifleers Enter Marin Tourney With Cards, Cal

Next Sunday, April 14, the Ram riflemen will compete in the Marin County .30 Caliber League match at Fort Barry between East Bay, Marin, local colleges and rifle clubs, Capt. Fred C. McFarland disclosed last week.

California, Stanford and the Rams have announced their intention to enter the meet, announced McFarland, and many more colleges are expected to enter.

George Humphrey, Ram marksman, won an "experts medal" by qualifying in last year's shoot. McFarland expects him to place high again this year.

"A lot of the boys probably will make good scores because they won't be scared to death," added McFarland. "Last time, the fellows came home with split lips, black eyes, and sore shoulders, because they weren't used to the kick of the larger guns."

Charles North, Ram rifle team captain, and Arthur Templeton are expected to also win places in the meet, McFarland said, and several other marksmen should place in the meet.

Ram Ballplayers Smash Menlo Team In Double-Header

Coach Jack Gaddy has found a pitcher at last. Bob Hvidt, baseball star from Berkeley, hurled a three hit shutout against Menlo last Saturday, to help the Rams win a double header victory 11 to 5, and 11 to 0.

Harry Aleo, leading Ram pitcher, hurled the first contest, and coasted in to win after his teammates had given him a six run bulge during the eighth inning.

Tom Lathos, a rookie Menlo thrower, handcuffed the locals for the first three innings, while his batsmen piled up a two run lead. However, the Rams finally got to him in the fourth to score four runs and take the lead.

Roscoe Wollcott, leading Ram hitter started the fireworks in the fourth by working Lathos for a base on balls. Joe Mezzetti, hard-hitting catcher, lined a three base hit to left field, scoring Wollcott.

Aleo scored Brahant on a sacrifice fly, and the inning ended with the Rams leading 4 to 2. The locals were never headed after that, though Menlo did threaten to tie the score twice afterward.

Hvidt had things his own way during the second game. The Rams scored five runs in the third inning with only two hits. Ten stolen bases were chalked up for Ram runners that inning.

Hvidt started things with a single. Bob Nishi sacrificed him to second with a nicely timed bunt. Al Giovannetti walked. Frank Mullins struck out. Then, with two men out, things began to happen.

Hvidt started to steal home, and the Menlo catcher, Sonnickson, committed the first of two balks, allowing Hvidt to score, and Roy Michell to take first gase. Wollcott walked. The pitcher, Moudakus, committed the second balk when Giovanetti attempted to steal home.

Giovanetti was allowed to score the second Ram run. Webber knocked out a single, scoring Michell, Wollcott, and Moreira, and then reached third on a series of Menlo errors. He died on third when Brahant struck out to end the inning.

First Game

Menlo	1	1	0	0	1	0	2	0	0	— 5
Hits	1	2	0	1	2	0	2	1	0	— 9

Errors: Menlo 2, SFJC 1.

College Club Prepares For Vanderbilt Trophy Ski Meet

Contrary to reports that the college ski club was to leave for Norden last Friday night to compete in the Vanderbilt Trophy meet, was an announcement made yesterday by Bob Ogg, club president, that the Vanderbilt meet would not be held until this Saturday and Sunday, April 13 and 14.

Competing for the college will be Ogg, Falk Falkenburg, Stan Pittman, and Bill O'Neill. Races for the Vanderbilt meet will consist of a slalom, and a two-mile relay race on Saturday; April 13 a giant slalom and jumping contests on Sunday, April 14, according to Ogg.

The proposed trip for spectators by Southern Pacific train on Sunday has been called off, Ogg said, because of the apparent lack of interest. He added, however, that anyone who wished to see the college skiers compete, would be able to obtain tickets for $4.58.

This will be the second competition for the locals, their first meet having been with Salinas Junior College, in which the Ram skiers managed only to place second in all of the contests.

Among the 15 colleges entering the meet will be California, University of Nevada, Oregon State, Idaho, Southern California, Stanford and Utah.

Netmen Sneak 4-3 Win From Menlo; Madamba Trounced

College netsters barely managed a 4 to 3 victory over the determined Menlo racqueteers last Saturday afternoon, according to Coach Tom Wilson.

It was up to the third, fourth and fifth men to pull the Rams out of the jaws of defeat, in that the one and two men collected no points in their singles encounters.

Under perfect playing conditions offered by the Palace of Fine Arts, Ram No. 1 man, Bill Madamba, was nosed out by Menlo's pride, Andy Roberts. Madamba took the first set with an easy 3-6, lead the second set 7-6, only to have Roberts take the next three for the set. The playoff was hard fought, but the tiring Madamba was no match for Roberts, who had Madamba all over the court, handing him the short end of the 7-5 score.

Chet Meade, No. 2 Ramster, lost his match to Ben Olsen; although winning the first set, he lost the last, 6-2, 6-1. Olsen's powerful drives kept the versatile Meade running in circles.

Ray Berns, Ram No. 3 man, began the scoring for the college when he defeated Lloyd, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2. Applying the "push" to his advantage, Berns rallied in the final set and won easily, Wilson revealed.

Most consistent player for the Rams is Jack Hare, who hasn't lost a match in a conference game thus far. He defeated Steele of Menlo in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2. Calagos won the other singles match for the Rams by defeating Alder, 6-0, 6-4.

Coach Tom Wilson blamed overconfidence for the defeat in the college doubles match against Roberts and Olsen. Madamba was not in his usual stride, however, and although Berns tried his best, the opponents proved to be superior, winning two straight, 6-3, 6-2.

With the count three even, the combination of Hare and Meade managed to account for the winning point, defeating the Menlo team of Lloyd and Alder, 6-4, 6-2.

Slated for this afternoon at 1 p.m. at the Palace of Fine Arts is a practice match with S.F. State. This coming Saturday, Coach Wilson will take his team to Yuba for their fifth conference game. Although the Ram-men expect to win, "we don't want to take chances," Wilson said.

WAA Tennis-Archery Day Scheduled For Saturday

Tennis-Archery playday, sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association, will be held on Saturday, April 13, from 9 o'clock in the morning until 12:15, Rosamond Patterson, co-chairman and tennis manager, announced this week.

Round-robin tournaments will be held for the archery events, and singles and doubles tournaments will constitute the tennis events, Miss Patterson revealed.

After the events are held, a luncheon will be served for 25 cents, which will be under the general supervision of Rema Corbitt.

It is hoped by the committee that Bertha Keller, adviser, will demonstrate the "stroke-master," if the instrument can be procured.

College women will participate in the horse show to be held at the San Francisco Riding School, Saturday, evening, April 13, at 8 o'clock, Alma Koopman, vice-president of the WAA, announced last week.

"Representatives will be sent from Sacramento Junior College and Marin Junior College," Miss Koopman said, "and after the horse show there will be a barn dance and refreshments for all the participants and their escorts."

Other WAA activities scheduled for this semester are a badminton playday to be held on April 12, at Marin Junior College; trail ride and picnic lunch at Marin, to which three of the best riders will be sent, price $1.35; and a golf tournament on April 18, also at Marin, Miss Koopman concluded.

Paavo Nurmi, the famed Finnish Phantom, has been Olympic champion in the 1500 meters run, 10,000 meters cross-county, 5,000 meters run, and the 10,000 meters run.

Bear Cub Meet

Track Men Victims Of 'Squeeze Play' In Cal.-J.C. Quintuple Tangle

Virtually closed out of the running with 10 hard-won points, the Ram tracksters made a valiant attempt to place the college squad on the cinder map at Edwards Field last Saturday afternoon.

In a quintuple meet with the California Frosh, Salinas, Marin, San Francisco, and Menlo junior colleges ganged up on the Bear Cubs, but were unable to cope with the 56 5-6 digits that the Cal men amassed during the meet. Salinas scored 42½, Marin 20 1-3, SFJC 10, and Menlo 10 points.

Louis Vasquez copped a fourth place in the mile run. Time was 4:35.1. A fast "comer" in the 880 yard run, Jim Dunn of the Cal Frosh led the field to the tape in 2:01.6. Ramman Lowery finished in fourth position.

Tie for first in the high jump developed among Abbott, Marin; Mosler, college; and Troxey, Frosh. Final height was set at 6 feet 1 inch.

Jim Wagstaff of the Ram cindermen tossed the rubber platter 115 feet 10 inches to place fourth in the discus event. Frosh Jurkovich took first honors with a spin of 133 feet 4 inches.

The mile relay contest was taken by the California sprinters, Kent, Roe, McBride, and Klemmer, in 3:25 flat.

Harold Davis, the Morgan Hill meteor running for Salinas, was the only dual winner. He was clocked in the fast time of 9.7 in the century and 21 flat in the 220. Grover Klemmer, sensational frosh quarter-miler, made the only other outstanding performance of the day when he ran the 440 in :48-9.

The Bear Cubs scored seven first places out of the 14 events on the afternoon's program.

Although scheduled to meet the Santa Rosa trackmen in a conference battle at Santa Rosa Saturday, the college squad trekked to Edwards Field instead to join Salinas, Marin, and Menlo in an onslaught on the fast-rising Cal team.

Divot-Diggers Down San Mateo, Menlo

Fresh from victories over San Mateo and Menlo, the Ram golfers will meet San Francisco State next Friday at Ingleside.

Coach Louis G. "Dutch" Conlan's Ram putters turned back San Mateo 18 to 9 at Ingleside last Friday, and trounced the Menlo divoteers 17 to 10 on Saturday.

There is no regular conference schedule in golf, Conlan announced, but a championship meet is held instead. This season's meet is scheduled for Modesto on May 17.

"Our leading putters, Barney Rice, Bill McLaughlin, and Bill Hoffman, have consistently been turning in cards below 80," Conlan commented. "We have a good team this season, and I don't see why we shouldn't bring back a trophy from Modesto next month."

All matches played before the Modesto championships have no bearing upon the team's record, other than to establish a superiority of one team over another, Conlan added. The Rams have a good team, and should improve as the season progresses.

Several practice matches remain on the golf schedule after meeting State next Friday.

The divoteers will again battle State at Ingleside the following Friday, April 19. Then the Ram golfers travel to Modesto to engage a strong Modesto team. This match will give the locals a preview of the conditions in the Northern California Championships on May 17.

After a week's rest, the divot diggers meet Menlo in a return match at Ingleside. The season winds up the following Friday at Modesto when the championships are held.

The locals will have completed a strenuous practice schedule before competing in the championships, and will have met most of the strong golf teams, Conlan said. The team should be ready to make a good showing by the time the final meet rolls around on May 17.

Amori Pronounces Keglers Successful In Tourney

Entering into its second week, the college intramural bowling tourney continues as a resounding success in the eyes of Joe Amori, college bowling instructor.

The six five-man teams in the Monday-Wednesday class are doing an average of about 500, "Which isn't very bad for a group that has been bowling for such a short time," said the kegler coach.

The teams were given names of big league baseball clubs, such as the Giants, Reds, Tigers, and others. The Yanks may look like a cinch in the American League, but they're just another team in the intramural meet, according to Amori.

Team captains are being selected for each of the quintets. They will be the men who have bowled the highest consistent averages to date.

Hoping for further improvement, Amori is still looking for his "find." The end of the semester may yet bring to light a Willie Hoppe of the bowling alleys.

Fiscal Scholarships Open To College Students Listed

Available to students here for the year 1940-1941 are several scholarships, according to Allice C. Cooper, Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser. If further information is desired, the individual should write to Miss K. D. Loly of Pasadena Junior College. Information concerning the scholarships may also be obtained from Miss Cooper.

College of Osteopathic Physicians at Los Angeles offers a scholarship for two years, valued at $600, while the College of the Pacific offers a scholarship for one year's paid tuition, valued at $230.

Dominican College at San Rafael offers a one year's paid tuition, renewable for the senior year, valued at $200, and an additional $200 for the senior year. La Verne College offers two scholarships, for one man and one woman, valued at $200 each. Mills College at Oakland offers a scholarship for resident students, to apply on one $400 year's tuition.

Campus Sports Personalities

By KEI HORI

We have always had a passion for Lana Turner. So far, the closest we have gotten to her is the silver screen and to the tow-headed, chunky Edgar Cerf of the college.

That Ed knew her during her junior high school days makes this campus character news.

The 5 feet 10 inch, 180 pound, 18 year old ball of fire, at present is majoring in pre-med, following his father's footprints. Ed can be seen cavorting around the Powell Street building with the rest of his playmates about 10 o'clock. He is the one with the curly hair and on the receiving end of most of the practical jokes being played in that vicinity.

Our hero has attended Cabrillo, Presidio and Lowell, and started playing basketball in the eighth grade, when his team won the championship for the first time. Ed has also gone out for track, and football as well. In high school he was a member of the honor society, and received his block and three stripes. His favorites are as follows: Song—Stardust; actress and actor—Norma Shearer and John Garfield; Tommy Dorsey's orchestra, and Jack Leonard to serenade him.

Looking forward to attending Stanford U., Edgar thinks the teachers here are swell, 'specially the Doc, and the kids okay, too, sez he.

From unofficial sources, Oscar has learned that Edgar had once taken out the glamorous Miss Turner, when she was called "Judy." Oscar hints that to students to ask him about the experience. Too bad we are unable to write the story here—it would fill a book.

We think Oscar has a jealous bone to pick with Ed. He has just gone for the shotgun.

College Skaters Groom Stars For Second Ice Carnival

Scheduled for April 27 at 5:30, college ice skaters will present their second Ice Carnival, at Winterland Ice Rink, according to Bill Hart, college ice club president.

Prices for the event have been set at 65 cents including skate rental, 50 cents for those with skates, and 35 cents for spectators, Hart revealed.

Appearing in the production will be Hart, his dancing partner, Stuart Ross, Marcella May, women's junior figure skating champ, Murray Galbraith, Cleveland senior men's figure skate winner, and Ed Bodell.

Included in the program will be a fourteen step waltz by members of the college's advanced skaters class. Those taking part will be couples Fred Quandt and Margaret Meader, Patricia McKenna and Bud Vodden, Lucille Jacke and Ed Bodell, and Dorothy Jacke and Wiley Burnett.

While Thinking

COLLEGE

TUESDAY saw quite a bit of excitement within the political circles of the college. The Executive Council took a sum of cash from the various Associated Student organizations to provide for future anticipated expenditures, such as the forthcoming carnival at Balboa Park, and the request from the ski team for funds.

Hardest hit by the drastic but necessary measures was the Club Advisory Board, which lost $200 of the $500 originally allotted.

CAB members seemed to feel that they had been hard done by, but what could they expect when they had made no concrete plans for the expenditure of their budget?

Strangely enough, several cabinet heads of the board protested that they did not have enough time to work out their plans. The semester is two-thirds over. What have they been doing for the last couple of months?

OUR daily prayer — Please, oh, please, Lord, do something to wake up the majority of the college Executive Council, even if it is in the form of a bomb!

NATIONAL

THE 17 Christian Front plotters are on trial for seditious conspiracy this week.

G-Men have amassed an imposing array of evidence against the men who sought violently to overthrow the United States Government, so their conviction should be swift.

We wonder if our rather easy going American laws will be too lenient with the conspirators and let them off lightly?

Many have claimed that this is a nation that is too free. Sometimes we are almost inclined to agree with them. A survey of criminal records will serve to show the many times crimes are committed and the guilty persons are given light sentences and return to prey on society once more.

Freedom as we have it in this nation is a wonderful thing, but we sometimes wonder if it wouldn't be more just to punish more severely those persons who misuse their privileges of freedom.

FOREIGN

INTERESTING notes from across the seas:

Argentina—The officers of the scuttled German battleship Graf Spee were transported to a government base, probably for the duration of the European war. Thus the final chapter is written on the first major naval battle of the war.

China—Those irrepressible Chinese popped up again this week with the announcement that the Japanese suffered heavy casualties in the fighting going on around the City of Nanning. The question still seems to be: "How long can Japan keep up the pace?"

Germany — The nation started a drive for all brass and bronze fittings to feed her war industries. This will mean such things as doorknobs, ventilator grills, and other metal objects.

It seems to be rather early in the war to start such drastic measures. Could it be that the Germans are in a worse situation over their metal supply than they will admit? Sounds rather plausible, especially in view of the recent drive towards Swedish ore and steel.

Finance

Ex Council Slashes Budgets Of Nearly All College Activities

Owing to an over-optimistic estimation of college revenue by about $600 which sadly depleted the college reserve fund, the finance committee last Tuesday gained from the Executive Council approval for a redistribution of the budget.

Amounts ranging from $12 to $200 were pared from 15 activities and organizations to reinforce the weakened reserve.

As explained by Daniel Rosenblat, finance committee chairman, a sizable reserve is necessary for any group as large as the Associated Students. This reserve is largely used to accommodate any unexpected financial exigencies not provided for in the semi-annual budget.

Under the above category, Rosenblat specifically named, among others, the forthcoming Balboa campus carnival, tentatively scheduled for May 17; and a citizenship plaque, costing in the vicinity of $75, on which will be enscribed the names of outstanding students of the college.

Following is a list of those bodies from which money has been deducted to increase the reserve fund of the Associated Students.

Riflettes Place Fourth In Nationwide Shooting Match

With a high score of 2453 points, the college women's rifle team placed fourth in the standings of the Women's Intercollegiate Team Championships held last month, Capt. Fred C. McFarland, rifle coach, announced.

The University of Washington at Seattle received first place awards for a tally for 2484. Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh and Beaver College of Jenkintown, Pennsylvania, won second and third events, respectively.

Members of the Ram team who scored the highest marks were Betty Barles, Marion Murphy, Marion Schrick, Margaret Yaeger, and Violet Grassow.

For the most accurate tallies in the course of fire, which consisted of each markswoman firing 50 shots for record Slow Fire, prone at 50 feet, seven silver medals and a Certificate of Victory were presented to the winning team; in addition, seven bronze medals were awarded the second and third teams.

Commenting on the fine showing of the local rifleers, McFarland commented, "Those girls are very serious about their marksmanship, and I know of no team which is their superior in prone shooting."

"Moreover," McFarland concluded, "the junior college squad was not expected to place in the championships at all. Somebody got fooled!"

Sports Rally Today Features Joe's J. C.

Star attraction of today's final sports rally of the semester promises to be another installment of Jack Schmale's "Joe's Jaysee," according to Ray Berns, rally committee head.

All students will be excused from their 2:30 classes to attend this rally, Registrar J. Paul Mohr announced. However, students are requested to report to their classes before the rally.

"Joe's Jaysee," according to Berns, will be entirely enacted by the Thespians of the college. Title of this installment is "The Last Days of Joe."

A surprise character will portray Joe, the leading character, and the co-lead, that of Jack Dayten, will be taken by Sylvester "Silly" MacAtee. Others in the cast, as released by Berns, include Dave Johnson, Elmer Hubacher, Wilton Latz, Bob Owen, Bob Kahn, Hal Hoffman, Bill Albertson, Ken Pasqualetti, Mel Chicazola, Lyle Shultz, and Henry Kreutzman.

"Since this is the last sports rally of the semester, students are urged to attend," Berns said.

Coach Tom Wilson will give a short "pep" talk on tennis, Coach Russ Sweet will discourse on track, and Coach Jack Gaddy will discuss baseball potentialities.

"A surprise radio celebrity may be presented at the rally if proposed plans work out," Berns added.

"Sweet swing was a feature of the last rally held," Berns said, "so we will have a real jam session at today's rally. A six-man organization will swing out."

The rally is scheduled to last for possibly 40 or 50 minutes, or even an hour, Berns said.

Scribner's Prize Contest Open To College Students

Undergraduate students of all American colleges are eligible to partake in the Scribner's Commentator Prize Article Contest, first prize in which is a position with the magazine, the publishers of the magazine announced.

Typical old-fashioned essays are not desired, and therefore the publishers request prospective authors to scan a recent issue of the Scribner's Commentator Magazine, before submitting their entries, so that articles suitable for publication will result. Awards will be made on the basis of suitability for publication in the magazine.

Students who don't consider themselves writers or experts of the English language, should not let this fact prevent them from trying, as many of the regular contributors to the publication are not writers by profession.

Because writing is better when authors are well acquainted with the subject, the publishers advise prospective authors to be familiar with their topic, so as to insure a better chance of winning.

Students will be competing for 19 prizes, and the winner of the first prize will secure a position working for Scribner's Commentator, and the choice of the department, whether editorial, circulation, or business, will be left to the victor's own discretion. The winner will work from June to October, at a regular salary, and longer if his return to college is not imperative in the fall. The student's major in college will be taken into consideration by his choosing a department which will allow further research in his chosen field.

Second prize is $200 cash, and the third prize is $50 cash, while 16 prizes of $25 cash each, conclude the awards.

All manuscripts should be typed and double spaced, and students should retain a copy of their entry, as no contributions will be returned at the end of the contest. Other manuscripts, if used for publication in the Scribner's Commentator, will receive the regular rates, the publishers announced.

All entries will be judged by the

Sophs Sponsor Swim At Fairmont Plunge; Hotel Dance At The Mark

Swim Party

Helen Crlenkovich, diving champion, will definitely perform at tonight's high soph swim party at the Fairmont Plunge, if "no other meets are scheduled for her in the meantime," Art Pomares, high soph president, announced Wednesday.

Various water stunts have been planned for the affair tonight, Pomares revealed, in addition to the competitive contests in which the high sophs will meet the challenges thrown down by the low frosh.

Backing up their challenge to the high sophs, several waterdogs of the freshman class have signed up to compete in stunt races. These swimmers are expected to meet Bob Kletzker, low frosh president, at 2:30 o'clock today in the Galileo court, Kletzker said.

Freshman swimmers who have signed up for competition are Harold Blackburn, Glenn Crellin, Bill Kearny, Tom McCarty, George Mossler, and Al Peters, and Kletzker expressed confidence that these men would be capable of defeating the high soph swimmers. He also promised that the freshman class would turn out in full support of its representatives.

Tickets for the swim will be available at the pool, according to Pomares, who further revealed that if more than 50 students attend, there is possibility that rates will be reduced from 35 to 25 cents.

The swim will not interfere with attendance at the Hotel Society's dance at the Mark Hopkins Hotel, which is also to be held tonight, Pomares indicated. "After the swim we plan to go over to the Mark and

Peacock Court

Dancing to music in the "Foster fashion," members of the Hotel Society will take over the Mark Hopkins Peacock Court tonight in their annual semi-formal.

Tonight is also the opening date of Chuck Foster's orchestra at the Mark.

Attendance at the dance is definitely not restricted to Hotel Society members, spokesmen for the society emphasized. All students of the college who have not already done so still have time to buy bids at the bank or from any member of the society.

Bids are $1.25 per couple, and it was pointed out by the Hotel Society that this price is perhaps the cheapest at which students have ever been able to attend a first-class hotel. The regular cover charge at such hotels is $1.66, so that dance bid purchasers are able to make a total saving of 40 cents per couple.

In order to insure plenty of dancing room and not merely the usual canned sardine effect, Thomas Caswell, member of the society, announced an extra ballroom has been reserved by the hotel management for the use of the college.

Caswell added that tables will be reserved for everyone who buys a bid.

Sponsors of the affair include Dean Edwin C. Browne and Joseph D. Sullivan, in addition to Hotel Division faculty members Paul Wendell, Ernest Hjorth, and Hilda Watson.

Dancing begins at 9 p.m. It was pointed out that students who wish to attend the high soph swimming party tonight have ample time to make the dance.

Mercer Announces Next Friday As Forum Deadline

Friday, April 19, is positively the last day that entries submitted by students, will be accepted for the Forum Magazine, Dorothy Mercer, sponsor of the publication, announced.

By submitting his entry as soon as possible, the student will be able to avoid the last minute rush and more time will be available to judge the entry if this advice is heeded, Miss Mercer commented.

One week remains in which students may submit contributions in the symposium in the form of essays. Youth is the dominant subject in question in the symposium. William Goss, faculty adviser, announced. Youth, and youth's place in typical modern societies, comprise the basis of the articles, Goss commented.

Articles for the symposium should not exceed 1000 words, Goss announced, and may be on one of the following subjects: Youth Under Democracy, The Place of Youth in Fascist Society, Youth in Socialist Society, and The Cooperative Program-Youth Today.

All prospective authors are urged to submit poems, essays, plays, or short stories within the next week on any subject they desire. No entry should exceed 1500 words in length. Entries will be based on literary value and originality, Miss Mercer added.

Cut Rate Fair Tickets At Galileo Bank — Sullivan

Students wishing to take advantage of the cut-rate Fair books may purchase them during the week of April 22-26 at the Galileo Bank, according to word released by J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of education.

The scrip books offered for sale are those containing 130 admissions for $3.75 (non-transferable), and those of admission to the Exposition and to five exhibits within. The second book is transferable and costs $2.50.

Sullivan urged all students to take advantage of these money saving offers before they are withdrawn at the end of the month.

Women Hogtie Weaker Sex For AMS Sadie Hawkins Jig

That the entire female membership of the college is at liberty to invite the males to the Associated Men Students barn dance next Friday in Richmond's Alvarado Park, is the statement made by Lyle Shultz, AMS president.

The Sadie Hawkins theme is not intended to exclude the men from dating the women, but a way of encouraging everyone to attend and enjoy the weinie roast, marshmallow toast, and barn dance, added Joseph Amori, AMS adviser.

Sport activities will begin at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, to be followed by supper, including weinies, buns, apple cider, and apples. Dancing will start at 8 o'clock and continue until 12.

Dean Edwin C. Browne will lead and call a square dance, Virginia Reel, and Paul Jones. No stags will be admitted, according to word received from "Farmer" Browne; however, any couple will be admitted upon presentation of a student body card.

Signs will be posted along the route beginning at San Rafael ferry road and San Pablo intersection. Students attending should drive out San Pablo Avenue for nine blocks after the cross-street Richmond sign, then turn right to reach Alvarado Park. Complete directions may be obtained from any member of the AMS committee, Shultz assured.

Low Soph Dance Slated For May 3 At Palace Gold Room

Definitely scheduled for the Gold Ballroom of the Palace Hotel is the Low Sophomore dance which will be held on May 3, according to Muriel Grenelle, Associated Students vice-president.

"We hope to announce that music for the event will be provided by Carvel Craig and his well-known orchestra," Miss Grenelle said.

Miss Grenelle also revealed that this dance will be semi-formal.

College Paintings Placed In Legion Of Honor Show

Landscapes, water colors, and modern posters will be entered in the Fifth Annual Northern California Junior College Art Exhibition, to be held at the Palace of the Legion of Honor in San Francisco, Richard Allman, college art instructor, announced.

From the group entered, various pieces picked by the judges of the museum staff will go on display, Allman said.

"The work this year is very satisfactory—if anything, better," he added. "In the past, art critics have remarked that the college entries were quite professional in quality."

This year the exhibition will be held at the Palace of the Legion of Honor for the first time. Previously, the exhibitions have been held at the San Francisco Museum and the deYoung Museum in Golden Gate Park. Since San Francisco is the largest city in northern California, they have always been held here, Allman continued.

Art departments of 15 colleges in northern California, a good representation of the area, will participate, according to Allman. The exhibition will remain here for one month, beginning April 22.

A Cappella Choir Performs For AWS, JC Council

Participating in two programs during the week beginning on April 21, will be the college A Cappella Choir, according to Flossita Badger of the music department.

The first performance is for the Associated Women Students tea to be held at the Century Club on Sunday, April 21, and the second appearance will be before the Junior College Council, Thursday evening, April 25, at the Central YMCA, Miss Badger said.

Ogg Organizes Committees For May 17 College Sirkus

Plans for introducing students to the new locale of the college, are being furthered for the "Meet Your Campus" day, tentatively scheduled for May 17, Bob Ogg, general chairman, announced this week.

All chairmen and co-chairmen, as well as anyone interested in serving on committees, are asked by Ogg to be at the Ways and Means Committee meeting on Friday, April 12, after the rally in the court at Galileo. The purpose of the meeting will be to set a definite date for the Sirkus and to complete arrangements for the activities and plans for the day, Ogg revealed.

As they now stand the tentative plans, according to Hal Hoffman, general coordinator, are as follows:

At 10 o'clock in the morning, classes will move to the new campus. ("Don't worry," Hoffman said, "there will be no classes, we hope!")

There will be a contest for the worst, most dilapidated excuse for an automobile, with only one qualification, that it must be able to run under its own power with gasoline, water, moth balls, alcohol, or some such substitute.

In the afternoon there will be all types of coeducational activities, including baseball, volleyball, races and, according to Hoffman, just millions (well, maybe only 24) other games.

Sandwiches, soft drinks, and other edibles will be served, according to Hoffman.

During the evening there will be a bonfire and a "come as you are" dance to terminate the day's celebration.

"This is an eventful day in the history of the college," Hoffman said, "and above all, there will be a grand time for all. Every minute is planned to be full of excitement and thrills."

Education Leads To Success Only When Initiative Is Applied

SOME of the foremost men in the country claim that the reason a great many college youths do not succeed after graduation is that while in college they were never trained to take advantage of their every opportunity.

There may be a great deal of truth in that statement. Most students in college have heard from their earliest days that a good education is synonomous with success. This is partially true, but education alone cannot succeed in the present world because competition is too stiff.

Many well educated men and women have fallen by the wayside because they lacked the certain spark of initiative that was needed.

Surprisingly enough that lack of initiative is demonstrated in no uncertain terms within the college. Every semester many scholarships to some of the finest colleges in America are offered to students here. How many of them have the initiative to attempt to avail themselves of this opportunity? Only a handful.

Trying for a scholarship indicates not only a desire for more knowledge but a degree of initiative that will serve the individual in good stead in the years to come.

These frequent opportunities serve to demonstrate how blind the average collegian is at times. He will sit around and wait for a chance to improve his position and then fail to recognize it when it comes along.

Many claim that only a miracle can secure a college student a job after graduation.

Miracles exist only if you make them yourself.

Tsk, Tsk, Ladies And Gentlemen; One For All And All For One; Selfish Histrionics Are Taboo!

SOME of the more selfish of the student body have raised an almighty howl because an Associated Students dance was held across the bay recently.

Objectors claimed that since the college was in San Francisco, the dances should be held on this side.

Such an attitude, besides being extremely selfish, is narrow-minded and considerably undemocratic.

For the benefit of the uninformed, it so happens that approximately one-third of the student body commutes daily from East Bay cities. Furthermore, East Bay students have never had a dance held on their side of the bay in the five-year history of the college.

Good judgment was shown by the college social committee in holding the High Freshman dance across the bay. It was just about time the minority groups across the bay were given a fair deal.

One should remember that this is a college for all, and although the majority is privileged to rule most of the time, fairness and a democratic spirit demand that the minority among us be accorded occasional privileges.

Semi-Annual AMS Barn Dance Would Indicate "Exciting Time For All;" Credit Due Officers

CONTINUING the precedent set by previous Associated Men Student functions, the Sadie Hawkins barn dance scheduled for next Friday night should be one of the high spots of the semester.

Plans seem to indicate an exciting time for all concerned.

Barn dances alone are great fun but combine a barn dance with a weenie roast and a field day and you have a combination that cannot be surpassed.

Credit should be given to the officers of the AMS who have put in such a great deal of time and effort in planning the affair.

There have been some objections raised by members of the student body at holding another dance across the bay. It might be well to point out that the distance from San Francisco to Alvarado Barn in Richmond where the dance is being held is considerably less than from here to the Devonshire country club where the last two barn dances were held. It is also true that the bridge fare is counterbalanced by the extra gasoline needed to carry a car to Devonshire.

Some persons care little for dancing, barn or otherwise. That is their privilege. Those who do like an afternoon and evening of laughter, and music would do well to attend the AMS Sadie Hawkins dance next Friday night. Remember girls, it's leap year; if he's the catch of the season, you'd better catch him now before someone else does.

"College men and women are peculiarly the sentinels on the outer walls. There never was more need for clear thinking and courageous doing by college men and women than there is today. We of the universities must more aggressively, more earnestly, more militantly combat these fallacies and heresies and expound and 'sell' representative democracy. It is the bastion of our liberties; and the foundation of our faith must not be undermined."

. . . inTROODings

EDITOR'S NOTE: This week's InTROODings is written by Mary Frances Malone.

CANDID camera mania is another of those mysteries of Life that we are afraid we will never quite understand.

Why is it that hitherto respectable businessmen and parents will blithely toss aside important matters to dabble in chemicals and developers? What is it that causes normal men to undergo a hideous transformation into dullards to bore their dates with long-winded lectures on synchronizers, range-finders, and equally exciting topics? We must confess that we are baffled.

Going into the subject a bit more deeply, we find that the more ardent a candid camera fan one is, the more delight he takes in catching his subjects off-guard. Gaping, leering, grimacing, yawning, sneering—no one can be assured of even the least privacy. Women especially are victimized by these fiends; they seem to be happiest when they are displaying the picture of a fairly attractive girl who in this particular "shot" seems to be on the verge of snatching up a bayonet and ominously declaring, "They shall not pass!" Is it any wonder that college women have evolved into wary creatures with a grimly cynical outlook upon It All?

We have just heard a horrible story concerning an entire family of camera fans. Reflection on the possibility of a nation, even a world, of camera enthusiasts ranging from Sonny with his Baby Brownie to Daddy with his Super-Ikonta completely unnerves us. Even the horror of bargain basement sales palls, when one considers that tomorrow's women will be confronted by the domestic crisis of "Hey, I got the dark-room first!"

Mother will probably turn the trick to her advantage by renting out the bathtub for prints. But as for that, only Yehudi knows.

AMS Barn Dance

By Marion MacKillop

. . . The Spectator

EERIE and foreboding, Manderley offered little solace to Maxim de Winter when he brought his unsophisticated, unglamorous young bride back from their honeymoon on the Riviera. For Rebecca still haunted the De Winter ancestral castle, and what Rebecca could not get in life, she determined to get in death. Rebecca is the film version of Daphne du Maurier's novel of that name.

Alfred Hitchcock, England's master of suspense, has endowed Rebecca with the artistry and beauty which have made him famous as a director of tense dramas. In less capable hands, the film might have emerged as a mildly maudlin bit of nonsense, but Hitchcock has moulded it into a thing of nerve-wracking anguish and tantalizing delay.

Maxim de Winter (Laurence Olivier) marries again to try and bring back into the diseased Manderley some life and spirit. His second wife, who is the antithesis of the beauteous and talented Rebecca, tries to combat the evil influence that the dead woman seems to exert over the entire household. There's Mrs. Danvers, the house-keeper, a female Lucifer if there ever was one, who manages to keep the specter of her mistress hovering over the house, the girl, Maxim, and especially the audience. Judith Anderson is marvelous in this role; Mephisto himself could have done no better. Crawley, De Winter's life-long friend and manager of his estate, is also in awe of the ghost of Rebecca. None, however, feels the terror, the fright that the young Mrs. de Winter does. For her, Rebecca is as alive as her Maxim. Even more so, as a matter of fact.

Joan Fontaine, as the young bride, gives an inspired performance which shows evidence of better things to come. As a counter for Miss Fontaine, Olivier gives a restrained portrayal of the conscience-stricken owner of Manderley. Excellent, too, are George Saunders, as Rebecca's cousin and cad of all trades, and Florence Bates, as a gushy society matron, who is bored to death with everything.

But the real star of the picture is Rebecca—or Hitchcock. Both manage to give superb entertainment, and yet neither is seen. The rotund Englishman gave at least two scenes to the film that are as dramatic as anything yet shown on the screen. The first is when Mrs. Danvers takes De Winter's young bride into Rebecca's room. Here, the beautiful furnishings, the lovely clothes, torture the mind of the heroine who suddenly finds herself on the verge of hysteria.

The other scene is in the seaside cottage where Max is telling his young bride how Rebecca met her demise. This time it is the camera that is the scene-stealer. As De Winter describes the movements of Rebecca, the camera follows the invisible woman as she rises from the bed, and walks slowly toward Max.

Hall

. . . shots at RAMdom

HERE is a searching, analytical, and thoroughly nonsensical article on America's educational system. The writer has been posing as a college freshman for two years in order to complete this important study. Thanks is due several instructors whose encouraging cinch notices made the prolonged study possible.

On the average, instructors aren't such a bad lot. But, getting an average instructor is not an easy matter. If there are four persons whose ages are 4, 6, 8, and 10, the average age is 7, yet there is no one of the four who is 7. Let's not linger too long with this average business. Something may come up which will need explaining, and it will be embarrassing to Shots At Ramdom.

Prevalent among some instructors, not the average instructor, is the belief that on the shining day, when the halo of learning blazed away and there came a teaching position, God-like qualities suddenly settled on the neo-instructor. These off-the-average-instructors indulge in a continual wailing intended to let everyone know just what sacrifices have been made to aid students. The classroom then resembles a first-of-the-month revival meet.

Without shillyshallying and looking at the matter squarely, it is plain to see that education is a business arrangement. Someone with the proper background and requirements has a definite job to meet and impart information to a party, hereinafter referred to as the purchaser. Since the student has become the purchaser it is only fitting that the instructor becomes the salesman.

Consider for a moment, the normal relationship between purchaser and salesman. Isn't it the salesman who is doing his utmost to be pleasing and tactful with the purchaser? Now consider the relationship between salesman-instructor and purchaser-student. In the scholastic sale it is the purchaser who must be diplomatic, non-correcting, polite, and conforming. There is only one happy thought in the whole thing. Thank God Dewey was passed up when Rockerfeller got his first barrels of oil.

What is the solution to America's scholastic problem? What will the future bring?

There are two or three movements which may show results. The first is an attempt to make education a nation-wide parlor game. No matter where, when or what, every evening after dinner President Roosevelt will press a button which will light America's study lamps and everyone will spend one hour with Hawkes-Luby-Touton, Beard, Dull, etc.

In opposition to the aforementioned scheme is a plan originated by a nightwatchman in Kentucky. Why not give educational pamphlets away at grocery stores? Everbody eats.

At all costs America must eliminate the middleman, the instructor. Caveat emptor!

. . . Counter-Point

AS ORIGINALLY and somewhat prophetically written, this week's column dealt in a broad and general manner with the considerable changes that the map of Europe has undergone in recent years.

It was written on Monday, April 8, was due to be set in type on the following day. In the interim, however, a disobliging belligerent somewhat inconsiderately undertook to interrupt even further the "status quo ante," drawing attention from the generality to the particular, specifically to Denmark.

The interest point in the week's news having thus been established, the column has been rewritten somewhat hurriedly in order to review the Danish background.

A popular brand of snuff has brought the name of Denmark's capitol to American attention; a major naval engagement of the last war has perpetuated the name of the Jutland Peninsula of which Denmark is a major part. Yet aside from these comparatively negligible items, the nation in a large measure is known only as one of those hitherto perpetually neutral Scandinavian countries. Perhaps the sudden termination of that neutrality under such dramatic circumstances may give rise to an awakening interest on the part of the American people.

This has not been the first time that German troops have successfully invaded Denmark during the past century. In 1864 a short, decisive war resulted in the annexation by Prussia of the southern portion of Denmark, the Schleswig-Holstein area.

THIS comparatively insignificant area of no more than 3000 square miles has had a long and beligerent history. From the fourteenth century until the nineteenth it had been an independent, sovereign duchy whose only tie with Denmark was that of Denmark's king being hereditary Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, an arrangement not eminently satisfactory to either party.

King Christian VIII of Denmark, who ascended to the throne in 1839, made it his chief aim to bring Schleswig-Holstein into closer union with Denmark, and to put an end to the peculiar form of dependence existing between the duchy and the remainder of the monarchy. Popular sentiment in Denmark demended that Schleswig-Holstein at least be made an integral part of the Danish realm, and in 1848 an announcement of his intention to incorporate the duchy was made by the Danish king.

Abortive revolutions immediately flared up in the area, for 1848 was the famous European "year of revolutions," but they were of little consequence and of less avail. They terminated in 1852 when the major powers, meeting in London, acknowledged Denmark's claim and guaranteed her control of the duchy.

Twelve years later, however, Bismark envisioned the possibility of a canal from the North Sea to the Baltic through Schleswig-Holstein, and promptly undertook steps for eventual annexation. Ostensibly in the name of the oppressed Schleswig-Holsteiners, he demanded that Denmark give the duchy back her former status. Denmark refusing, Prussia, with the aid of Austria, began her immediate invasion. Opposition was determined but futile, and by October of 1864 a peace treaty was signed under the terms of which Prussia annexed Schleswig while Austria occupied Holstein. Three years later the wiley Bismark promoted a quarrel with Austria, and in the short lived Seven Weeks War beat her so soundly that she was forced to renounce her claims to Holstein in favor of Prussia.

THE status quo remained as of 1867 until the Allies met in Versailles in 1919 to determine the reapportionment of Germany. The terms of the Treaty contained a clause providing for plebiscites in Schleswig and Holstein, and in 1920 these were carried out. The results gave Schleswig back to Denmark by a substantial majority, left Holstein in German hands.

Despite the self-determination principle expressed by the plebiscite, Nazi Germany has continued to refer to the German-Danish boundary as a "bleeding frontier," an "injustice of Versailles."

This week Germany can feel the satisfaction of having closed the wound, rectified the injustice, and prepared for further conquests. By the time these words appear probably Norway, possibly Sweden, and maybe Finland and Rumania will have gone "the way of all flesh," into the maw of a glutton.

CAB Explained, Defended; While Thinking Brilliant Gem, Columnist Berated

● NEUTRAL NEUTRALITY
Editor, The Guardsman:

While perusing our usually worthy newspaper last Friday, My eye fell upon a little item under "While Thinking". As a fair thinker, I am disgusted that any supposedly wide-minded college periodical could print such foolish anti-German propaganda. The phrase, "the Germans" was repeatedly used in answer to such questions as, "Whose official word is the least trusted in the world?" etc.

Just where is our neutral American attitude, when "the Germans" in general are condemned because of the work of a few men—and particularly Hitler! Also, will the Editor please recall that Hitler would probably not be "greater than God himself" in Germany, if it had not been for the treatment of Germany by the Americans, the English, and the French after the last war.

When our Guardsman Editor is required to fight in the next war, he will have the satisfaction of knowing that he helped to create it with his very brilliant gem of racial criticism!

Helen Culver

Editor's note:

Does "neutrality" mean that one has no right to think and express an opinion? Incidentally, since the advent of the European war we have criticized not only the Germans, but the French and English as well, whenever the need arose.

An excerpt from our column of February 27 may help: ". . . the Germans are no different from anyone else. They are to be pitied for letting themselves be led by such egomaniacs as Hitler, Goering and Goebbels." Remember, however, that the German leaders act in the name of the German people; consequently, it is perfectly legitimate to say "the Germans," although we know quite well that it is the work of the Nazi leaders that have given the German nation such a bad name.

● BENEFITS OF CAB
Editor, The Guardsman:

Through you to Mr. William Persiflage, I would like to answer the questions as to "the express functions and benefits of the C.A.B." and "regarding the use of the $500.00 granted so generously by the Ex. Council", by quoting our constitution and our financial policy, as approved by the "Ex" Council.

1. Object—"The purpose of the C.A.B. shall be to act as a supervisory and coordination agency for all duly chartered organizations in the college, to grant, renew, suspend, and revoke charters of such organizations, and to make recommendations concerning such organizations to the Ex. Council of the A.S.S.S. F.J.C."
2. This $500.00 shall be used for "educational purposes to promote interest in and knowledge of the purposes and results of club activity within the college, and in such a constructive manner as to promote the general welfare of the College by increasing worthwhile inter-club activity designed to enhance the value of recognized clubs to their members and to the students of the college."

I do think that any student with as much interest as expressed in the letter "denouncing the CAB" should really make an attempt to attend a meeting of the CAB in order to "see the light" and to further his knowledge as to what's going on in the school.

To you, Mr. Editor, I want to thank you for your interest as shown in your recent editorial on the subject. It covered the situation at that time, quite thoroughly.

It's A Hit!

For the past week Coach Jack Gaddy has stressed batting. Scene above shows Al Gionavetti and George Morera at batting practice. Tomorrow the Rams take a crack at Yuba and Marysville in a double header. Though the team's hitting has slumped they expect to be hitting Saturday and hope to take both games.

Rams Match Net, Diamond Play With Yuba Saturday; Butt State Off Courts In Upset

Tomorrow afternoon the local baseballers meet a dark-horse Yuba Junior College team at Marysville. The Rams are resting in undisputed first place at the present time, and expect to stay that way after the Yuba encounters.

Coach Jack Gaddy will take his full team roster on the trip tomorrow, and expects to use all of the players.

"We should win both of the contests tomorrow," Gaddy said, "but we don't know much about the Yuba team. They are newcomers to the league this year, and it is difficult to tell much about them."

Batting averages released this week show that Roy Wollcott, second baseman, has jumped into the lead with an average of .477. Harry Aleo, last week's leader, has fallen to second place with a .428 average.

Other leading hitters are Roy Micheli, .360; Mike DeStefano, .428; and Leo Mezzetti, .300.

Team hitting has dropped in the past games. Even though the locals won both of the Menlo games with high scores, most of the runs were scored because of sloppy Menlo fielding.

Gaddy has stressed batting all of this week, and he hopes that his batting training will show results tomorrow.

Players to make the trip are Harry Aleo, Martin Zernicke, and Bob Hvidt, pitchers; Leo Mezzetti, George Moreira, catchers; Al Giovanetti, Roy Wollcott, Frank Mullins, Roy Michell, infielders; Bob Webber, Bob Nishi, Chuck Gratiot, outfielders, and Sheldon Glatt, and Charles Donovan, utility.

Despite the crushing defeat received by the college No. 1 player Bill Madamba, the Rams ran wild and took the rest of the singles, emerging victorious with 7 wins and but 2 losses over the S. F. State Gators.

The staters were confident of their wins throughout, expecting at least six easy wins, and were more than a little surprised to receive the bottom end of the deal.

Ray Berns, college No. 3 man played one of the most brilliant games of the group. After winning the first set 8-6, and losing the second 3-6, the count was 5-3 with 40-30 in favor of George Tuscher, his opponent. From this point, Berns began to rally, firing away and placing excellent drives. Berns emerged victorious winning the set 7-5 and the game.

Bill Madamba, after losing his first set to Hal Wagner, took a miserable 3-6 in the second and final set. Chet Mead defeated the tall Jack DeWitt 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Jackie Hare, took his games 7-5, 6-4 defeating Ed Kohloff, State No. 4 man. Tony Calagos defeated Kenneth Kim. After dropping the first set 4-6, he rallied and took the next two, 6-0 and 8-6. Morris Waxman, the other Ramster managed a win over Bill Hammond 6-4, 2-6, 6-4.

The combination of Hare and Mead drove the State duo of Hammond and DeWitt, Hare playing brilliant base-line tennis, while Mead held more than his own at the net, 6-3, 6-4.

Doubles No. 1 men Madamba and Berns, after losing the first set 6-4, dropped a hard fought 9-7 set to Wagner and DeWitt.

The Rams will travel to Yuba tomorrow to play their fifth conference encounter, announced Manager Bob Owen. "We expect to win at least six of our games," oach Tom Wilson said.

Fiveway Meet For Local Bowlers Tonight At 7:00

Tonight at Stockton, the local bowlers battle Sacramento, Marin, and Salinas junior colleges, and San Jose State and College of the Pacific, according to Joe Amori, college bowling coach.

The matches begin at 7 p.m., and that hour will find Norman Guinasso, Jack Schmale, George Riordan, Bill Snooks, and George Stockwell upholding the kegling glory of the college, declared Amori.

Amori expects the quintet to roll a score of 850 or so. This is the first meet these schools have ever held, and he does not know if that will be enough to beat the enemy.

The best bowlers in the country have team averages only 100 to 150 above what this new combination should do, Amori said.

"These will all be tough games," Amori predicted, "but our boys will do their best to win."

In view of the number of colleges participating in the bowling meet, it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand to see the various teams play.

Schmale, Guinasso, Riordan, Snooks and Stockwell, who will represent the college under the instruction of Amori, have long reputations as practical bowlers.

PATIENCE NOTE

After five years of patient waiting, Russ Sweet, dynamic track mentor, has finally come up with a squad that will worthily represent the college.

In years past, because of lack of interest in the cinder sport, Russ was forced to field undermanned teams that battled against overwhelming odds.

This year, however, it seems different, as evidenced by the local's victory over the University of San Francisco, which, although not a topflight university, nevertheless is a leader in the four-year class.

By the way, what is the story behind Keith Groswird's (outstanding Ram pole-vaulter who clears 13 feet) short story in last semester's issue of the Forum mag?

MIXED DOUBLES NOTE

A news item in last Friday's issue of The Guardsman announced that the annual WAA Mixed Doubles tennis tourney in the contest for the Guardsman trophy would be played at the Palace of Fine Arts courts in the near future.

All of which brings to mind one Robert "Turk" Kun, a member of the college's championship net squad in '38 and '39, and winner of last year's mixed doubles with Virginia Hein.

Kun, still in college but not eligible for varsity competition, is, incidentally, going to participate in the coeducational matches and passes on to all aspiring young racketeers his formula for winning mixed doubles affairs.

"If," states Kun, "you wish to be a successful player, you must first lure the girl on the other team up to the net with a dropshot. You then take careful aim and blast the ball right through her. Believe me when I say, if she isn't dead, she'll be mighty discouraged for some time."

BRANCHING OUT NOTE

AMS Prexy Lyle Shultz is certainly going "big time," what with intentions of putting on the forthcoming Men's Club fights at the new Coliseum Bowl, which has a seating capacity of 3500.

According to present plans, a special section will be set aside for the local student body, with the rest of the seats open to the public in first-come, first-served fashion.

Preliminaries, contrary to precedent of previous years, will be held a day or so before the finals so that there will be but eight bouts on the evening's program.

It's a swell idea, Lyle, more power to you for staging the fights in a big way.

Rifle Team In Marin 30 Caliber Shoot

Twelve rifleers will represent the Ram rifle team in the Marin County 30-Caliber League shoot on Sunday.

Ram marksmen to make the trip, according to Capt. Fred C. McFarland, local rifle mentor, are as follows: Charles North, team captain; George Humphreys, Art Templeton, Louis Davy, Merrill Humber, Myron Pierce, Jack Hewitt, and several other team marksmen.

"Although we don't expect to win the shoot," McFarland added, "we do expect to defeat California. We have defeated the Golden Bears every time we have shot against them for the past two semesters, and we hope to do it again, even if we are using a different type of gun."

The women's rifle team is still waiting to hear the results of the champion meets which were held several weeks ago. A rifle team from Richmond has challenged the local riflettes, and the challenge will be accepted, according to Marion Murphy, team captain. No definite date has been set for the shoot, which is to be a postal match.

In the Miami University chemistry laboratory there is a special extinguisher for use when students' clothes catch fire during experiments.

WAA Horseshow

Tomorrow Night At San Francisco Riding School

Nine representatives from the following junior colleges, Marin, San Mateo, Sacramento, and San Francisco, will participate in a coeducational horse show at 8 o'clock, tomorrow evening, at the San Francisco Riding School, Laurine Bergin, physical education and riding instructor, announced early this week.

Mrs. J. Paul Mohr, wife of Registrar Mohr, will officiate as honorary ringmaster, Mrs. Bergin revealed.

"Beginners, intermediates, and advanced groups will constitute the three main classes," Mrs. Bergin said, "and each has a separate schedule. The beginners will walk, trot, and canter. Intermediates will walk, trot, canter, and have a game, pairs, and singles.

Advanced riders will walk, trot, canter, and have singles, pairs, and fours. Additional events for this last group will include a trophy game and jumping events."

After the horse show there will be refreshments and a barn dance for the participants and their escorts, which will last until approximately 12 o'clock, Mrs. Bergin added.

The public is invited to this horse show, and, according to Mrs. Bergin, a large crowd is expected.

Tennis-Archery, Badminton, Rides On WAA Schedule

Several events scheduled on the agenda of the Women's Athletic Association which will occur in the near future are a tennis-archery playday a badminton playday, and trail rides at Marin and Sacramento, disclosed Alma Koopman, vice-president of the association.

Eight mixed doubles teams are to represent the college in a badminton playday today, at Marin Junior College, Betty Teter, badminton manager, announced this week.

Registration will start at 2 o'clock in the afternoon in front of the Marin gymnasium. The first match is slated to start at 2:30, according to information received from the north-bay college. Matches will terminate at 7 o'clock; afterwards a dinner will be served the participants in the college cafeteria. Following the dinner, dancing and games will be provided for the entertainment of the guests; cost is 60 cents per person.

Rules of the tournament: 1. one-half hour time limit for each match; 2. two games for each match, with one point for the winner of the game, no points for a loss. At the end of the tournament, points will be tabulated to determine the winner.

The tennis-archery playday will be held at the Palace of Fine Arts, Saturday, April 13, from 9 to 12:15 o'clock in the morning, Miss Koopman revealed. Tickets may be purchased from Rema Corbit or Barbara Smith for 25 cents.

The Tom Stow "tennis developer", an instrument which figured mechanically in the national tennis rise to fame of Don Budge, will tentatively be demonstrated.

In the archery section a Columbia Round will be shot by experienced archers. Novice shooters will also participate in the event.

Singles and doubles tournaments have been planned for both experienced and intermediate players, Miss Koopman said.

On April 21, an H. B. E. Ride will be entered by the advanced college equestriennes, at Sacramento Junior College, Miss Koopman remarked.

Before the ride a so-called "brunch" will be served; after the jaunt, swimming has been included on the afternoon's program.

BASEBALL, FENCING PRACTICE

College women who wish to participate in the baseball playday at Santa Rosa May 11, are advised by Alma Koopman, vice-president of the WAA, to practice Thursday morning at 11:15 o'clock at Funston Field, or Saturday mornings at 12:30 at the Palace of Fine Arts.

All college women fencers are challenged by the WAA to fence with the class foil-artists at 3:30 on Tuesdays or Thursdays, Miss Koopman said.

Threeway Meet

Rams, Menlo And Marin Trackmen At Kentfield

To crush Marin and Menlo in a three-way track meet at Kentfield this afternoon, Coach Russ Sweet disclosed, the Rams must surpass their previous efforts in practice trials.

Marin's 20-1/3 points, Menlo's 10 digits, and the college's lowly 10-point score in the Cal Frosh struggle held on the Edwards Stadium oval last Saturday is factual evidence to support Sweet's apprehensiveness.

By running Lowery, half-miler, and Vasquez, miler, in both the 880 and the mile grind, Sweet intends to counterbalance the strength of Menlo and Marin in the sprints and hurdle races. Although Ram-men Raine, Sparber, and Jorgensen have negotiated the low and high timbers in 12.7 and 10.6, respectively, Kovatz and Harr, Marin, are capable of superior clockings.

Don Mavor, college sprint flash, who stuck to the heels of Harold Davis of Salinas while the latter burned up the 220 in :21 flat at the Cal meet, should have trouble only with Hoffman of Marin in the century and 220 events.

Mariner Abbott, and Mosler of the college will do battle royal for first place honors in the high jump, if past performances are any indication of their capabilities. Each man has cleared the bar at 6 feet 1 inch.

The Menlo squad boasts a powerful shotputter in giant Jim Needham, who tossed the iron ball 42 feet 3 inches for a second place in the Bear Cub tussle. No Ram shot-man has approached that distance as yet.

Jim Wagstaff of the local cindermen heaved the discuss a distance of 115 feet 10 inches at California. However, the Menlo team possesses Dunlop, an expert who threw the platter to a second place last Saturday with a toss of 133 feet 4 inches.

Campus Sports Personalities

By KEI HORI

If all the charm and personality in the world were molded into one person, it couldn't fit better than into the person of the college's own Emily May deJongh. The reason for the use of superlatives in movies can be laid to such . . . attractiveness.

Born during a storm in the month of January, 1922, Emily's education began at MacSwain, then Cabrillo. She knew Lana Turner at Presidio, graduated from Washington High a year ago, and now majors in History. During 18 years she has grown to 6 feet even, and weighs around the 150 margin.

Attributing her charm to spinach, well washed and salted, she enjoys cooking, likes "erster zoup" and emphatically does not like wearing hats. Favorite color is blue; actor, Spencer Tracy; and she likes the type of roles played by Ronald Coleman in The Blown Fuse, or The Light That Failed.

Emily's nickname was "Slim," and she possessed golden locks, but time has changed them, and now she has well-kept brownish hair and no one calls her slim. Her eyes, however, have retained their "deep blue hue."

Her favorite sport is tennis, which she plays expertly, often rides horses, and at one time did play touch football. She remembers well her most thrilling experience—when she rode a semi-tamed stallion.

In a "date" she expects fun, and her pet gripe is people who don't row their own boat. Categorically speaking, she thinks herself a "kitty".

As for her favorite form of entertainment, she prides in enjoying, of all things, silence! She plays the jews harp, was a quiet child (as far as she remembers) and inclined to be extremely stubborn.

She speaks some Spanish, and a bit of French (is in the Pick and Hammer Club, Alpha Gamma Sigma and the WSS), likes to get up early in the morning (Oscar, don't yawn! 'tain't perlite), around 4 o'clock, and watch the sunrise. Most beautiful thing she has seen was a "silver sunset from the bridge during a lifting storm."

To a desert isle she would take her doggie and . . . a set of selected books!

Oscar is looking for a desert isle, a set of books and a dog—for . . . guess whom?

Tall Timber Topples

Into every hurdler's life a little hurdle must fall. Timber Topper Bob Raine of the college track team has just proved the adage. The Rams meet Marin and Menlo at Kentfield today.

Ski Team To Norden For Vanderbilt Meet

Entering its second ski meet, the college ski team will travel to Norden tonight to compete in the Vanderbilt Memorial Trophy Meet, Saturday and Sunday, April 13 and 14, according to Bob Ogg, club president.

Competing for the locals will be Ogg, Falk Falkenburg, Stan Pittman, and Bill O'Neill. Races will consist of a slalom, and a two-mile relay race, replacing the cross-country race, on Saturday; and on Sunday, a giant slalom in place of the usual downhill race, and jumping contests, according to Ogg.

Ogg revealed that anyone interested in seeing the local team compete would be able to obtain tickets on the Southern Pacific for $4.58. Because of apparent lack of interest shown, the intended excursion by train for spectators had been called off.

Among the other colleges competing will be California, University of Nevada, Oregon State, Idaho, Southern California, Stanford, and Utah.

Divotmen Meet State Tuesday At Ingleside

Though the match with San Francisco State was scheduled for today at Ingleside, "Dutch" Conlan, golf instructor, asked to have the meet postponed until Tuesday, as many of the team members were missing classes because of the meets.

"We have shown a lot of promise in practice," Conlan confided. "We have already met San Mateo, one of the toughest teams in northern California, and defeated them easily. We feel that we should win the conference in May, if past and present performance means anything."

All golf meets scheduled for Friday will be changed, Conlan added, and a more suitable day chosen.

Four more matches remain on the Ram schedule before the championships at Modesto on May 17. These will include return encounters with State and Menlo, and matches with Modesto.

SONG OF THE SKI

Another week or so now, and the ski season will have departed for wherever ski seasons go. Since members of the college ski club and members of the college ski team (there's a difference, we are told), as well as a few hundred other people are directly concerned, it seems only appropriate to dedicate a poem to those obstinate, aggravating sticks of wood that have their own peculiar method of inflicting punishment.

By way of one member of the ski club to the other, comes this masterpiece, written during a lab, no doubt:

I think that I shall never see
A stick as tricky as a ski:
Steer the darn thing as I will,
It always rides me to a spill;
It stays so quiet 'til I'm on,
Then without warning—we are gone!

Down—down we run—I'm filled with glee . . .
My God! I'm coming to a tree!
It's got me telemark'd. I'm back for more—
My well-waxed skis stand by the door.
Only God can make a tree—
But who in heck first made a ski!

—Anon E. Muss.

Sometimes we feel the same way.

COMMENTARY

Monday, Ramette basketballers played their first intercollege basketball game of the season. With State. Oh, a few know the score—and refuse to divulge it, so it must have been pretty awful—that isn't the point. What is important is the lack of teamwork that was shown by both Ramette teams, frosh and sophs. Instead of one of the Ramette guards playing safety near the State goal, they were all, guards, forwards and center, tangled up in the center of the court, trying hard to get the ball, and as a result leaving the goal completely defenseless for the State forwards, who neglected no opportunities, but sank one basket after another. Heck, that's not basketball—or is it?

• • • • •

This is funny: The college WAA is financially embarrassed! It's true! They don't even have enough money to send a group of women athletes to participate in an intercollegiate sports day at Sacramento. On second thought, we guess it isn't so funny, because if the situation becomes any worse, the only sports days that the locals will be available for will be those held on the home grounds. Which we don't have.

• • • • •

Very few colleges have a gym course in fencing; more specifically, very few WAA groups have the opportunity to receive instruction in fencing. BUT the colleges that do have a fencing course, don't have any trouble about getting WAA people to sign up for it. Does San Francisco receive its fencing course with enthusiasm? What do you think? No, of course not! There are only five WAA members enrolled, five since Monday; before that only two. So here we go again: For those of you who haven't yet signed up for an extra-curricular sport, the class is still open. See Verrel Weber.

Incidentally, the money that was allotted the WAA fencing class will be appropriated by the council to use for transportation of other groups to playdays. Reason given, and apparently a fair one, is that the fencing group has no immediate use for it. Oh, well.

• • • • •

By the way, we were under the impression that all the playdays held by the WAA were open to the entire membership, those with classes excepted, of course. Well, where were the numerous members Monday when the locals played basketball with State? What spirit! Such backing!

Vigorous Protest

Club Board Censures Ex Council For Appropriation Reduction

In a storm of bewilderment, members of the Club Advisory Board this week passed a motion empowering its officers to draw up a resolution of protest against action of the Executive Council finance committee in withdrawing $200 of the $500 allocated to the CAB earlier this semester.

Appearing before the CAB at its meeting last Tuesday, Daniel Rosenblat, finance chairman, explained the dilemma which forced his committee to cut into appropriations already made to this and other college groups.

Although admitting the logic and justice of the committee's surprise move, after consideration of the facts presented by Rosenblat and further comments by Alden Thorogood, CAB president, members of the club board nevertheless objected to the harshness with which it was effected. Thus CAB officers will present, at the next meeting, the completed resolution to be approved by the members.

Thorogood indicated that this cut will necessitate the revision of all plans made by the various councils before the next meeting, since each group now has a budget of $60 instead of the anticipated $100.

One facter influencing acceptance of the cut was the explanation by Rosenblat that the sum withdrawn will be put into a general fund from which money for club participation in the coming carnival at Balboa Park will be dividted. Shortly before the close of the CAB meeting, its members heard and accepted an invitation from Bob Ogg, carnival chairman, to take part in setting up booths for concessions or the like, and appointment of a carnival committee by Thorogood is now being awaited.

Organize Placement Bureau For Apartment House Course

Plans for a placement bureau for benefit of students who complete a two-year course in Apartment House Management at the college, are under way, Manuel J. Jacobs, college coordinator of the course, said.

According to Jacobs, a curriculum for the proposed year course is under consideration, but courses in Apartment House Management, Apartment House Accounting, and Apartment House Selling have been given in the college since February 19, with a total enrollment of 171.

Apartment House Management classes are held Monday afternoons from 3 to 5 p.m., and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. The Apartment House Selling class is held each Monday evening from 7 to 9 p.m. Apartment House Accounting is given on Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

Blonde Archer, New Campus Winning Pictures In Camera Contest

One of the two winning shots in Guardsman photography contest is the one shown above of a woman archer. The picture was taken by Arthur McDermott. General data: Perfex "44" f2.8—f8 at 1/50.

Other winning picture in the photography contest sponsored by The Guardsman is this excellent shot of the new campus. The picture was submitted by Hal Hoffman. General data: Kodak Bantam Special—1/50 at f.6.

Art McDermott, Hal Hoffman Win

Final winners in The Guardsman photo contest are Art McDermott and Hal Hoffman, announced Len Gross, Guardsman editor. McDermott and Hoffman will be awarded two cover charges to the Palace Hotel and to the Mark Hopkins Hotel, respectively, for their prizewinning pictures.

The photographs were judged on the basis of uniqueness, clearness, and relation to college life.

"We appreciate the cooperation of all those who entered the contest," said Gross. "The response to our contest was commendable, as was the quality of all the pictures turned in to us. Because of the general excellence of the work, decisions on the winning pictures were difficult to make."

The Guardsman contest extended from March 5 to April 9. The best photograph submitted each week was published in the paper.

Pictures by George Tierney and Thomas Davis tied with those of Hoffman and McDermott in the final selection.

Judges, in addition to Gross, were Joan Nourse, Guardsman faculty adviser; Daniel Rosenblat and Louis Goldstone, associate editors, and Joe Kapelski, staff photographer.

All of the judges expressed their thanks to the contest participants.

Aero Students Solo; Form Club

Nine students of the college Aeronautics division have made solo flights this semester, after having had at least eight hours of dual instruction, according to Captain George Richards, director, Civilian Pilot Training.

Students who have made their first solo flights are Walt Warner, Bill Buchanan, Gene Powell, Harold Shook, Bill Geritz, Don Clark, Vic Lagerson, Norwood Forte, and Stan Tobiason.

Flying is done at the San Francisco Municipal Airport, according to Richards. After solo flying 35 hours, a student can obtain his pilot license.

Recently organized by members of the Aeronautics course is the National Collegiate Flying Club, San Francisco Junior College Chapter. Although a charter has not yet been obtained, at its initial meeting, officers elected were: President, Bob Benson, vice-president, Gene Powell; second vice-president, Ray Suerffert; secretary, Edna Nasser; treasurer, Walter Zimbeck; sergeant-at-arms, Martin Colestini.

There was elected, also, a board of directors, consisting of Harry Daves, Bill Buchanan, Walt Warner, Bill Geritz and Harold Shook.

Membership in the organization is limited to students of Mechanical Engineering 43B, flight group, Captain Richards said.

Business Department Scores Another Placement

Another job placement by the Business Department was announced this week by F. Grant Marsh, chairmap of the Business Department. The position, a part-time job, was opened to Gladys Young, at O'Gara and O'Gara, law firm.

Many calls are coming to the college for well-trained students to fill positions in the business world. "More than we can fill," commented Marsh. As soon as students are sufficiently trained, effort is made by the college to place them in good positions in San Francisco.

Modesto Debate Postponed; Four New Speakers Named

Four new debaters have been named as the college's debate team for a coming speech meet with Modesto Junior College, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, debate coach.

Because of their lively interest in debate, Leland Martin, Edward Cohen, Gene Cahill, and Jack MacKay were appointed to the team, Luckmann announced.

Pearl Watson of Modesto, debate manager, has been negotiating for an April 19 encounter with the college, but Luckmann said it would be impossible, since the 19th comes during the midterm period.

The definite debate date will be known next week, and the question will be either Isolation or the Third Term Issue.

. . . Campus Personalities

By KEI HORI

OSCAR PRESENTS . . . "Captain Cobby" Alden Frenich Thorogood. (He who is the prexy of the CAB.) Take a bow, Frenchy!

Born in Boston, Mass., "Slim" has attended 12 schools in four states and came out West at the age of 13. At present, he is 6 feet 1½ inches tall, wears size 11 shoes, and is more than 21.

Studying to be a mortician, Slim is assistant coroner of Alameda County, works in a mortuary, and looks forward to passing his State Board exam. He likes to eat anything doused in garlic, enjoys cooking by himself, and likes small town politics. (Zeus, what-kindavaguylzzee?)

The question that has been hounding his massive brain is, How in h——'s name is the East Bay student going to get to the new campus without pitching pup-tents on the campus or getting up in the wee hours?; Answers may be handed in c/o "Rent a tux" or "I—— to Hedy" with a bottle of ginger ale '09 enclosed.) (Apologies, Bill and Len.)

Slim graduated from Berkeley High in 1932 and worked four years in a liftograph ink-making company. He lives in Albany at present, doesn't play the horses, despises women who can't hold their "wotka" and is very fond of making friends and holding them. (He remembers names easily . . . even ours and O's.)

His pet gripe is people who sit on the sidelines and moan, yet offer no suggestions, and his favorite color is blue (eyes). Slim also finds pleasing the vivaciousness of a blonde and the sincerity of brunettes.

All for student government, Frenchy thinks Roosevelt is the man, especially with the world at its present state, and as a final word to the students, says:

"Don't make college a place to hang your hat on the way home; you only get out of college what you put into it."

Oscar is at the slot machine. So far the above holds true. In fact, O isn't getting what he's putting in. He's losing. How true, Frenchy!

City Of Paris Sponsors Fashion Show On April 30

Announcing the time of The Guardsman Fashion Show as April 30, the place, the Galileo Auditorium, Bette Nelson, campus representative of the City of Paris, co-sponsor of the show, asked the cooperation of the college in making it a success.

"The students connected with the show are putting forth a great deal of effort to produce the show, and we hope that the college will attend," she said.

Discussing plans for the show, Miss Nelson revealed that Anita Welt, recent winner of a college singing contest, will sing during the intermission.

Tryouts for models are now being held. Two models each, Miss Nelson said, will be chosen from Alpha Phi Omega, Lambda Chi, Phi Beta Rho, Women's Service Society, and the Home Economics Association.

In addition to these, four women will be selected from the physical education classes to model active sports clothes for pictures which are to be taken, she said.

Women students will show evening clothes, date dresses, sports togs, play clothes, sweaters, and skirts.

Joseph A. Amori, faculty member, has been allotted the dubious sinecure of selecting four men students to model the latest in men's campus wear clothes.

All clothes to be modeled will be furnished by the City of Paris.

Money Appropriated For Paths At New Campus

Approval of a $25,000 allocation for roads and paths at the new Balboa campus has been given by the Board of Education, according to J. Paul Mohr, registrar.

Architects have been authorized to make plans for a path from the science building to the gymnasium, and for roads leading up the hill and around the gymnasium, Mohr revealed. Although the plans will not be signed until after July 1, the roads and pathways will be completed when the campus is ready for occupancy, he added.

The amount needed to construct the roads and paths will be deducted from next year's budget of the Board of Education, Mohr said.

Seventeen miles of shelves have been added to the University of Illinois library. They'll accommodate half a million books.

Faculty Association Meets At San Mateo, April 20

On April 20, the Northern California Junior College Association will hold its spring meeting.

According to Lloyd Luckmann, faculty association president, the meeting is to be held at the San Mateo Junior College.

Dr. Milton Chernin will speak on the Youth Problem in California, and Dr. H. A. Spindt will address the group on Training for Placement Available to Junior College Graduates.

Each of the gentlemen will answer questions that are foremost in everyone's mind on these questions.

At the luncheon Dr. P. A. Martin will discuss Pan-Americanism.

After the luncheon, section meetings will be held. Subjects to be discussed at these meetings will be pertinent to most of the attending instructors.

editors of the magazine, and their decisions will be final, the publishers commented. Final winners will be announced in the July issue of the Scribner's Commentator Magazine.

Contributions must be entirely original, the publishers added, and in the event that two students tie for a single prize, duplicate awards will be made.

All entries should be addressed to the Contest Editor, Scribner's Commentator, 654 Madison Avenue, New York City, New York.

Contributions may be submitted until June 1, 1940, the closing date of the contest.

Almost 2,000 drawings, 100 photographs and 6,000 pages of notes are the result of 10 years of snail research by a University of Illinois scientist.

College Holds April 25 School Week Program

In conjunction with Public Schools Week, April 22 to 26, a program will be presented by the college Thursday evening, April 25, at the YMCA Auditorium on Golden Gate Avenue, according to Claude Stull, college faculty member, and Junior College Council president.

Barbara Smith, Janet Fellows, Rema Corbitt, William Letcher, and Bill Hall, college students, will present a panel discussion on phases of junior college life. These speakers were chosen by Lloyd Luckmann of the college faculty.

President Archibald J. Cloud will also give an address concerning the development of the new building which the college will occupy next semester, according to Stull.

Besides a general invitation to the public, members of the Board of Education have been especially invited to attend.

This Collegiate World

By Associated Collegiate Press

AS A result of some diligent investigations by Williams College students, a few salient facts have been discovered concerning the attitude of Smith and Vassar girls. The Smith lasses were recently queried on the question, "If it were a matter of choice, would you rather have your husband imprisoned for conscientious objection or killed in Europe?" and returned a verdict in favor of the latter alternative.

Evidently possessing much of the Madame Defarge in their coldblooded little hearts, the young ladies felt that a "hero dead" would be preferable to a "coward alive." Of course, the traditional Smith feeling that "you can always get another" may have in part prompted this display of pseudo self-sacrifice on the altar of their country, but we are more inclined to credit it to their self-styled "dashing love of adventure."

Vassar, on the other hand, offers an understanding heart to the youth who refuses to fight in a senseless combat. He lad who expects to be a conscientious objecter in the event that the United States is drawn into foreign entanglements had best begin some weekend prospecting tours to Poughkeepsie, for the adopted daughters of Matthew Vassar would prefer a husband in irons to a husband entombed, any husband being better than no husband.

Consequently, the lover of the home and fireside who has no illusions about the glory of war, will find a more sympathetic companion at Poughkeepsie than he can hope to find by currying the favor of some damsel at Northampton.

The American Youth Congress, which recently convened in Washington and was then accused of being "Left of Left, and Pinker than Pink," is conservative in its demands for aid to college students through the NYA, compared to the University of North Carolina in 1837. A paragraph in the catalog for that year states: "The Faculty are authorized in all cases, when the applicant is a native of the state, sustains a fair moral character, and, upon examination, is believed to possess the requisite mental endowments, natural and acquired, and is unable to pay the Tuition Fees, to admit him into any Class, for which he may be prepared, without charge either for Tuition or Room Rent."

Finally in sheer desperation he wrote in bold white letters across the ring ceiling: "If you can read this you're in the wrong position."

College Debaters To Speak Before Faculty, Parents

Changes that students encounter in passing from high school to college, is the topic to be discussed by four of the college debaters before a gathering of junior college coUncil members and friends, April 25, Lloyd Luckmann, debating coach, announced.

Student speakers slated are Janet Fellows, Rema Corbit, Howard Latcher, and Bill Hall. They will be given half an hour to explain to parents of present and potential college students the difference between high school and college.

Council activities will begin at 8 o'clock and will be held in the YMCA building at Golden Gate and Hyde Streets.

BARN DANCE MAPS AVAILABLE TO STUDENTS

Maps giving directions to the AMS Barn Dance to be held next Friday night in Richmond, have been drawn up, announced Lyle Shultz, AMS president. Students desiring these maps are requested to see Shultz or any officer of the AMS.

Club Advisory Board

Flying Club Applies For Charter; Music Club Seeks Reinstatement

Applying for its charter and a place in the Club Advisory Board this week is a new organization, the National Collegiate Flying Club, San Francisco Junior College Chapter, according to CAB president Alden Thorogood.

Sponsored by Captain George Richards, director of civil pilot training, this club is limited to members of the college aeronautics course who have made their first solo flight, Thorogood said.

Seeking a renewal of charter is another organization, the Music Club, which had been listed as suspended. Consideration of this matter will be brought up at the next CAB meeting, Thorogood added.

Tentative plans, meanwhile, as outlined by CAB leaders, are reported to include a tea-dance on April 26 for Council 5, consisting of restricted social organizations, and a sight-seeing tour on May 12 for Council 4, which lists the Army and Navy Club, Chinese Students' Club, Japanese Students' Club, and Rifle and Pistol Club.

Hostesses Named For Sunday AWS Tea

Final selection of hostesses for the Associated Women Student tea and program for parents of the college women at the Century Club this Sunday has been made, according to Gloria Miller, AWS president.

Featured at the tea will be a program by the college A Capella Choir, directed by Flossita Badger, college music instructor, Miss Miller said.

Women whose names appear on the following list are requested to meet in Room 212 at Galileo on Thursday at 2:30, Miss Miller advised.

Those chosen include Jeanne Arnold, Jean Chesley, Muriel Grenelle, Florence Hansen, Adele Kuhn, Dorothy Trood, Muriel Nolan, Shirley White, Dolores Dixon, Lyba Mackie, Ruby Klistoff, Jeanne Kelly, Marin Malone, Barbara Brown, Thursa Scott, Edith Callaghan, Dorothy Plowden, Marian MacKillop, Virginia Pearson, Barbara Walsh, Barbara Cochran, Julie Bradshaw, Margaret Haegre, Emily de Iongh, Marian Murphy, Mary Jane Moore, Mildred Barosiewski, Vorghilde Thorsen, Virginia Sini, Marge Lowson, Betty Mentzler, Pat McKenna, Betty Calo, Aspasia Vasilatos, Lillian Dana, Lea Windsor, Gloria Scatena, Barbara Haughton, Jo Crull, Mary Keating, Mary Bartholomew, Lucille Jacks, Frances Woods, Pat Martell, Vivian Stand, Rita Wyman, Mildred Grey, Paula Levick, Elede Morris, Joy Anna Mack, Cynthia Jacobs, Hatfonds Bjornson, Marguerite Proll, and Betty Ahrenson.

"Appointment of men to act as hosts is being made," Miss Miller added. "The list of names will appear in Friday's Guardsman."

Next Friday Marks Deadline For Forum Contributions

Friday, April 19, is the last day in which contributions for the current issue of the Forum Magazine will be accepted, announced Dorothy Mercer, adviser of the magazine's sponsor, the Forum Club.

Prospective authors are advised to submit their entries as soon as possible to avoid the last minute rush; therefore, their contributions can be scanned more carefully by members of the editorial staff and by the sponsors of the publication.

All entries should be given to one of the following members of the faculty: Dorothy Mercer, Fred Bracher, Arthur Vassar would prefer a husband in irons to a husband entombed, any husband being better than no husband.

Ice Carnival Plans

Take Bump From Winterland, But Show To Go On

Plans for the semi-annual college Ice Carnival, tentatively scheduled for April 27 at Winterland Ice Rink, hit a snag last week, when the faculty adviser and club officers of the skate club could not come to an agreement with the Winterland management for rink rental, revealed Bill Hart, skate club president.

Tentative plans, meanwhile, as outlined by CAB leaders, are reported to include a tea-dance on April 26 for Council 5, consisting of restricted social organizations, and a sight-seeing tour on May 12 for Council 4, which lists the Army and Navy Club, Chinese Students' Club, Japanese Students' Club, and Rifle and Pistol Club.

The examination will cover questions on meteorology, air navigation, and civil air rules.

Three more aeronautics students have soloed recently, it was announced. They are Leroy Grau, Jack Gioso, and Werner Von Breckenfeldt.

Try College The Chinese Way — It's Tough

NEW YORK CITY — (ACP) — Do you think you're having a hard time with college? If you do, try getting your education the Chinese way.

According to a writer in the Columbia University Spectator, you start off by cutting your food allowance down to 15 cents a week—including all meals. For shelter you can spend 5 cents a week. If you can't find anything cheaper, but you must plan your budget so you don't spend more than $10 in a year for your entire support: food, clothing, shelter, and books. Dorms hold 30 to a room.

Classes start at 6:30 a.m. That is so that they'll be over by 10, when "Japanese visitors" are likely to begin arriving. When that happens you run to a nearby cave, if your campus is lucky enough to have a cave; and classes, if unfinished, continue in there until the bombs stop falling.

Books and college equipment are very little bother. Most of such material was destroyed in the eastern universities. Since then the remainder of your college has traveled about three thousand miles on foot and set itself up in a few old farmhouses in the west.

Low Sophs Make Plans For Alum Rock Picnic

Dan McHugh, low soph president, this week asked to hear from those who wish to make transportation arrangements with his picnic committee for the April 28 outing to Alum Rock.

"I am taking a list of those who have no way of getting there," he announced, "and the committee will try to provide automobile accommodations for all." McHugh added that he would also like to hear from those who can volunteer the use of their cars for the picnic.

Not only low sophs, but all students in the college are invited to this outing, McHugh revealed. "Dancing at Alum Rock will be 25 cents per person, but there will be no other expenses, as we are asking each one to bring his own lunch."

Sports for the picnic, as planned by the committee, will include a basketball game between two groups to be selected, as well as swimming.

Library Installs Catalog System, 2,000 New Books

Approximately 2,000 new books are now available in the college library, according to Eleanor Binns, assistant library director.

The library has purchased a new index filing card system from the Library of Congress to aid students in finding books rapidly.

For the luformation of the newer students, there is no reading room for the college at Galileo, but the Galileo library remains open until 3 o'clock in the afternoon to accommodate those who desire to use the books for reference, Miss Binns said.

Plan Educations As Unit, Says Harvard's Conant

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — (ACP) — Education should be liberalized by having the seven or eight year education of the professional man planned as a unit.

This is the proposal of Harvard University's President James Bryant Conant as "an attempt to get away from the 'pre-professional' idea in college."

Specifically, he asks that the medical schools admit men provisionally in their second year on the basis of work done as freshmen.

"After that," President Conant explained, "the man could develop on a cultural pattern determined by the graduate school and the college administrators." Such an arrangement would remove the impulse of the student to overconcentrate in the sciences in order to impress the graduate school admission committee. It was understood that the suggestions were equally applicable to the law school.

"The Utopian ideal," he continued, "would be to extend the cultural education in the professional school by seminars and the like." He admitted that a special pattern would have to be planned in the "seven year unit" for the man whose interest was in medical science, rather than in practicing.

Scenic Wonders Of Barn Dance Site

Pictured above, at top, is the scene of the Associated Men Students barn dance this Friday. In the center picture can be seen the tables and benches where students may indulge in the weinies, buns, apple cider, and apples, that Lyle Shultz, AMS president, promises for a pre-dance supper. The waterfall, below, is typical of the rustic atmosphere that may be enjoyed at Alvarado Park.

In addition to the super and dance, Shultz has planned a varied group of sports activities to begin at 4 o'clock.

Richmond's Alvarado Park may be reached by following signs that will be posted along the route beginning at San Rafael ferry road and San Pablo intersection. Students should then drive out San Pablo Avenue for nine blocks after the Richmond sign, then turn right to reach the park. Complete directions may be obtained from any member of the AMS committee, Shultz said.

Peace Society To Present Second Rally Of Semester

Friday, at 11 o'clock in the Powell Street Lecture Hall, the Peace Society of the college will present its second peace rally of the semester, according to plans released by Robert Mason, society president.

Choosing as a subject, The National Student Peace Movement, the society will add its contribution to this day which has been set aside for observance of peace in colleges and universities all over the country, Mason added.

Speakers for the day have not been announced yet, but Mason has guaranteed the presence of at least two speakers who are well qualified on this particular subject.

This Friday's rally will be the second presented in a little more than a month by the college Peace Society.

Hotel Division

Secures Places For Two Grads In Local Firms

Appointment of two graduates of the Hotel Division to important posts in the catering department of Whitney Brothers, beach concessionaires, was announced this week by A. C. Hinds, general manager of the concern.

Thomas Caswell, who completes the Hotel and Restaurant course next month, has been appointed manager of Topsy's Roost and is already at work there. Hinds indicated that Caswell's duties will include supervision of both the catering department and the dance floor.

Carl Rutledge, graduate of last year, will soon begin work as manager of the historic Cliff House, also operated by Whitney Brothers. Rutledge has been working at the Powell Street Pig'n Whistle.

Both Caswell and Rutledge attracted Whitney Brothers' attention through work done in the Hotel and Restaurant division of the college, Hinds said.

"Records made by graduates of the division are winning much favorable attention from employers, with the result that the division is constantly in receipt of requests from hotel and restaurant men for graduates, division members revealed.

Mitchell Hoffman, former student, has been recently appointed front clerk at San Francisco's St. Francis Hotel.

Ernest Box, December graduate, is now a member of the Rio Del Mar staff, at Aptos, California.

A number of graduates will be placed in jobs for the summer, the division said, where they will gain valuable experience.

Hygiene Students Participate In Radio Quiz April 20

College hygiene students will participate in a radio quiz program at 10:30 a.m. on April 20, announced Terry Dearborn, college health director.

Sponsored by the State Department of Motor Vehicles, it will be broadcast over Station KFRC.

"Names of the students participating are yet unknown," Dearborn said, "but there will be four men competing against four women."

He further revealed that all students are welcome to attend the broadcast.

Business Dept. To Order Equipment For New Building

New equipment for use in the Business Department at the Balboa campus will be ordered soon, announced F. Grant Marsh, department chairman, last week.

Many new machines designed to aid the students in becoming efficient office workers will be added to the equipment. These will include 1 Billing Machine, 3 Bookkeeping Machines, 1 Addressograph and accessory equipment; 7 Calculators, 1 Multigraph Duplicator, 10 Typewriters, and 1 Electric Typewriter, to be used exclusively for instruction purposes.

This new equipment, Marsh said, will enable students to learn the operation of many various machines on new accurate machines.

New courses to teach the use of these machines will be planned in about two weeks, he commented.

Civil Service Examinations Taken By Police Students

Civil Service examinations were taken on April 10 by members of the police training class.

There were two types of examinations given: One was for a state highway patrol officer, and the other was for a state liquor control officer. This latter position is with the State Board of Equalization.

These examinations took place throughout the state, and many of the persons taking the examination were from police training classes such as this college has.

Texas Prof Finds New Method Of Learning German

AUSTIN, TEXAS — (ACP) — Reporting a proved method for learning to read advanced German with less than 50 hours' instruction, C. V. Pollard, University of Texas Germanic Language instructor literally has brought one of the most difficult of languages to translate to his students' finger-tips.

The result of four years' work, Pollard's novel method has passed 92 out of 94 students on language exams that ordinarily require three years' schooling, he claimed here today. Instruction times varied from 11 to 51 hours, averaging 25.

His system, employing use of the fingers to guide the reader through the peculiar word order and long, complicated sentence structure of the German language, has been copyrighted. He will publish a book on it this summer, he said.

Goldstone
. . . Of Sound and Fury

THIS week and last, the dark chaotic landscape of war has been fitfully illuminated by occasional flashes of gallantry and individual heroism that seem strangely conspicuous by their presence in this carnival of blood.

Sharp destroyer actions in the North Sea and the Skagerrak are reminiscent of days gone forever; point-blank dogfights like the one off of Narvick salvage whatever remains of the reckless bravery that characterized the days of "wooden ships and iron men."

But this type of action is by-play, and has no decisive effect in a war so thoroughly de-humanized and mechanized that the majority of the casualties never see the faces of their slayers.

Whether the chicken or the egg, this scientific reduction of warfare to a quantitative basis is inseparably linked with the jungle law that touched off the inferno, and is now reducing to rubbish all the idealistic idols and "scraps of paper" erected and contracted by nations through either expediency or honor.

That is why, in a three syllable summary, this war stinks: It fouls the atmosphere with a stench more nauseating than that emitted by any preceding conflict, simply because it is the funeral-pyre of the rottenest conglomeration of criminality that has ever existed at one time.

The resumption of neutral Scandinavia's violation serves only to pile the Ossa of anarchy on the Pelion of barbarism; it is in itself no new revelation, but merely another manifestation of the unspeakable corruption that is the core and keystone of Communazilism.

The double-edged sword wielded by the Berlin-Moscow Axis has now disemboweled the entire Northern bloc in a welter of innocent blood.

There is no reason to believe that a desperate collectivist monster, its corpse-cluttered feet crumbling, will stop at this juncture. The mad death-dance will go on—ripping to shreds whatever semblance of decency survives in the universal ruin—demolishing with savage fury the laboriously accumulated codes of restraint which have heretofore distinguished modern man from his primordial ancestor.

The wanton madness now displayed in a relatively mild degree is not a matter of choice for the nations that unleash it on the world. It is the unavoidable out-thrust of an internal policy which is based on no other criterion than absolute ascendancy of brute force as the coercive blackjack of the ruling hierarchy.

The tyrants of the collectivist states are "riding the tiger," and could not slacken their race to the abyss even if they would.

This suicidal interlude is not yet at an end—it is just beginning.

The maniacs who formerly exalted the glory of individual sacrifice and heroism in war have snuffed it out in the drone of massed air-fleets, and obliterated it in the crash of bombs raining on civilians, both enemy and neutral.

When it finally ends, the 300,000 Russian corpses mouldering in Finland's thaw, and the thousands of bloated German hulks washed up on Swedish beaches from shattered transports—these will serve as more appropriate monuments to the war than the classic arches and columns decked with wreaths and honored once a year.

Frister
. . . The Spectator

MEMO from Joe Pasternak to Universal front office: "Plot No. 7 for Durbin picture No. 7—Stagestruck girl, Pam Drake, on way to join her actress mother, Georgia, meets and thinks she falls in love with pineapple king, John Alden.

"On the side, she unknowingly studies the leading role in the play her mother wants to do. The producers, being nice fellows, conveniently neglect to tell the girl that her mother wants to do the play, and they also forget to tell Georgia that they have cast Pam in the part. Alden meets the mother, and the producers fly to Hawaii to meet them and settle the whole thing. Take it from there, Jane Hall and you other scripters."

Question from Pasternak: "What do you think, boys? Will it be a success?"

Answer from the Universal chorus of echoes: "Yes, Mr. Pasternak." Echoes of the "yes-man" type are usually psychic. On the whole, however, this phenomenon is no rare occurrence. Being able to say "oui" and "si" requires, besides a producer who won't take "no" for an answer, four years of college training, an unlimited vocabulary, and an uncle on the Board of Directors.

But for once the "yes-men" were right. IT'S A DATE is a success, and this factor can be attributed mainly to two things, Deanna Durbin's singing and Walter Pidgeon's deftly satirical performance. The latter, as John Alden, plays the part with his tongue in his cheek and a merry twinkle in his eye. His is a neatly drawn caricature of a tired business man who tries to make love to the mother with the adoring kid hanging around, and at the same time tries to keep the girl from learning that he doesn't reciprocate her adoration. Pidgeon has a sense of humor that enables him to give this serio-comic role the polished finesse that denotes a finished performance.

Deanna Durbin gives the best portrayal of her career as Pam, who thinks that, in comparison to herself, Duse and Bernhardt are second-rate. Miss Durbin gives a mature performance, overacting only when she is supposed to be playing a part other than Pam. Her singing is better than any she has ever done. Aside from popular songs, she sings Loch Lomond, Schubert's Ave Maria, and Suzette's Street Song from La Boheme. Her rendition of these three classics is beautifully done. Her voice has improved tremendously since she first appeared in Three Smart Girls.

Kay Francis, as Georgia Drake, is Kay Francis with only a gloss of sophistication to conceal the fact that Kay Francis is still only a clothes-horse. Outstanding support is offered by Cissie Loftus, S. Z. Sakall, and Sam Hinds.

Director William A. Seitez has added that certain intangible touch to the film that makes it less adolescent than its predecessors. Instead of wasting too much footage of the back of Miss Durbin's palate, he pans a few shots and gives the impression that her singing is making upon the audience. An extremely good touch is this, and coupled with the fact that the dialogue is less dis-Durbin than usual, makes It's A Date a sure bet if you want to hear that "it's a date."

By KEI HORI

What occurred 19 years ago last October 24 shall never be forgotten in the Aydelotte household. It was then that the proud Mr. Aydelotte became even more proud, for he then became a father—enter little Peter.

Oakland citizens were able to go a day more without cigars, for Mr. Aydelotte, it seems, passed out "all-day-cigars" to announce a new addition to the clan.

Little did the Aydelottes know they would bring up a child such as little Petey grew up to be. Pete wanted to be a man. Now he is studying the Post Office business. (The civil service, Oscar, not the game.)

At the present time, Petey, after the hard 19½ years of book learnin', including two years of Junior college, plans to finish his final semester of Subject A. Pete, as far as O. can find out, is the only man in the college majoring in Subject A, having taken three semesters of the course, and is now in the final (he hopes) lap—his fourth and last.

Pete's early education began in Glenview Grammar School across the bay; went to Cabrillo Junior and Senior High; plans to come to the college another semester. He was assistant yell-leader at high school, and has been assistant yell-leader here for three semesters. He has aspirations of becoming head yell-leader of the college next semester.

Although Pete does not use Laydee Ester's cosmetics, he likes her serenades, and thinks Guy Lombardo is a swell guy. (?). He eats almost anything edible, and, as are most college "Joe's," has a secret passion for Madeleine Carroll, and Clark Gable's protege he wishes to be.

Pete will receive his athletic award for being Junior Varsity manager this semester.

Oscar says you ought to meet him.

My, What A Gleam In Her Eye!

Marion Schrick, captain of the college women's rifle team, demonstrates on the Galileo lawn the form which helped her to tally a score of 179 for Ram high point honors and fourth place in the Women's Intercollegiate Team Championships held in the State of Washington last month.

College "Assertedly" Takes Dual Horsehide Tilt; Scorebook Neglected As Ram Baseballers Defeat Yuba

By WILLARD AKERS

Still reeling firmly in first place in league standings after taking a double header baseball victory from Yuba Junior College, the Ram horsehide swatters prepare for a crucial week end against Sacramento next Saturday at Funston.

The locals won easily, though the exact score is not known, since the team manager, Jim Smith, forgot to take the score-book along on the trip.

According to reports from Bob Hvidt, Ram pitcher, the Yuba team was a weak outfit, and the locals had little trouble in winning the contests. The scores were 12 to 5, and 11 to 6 according to Hvidt.

It was very hot at Marysville last week end, and both teams played sloppy games. Lee Eisan, Ram football mentor, had tire trouble on the trip, and couldn't keep an accurate score because of his troubled mind, Hvidt said.

The Rams weren't up to hitting standards in the Yuba games, but Yuba helped the local cause by playing a sloppy defensive game, Hvidt added. Roscoe Wolcott, leading Ram hitter, failed to maintain his record pace with the mace, and fell about 100 points in his batting average.

Coach Jack Gaddy was pleased at the Ram victories, but declined to concede a Ram pennant until after the Sacramento and Modesto contests are played.

The Ram batboy, Russ Sweet, was affected by the heat. Sweet kept up an incessant line of chatter, and helped to keep up the spirits of the locals.

Harry Aleo pitched the first game, while Hvidt and Martin Zernicke teamed to stem the Yuba nine in the second contest.

Block Society Snares CAB Basketball Tourney Lead

Paced by the Block Society team, the Club Advisory Board basketball tournament is now in its second big week, announces Mel Chiazzola, in charge of the affair.

As of last Friday, the standings were as follows:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Block Society	2	0	1.000
Beta Tau	0	1	.000
Pi Mu Gamma	0	1	.000

These standings will be changed on Monday and will appear in the Friday issue of The Guardsman.

The schedule for the next two days, as released by the CAB, is as follows: April 17, Forestry Society vs. Beta Tau; April 18, Block Society vs. Ski Club. The games start at 4 p.m. in the Galileo Gym. "Come one, come all," Chiazzola said.

In the first game of the season the lettermen, shy of basketball men, nosed out Beta Tau by two points in a well played game. Chiazzola revealed. Dan McHugh stood out for the losers by his fine defensive play, observers commented. The final score was 29-27.

In the second game the blockmen outscored their rivals and came out on the long end of a 33 to 29 score.

State Golf Postponed

S.F. State golf matches, scheduled for last Friday, have been postponed until a future date, announced Louis G. "Dutch" Conlan this week.

"Golf students have been missing too many classes," Conlan said, "so it has been necessary to schedule the matches at a time that would not cause any classes to be missed."

Thriller

Menlo Squad Nips Ram Tracksters; Locals Snare Five Firsts In Upset

By a margin of one point, the Rams had victory stolen from under their noses in a triangular track meet with Marin and Menlo at Sequoia High Stadium Friday afternoon.

Beating out Marin for second place behind the college in the relay, the Menlo cindermen finished the day with 57 points; Rams, second, with 56 points; and Marin railed with 36 digits.

Out of 12 events, the college copped five first places. Vasquez won the mile run in 4:53. In the 100 yard dash, Don Mavor hit the tape in second place behind Hoffman of Marin. Time was 10.2.

Bert Korn, McMeekin, and White placed second, third, and fourth, respectively, in the quarter-mile. Menloman Girdleston took first honors with a clocking of 52.1. Hall of Marin took the high hurdles event, with Bob Raine of the college nipping Howard of Menlo for second position.

Ram distance mainstay Lowery, followed by Vasquez, was clocked in first place with a time of 2:08. The 220 yard sprint saw Mavor, Korn, and Young finish in that order on the heels of Girdleston, Menlo. Time was 22.7.

The high jump was conquered by Hagen, college, at 6 feet 1 inch. Raine and Mosher tied with Abbott of Menlo for second place. Hancock and Perry of the Rams took first and second places in the pole vault. The bar was left at 11 feet 7 inches.

In the low hurdles, Raine secured fourth position. Time was 26.3. Jim Wagstaff tossed the rubber platter to a second place in the discus. Dunlop, Menlo, won the event with a heave of 126 feet. White, Lowery, McMeekin, and Korn, comprising the Ram relay squad, tore up the track in 3:32 to win the lap-event.

Equestrians Sweep WAA Jumping Test

San Francisco equestrians made a clean sweep in the jumping event at the Women's Athletic Association horseshow last Saturday evening. Winners were Tedda Kosch, Bob Bourne, and Peace Alvarez in that order.

Colleges participating in this show were San Mateo, Marin, Sacramento, and San Francisco.

In the beginners' class, San Mateo won; in the intermediate and advanced classes the four colleges divided first, second, and third places.

Trophies were donated by Roos Brothers, Frank Smith Tennis Shop, and John Finkenstelter, who was one of the judges. The other judge was Mrs. H. Barnes of Marin, who is a well-known horsewoman.

Mrs. J. Paul Mohr, wife of Registrar Mohr, acted as ring-mistress. Only accident of the evening occurred when one of the San Mateo woman riders fell during the musical chairs event. She was not hurt.

Following the show was a barn dance at the stables in which the hundred spectators present joined.

In other WAA week-end events, Helen Godman and Rosamond Patterson of this college, won the doubles tournament in the Tennis-Archery playday held at the Palace of Fine Arts last Saturday, while the badminton group lost matches at Marin Junior College Friday.

Tennis-Archery playday was a six-way meet representing San Jose State College, Mills College, San Francisco State College, and San Mateo, Marin, and San Francisco Junior Colleges.

Sul Ross State Teachers College (Alpine, Tex.) has dropped intercollegiate football from its sports program.

Yuba Netmen Default; Rams Meet COP Friday

Because of injuries, ineligibility and lack of meh, the Yuba Junior College defaulted their matches with the Ram tennis team, supposedly slated for last Saturday at Marysville, Coach Tom Wilson revealed.

The default gave the Wilsonmen 29 wins out of 33 matches scheduled. Although the team had looked forward to the matches, this will mean more practice for them before the matches at Stockton this Friday, Wilson commented.

"Since Stockton's College of the Pacific is Tom Wilson's alma mater, the matches will be partly 'grouch' as well as competitive," Bob Owen, team manager, said.

"The team will leave Powell Street at 10 a.m. Friday in two cars," Coach Wilson concluded.

Three 'Annie Oakleys' On Line Of Fire

Here only shadows on the wall, but as real as life to their competitors, are the marksmanship scores of the three women riflers pictured above. They are members of the college rifle squad which amassed 2,453 points to earn a fourth position in the standing of the Women's Intercollegiate Team Championships.

Skiers Vanquish UCLA Team; Place Ninth In Trophy Tilt

In the Vanderbilt Memorial trophy meet held over last week-end, San Francisco skiers took ninth place to best out U.C.L.A. with a margin of 32.61 points. The college skiers' total score was 210.08 for the two-day meet.

Falk Falkenburg of the college took seventh place in the individual jumping contest, held Sunday, with a time rating of 89.7. Among other colleges participating were California, who won the trophy, Nevada, and Sacramento Junior College.

WAA Golf Tyros To Accept Marin Golf Playday Bid

To further friendly relations between the two institutions, college golf enthusiasts are planning to accept an invitation sent by Marin Junior College to attend a Women's Athletic Association golf playday on May 18 at Marin. Jane Young, manager, announced early this week.

Golfers will practice on the range near Balboa Park on Saturday, April 20, according to Miss Young, and later they will practice on an East Bay course.

So far this semester, enthusiasm for golf has been noticeably lacking according to Miss Young, and because prices are more reasonable in the East Bay, she is planning to take the group over there for practice.

Spring Football Practice Progresses To Play Drills

Actual running off of plays has begun for the college aspirants to next semester's football team, announced Coach Lee Eisan, head coach.

Since the team has finished its practice of calisthenics, plays are the next item in order. Scrimmage will also be run off, Eisan said.

"The gaps left open by graduates have been filling quite well," Eisan continued. "We have good backfield men in Cavender, Lowell and Art Ekdall." Returning veterans Al Naiman, Dave Cunningham and Leo Leggett will be more than welcome to the roster, he added.

Practices are on Monday and Wednesday.

GUARDSMAN ALL-AMERICAN

Award For Last Semester's Issues Places Paper Among Six Top College Weeklies

All-American—that was the rank awarded to The Guardsman when the Associated Collegiate Press this week named the publication as one of the six top-ranking junior college weeklies in the nation.

Each year the Associated Collegiate Press, an organization of some 600 college newspapers, of which The Guardsman is a member, judges and rates those member-papers applying for criticism. The highest honor ranking available is the All-American classification. Of the six papers falling under this category, two were from northern California—The Guardsman and the Modesto Collegian.

"While this decision was arrived at from last semester's issues of The Guardsman, which was under the more than capable editorship of Bill Frantz, we, the staff of this semester, feel confident that we will be able to achieve again the honor award which distinguished the issues under Bill's hand," Leonard Gross, Guardsman editor, stated upon receipt of the news.

Expected by week's end, in recognition of the award, was an 11 by 15 inch diploma from the Associated Collegiate Press.

"Naturally," Gross continued, "we are proud of the award, for this is the first time in its existence that The Guardsman has been widely recognized for its quality. Incidentally, the entire staff of last semester, in addition to Bill, should receive credit for their work, for no organization can gain any measure of success unless the whole of the group works as an efficient unit."

Following is a list of last semester's Guardsman staff:

Bill Frantz, editor; Leonard Gross, managing editor; Isadore Maleff, assistant editor; Daniel Rosenblatt, assistant managing editor; Louis Goldstone, sports editor; Lucretia Antonicelli, women's editor; Edmund Wunsch, business manager; Marion MacKillop, staff artist; reporters: Bill Albertson, Roy Berns, Victorla Caniwell, Janet Fellows, Bill Hall, John Hansen, Bertie Hyman, Frances Maiolo, Carol Pickering, Dorothy Trood, Harold Unterberger, Jack Weichel, and Jay Wright; Lawrence Lipke, Allen Martin, and Joanne Schubert of the business staff; and photographers Art McLain and Bill Quandt.

"Joan Nourse, our editorial adviser, and Edward H. Redford, our business adviser, should by no means be forgotten," Gross added. "Without Miss Nourse to help us over the rough spots, The Guardsman would have been in a sad plight many times."

The Associated Collegiate Press is responsible for the cartoons which appear as a regular feature of the Friday issue of The Guardsman. It also supplies the material for This Collegiate World, which appears in the Tuesday issue. Additional news and feature articles received with this service can be identified by the letters "ACP" at the head of the story.

College Turns Out Tonight For Big AMS Barn Dance At Alvarado Park

With the Sadie Hawkins theme prevailing, an expected 1,000 college students dressed "in gingham and denim" will cavort at the Associated Men Students barn dance this afternoon and evening in Richmond's Alvarado Park.

Games of softball and volleyball will start the festivities at 4 o'clock.

Everyone attending will be served free apples, cider, hotdogs, and cheese sandwiches, Dean Edwin C. Browne will open the dancing activities by calling a square dance, Paul Jones and Virginia Reel.

No stags will be allowed to attend, and the admission is one student body card per couple.

Students attending the barn dance should follow the Eastshore Highway to San Pablo and thence to the Richmond sign. Nine blocks past this sign is McBride Avenue, and a right turn should be made at this point. Then they should continue along McBride for an approximate one-half mile.

Music for the barn dance will be furnished by Eddie Ticoulat and his orchestra. Ticoulat, according to

AMS President

Lyle Shultz

Shultz, is well known in the Bay Region, and is a wizard on the saxophone and clarinet.

He has played at the Castlewood Country Club and the Oakland Airport Hotel, in addition to engagements with the college and other local organizations.

A style which combines the techniques of Orrin Tucker and Freddie Martin is said to distinguish his music.

Lyle Shultz announced the following selections. Headed by Marion MacKillop, committee includes Will Latz, Edith Calaghan, Elmer Hubacher, Rita Moore, Henry Kreutzman, Irving Conley, Bob Raine, Russ Weeks, Jean Kelly, Stan Tobiason, Lyle Schulz, and the AMS adviser, Joe Amori.

Anyone who wants a map giving complete directions to get to Alvarado Park may get it at Tom O'Neill's office at Powell or from Dean Browne's office at Galileo.

College Hygiene Students Enter Radio Quiz Tomorrow

Students of the college will compete the two teams of four men and four women who will compete on next Saturday's radio safety quiz to be broadcast at 10:30 a.m. over Station KFRC, Terry Dearborn, college health coordinator, indicated this week.

The eight competitors for the broadcast will be chosen from among the following: Mary Frances Maloney, Suzanne Brun, Ruth Brun, Patricia Scoll, Virginia Faulk, Constance Lawson, Elliot Felgenbaum, Dale Jost, Jim Sullivan, James Hammond, Robert Applestone, James Hammond, Parshel Hayes, and Ronald Lane.

Louis Conlan, physical education instructor, will speak briefly on safety education in the junior college.

For students wishing to attend the program, the studio is located at the Don Lee Building at Van Ness and O'Farrell Streets.

Peace Society

Sponsors Assembly In Lecture Hall This Morning At 11

At its second rally within a month, the college Peace Society, this morning at 11 o'clock in the Powell Street Lecture Hall, will feature addresses by Harold M. Sawyer, president of the San Francisco chapter of the National Lawyer's Guild, and Allen Williams, Associated Student president, Robert Mason, society president, announced.

This rally will be but one of many that will be held today all over the nation to foster the cause of peace, John Horowitz, society faculty adviser, indicated.

Sawyer has chosen to speak on the subject: Is American Youth Going to Follow the Headlines into the Front Lines; while Williams will deliver a short speech on the activities of the junior college relative to the nation-wide peace movement.

"According to students who have had the honor of hearing him before at other institutions and gatherings, Sawyer is a very energetic and finished speaker, and known to be an authority on this particular subject of peace," Mason commented.

That Sawyer has just finished a term as chairman of the Yanks Are Not Coming conference, recently held in San Francisco, in which approximately 40 different unions and about the same number of peace societies and church organizations were represented, was further stated by Mason.

"It is owing to the great number of peace movements, such as ours, that have recently swept the country, that the danger of the United States entering the European conflict has been minimized," Mason opined.

A most interesting program has been planned for all who attend, Horowitz commented.

We trust that as many students as are able will take advantage of it," Horowitz said.

Eleven o'clock classes will not be officially dismissed for the rally, according to word received from Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Ex Council Takes CAB Denunciation

Venting a protest to the deletion of $200 from its original $500 budget allocation for the current semester, the Club Advisory Board delivered the following letter to the Executive Council this week.

To The Executive Council,
A.S.S.F.J.C.
Gentlemen:

At the last meeting of the Club Advisory Board, held April 9th, Mr. Daniel Rosenblatt, chairman of the finance committee, in an official statement to the CAB, revealed that the sum of two hundred dollars ($200) had been taken from the money previously allocated to the CAB. This action was done without consulting the Board and without its consent apparently being necessary.

By unanimous vote of the CAB at this meeting, the undersigned were directed to write this letter of emphatic protest against the arbitrary action of the student council of this matter. It was the consensus of the Board that such methods as were used are not in accordance with the democratic principles which are set up in the student body constitution. Aside from the possible, even probable, illegality of such an action after a certain sum of money had been allocated for a specific purpose and after plans had been made to use the total sum originally available, this Board views with alarm the authoritarian methods employed to accomplish the student council's purposes. The Board sincerely hopes that this action doesn't constitute a precedent and has directed us to protest this, and possible future actions, with every emphasis at our command.

Accuracy of this letter is being sent to the Guardsman so that the students as a whole may be acquainted with the action of the Executive Council and the CAB's protest against it.

This letter was signed by Alden F. Hagen, CAB president; and H. Chavis, chairman of the resolution committee.

In addition to the CAB, the budget appropriations of 14 other college activities were cut by the Executive Council to strengthen the college reserve fund. The CAB suffered the greatest reduction, with the Hi Soph fund running a close second with a $130 deduction.

Governing Body In Secret Session For First Time

No news was forthcoming from the Executive Council this week as a result of a special closed session called by Al Williams, Associated Student president, in which all but council members were excluded.

That Williams' action was not intended to conceal council business from the general student body, and that the matters considered by the council had nothing to do with the student body, was assured by Alden Smith, council faculty adviser.

The council discussion concerned council members only, and nothing more, Smith added.

So far as can be ascertained from reliable sources, this is the first time in the history of the college that an Executive Council meeting has been closed to the Associated Students.

Ogg Reveals Program For College Sirkus On May 17

Continuing arrangements for the "Meet Your Campus" day, tentatively scheduled for May 17 at the new campus of the college, Bob Ogg, general chairman, released the following changes in program.

Classes will be excused at 10 o'clock in the morning and students will go to Balboa Park, but not in a parade as formerly planned.

From 12 until 2 o'clock, lunch will be available, served by the Hotel Division.

From 2 until 5 o'clock, recreation ideas will be carried out under the direction of the committee.

A tug-of-war between the coaches and students will be promoted by the recreation committee in charge. Also, a contest for football throwing and kicking is in order.

Between 5 and 7 o'clock, barbecued food will be served, after which the high sophomores will hold a rally.

The evening will be terminated by a bonfire and dance which will be under the direction of Muriel Grenelle, dance committee chairman. A suitable location for the dance has not been chosen as yet.

Muriel Nolan has been appointed as secretary and general sub-chairman, and according to Ogg, Gene Powell of the Aviation Club will be in charge of the club concessions.

Ticket Sales For College Ice Carnival Open Today

Tickets for the college ice carnival which will be held April 27 at Winterland Ice Rink, will go on sale today, according to Joseph Williams, faculty adviser of the ice skaters.

Priced at 35 cents for spectators, 50 cents for those with skates, and 65 cents including skate rental, the tickets will be available from all club members, the Galileo Bank, the college office at Powell Street, and the Book Store, Williams said.

Williams' announcement came as a result of the meeting held Friday with the management of Winterland for the purpose of agreeing upon a rate for rink rental, at which time a contract was drawn up and the above admission prices approved.

According to Bill Hart, skate club president, the carnival will start promptly at 6:30 (instead of 5:30) with exhibition figure skating which will last until 7:30. From 8 until 11 o'clock the ice will be open for an "everybody skate."

Errants Goads In Aerial Razzing

When an aeronautics student completes his eight hours of dual flying instruction and is thereby entitled to brave the perils of the sky alone, does he go up with loud cheers and with trumpets blaring? He does not. He goes up amid raucous shouts of laughter which emanate from his fellow students.

Why? Because on his head he wears the latest thing in millinery, designed to oudo any creation that French milliners could turn out. If the student has begun to feel a little "cocky" about his first solo flight, there is nothing to take it out of him like wearing this specially designed hat made of felt, with a tohatio can on top, a candle resting demurely in it, and a pair of zoggles attached, which are worn over the eyes.

If an aeronautics student goes so far as to actually make an error in judgment, his fate is sealed. Upon his broad and manly head he must wear, for the rest of the day, a shining aluminum hat, bearing the insignia "I am ——'s jackass." (Blank to be filled in with the instructor's name.)

If you see any aeronautics students going around sprouting long ears, it's because they've worn the aluminum hat once too often and the legend upon it has come true!

AWS Century Club Tea Honors Parents

Honoring parents of college women, the Associated Women Students will sponsor a program and tea at the Century Club at 3 o'clock this Sunday, according to Gloria Miller, AWS president.

"The main purpose of this event is to get parents or older friends of the college women to meet each other and to foster better, closer relationships between them," Miss Miller announced.

She repeated her request that fathers as well as mothers participate in the affair, adding that all are welcome.

"A complete list of hosts has also been made," Miss Miller said. "These men are asked to help us in receiving the women's parents."

Among those selected are Al Williams, Elmer Hubacher, Wilton Latz, Hugh Waite, Alden Thorogood, Hal Hoffman, Bob Ogg, Len Gross, Bob Owen, and Dan Rosenblatt.

Scrip Books For '40 Fair Still To Be Had — Sullivan

Word released by J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of education, indicates that students who wish to purchase the special scrip books for the Fair may still do so.

These books, affording 130 admissions for the low price of $3.75, may be purchased at the Galileo Bank during the week of April 22 to 26, Sullivan said.

Also for sale are books that contain one admission to the Fair and admission to five exhibits within the Exposition. These books are transferable and will be sold at the bank at Galileo during the week of April 22 to 26, announced Sullivan.

HOME ECONOMICS GROUP ANNOUNCES FASHION SHOW

O'Connor-Moffat and Company will hold a college fashion show in the near future, announced Marion Schrick, HEA president. There will be a meeting of the association today at 2:30 p.m. in Room 317 to discuss the affair, said Miss Schrick.

CLUB ADVISORY BOARD TO PARTICIPATE IN SIRKUS

Alden Thorogood, president of the Club Advisory Board, this week announced that his group will take an active part in the forthcoming college carnival to be held May 17. "The clubs will handle the concessions," Thorogood revealed.

HIGH SOPHS READY FOR BOAT RIDES

Plans for the high sophomore boat excursion have been completed, Ari Pomares, class president, announced today.

The excursion will be from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and will include dancing and swimming at Paradise Coye. Pomares urged all who wish to attend to make their reservations with any of the class officers immediately; as there is only room for 200.

Collegiate Press Rating Gives Guardsman Reason For Pride

NOT often does a newspaper, and especially a college newspaper, have an opportunity to compliment itself on its own work. Nor is it often that the editor and staff of a newspaper can receive concrete evidence that their work is somewhat valuable.

This happens to be one of those rare occasions.

The action of Associated Collegiate Press in naming The Guardsman one of the outstanding college newspapers in the entire nation should please the students of the college as much as it does the staff.

Great credit is due every member of last semester's staff, especially William Frantz, then editor, and Isadore Maloff, then assistant editor. The untiring efforts of Frantz and Maloff, along with the other members of the staff, made possible the splendid results.

It will be a fitting symbol of our entrance into the new building to hang the All-American citation on the wall of the publications office, denoting the first in what we hope will be a long list of awards.

Coinciding with the ACP reports on last semester's paper, The Guardsman this week received the first results of a criticism service that is designed to point out the strong and weak points in this semester's paper.

Perhaps the answer sent us by ACP might prove interesting to the students of the college.

Criticism dealt mostly with the typography of the paper, that is, the various kinds of type used. It was suggested that we use stronger type in our headlines to keep the paper from appearing dull. The use of more two column headlines was also suggested.

Strongest criticism advanced was that the editorial page dragged in appearance.

At the present time these criticisms are being discussed by the editorial staff with the idea in mind of finding a way to eliminate the causes.

Fortunately the favorable criticism advanced more than doubled the unfavorable criticism we received.

Associated Collegiate Press commented that for the most part the headlines were well written, and the makeup was good. Let us quote them: "Newswriting was interesting and coverage appeared to be thorough. The editorial column on the front page made entertaining reading. Your leads and general news style were both good and your reporters seem to be doing well."

The Guardsman evaluated was the issue of March 15, and we feel that even since then our coverage and news style have improved.

Selected by the ACP as outstanding columns in the paper were While Thinking, Counter Point, and The Spectator.

We are sending Associated Collegiate Press copies of every issue of The Guardsman for criticism, so that we may learn the best ways of satisfying the demands of our readers.

Needless to say, the staff feels quite proud of the results attained thus far, and intends to continue in an ever improving vein.

Colonel Rowan, Bearer Of Message To Garcia, At 83 Symbolizes More Than Ordinary Heroism

WITH all America anxiously watching Europe engaged in a great war, it is comparatively simple to forget about a war that the United States fought with Spain, and of the national hero that was created.

Although the Spanish-American war has long been over, the hero of that war is with us in San Francisco.

Next week, Colonel Andrew Summers Rowan, the soldier who carried the message to Garcia, will celebrate his eighty-third birthday. April 23 marks the birthday of the man who is undoubtedly the greatest American hero of any war.

These days the popular conception of a hero is one who has received a medal for destroying an enemy machine gun nest or capturing half a dozen prisoners single-handed. Perhaps that is heroism in a sense.

The action of Colonel Rowan in delivering that message was far above the concepts of ordinary heroism.

Not everyone can be a hero and not one in a million can be a hero in the sense that Colonel Rowan is.

Examination of this matter will show why such is the case. Supposing you were suddenly given orders to deliver immediately a message to a Cuban General way back in the wilds of Cuba and you knew nothing of the territory you were to go through except that the natives were hostile. Not a very pleasant or safe assignment, is it?

Colonel Rowan probably didn't think so either, but he went because he had a job to do. It took great courage and endurance to disappear into the jungle searching for a native chieftain, not knowing where he was but nevertheless determined to find him.

Rowan did just that. He traversed a hostile country on foot and accomplished his mission.

No obstacle great or small kept him from his course and that is why it is fitting to recall his great accomplishment on the eve of his eighty-third birthday.

. . . The Spectator

AMONG the more intelligent people on this earth it is to be expected that there are some who skim through Esquire with a fine tooth comb. (And we don't necessarily mean only the Petty cartoons.) Having thus absorbed the smooth paper subtleties and satirical innuendoes, it may be that they might know what would happen when six men, after having been in prison for years, find themselves at sea with a beautiful girl.

Hollywood, of all places, should know the answer to that one. But with the white-washing aid of the Hays office, it could be assumed that the boys and girl spent their leisure time playing chess or discussing Einstein's Theory of Relativity. Incidentally, the picture in which the above incident is cloaked in Hays office mist is Strange Cargo.

Strange cargo, indeed, was the group that put out from the Guiana jungle, bound for the mainland, and perhaps safety and freedom. The flotsam and jetsam of the prison colony, the scum of the earth, all put to sea for the same cause. The petty hatreds that were important "back there" become mere trivia against the might of the God of the Sea. Yet one man alone—Cambreau, the mysterious—holds the mutinous crew together, foretells Death, and has a vision of Evil.

Ian Hunter, as Cambreau, gives the most noteworthy performance. It is the type of role that, had it been under or over acted, would have ruined the picture. Hunter plays it straight, and it is through him that the audience gets the message that the film is supposed to convey.

Clark Gable is sufficiently virile as Verne, leader of the break. It is a part tailor-made for the brawny Gable, and he does it to perfection, although there are times when he acts more like Super-man than a jailbird.

Julie, the girl who has slept in the world's best gutters, is surprisingly well portrayed by Joan Crawford. Julie had no glamor, but she had sense to pick the strongest man of the bunch, and she stuck to him.

The rest of those who tried to find solace out of prison were as diverse a group as would be found from Singapore to the Bronx. Hessler, the cynical atheist; Molle, the herculean cracksman; Dufond, the scared medico; Flaubert, the "guy with complexes"; and Telez, the pseudo-religious Spaniard who found peace before the boat sailed. The performances of these actors are remarkable when one considers that impressions have to be made in so brief a period.

The one who gives the best portrayal of the group was no criminal, or perhaps he was worse; he was a "stool pigeon" known as M'sieu Pig. This slimy rat is done with remarkable subtlety by Peter Lorre.

Strange Cargo is an actors' film which bogs down only at the times when the religious theme becomes too predominant. It is when the film is coming to a close that it begins to lose dramatic impact. The finale is too long and drawn out.

Strange Cargo is one of those films that will impress if the mood happens to be right; otherwise, it might strike as being too "preachy." Director Frank Borzage has handled the difficult script with finesse and sincerity, never allowing it to get out of hand except at those times when the spirit of Cambreau no longer makes itself felt over the Strange Cargo.

. . . Counter-Point

LAST week, three days after the first grim grey column of German troops crossed the frontier into Denmark, an equally grim, tall and stately old man rode slowly through the bridle paths of Copenhagen's park.

Highly significant was the gesture of seventy year old King Christian in thus resuming his customary morning rides through Copenhagen—an action fully in keeping with his statement of the day before calling on the Danish people "to maintain an attitude completely correct and dignified" in the face of the invaders. It symbolized a bewildered nation's attempt to resume everyday habits in the face of a national calamity, constituted an exemplary instance of complete correctness and notable dignity.

Across the battle-swept Skagerrak, another king, Christian's brother Haakon, rode that morning, but with different intent and under dissimilar circumstances. In a hastily camouflaged railway carriage, the King of Norway fled northward from his already occupied capital.

On the opposite shore of the mine-strewn Kattegat, yet a third king, cousin Gustav of Sweden, waited in grim anxiety for the common foe to determine the fate of his nation.

NOT since Napoleon placed his brothers as rulers of Spain, Holland and Westphalia in the early part of the nineteenth century has history seen an instance of brothers occupying simultaneous thrones—yet the parallel is made today in the two Scandanvian monarchies, Norway and Denmark.

Ancestor of all three Scandanavian Kings was an adventurous French officer in the army of Napoleon, Jean Baptiste, Marshal Bernadotte. One of Napoleon's eighteen Marshals of France, he had been entrusted with the task of directing the Emperor's expeditions against Sweden, had become very popular with the Swedes despite his position as leader of their attackers, for he had been notoriously kind to Swedish prisoners and was further greatly respected for his military prowess.

When, in 1810, the succession to the Swedish throne became indefinite because of the advanced age of Charles XIII and the death of the legitimate heir, it was decided to elect a new Crown Prince. Bernadotte was strongly favored and eventually elected by the support of the potent military class in Sweden.

Four years later the new Crown Prince, in a brilliant campaign of only two weeks duration, forced the neighboring Kingdom of Norway into union with Sweden, and upon the death of Charles XIII in 1818, Bernadotte succeeded to the throne as King of Norway and Sweden.

Thereafter, the Bernadotte dynasty continued to rule both Norway and Sweden through the period that is today proudly called "the century and a quarter of Scandinavian peace." Intermarriage with other royal houses followed, and by 1905 Oscar of Sweden, grand-nephew of Bernadotte, was the uncle of the present King Christian of Denmark.

It was in that year that Bernadotte's forced union of Norway and Sweden finally came to an end as the result of a plebiscite by the terms of which Norway was granted complete independence. The Norwegians, like most Scandinavians, favored a constitutional monarchy. Therefore, the newly independent country turned southward in quest of a king, and eventually selected Prince Charles of Denmark, brother of Christian. Charles immediately assumed his throne, and with it the Norwegian name of Haakon, under which he has continued to rule to the present day.

THROUGH the long bitter years of World War I the brothers Christian and Haakon, together with their cousin, Oscar's son Gustav, managed to steer their respective countries along the difficult path of neutrality. During the years that followed the war, each led his nation in a program of political and social reforms that have made the Scandinavian countries bywords of efficient democracy. The advent of World War II once again gave rise to the difficult problem of maintaining neutrality, but this time the task was beyond their control.

Today Christian rides through the streets of Copenhagen, puppet king of a puppet kingdom. To the north, Haakon fights desperately to prevent a similar status for Norway. In Stockholm Gustav waits anxiously for an indication of Sweden's fate.

In Berlin, a would-be Napoleon, complete with marshals and a world-conquering complex, prattles loudly of protection against British imperialism.

Letters To The Editor — RAM'S HORN
High Frosh, CAB, Assembly Draw Comment

EDITOR'S NOTE: Because of the extraordinary interest shown in the Ram's Horn this semester The Guardsman finds it necessary to request that all contributors to the column limit their letters to 250 words.

● SPECIFIC AS A JELLYFISH
Editor, The Guardsman:

In reply to Mr. Thorogood's letter of the 12th instance, I should like to rectify the erroneous impression he is laboring under regarding my attitude toward the CAB. Mr. Thorogood seems to feel I, in merely asking a few questions, was attempting to cast aspersions upon the noble CAB. Nay, Mr. T, 'twas honestly nothing of the sort. I was sincere in my desire to know what specific benefits clubs under the protective shield of the CAB realized. I expected an answer, Mr. T. Great was my surprise when you quoted from the constitution, a constitution that is about as specific as a jellyfish. Not implying a lack of backbone in the CAB, you understand, but as one man to another, Mr. T, do you think Article 1 of your letter was quite adequate? In times like the present, I should think any favorable light you might shed upon the value of the CAB would be of inestimable benefit to you.

As for the $500, I mean $300, well, far be it from me to deny anyone the good times that $300 can bring, just so they promote the general welfare of the college.

● NO GUN TO TOTE
Editor, The Guardsman:

As a member of the high frosh class, I am wondering if there can be a reason (can there?) for the conspicuous, most impressive inactivity of our high frosh officers??

Other classes have held, or are planning to hold, various parties and outings, but the high freshman schedule so far has been a blank.

True, the social committee has given a dance in our honor, but reliable sources tell us, with malice toward no one, that our officers have not even attended meetings of that committee or submitted any reports thereto.

Dear Editor, I have no ax to grind, no gun to tote, no hatchet to swing, but since I am endowed with all the natural instincts of human behavior, can you blame me for being very, very curious??

● WOEFULLY VULNERABLE
Editor, the Guardsman:

To maintain that Col. Perkins spoke upon the question of national defence at the Army Day Assembly is to pervert and distort all semblance of actuality. I cannot too severely condemn the Army and Navy Club for making no allowances for questions from the floor. When statements are made which are of an exceptionally contestable nature, many of which lack the minimum requisites of a factual basis, let alone the essentials of logical consistency; and further, when a policy is proffered in absolute contradiction to that ostensibly advanced by the Army and Navy Club, I think such a procedure should be insisted upon.

The Army and Navy Club, righteously indignant over the plight of little Finland, places itself in a woefully vulnerable position. Regardless of our sympathies for or against Finland, Russia's proclaimed reason for her invasion was one of anticipatory defence. Heavy fortifications (rightly or wrongly construed as erected for purposes of aggressive warfare on Russia) existed on the Finnish border. Avowedly, this constituted a threat to Russia's national security.

Now let us consider this statement by Col. Perkins—"If Germany should emerge victorious in the present European conflict I do not think it too infeasible that she would attack the United States." Ignoring the tremendous task involved in reducing the Allied forces to a condition of complete and permanent abjectivity; dismissing considerations of the necessary economic rehabilitation and adjustment pursuant to the war; even assuming that the German fleet (with twelve ships exceeding a tonnage of 20,000) evades or destroys our Navy, fails to encounter our submarines, our mines, our coast defences, our Navy aeroplanes, our Army aeroplanes—numbering in the thousands—and successfully lands 100,000 men on our shores within seven days (specified time necessary for a Blitzkrieg); disregarding all this, I should like the Colonel to dispose of such insignificant impedimenta as the following:

(1) An amassed force of 400,000 troops ready for immediate action upon the outbreak of war—guaranteed by the War Department.

(2) That a contingency of 100,000 men would require 1,200,000 tons of shipping, or three-fifths of Germany's entire seagoing shipping of 2,000 tons or over.

(3) That such a fleet would be required to bring with them lighters, armored barges, moveable piers, cranes, base equipment, reserve stores, ammunition, and special landing devices, and would be considerable exerted to manoever all this under heavy fire and probably inadequate harborage.

Is Germany's threat to the national security of the United States any less absurd than Finland's threat to that of Russia's?

Yet mark—this is the basis for Col. Perkins' impassioned plea: "In time of peace, prepare for war—not an aggressive war, but an OFFENSIVE war. Offensive because you must strike first if you are to be victorious." This is the masterly strategy of anticipatory defence, for the employment of which mechanism Russia was diligently flailed—"The ruthless invasion of little Finland. . . . Villainous acts of aggression . . . etc., etc." These sentiments were unreservedly espoused by members of the Army and Navy Club, and crystalized in their letter to the various S.F.J.C. clubs soliciting contributions to the Finnish Relief Fund. The motivating humanitarianism prompting such a gesture cannot be too highly extolled. I can only ask, with others, why con-

THAT man is here again, and we do mean the census taker. He's peeping into the history of millions of people all over the United States right now, but few realize when the first census was taken and how it came about.

Three years after the assemblage of the First Congress, the first census was taken. It was during 1790 that this first census provided that free persons should be distinguished from slaves; Indians were to be excluded, and males of more than 16 were to be distinguished from those under that age.

Return to the year 1790 and listen to an imaginary conversation taking place between George Washington and the first census taker.

George: "Good morning, my good man, what can I do for you?"

Census Taker: "Morning, Mr. Washington, I'm taking the census in this neighborhood and I want to ask you a few personal questions."

George: "Go right ahead, my good fellow, and try to extract from me nothing too personal."

CT: "Did you really chop the cherry tree down and then tell your father?"

George: "Yes, I did."

CT: "Say, Mr. Washington, do you think you'll run for a second term?"

George: "My dear CT, what can I say? After all, this is only my second year in office."

Once again the country is taken over by the census taker, for it is 1850 and things are booming. We travel southwards to an old Colonial mansion, where the head of the house and the gatherer of world information are busily engaged in mid-morning conversation.

CT: "Morning, Colonel, I'm the census taker and I'd like to ask a few questions."

Colonel: "Certainly, my friend; shoot ahead."

CT: "How many people use your bathtub?"

Colonel: "About 14."

CT: "Is it true that your four daughters are going to play in a forthcomin' movie of the South?"

Colonel: We've been talking about it, but the girls aren't quite old enough at present."

CT: "Good afternoon. Are you Billy Rose?"

Billy: "Yes, I am, but I'm afraid I can't put you in the Aquacade. You see, those wings sticking out of your back wouldn't do you any good in the water."

CT: "I'm not a chorus johnny, but a census taker. How long you been married?"

Billy: "I was married last year."

CT: "Yeah, well, did you ever see a rose walking?"

BR: "No—"

CT: "Well, I did, and it wasn't a prim rose."

'40 Election Swings Campus Sentiment

Democrats—

With speculation on the third term aspirations of President Roosevelt holding the limelight, collegians all over the nation are turning to a consideration of the 1940 election prospects of the Democratic party and are discussing the party's possibilities with great interest.

Comment on the third-term issue seems about evenly divided, with many urging the President to make up his mind as soon as possible so the party will not be split further. The Washington College Elm is most vociferous in denouncing another term for Mr. Roosevelt: "The life of the American people will be imperiled by a third term candidacy for Mr. Roosevelt. Our national economy and political institutions will be destroyed. War or peace, we suggest that Mr. Roosevelt declare his intention to obey the unwritten rule against the third term."

The University of Kansas Daily Kansan believes the third-term controversy serves two purposes: "The innocent one of providing a safety valve by which today's anxiety and alarm may be released, and the more doubtful one of providing an effective smoke screen that obscures all other important events."

Turning to the speculation over James A. Farley's candidacy, the University of Minnesota Daily said: "The Postmaster General would no doubt make a formidable candidate for the presidency, being an able politician who has a strong personal following. He has a wide acquaintance throughout the country, a thorough grasp of its many diverse problems and would give a creditable account of himself in the presidency. Mr. Farley is best known, of course, for his political sagacity and his almost uncanny ability in divining popular trends. It is doubtful, however, that a man of his unquestioned political acumen would care to suffer the fate of Alfred E. Smith."

The University of Texas Daily Texan predicts that President Roosevelt could not win the nomination or the election should "Genial Jim" desert him: "A Farley walkout would be a blow to the White House. Farley has a tremendous personal following—a strong and genial personality, he makes and keeps friends. As head of one of the most effective political machines ever developed in this country, he knows how to get results. And many a delegate at the next nomination convention will 'ask Jim' before supporting or opposing any candidate."

Several of the college newspapers are thumping for Cordell Hull as the next carrier of the Democratic standard. On this subject, the University of Iowa Daily Iowan says: "The greatest barrier to the presidency for Cordell Hull is his age. The secretary of state is 70, which doesn't appeal to most voters. As capable as Cordell Hull has been in his political career, making few enemies in the years since 1906 when he first entered Congress, his age alone is enough to keep him from getting the democratic nomination for the presidency. A second barrier to the nomination of Hull is his relationship to Roosevelt in the party. Were Roosevelt to announce his intentions of running for a third term, even the slim chance that Hull now has to get the nomination would fade."

So, while F. D. R. is still favored by collegians in sample polls, there is still much talk about other candidates. Only time and political developments can bring an indication of the final choice of Democratic collegians.

And The GOP

With Republican clubs springing up on many college and university campuses in all sections of the nation, interest in the Grand Old Party's future is growing steadily among United States collegians.

Although seemingly anxious to see the Republicans come out on top in the coming battle of ballots, collegiate editorial writers do not like the methods or the men that are being proposed as weapons for the war. Here is a review of collegiate comment on the party's activities:

From the University of Iowa Daily Iowan: "Because the split in the Democratic ranks would be an unfortunate upheaval distressing in times when there are important problems to solve, we are hopeful that the concerted efforts to revive the full strength of the GOP will be a success. The normal functioning of our party system, without the split in Democratic ranks, should result when the Republicans succeed finally, as they appear to be doing, in their revival."

From the Auburn Polytechnic Institute Plainsman: "Out of all the presidential boomlets for favorite sons, dark horses, and duds, one clearcut fact emerges. The Democrats have no one except Roosevelt. The Republicans have no one. Dewey is the only Republican who isn't as colorless as a dead herring, and he hasn't cut his political eyeteeth yet."

From the Washburn College Review: "William Allen White, hell or high water notwithstanding, nobody has ever been genius enough to reconcile the Republican party with liberalism. Not even Teddy Roosevelt could do that. The Republican party has no political crutch to stand on except conservatism."

From the University of Oklahoma Daily: "While he (Republican Joseph W. Martin) condemns the Roosevelt administration as having totally failed to restore prosperity, and says that national finances must be saved and the small farmer and small employer must be rescued from domineering Federal bureaucracy, he fails to suggest any definite program to remedy the evils which the new deal was designed to benefit. Thousands, if not millions, of persons would like to see relief and subsidization done away with, but it will not be until some party suggests some program other than that old one of laissez-faire."

On the other hand, the Jambar of Youngstown College, says: "Granted that Roosevelt and his ilk know the ins and outs of every major political maneuver, they are overlooking one factor—the people are beginning to think. Thinking people naturally side with a leader who has their best interests at heart, one who is progressive, yet can keep the machinery of government in constant check."

So you see, collegiate editorialists are watching carefully the coming campaign and platform of the Republican party—and many are hoping there will be something they can honestly support and still maintain the collegian's traditional liberal viewpoint.

Traditionally a conservative party, the GOP is this year throwing off all bonds of conservatism, and courting the country with a candidate whose very age is a radical departure from the usual Presidential candidate — Thomas E. Dewey. Not since "T.R." has such a young man dared to knock on the gates of the White House. Whether the Republicans are right in adopting such tactics, only November will be able to tell.

The Guardsman MAGAZINE

Editor's Note:

Once again The Guardsman scores a conspicuous first—and presents its first magazine-section supplement. This new step—like all others—is designed to please the readers, and to increase the value of The Guardsman to you personally.

The material here presented has been carefully selected in an attempt to give variety—and so reach the widest possible number of readers. If the articles and features, the short-stories and cartoons, meet with your approval, tell it to The Guardsman! A good response will permit the publication of more supplements in the future.

Meanwhile, the contents of this current magazine section should, if satisfactory, serve as a necessarily abbreviated preview of the soon-to-be-published Forum Magazine.

Poll Local Collegians On The Question Of Proper Voting Age; Receive Cross-Section Replies

April, besides being the month that Mars has the most fun, is also the month that the census is to be taken. With the question of the census taker on everyone's tongue, and with the Fortune and Gallup polls being common talk, The Guardsman thought it would be apropos to conduct a survey of its own.

In keeping with the policy of The Guardsman, the poll was conducted by asking a question vital to every thinking student of the college. The question asked in the survey was "Do you think that the voting age ought to be lowered from 21 to 18? If so, why? If not, why not?"

The question offered was extremely controversial. The Guardsman reporters who conducted the survey found themselves in the midst of many hotly contested debates. Those who thought the age limit should be lowered and those who thought it shouldn't were as much at swords-points as would be Chamberlain and Hitler.

From the wilds of Powell Street to the secluded glens of Funston Field; from the tennis courts of the Palace of Fine Arts to the soundproof studios of KSFO, went the diligent emissaries, always searching for the truth, always quizzing: "Are you a third termite? Do you think Dewey is a good man? What do you think of Vandenberg? Will the Republicans beat the Democrats this year?" All shape and form of questions were asked and answered by an interested student body. Politics from Socialism to the vilest form of totalitarianism were taken apart and digested. But all through the maze ran one question, "Should the voting age be lowered?"

Sitting calmly on the Powell Street steps was Rex Valpreda, dark, saturnine, but with a friendly smile on his face. We approached him with misgivings and shot the question to him before he had even said "hi." His answer is an indication of what the average student is thinking.

"I think," said Rex, "that a person of 18 should be allowed to vote. Inasmuch as the tendency is toward an increasingly high vote of the elderly people, it should be counterbalanced by the vote of young people."

We said, sotto voce, "Um——Good ideas." And down in the two for a nickel notebook went the remarks of the Valpreda.

Classes, those things to which you go to get your mind off of such erudite things as polls, intervened, but stumbling down the stairs we encountered a behemoth of the massive muscular type. We mused under our breath, "Good fodder for the d—n poll," and approached the Herculean Mr. Robert Ogg, erstwhile president of the Ski Club, who in his off moments dotes on giving answers to inquisitive reporters. Between remarks anent the "Meet Your Campus" day, Bob managed to say:

"Young people who have not left the home fires are too apt to vote as their parents so direct. Therefore, I think it wise for a person to reach his majority before taking so important a step."

The answers began to come fast and furiously now. From Dave Hanatz came the cryptic, "If students are old enough to go to war at 18, then they're certainly old enough to vote." Good idea, Dave.

That paragon of intelligence, that epitome of intellectualism, Allen V. (What does the "V" stand for?- Williams, president of the Associated Students, came forth with another brilliant suggestion: "I think," said Al, "that voting should not be a matter of age at all, but of intelligence. Those who desire to vote should be made to take some sort of intelligence test to determine whether they are capable of executing so important a privilege." Not bad, not bad at all.

Herb Holst commented that "People of 18 will eventually have to pay for all the schemes that go through, so they should have the right to vote at that age."

Looking worried because of the heavy duties imposed upon him as chairman of the judicial committee was Tony Manov. But, nevertheless, we cornered him, and in answer to our query, he replied, "Getting discussion of vital issues at stake in a college classroom would make a person more capable of deciding whether a candidate is worthy of his vote. Many people make the mistake of voting for a person on his personality rather than on his platform."

We left Tony, and proceeded to wander around for awhile until we met Marion MacKillop.

You all know Marion, the girl who makes those linoleum cuts for The Guardsman. Marion thinks that at 18 you are in an era of wishful thinking and do not know your own mind.

Time is pressing, and the deadline is just around the corner, so we hasten to ask Ogden Wheeler whether he thinks that the voting age should be lowered by three years, and right away Ogden came back with "Students in college are capable of deciding for themselves and should be allowed to vote."

Someone who was afraid of having his name published came forward with, "People who are receiving a pension should not be allowed to vote because their vote would outweigh the vote of the younger people who really have to pay for the schemes."

And so on, far into the night, tabulating and checking, until at long last, a conclusion was reached.

Aside from the above quotes, there are many students whose reasons were just as valid, but, unfortunately, neither time nor space will permit their publication. They were, however, counted, in the final compilation which came to the conclusion that 45 students who were questioned were of the opinion that they should not be allowed to vote—most of them thought they weren't mature enough—and 20 thought that they should be allowed to vote before reaching 21.

So, more than two-thirds thought that they shouldn't cast a ballot, while the remainder were sure they were old enough to vote.

Well, do YOU think the voting age should be lowered from 21 to 18?

HARRY FRISTER

The Flickers From Edison To Lamarrl

It was toward the middle of the "Naughty Nineties," during the era of "Diamond Jim" Brady and Lillian Russell that a squalling baby was ushered into a hoydenish world. Seven years before, "The Wizard of Menlo Park" had first perfected the projection machine, but today, April 23, 1896, was the first time that "movies" were to be actually shown in America.

The R. H. Macy department store now stands where Koster and Bial's Music Hall stood then. Little old New York took his brother and sister to see this new form of entertainment, and came away enthralled. It seemed as though the movies were here to stay, but the fickle public began to tire of travelog and Melies' fantasies, and the new amusement seemed doomed to failure, when, about the time that the Wright brothers were making history at Kitty Hawk, a young man named Edwin S. Porter produced The Life of an American Fireman and The Great Train Robbery. The latter, especially, was an instant success. Stories began to be told on the screen for the first time and people began to flock to the new medium.

"Movies" actually began to appear respectable, and half-hour shows began to be commonplace.

An unknown director named David Wark Griffith was directing movies for Biograph, and an ingenue, Mary Pickford, began to catch the eye of the public. The roofs of New York and New Jersey were cluttered with "Black Maria's" and the Motion Picture Patents Corporation had a stranglehold over the film equipment, while the General Film Company held a similar grip over the licensed exchanges. It was to combat the unethical practices of the monopolists that the independents drifted toward California in general, Los Angeles in particular.

Wilson was President, Vernon and Irene Castle were thrilling the world with the Maxixe, and Griffith was starting work on the biggest film America had yet seen: The Birth of a Nation. This, the first feature-length picture produced in America, is the top-grossing film of all time, and has influenced more motion picture greats than any other one movie, before or since.

Griffith was now on top of the world, and the world was mad. To the American film producers this was all right, because they gained a position of dominance they have not relinquished to this day. Bill Hart and Tom Mix were the reigning cowboy favorites; Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford had signed contracts calling for a million dollars a year, and the A.E.F. was fighting to make the world safe for you know what.

"The Roaring Twenties" brought Rudolph Valentino and The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse to fame. Mary Pickford had wed the dashing Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Miles Minter and William Desmond Taylor had gone The Way of All Flesh, and Hollywood, sick to death of the innumerable scandals that rocked the foundations of the industry, called Will Hays out to clean up the movie industry.

The silent film reached its maturity, and the stock exchange rose to dizzy heights. In late 1927 the Brothers Warner released the first talking film, and a new cycle in film history was started.

With the stock market crash, every major industry, with the exception of the movies, took a dive. It wasn't until 1933 that the movies began to get sick. Sound had progressed, the censorship code had been slapped on the producers, and the world soon awoke to the fact that Will Rogers had joined Marie Dressler in that long journey down the River Styx. During the past five years, the engineers have tamed the sound bugaboo, the films have risen to new glory, and new names have appeared on the horizon: David Selznick, producer extraordinary; Frank Capra and John Ford, ace directors; Ray Rennahan and Gregg Toland, cameramen deluxe; Douglas Shearer, sound man superb, and of course, Hedy Lamarr.

"The answer is still NO—and I don't give a damn WHAT Plato said!"

Short By Dorothy Pierce

Pull The Switch

I am Number 10443. I'm dressed in the latest striped suit; my hair is cut in the latest football style—plenty short. Today I'll climb the last ten steps to Heaven—more probably Hell. Am I scared? Heck no. I killed a guy, so why shouldn't they kill me?

The priest just left, a little downhearted, I'm afraid. He'll be back in an hour to escort me to that comfortable, padded chair.

The boys promised to sing me a song as a going-away present. I requested "Small Fry." Think I'll get it?

OH, oh, here come the good-will committe! My legs feel kind of weak. But don't get me wrong. I'm not scared. Can you hear them unlocking the door? They certainly make plenty of racket.

"You guys aren't by any chance looking for someone, are you? Hey, why all the gloom? Who's going on this trip, you or me? O. K., fellows, lead the way."

I followed them down the hall to the song of my fellow fraternity brothers. I don't remember if they sang my song. Guess I was preoccupied.

At the foot of those dreaded steps, the priest patted me on the shoulder to try to cheer me up. So I patted him back. He looked as if he needed the pat more than I.

I had to make my legs take that first step. After that I knew it would be easier. Up the first step I went. Oh, if only I had planned that alibi a little better, the police would never have been able to pin his murder on me.

Up another step. If only I had remembered to rub out those fingerprints on the gun. Oh, well, we all can't be perfect, can we?

Third step. I wonder if I left anything in my cell to cheer up those bedbugs. They'll sort of miss me.

Up again. I wonder if that mug I sent beyond the horizon had a family.

Up. He wasn't a half bad guy, now that I think of it.

Sixth step. He always had a twinkle in his eye. Gee, I feel sorry for that guy.

Gosh, seventh. I'm nearly there. Oh; God, forgive me! But his darn crooked smile got on my nerves.

Up. I have to force myself now. I can see that guy's face still grinning. I'll smile back just to be sociable.

Ninth step. It's really not half bad up here. That little room is so cheery and clean. All they need is curtains on the windows. They're going to give me the curtains, all right.

Ah, here at last! The guards seat me in the chair, so that I'll be nice and comfortable. They're awfully polite that way. They're slitting my striped trousers. Not very neat, either. Now they're restoring the bands. They're strapping me in. I guess they're scared I'll try to escape. They needn't worry, though; I'm too tired.

I don't believe in a life beyond, but I wonder what does happen. There must be a God, though. Yes, yes, there is a God. He understands how it is with me. He understands.

The guards are leaving me now. Going to give me a little privacy.

"Hey, guys, don't leave me yet. Oh, God, please—not yet. I'm not ready. Gimme a little time. Just a little time."

I heard one of the guards say through a grin, "Just like all the rest. Not so brave when the chair is about to get hot."

They left me. I braced myself when I heard one of the guards yell, "It's all ready up here!"—but how did he know? Could he see my soul?

Another guard called, "Pull the switch. Pull the switch."

"Pull the switch, Johnny, did you hear me? Pull that switch. Johnny, wake up! How many times have I told you to pull that switch when you're not using the light. No wonder my electric bill is so big. Now pull that switch this minute!"

"Huh? Oh, yea, ma. Sure. I—I was just going to pull the switch."

Three's A Crew—by K. Pinkerton
With a cruiser for home this family explored the dangerous and spectacular coastline from Seattle through the Inland Passage to Alaska.

GOLDSTONE'S SHORT STORY

Little Brown Jug

THE whole thing was a remarkable series of coincidences. First, he had gone into Burton's "Arabian Nights." After reading through the first three volumes, he had begun to make notes on particularly interesting pasages—that is, interesting from a mythological standpoint. The color, the charm, the riotous splendor of the "Nights" had captivated him completely. Over a period of months he had expanded his reading on Arabian and Indian legendry, and his notebook had grown apace.

Then McGahey, the city-editor, had hollered bloody murder for something new for the feature section.

"Wilson," McGahey had shouted at him over a table heaped with empty beer bottles, cigarette butts and chaotic masses of copy, "Wilson, I want something new! I want something with life; something with glamour! I want something that will pick up the imbecilic readers of this rag and drop them on their bloody—bloody ears!"

It was a coincidence that Pete Wilson had given the crusty McGahey just what he called for. Using his abounding notes, Pete had whipped out a highly colorful series on the possible factual basis for some of the tall tales in the "Arabian Nights." Pure fantasy, those legends, but in some cases there were probably seeds of truth, distorted through centuries of retelling.

Pete Wilson had ferreted out those meagre seeds of truth, and presented an interlocking explanation in print. The series went over with a bang. Letters from pleased readers began coming in, the paper's circulation jumped slightly; McGahey actually smiled, and Pete got a raise.

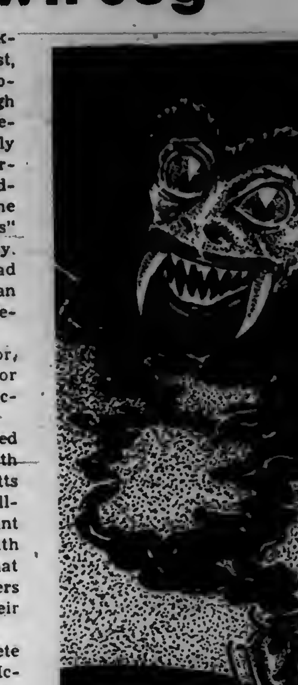
There was a growing demand for continuation of the series, so Pete burrowed deeper into the "Arabian Nights" and kindred works, and kept pounding the stuff out. He even meandered through second-hand shops of the garden and objets d' art varieties, looking for interesting relics of the Indo-Arabian past.

Today Pete Wilson, no longer a common reporter excluded from enjoying the radiance of McGahey's good will, had found something of unusual interest. It was a coincidence that he met the old salt of a sea-captain. The captain—or cap'n—a wiry, sandy-haired Scot with the brine of Neptune in his eyes and voice, had parted with a treasured souvenir of his voyage for the paltry sum of five dollars.

"In port f'r t'have th' barnacles scraped off," the cap'n was staying with his beautiful and talented young daughter. Unfortunately for any potential chronicler of Pete Wilson's life, the young man never had the opportunity to meet the girl. In fact, he didn't even have the inclination. His association with the cap'n was limited to the purchase of the Little Brown Jug.

The cap'n was probably a bit disgruntled at his enforced idleness and his dependence on his daughter—a woman after all—and glad to find congenial male company, else he would have never allowed the Little Brown Jug to go out of his possession. But let it go he did—for five dollars—to Pete Wilson.

He warned Pete against tampering with the Jug, a corroded bronze affair stoppered with a lead seal. He muttered direful prophesies about the consequences that would befall the rash mortal who ventured to open the Jug.



Pete laughed. He knew about the legends of Jinni imprisoned in bronze vessels by Sulayman, and thrown into the sea. He recalled the story of the fisherman who had caught one in his nets, and of the havoc wrought by the released monster when the container was opened.

And the cap'n said he had found the Jug on a remote sand-bar hugging the shores of the Indian Ocean. A set up! Even the six-pointed star was there, stamped on the lead seal. The Seal of Sulayman.

Pete had taken the Jug home and placed it on his desk. It had an ancient look that pleased him. And his mind wandered to the legends—to the horrifying Jinni that would—according to the "Nights"—be inside.

Pete laughed a number of times. Then he shivered. Then he laughed again and got a chisel and went to work.

"Whooosh!" Air rushed into the Little Brown Jug as the lead stopper plopped dully to the desk-top. Pete rapped the Jug sharply with his knuckles and it rang. Nothing else.

Pete laughed again and reached for the stopper. Then he noticed a thin wisp of smoke—or was it dust?—rising from the Jug's mouth. Dust, of course.

Or was it? The wisp was growing into a plume, into a grayish column that stood straight up to the ceiling! From a distance, Pete heard a faint booming sound. He started to sweat, and grabbed for the seal once more. But the thing eluded him, dropped, and rolled under the desk.

Now it was too late.

A roaring cyclone was loose in the room. Thunder battered Pete's eardrums and he instinctively dropped to one knee. A terrible crashing noise rocked the walls, and then was still.

Pete looked up and almost passed out at sight of the thing that had issued from the Little Brown Jug. It was a Jinn all right. Straight out of the "Nights"! Pete recolled at the monstrous twelve-foot bulk, hairy and swart and inhumanly muscled.

Two eyes as big as saucers pierced him with a gaze like the smouldering fires of hell, and the long, clawed fingers flexed ominously. From the corners of that awful mouth leaped razor-sharp fangs, white as ivory and six inches long.

"My God!" said Pete. "My God!" After a few repetitions, he gave up and crouched silent, trembling.

The Jinn shifted its weight, and suddenly roared at Pete in a voice that carried a material wallop. A string of vile oaths ionized the air in the Jinn's vicinity,—then—

"You!" it bellowed. "You there! O foul simpering spawn of a thousand craven desert rats! Was it you that freed Sut al Saed from his confinement?"

Pete shivered, his eyeballs glazing. He noticed that in one hand the Jinn held a scimitar that was like a blue flame. Damascus steel.

"Speak! Speak, you slimy son of a retching ghoul! Speak," the Jinn thundered, "before I tear open your rotten carcass and split your craven liver sixteen ways at once!" The sword-arm shook with rage.

Pete saw death approaching in long, galloping strides. He swallowed his heart, lungs and intestines and managed a faint "Please—please—I—"

"What?" roared the Jinn. "What's that, you miserable stinking travesty of a leprous gnat: Answer my question before I lose my temper and string you to a tree by your own verminous guts!"

"I—I—" Pete whispered, then was abruptly sick. When he recovered a moment later, the monster was shaking with anger. Pete held his bursting head and groaned.

"It's true!" he cried. "I—I thought it was only a fairy story! Oh!"

"Ahaa!" snarled the Jinn. "So it was you that released me, you crawling scum of Baghdad's sewers! So it was you!"

Pete nodded weakly and waited for the end.

Sut al Saed hefted his shining sword. "Well, O reeking denizen of all the hell-holes in creation, shall I slice your head off now—quickly; or shall I pick you to pieces joint by joint in twenty-four hours?"

Faced with an uncomfortable alternative either way, Pete summoned his last reserve of stamina.

"But I set you free." he gasped. "Shouldn't I get a reward instead of death?"

The Jinn stroked his fangs in

So Pete Wilson Uncorks The Jug—Releases The Jinn—Pickles The World

meditation. At last he rumbled, in a voice that blended diappointment with cunning:

"Know this, O oozing heap of corruption! For the first five centuries of my imprisonment, I vowed that the man who set me free should be immortal and have his every wish satisfied. For the second five centuries I vowed that he should have his every wish satisfied. For the last five centuries I vowed that he should have his every wish satisfied for one day, and die horribly at the end of that period.

"You, O offending maggot of swill, have your choice of dying easily now, or having anything you want for twenty-four hours—and then dying in a most ghastly manner!"

Pete grasped at the straw. "I'll take the twenty-four hours!" he yelped. Maybe it was a dream. In twenty-four hours he was bound to wake up.

The Jinn was gone. Pete thought he heard a fast-fading cackle of demoniac laughter. But then—well—

"Jeez!" said Pete. He staggered up and fell down again. The Little Brown Jug was still there on the desk.

"My God!" said Pete. "I want a drink!"

Half an hour later Pete was in a mellow mood. He was stretched out on the floor humming to himself. Around the room lay a cluttered assortment of bottles, cabbages, dictionaries, rabbits and flower pots. In his radio-active state, Pete sensed the new power he possessed. Anything he wanted, he got! Anything! All he had to do was holler for it—and there it was!

Pete stood up slowly and deliberately.

"I'm not tight! he asserted. "I'm glowing, but I'm not tight!"

Pete shouted his jubilation, took another swig, and staggered out of the apartment. For 24 hours the world was his.

That day any number of remarkable things happened. At noon, Pete wobbled into the newspaper office and sang a cheery greeting to city editor McGahey.

"Where the hell have you been all morning?" barked McGahey, but got no further.

"Shut up!" said Pete. And McGahey did, though his face traversed the spectrum in apoplectic stages.

"Be happy, McGahey!" Pete sang. "Be happy like I am! What you need is a drink. Go out and get swacked, McGahey!"

Pete hiccoughed as the city editor, his tongue hanging out, rushed past him in a wild dash for the exterior—and the nearest bar.

"Everybody ought to get swacked," philosophized Pete. "It'd do 'em good!"

There was no paper that afternoon. Everybody from the publisher to the newsboys was wallowing in liquid dynamite. The Senate adjourned in an uproar when the slightly rosy solons voted to impeach the President, declare war on the world, and blow up the treasury department.

Business and industry were standing still throughout the world while the human race became gloriously drunk.

Through a wild upheaval of alcohol and broken bottles, Pete Wilson wandered in an apocalyptic frenzy of happiness. He called for money and found his pockets bulging with greenbacks. He proceeded to toss them to the winds. They cluttered up the sidewalks, and people speeding to or from sources of liquid refreshment passed fortunes by without a thought.

Little knowing the consequences of his actions, Pete made the rounds throughout the afternoon. Forever postponing wooziness with the stout statement that he was "not tight," he swallowed incredible quantities of everything on the market—and came up grabbing for more.

He was delirious and so was the world. He was happy.

"I want everybody in the world to be happy!" screamed Pete, emerging from the shadow of a tall glass. "I don't want anybody to be sore at anybody! I want everybody to be swacked and at peace with the world!"

All over the world, dictatorships crumbled as populations went en masse on a binge! The dictators themselves drank until they freed political prisoners, disbanded their secret police, and merrily resigned. In other places they were laughed out of power as, for the first time, the people unleashed marvelously potent taunts and jibes.

On the bloody Western front, a large scale offensive was about to get under way, in the hope that it would break a two-year deadlock. But the general staffs on both sides were mellow, and played poker and imbibed further instead of giving the "Go" signal.

A million soldiers, drunk and happy, staggered from opposing trenches and embraced one another fondly, telling each other, "To hell with the war," and streaming off over the now peaceful countryside in search of bigger and better bottles. Rifles and artillery lay deserted, and bombing armadas happily dropped their projectiles into the sea.

In the midst of a finish fight, German and British cruiser squadrons ceased firing and drew alongside while the crews and officers exchanged best wishes and toasts.

The world was nuts!
The world was swacked!
The world was insanely happy!
The world was great!

Twelve hours before he was due to exact vengeance, the Jinn wavered out of thin air and into the scintillating presence of Pete Wilson.

Review By Borrie Hyman

"Portrait Of Jennie"

By Robert Nathan; Alfred A. Knopf, N.Y.; $2.00

TIME, to the majority of us, is about the most stable quality we know. Tomorrow has never been known to fail us; and, as a rule, the past has kept to itself, being rather busy in absorbing the present.

Every once in a while, someone or something comes along and knocks the props out of our presumptuous theories of time, like Robert Nathan's Portrait of Jennie He does this so engagingly that, before the last page of Portrait of Jennie is turned, you feel prompted to muse, as Eben Adams did when Jennie came into his life, "What if time stood still? What if tomorrow vanished in the storm?"

Before Eben realized it, Jennie stole into his life, and then, after a while, she left is, with Eben powerless to restrain her. Eben was a struggling artist, rather glum over his ill-luck, when he met Jennie while walking through the park one evening. She was playing hopscotch as though it were quite a natural diversion for a young girl of about 10, alone in the park. With hardly an introduction, Eben found himself walking down the path with Jennie at his side. Even then, when he first saw Jennie, Eben felt she came from some timeless past, even before she said her parents were playing in the Hammerstein Music Hall. Eben remembered that the music hall had been torn down when he was a small boy.

When Jennie left him, at the end of the path, she called out, "I wish you'd wait for me to grow up. But I guess you won't, I guess."

After this meeting, Eben's fortunes increased; his spirits rose. He sold a picture; in return for his meals, he was doing a painting over a bar. He told his landlady he was working on a mural.

In the following months, Eben saw Jennie several times, and at each one a feeling that he was irresistably drawn to her, that she, in some unaccountable way, belonged to him increased. Strangest of all, she appeared to have grown appreciably with each visit! To Eben's questions of her change, Jennie offered only evasive replies.

SO LEISURELY, yet steadily, does the story unfold, and so naturally does Mr. Nathan present Jennie, that we calmly accept her anachronistic presence, and, with Eben, look forward to each unpredictable visit of Jennie.

Once when Jennie came to him, Eben told her that before she arrived he had felt lost. Jennie answered in a piteous tone, "We can't both of us be lost." And again Eben instinctively felt she belonged to him.

The next time Jennie stayed long enough to allow Eben to pour all his artistry and soul into a portrait of her—a portrait that later established him as an artist. After the portrait, Jennie vanished, suddenly and quietly, just as she had done on previous occasions. Eben knew not from where she came, or why; though he often pondered, but to no avail. Eben little cared, for when spring arrived, and Jennie with it, he realized an overpowering love for Jennie, who somehow had stepped on a different time stratum to grow, within a year, to a charming young lady. With her, Eben felt a oneness with the universe, and time, a mutable factor for them, was naught.

We are unable to tell what happened to Jennie after this, that is, not with certainty. Everyone must draw his own conclusions of Jennie; we have our own.

But perhaps Eben himself came nearest to Jennie when he mused, "Are there others, in other times of the world, whom we would have, who would have loved us? Is there, perhaps, one soul among all others—among all who have lived, the endless generations, from world's end—who must love us or die?"

ROBERT NATHAN, since his first book appeared many years ago, has let a gay fancy guide his pen, but always, underneath his light touch, there has been an interesting, and often provocative philosophy. Portrait of Jennie is his first decisive step into a situation that he had just touched upon but had never consummated in his previous books. You might say he has been gently guiding his readers up to such a book as Portrait of Jennie.

Mr. Nathan has so disarmingly simple a style that before you are aware of it, with a few deft sketches, he brings forth an inimitable character, a reminiscent emotion, or a mood to suit his particular fancy. In many of his character treatments or even plots, Mr. Nathan brings to mind a similarity between his work and that of his modern contemporary, Chris Morley. They both have a faculty of endowing somewhat doubtful situations with complete credibility.

It is improbable that you will find the top most novel of 1940 in Portrait of Jennie, but you will find a book that defies you to put it down; you will encounter a story with a strange sort of fascination to it, a story that will certainly linger pleasantly in your memory.

Collegians Look At Nation, Themselves

Do American college students think? Are they awake, progressive, heedful of the problems confronting the Nation and the world? Do they possess the insight and the sense of humor so necessary for successful living in this complicated civilization of ours?

If we are to judge by the material appearing in college newspapers all over the country, then students definitely are alive and kicking.

Associated Collegiate Press here gives us a vital and timely cross-section of editorial comment and observation from American colleges; a peek at student views on a variety of subjects.

GOVERNMENT JOBS REJECTED —

NEW YORK CITY—(ACP)—U. S. college and university students do not favor the government as a source of financial aid or as a job haven after graduation.

This is the assertion of Columbia University's journalism dean, Carl W. Ackerman; and he cites figures gained from a special survey of 15 campuses by Prof. Elmo Roper to prove his point.

"The real significance, I think, of present student opinion toward the financing of education is the opposition to government aid," Dean Ackerman said. "Students do not favor a spending-lending policy to help them make their way in the world. Only 7.4 per cent of the students interviewed considered aid by the federal or state governments as desirable. This, I think, may be interpreted as a vote of confidence in the continuation of the student-aid policies of educational institutions such as Columbia University.

"Those who have been charging that some of the leading universities in the United States have become centers of socialistic and communistic theories of government and economics should study these statistics. University students today are not applying the prevailing debt theory of political economy in their own lives, nor are they looking to the government to provide them with jobs."

Of the students under survey, 42.5 per cent preferred part-time employment; 32.3 per cent favored scholarships, and 14.5 per cent favored university or private loans. Those receptive to government aid were in the smallest group.

URGE CULTURAL BULL-SESSIONS —

"The bull session is an American institution. To let it slide into greater disrepute would be a shame. Next time the gang gets together for a talk-fest why not try to do something constructive, why not try to reach a definite conclusion, why not think through a problem? The American student has brains: the American student must learn to use them. From the bull session could come something fine and valuable." The University of Iowa Daily Iowan urges a more serious purpose for those gab-fests that are usually not so profound.

DISCUSS HATCH "CLEAN POLITICS" ACT —

The Hatch Act, curtailing political activities of state employees and others receiving compensation from Federal funds, teeters precariously in the balance on the scales of collegiate press opinion.

Prevailing and probably most popular slant on the issue is expressed by the Oklahoma Daily of the University of Oklahoma. Applauding Senate passage of the act, this paper writes:

"Faced with a huge and mounting public debt, Americans have begun to realize it's time to economize and streamline governmental functions. Even Democrats voted for the Hatch bill, indicating that there are a few principles left in the hearts of senators. It does the old heart good to think that perhaps the hope for a better government—for the people—has not entirely fled the legislative chambers. Maybe the fellows we send to the capitol do a better job than we realize. Maybe they are as eager for honest government as the folks back home. A lot of the time a democracy is extremely discouraging; we see everywhere the rotten side of politics, the use of patronage as a sort of spoils of political war. Then along comes a showdown and the boys in Washington come through with the goods."

TALK UP THE AMERICAN YOUTH CONGRESS —

Another of the nation's liberal youth organizations, the American Youth Congress, has fallen into disrepute among the collegiate editorial writers. Meeting in Washington for a Citizenship Institute, the Congress committed acts that most collegeiate writers believe were ill-considered, and which most believe call for a wholesale movement of non-recognition of the A.Y.C. as the representative of the youth of the U. S.

The University of Nebraska Daily Nebraskan said on this point: "If a kind of pink leftism ever was considered smart among young people, in view of world developments it certainly no longer is—and the sooner this particular representative of youth realizes that, the sooner they may accomplish some constructive good in a seemingly very bad world."

In giving a bill of particulars against the Congress, the University of Minnesota Daily said: "The American Youth Congress which met in Washington to plead the case for youth probably did its cause more harm than good. According to reports, the youth group (1) battled over expelling Communists from membership, (2) had their anti-Finnish-loan resolution called 'unadulterated twaddle' by the president, and (3) behaved like a street mob during a visit to the House of Representatives. Not only did the organization's program of 'jobs, peace and civil liberties' get lost in the shuffle, but the boys and girls went out of their way to muff a real opportunity to do some valuable lobbying."

"We cannot believe the attitude of this body is typical of the great numbers of American youth who were supposedly represented at Washington. At least we hope not," said the University of North Carolina Tar Heel.

DEBATE PACIFISM AND PREPAREDNESS —

Pointing to the dangers of pacifism, the Wellesley College News said: "Once again the small, peace-loving neutral states are facing the possibility of being sacrificed to aid in the power politics of a great and forceful state. Germany is waging a war of nerves aganst Belgium and The Netherlands similar to that which preceded the invasion of Poland. This is an indictment of passive pacifism. Those who are truly pacifistic, who are sincerely dismayed at the recognition that the peaceful state is now no more than a 'buffer', cannot fail to realize that a mere lip service to pacifistic principles, a passive hope that a state wishing peace will be let alone, is not enough."

An apt summary of this new trend is this statement written by a freshman for the Jamestown College Collegian: "Let us forget that fear of death and remember instead our responsibilities. Let us proclaim our willingness to die for democracy, for with that proclamation comes the strength and backbone necessary for a strong nation."

So you see, despite the popular belief that all collegians are pacifists, the anti-pacifism camp is growing steadily, though not spectacularly, in these times when war is an almost-universal subject of conservation.

AND — OF COURSE — LOVE!

CLEVELAND, OHIO—(ACP)—How much do you love your girl—

It seems that Morton Levy, junior chemist at Case School of applied Science, loves his so much, that he just can't get her off his mind.

It seems that a large number of desks in Case's new chemistry building have been decorated this term with the letters "J. H. B." carved in their tops. Since there is no "J. H. B." in the department, locating the carver was difficult.

However, one professor suspected Levy. An inspection of Levy's notebook revealed a profuse spattering of more "J. H. B.'s" and established him as the culprit.

To repair the loss, Levy, after dismounting the mutilated desks himself, must take them to the workshop of the custodian. He then will have the privilege of paying for resurfacing the tops at a cost of one dollar each.

In commenting on his actions, Levy said he is sorry. For thirty bucks, who wouldn't be?

Sprinters Engage Santa Rosa Cinder Team Today; Field Weak

Today's college track meet at Santa Rosa is viewed with optimism by Coach Russ Sweet, though the Ram squad is weak in all field events except the high jump and discus.

Main basis for Sweet's cheerfulness is the Rams' fair consistency placing in the track events.

At Menlo last Friday, the relay team cracked the school record by turning in a 3:32.8 in the mile relay. The group intact, composed of Bob Lowrey, Don White, Jack McMeekin and Bert Korn, will be entered in the mile relay, and may take another fast first.

In the field events the team has had a poor start. Bob Armstrong, javelin man, has reached about 167 feet, only to come up to the Santa Rosa meet with a sore elbow. Jim Wagstaff, discus heaver, might turn first class with a little more effort and practice. He succeeded in taking second place in the Marin-Menlo meet.

At Menlo, the high jump was conquered by Hagan at 6 feet 1 inch. Raine and Mosler tied with a Menlo man for second. Hancock and Perry took first and second places in the pole vault with a height of 11 feet 7 inches. These facts prove that in most of the field events, with the exception of the high jump, the Rams are of the medium sort.

On the cinders the picture is different. With a fast relay team, the other events compare favorably. At Menlo, Louis Vasquez won the mile in 4:53. Don White, in the half mile, turned in a 2:7; Don Manvor, a :10.2. Bert Korn, McMeekin, and Don White placed in that order in the quarter. One point kept the team from a tie, and two more would have won.

At the last minute, Sweet dropped his happy attitude a bit to report that Bob Lowrey and several other members of the Ram squad are suffering from slight colds. Lowrey is the star half-miler of the local cindermen; therefore, any let-down in his form may prove disastrous to college hopes in that event.

According to Sweet, the Santa Rosa oval should be in top shape for the running and field battle today. Originally scheduled for last month, the meet was postponed until today because of a sloppy track.

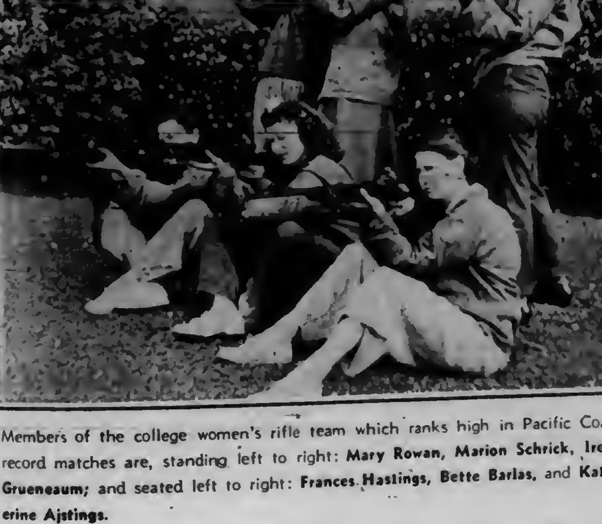
Keglers Bowl Cards; Quintuple Meet Off

Their five-way meet in Stockton postponed, the local keglers engage Stanford today, disclosed Joe Amori college bowling instructor.

Representing the college will be the same squad that was slated to encounter Sacramento, Marin, Salinas College of the Pacific, and San Jose State. They are Jack Schmale, George Riordan, Norman Guinasso, Bil Snooks, and George Stockwell.

The only information available concerning the bowlers from the Farm was that Louie "Choo-Choo" Tsoutsouvas is captain of the team. He was a former star linesman for the Indians.

Looking for a victory, Amori expects the quintet to do better than 850. "The best squads in the country roll only 100 to 150 better than these fellows should do," Amori declared.



If the enemy can do better than 850, they are entitled to the victory, announced Amori, but they may not get it if the locals have a better than average night.

Amori expects the present bowling team to keep the pin-boys busy picking up the pins knocked down by the Rams.

Striking a different note, Amori released word concerning the progress of the intramural bowling tournament. According to him, the teams have encountered one rival and will change again at the beginning of next week.

Questioned as to the standings of the teams, Amori said that in each division half were in first place and half were in last.

Postal Archery, Tennis, Badminton Share Limelight On WAA Calendar; College Assumes Clearance Duties

Junior college postal matches in archery highlight the coming schedule on the Women's Athletic Association calendar, Barbara Smith, archery manager, announced early this week.

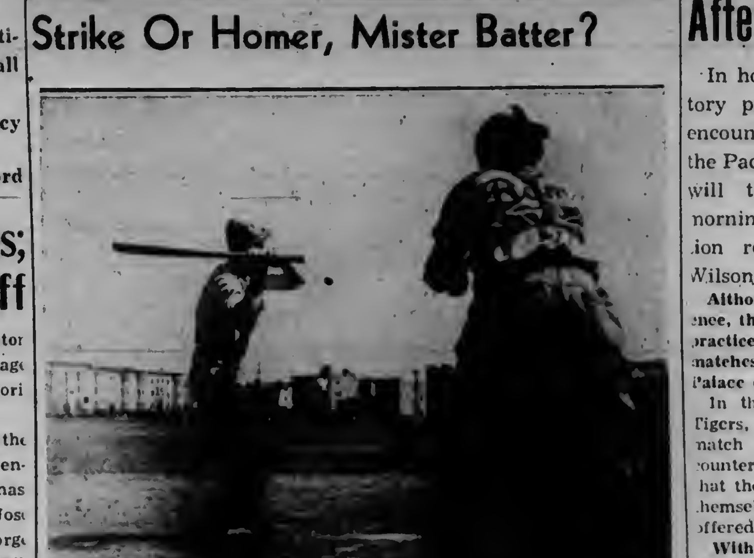
WAA Council approved of statewide postal matches, with the college acting as a clearing house for next year, and which will include high schools and junior college students who wish to participate. This year only junior colleges in northern California will be included, Miss Smith said.

"This will be an interesting project for the Archery Club to work out," Verrel Weber, adviser, said, "as the members will have to tabulate the scores for all the colleges, and send out the reports."

Duplicate scoresheets will be filled out, one for college files, and one for the clearing house, Miss Smith explained.

Any students who are interested are asked by Miss Smith to see her or Miss Weber before next Tuesday, April 23.

Students may shoot rounds today, and receive credit for any other WAA activities scheduled for Friday afternoons, Miss Smith concluded.



For coeducational tennis, the mixed doubles tournament starts on April 22 and will continue until May 4. Tentative plans, according to Alma Koopman, vice-president of WAA, are for mixed doubles playoff on April 30, singles finals on May 4, and doubles finals on May 2.

Eight women of the college have been invited to attend a badminton playday on April 25 at Balboa High School at 3:10 in the afternoon, Betty Teter, badminton manager, announced this week.

Tourney week banquet will be held on May 9, Miss Koopman revealed, and further information regarding events for the week will be announced in next Tuesday's Guardsman. Committees, chairmen, and other details will also be announced next week.

Editorial—Skiers Wait On MAC

For the past month, the men's athletic council has been postponing action on an important college sport issue: whether the college ski team should be recognized and granted the monetary privileges of a minor sport ranking next semester.

Ski season for the local squad ended last week with final races in the Vanderbilt Memorial Trophy Meet held at Norden. Competing against a group of seasoned skiers, many of whom had spent weeks in preparation, the college team romped home in ninth place to beat out UCLA and nearly upset the University of Oregon.

Falk Falkenberg—Skier par excellence negotiating a tricky slalom turn.

Commenting upon his group's participation, Coach Alden Smith said, "Inasmuch as the ski team was organized only this year, there is a great deal to be said for their achievments. Most of the fellows on the team had very little practice; any practice accomplished was done spasmodically. There was no constant preparation for the Vanderbilt Meet."

And therein lies the story. The local team, comprised of Bob Ogg, Stan Pillman, Frank Falkenburg, and Bill O'Neill, were up against ten of the strongest snow squads on the Coast, including the highly touted University of California, Stanford, University of Nevada, whose home grounds are in the snow area; Placer Junior College, reputedly the finest junior college ski aggregation in this section of the country; the University of Oregon, and Oregon State College. The majority of these colleges either are located in skiing country or are financially enabled to practice at frequent intervals. That is where the local "rub" comes in. San Francisco Junior College is NOT anywhere near the snow, NOR, the ski team having no official standing, does the college allow a stipend to pay the squad's traveling expenses in part or whole.

Each member of the ski team has been forced to dig in his own pocket in order to attend the various contests. Approximately five dollars was spent by each fellow every time the ski group trekked to a competitive meet.

Last January, the University of Nevada offered the college team free lodgings and meals at its annual invitational meet if the San Francisco squad would make the trip. However, no sane, hard-working college man can afford to shell out five dollars three or four times a month; therefore, the ski team was forced regretfully to decline the bid. Only one local man was financially able to make the trip to Cisco to participate in the Northern California Junior College championships.

A ski meet was arranged with Salinas in March; fortunately, the boys were in the "money", and eight college skiers turned out for the event. If the MAC had recognized the ski team and recommended support for the outfit earlier in the semester, no doubt the local snow-men would have placed even higher in the coast ski standings.

Next semester, the entire team will be returning to college, in addition to a number of promising tyros. The only obstacle blocking the path of the skiers is lack of adequate recognition. Approved by prominent college authorities is a plan, whereby skiing will be counted as a half-unit requirement for physical education IF the sport is raised to a higher position.

Perhaps members of the men's athletic council does not realize the potentialities of a college ski team. If they don't it's about time somebody told them.

RAMblings By Ray Berns

POTENTIAL SUCCESS NOTE

With the schedule calling for a doubleheader each week against the nine other junior colleges in the league, thereby embracing an 18-game conference season, Jack Gaddy's Ram baseballers have, after four meetings with Marin, Santa Rosa, Menlo, and Yuba, a record of seven wins against one loss. The Gaddymen have won most of their contests by big scores, yes, but these scores have not been due to the fact that we have a heavy-hitting club, but may be attributed to the fact that we have a scrappy, brilliantly defensive outfit.

Although our prognostications have, in the past, met with misfortune, and, although it is a bit too early to do any soothsaying, inasmuch as but a little over one-third of the season has passed, we, nevertheless, strain our psychic propensities, gaze into the crystal ball and predict that this year's Ram nine will bring San Francisco its first baseball championship.

IRONY NOTE

An amazing situation has cropped up in the tennis conference, whereby Tom Wilson's netsters, who have already won five team matches with four more to go, can win all nine league encounters and still not win the championship.

The championship, you see, is based on individual points, or matches, and consequently, some other college can drop two or three team matches and still win the title on points.

JUST AN INTERESTING NOTE

The college's ice-skating brothers, Murray and Sheldon Galbraith, would, we assume, present an interesting study to a psychologist.

Whenever the ice-skating phenoms have finished one-two in the many state, coast, and national meets in which they have competed, Murray has always garnered first place and Sheldon has invariably come in second.

Ram Racqueteers

Sacramento Goal Of Ram Net Drive After C.O.P. Win

In hopes of repeating the victory performance of their last encounter with the College of the Pacific, the college tennisters will travel to Stockton this morning, according to information revealed by Coach Tom Wilson.

Although the game is non-conference, the matches will be considered practice tilts for the Sacramento matches to be played tomorrow in the Palace of Fine Arts, Wilson added.

In their last encounter with the Tigers, the Rams took the entire match series. However, today's encounter may tell a different story, in that the Rams will have to accustom themselves to new playing conditions offered at the valley college.

With local No. 1 man Bill Madamba back in shape, and with Chet Mead, Ray Berns and Jackie Hare all in top form, the matches should not be difficult ones, said manager Robert L. Owen.

The Tigers, on the other hand, boast of the duo of Brown and Trapphagen, and No. 2 man Huncfeld, as top rankers, and are looking forward to dethrone the Ramsters. From sources received from C.O.P., the Tigers have marked the consistent Berns and Hare to be the ones to defeat.

Sacramento tennismen, who invade Ramdom tomorrow, are considered stiff obstacles toward the crown by Coach Wilson. They have also defeated Stockton 7 to 0, as did the Rams, and since the college team will be coming back from its trip played today, and the Panthers making their trip here, the condition of the players should be about equal.

Dan Sullivan and Bill Nathan, the Panthers' Nos. 1 and 2 men, are considered equals to Madamba and Berns. Comparable scores prove to be about equal for both teams, but the condition of the Palace courts may be a deciding factor, manager Owen said.

Rible Club To Enter Small Bore Invitational Match

To shoot in an invitational small bore match, according to Captain Fred McFarland, the Rifle Club will travel to Richmond on April 27.

Both men and women rifle handlers will participate, McFarland said.

There they will use .22 caliber rifles against unannounced competitors. The trip, to be made on a Sunday, is at present being planned by team members to accommodate as many rifle enthusiasts as possible.

Acting as captain for the men will be Charlie North.

Marion Schrick, leading riflette and head of the team that took fourth position in the Women's Intercollegiate Team Championships held recently, will head the list of the women entrants.

Baseball Showdown

Batmen Cross Clubs With Sacs Tomorrow; Lead Conference Loop

Sacramento will be a crucial test for the pennant-bound Ram baseball nine, when the two teams meet tomorrow afternoon at Funston Field in a pair of league games.

Although Sacramento is currently resting in third place, the river lads will be a tough team to beat, Coach Jack Gaddy admitted this week.

"We will have to hustle to beat the Sacs," Gaddy disclosed. "They have several good pitchers. Our boys are hitting well enough to score runs, but I am a bit doubtful about our own pitchers."

Harry Aleo will pitch the first game, while Bob Hvidt will start the second tilt for the local batsmen. Bob Nishi and Martin Zernicke will be on hand to relieve the starting pitchers if they should get into trouble, Gaddy added.

The scores of the Yuba games, played last Saturday, have finally been compiled. The first game was won by the Rams, 9 to 5, while the second game was won by an 11 to 5 margin.

Batting averages, released this week by Gaddy, show that all of the regular hitters have dropped during the last week. Harry Aleo, pitcher, has once again climbed to the top of the list by blasting out several hits last weekend against Yuba. Roscoe Wollcott, last week's leader, has dropped to second place.

The leading Ram batters are Aleo, .500; Wollcott, .423; Roy Micheli, .363; Bob Webber, .318; and Leo Mezzetti, .307.

The college baseball nine is resting in undisputed first place for the first time this season. The next two games, with Sacramento and Modesto, will either see the Rams stay on top, or else be just another also-ran, Gaddy said.

"We have received a schedule break this season," Gaddy added. "Since we have met the weaker teams first; we have had a chance to get used to playing together. The other teams have split among themselves and have raised us to the first position. If we can get by the next two teams, I think that we stand a very good chance of winning the championship."

The starting lineups for tomorrow's contests are practically the same as in previous games. The lineup, as announced by Gaddy, will be as follows: Al Giovanetti, first base Wollcott, second; Frank Mullins, short; Micheli, third; Webber, left field; Nishi, center; Sheldon Brabant or Charles Gratiot, right field; Mezzetti, catcher, and Oleo, pitcher.

Sacramento boasts of a strong defensive team, Gaddy revealed, but he believes that we should win one, if not both of the contests. Starting time for the games will be the same as in the past. Twelve noon is the time for the first game, a nine inning affair, and about 3 p.m. for the seven inning nightcap.

Gaddy hopes that there will be some support for the Rams in this decisive game. He emphasizes no admission will be charged.

Ram Battlers Train For AMS Ring Bouts

May 15 is the big day of the semester for the college boxers, for it is on that day that they will strut their stuff before the assembled student body in the semi-annual Associated Men Students fights.

For the first time in the history of the college, the fights will be held in a public arena, announced Joseph A. Amori, boxing instructor. "The Coliseum Bowl at Eleventh and Market will be the location for the bouts," he added.

There will be eight matches to decide the championships of the college, Amori revealed. The preliminary bouts will be held beforehand so that the crowd will not have to watch the elimination tournament, he disclosed.

Among the purveyors of the manly art to be seen on the night of May 15 will be Bill Edwards, who will fight for the 149 and 159 pound crowns; Bob Raine, current 169 pound titleholder; Jim Robinson, at 139, the boy who flattened the Salinas captain in the recent intercollegiate meet; and Frank Matsumoto, the Japanese Sandman, will enter at 129.

Amori is looking for an opponent for the minute Tak Momii, who took the 105 pound title last year.

Commenting on his proteges, Amori said, "This semester we started the boxing season with a group of fellows who were pretty "green." However, they have shaped up remarkably well, and acquitted themselves to my complete satisfaction at the Salinas Invitational Matches.

"Next semester we are assured of possessing a fine team. Many of the present fighters are returning, and their experience will offset the slowness of the new crop," he concluded.

Ski Group Wins Basketball Game From Forestry Club

Considered the best team of the group, the Ski Club added another victim in the form of the Forestry Club to its rapidly increasing assemblage of winnings.

Led by the versatile Herb Taylor and his contemporary, Howie Goeppert, the skiers virtually swamped the hapless Foresters, to the tune of 31 to 14.

In reference to the next encounter, Bob Ogg, manager, revealed the hopes of "murdering" the Blockmen.

Defaulting to the Phi Alpha Omegans, the Pi Mu Gamma automatically was eliminated from the games.

Complete results of this week's games will be announced next week.

Suffers Shortage Of Copy; Extends Deadline To Next Week

Student writers who have failed to submit their Forum contributions in time for today's deadline may do so on Monday and Tuesday of next week, Thomas Parkinson, Forum editor, announced.

Entries received on these days will be granted the same consideration as those entries which were received within the deadline period, Parkinson commented.

A prize will be awarded to the student whose contribution, in the eyes of the judges, shows the most originality and literary value. The winner will be awarded a book, the choice of which will be left to the victor's own discretion, Parkinson added.

May 20 has been set as the date of publication for the current issue of the Forum Magazine, Parkinson announced, and from 400 to 500 copies of the magazine will be published, pending the demand.

The publication will contain 50 pages in all, thereby making it the most outstanding issue to date, as past copies of the Forum Magazine have never exceeded 35 pages in length, Parkinson commented.

All entries have been carefully scanned by the following faculty advisers: Dorothy Mercer, William Goss, Frederick Bracher and Evans Ecke, as well as by the following members of the editorial staff; Thomas Parkinson, Eleanore Leitner, Sol Lipsitz, Paula Levick, Helen Du Bois, and Robert Kovacic, but as yet no final decisions have been rendered, and will not be, until all contributions have been received from the students, Miss Mercer revealed.

The Forum Magazine will be printed on a fine grade of paper, but as yet no specific grade has been decided upon, and the print to be used will be the best which can be obtained, Parkinson added.

Cover design of the current issue of the publication will be a replica of those adorning the covers of past issues of the magazine, but with slight modifications, Parkinson commented.

Many excellent literary entries have already been contributed, and they compare very favorably with the high caliber of entries submitted in the last few issues of the Forum Magazine, Parkinson revealed, and hastened to add that the art work which has been handed in, is of an unusually high standard, but as yet no final decisions have been rendered, pending the arrival of late art entries.

... Campus Personalities

By KEI HORI

To take advantage of writing a column to the fullest extent of its limitations, we decided to interview our illustrious editor. Besides, we have often wanted to know if editors were human.

Being in an amiable mood, Editor Leonard Gross ("Benny" to those few intimate friends o' his'n), had to be chased and cornered, as well as pried open, in order to give the reading public a bit of news.

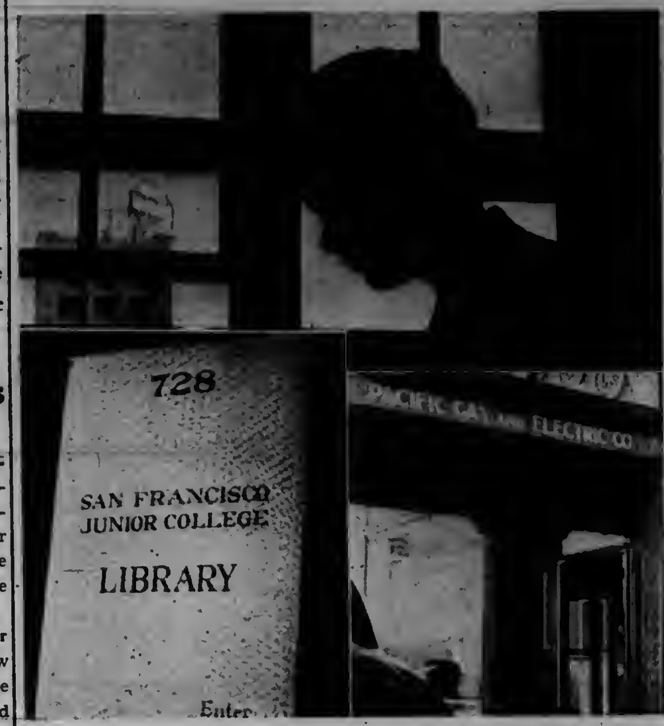
Five feet 10 inches and weighing 143, the 19-year-old wonder (?) has been attending the college for three semesters. During that time, he has been majoring in journalism, and hopes to carry on in one of the city's newspapers.

He thinks that the husband should dominate family life, even though he doesn't. If left alone in a department store, he would spend his time running down the "up" escalators. Benny also said that he was a quiet child—ever since he can remember, anyway.

If he had a chance to be someone else, Benny would like to be Bing Crosby—not only because of his voice, either. His favorite form of entertainment is singing popular songs (Zeus!).

The first thing he notices when searching for frankness and honesty in persons is their eyes. He likes to watch people's expressions and try to psychologically figure them out. People have always fascinated him, sezze. (Gosh, is he human?)

Besides being editor, he is a member of the Executive Council, chairman of the Publications Board, member of the Finance Committee, and plays a bit of basketball, and fences. He has managed to maintain a 2 point average during his semesters in college.



Emphatically speaking, his pet objection to the continual aspersions being thrown at the junior colleges as a whole he considers it unwarranted, unecessary, and blames it on lack of understanding of what the junior college is.

Benny will eat anything edible so long as it isn't related to the parsnips (migawd, how I hate the things, sezze), dotes on strawberry shortcake, and thinks the spring hats should be given back to the cannibals.

Women who wear too much make-up scare him, and he thinks that too much lipstick makes one look "pasty."

He is inclined to be stubborn, and above all, dislikes a malicious gossip—a cat—a prattle.

Through These Portals - 11,000 Books

College Library Now One Of Largest In California

With the announcement that the college library had purchased about 2,000 new books, the fact is brought forth that the local one is among the largest junior college libraries in the state.

The average junior college library has about 9,000 to 10,000 books. This library has over 11,000 books, according to Eleanor Blinn, librarian.

At Marin Junior College the library has only about 9,000 books. Marin was started in the year 1926, compared with the opening of this college in 1935.

New books are being added regularly to keep up a varied and good collection of reference and reading books.

Miss Blinn announced that the books of the library must be moved out to Galileo High School during the last week of school. They will be stored in the gymnasium until August 1, then sent out to the new building.

"The new library," Miss Blinn said, "will hold about 17,000 books. We hope to have a separate building soon to hold a much larger collection."

Many students attending the junior college are not aware of the bound magazines that are available to them. When these are completely cataloged they will be ready for use.

Dean On Lookout For Campus Living Space

Students knowing of available rooms for rent near the new college building at Balboa Park are asked by Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, and Margaret Dougherty, women's adviser, to assist them in compiling a list of such locations.

Requests are already coming in from out-of-town students, they said, for rooms or room and board near the new campus. Because of the restricted nature of the Balboa Park neighborhood, finding such rooms will be far more difficult than at present, the dean said. There are no apartment houses or hotels in the vicinity.

In making his request for information, the dean said, "We would appreciate knowing of any homes which might be used for students for room or room and board, as there will undoubtedly be a demand for housing accommodations."

Those with knowledge of such locations may get in touch with either Miss Dougherty or him, Dean Browne advised.

Conclave Tomorrow

Junior College Faculties Meet At San Mateo

San Mateo Junior College will play host to the faculties of all the junior colleges from the entire state on April 20, according to Lloyd Luckmann, president of the San Francisco Junior College Faculty Association.

During the general session C. S. Morris, Dr. Milton Chernen and Dr. H. A. Spindt will be the speakers. Morris will greet the group with a few words of welcome.

A problem that is pertinent to faculty members and students will be discussed by Dr. Chernen. His subject is, The Youth Problem in California. Dr. Chernen is with the Bureau of Public Administration at California, and is therefore well qualified to speak on this subject.

Another subject, Training for Placement Available to Junior College Students, will be discussed by Dr. Spindt. This subject should interest all those in attendance, as this is a problem that is foremost in the minds of the teachers and students of all the junior colleges.

Chinatown Tour Date Shifted Up To April 25

Change of schedule for the Chinatown tour being sponsored by the Chinese Students' Club came this week from George Ong, president, who announced the date will be April 25 instead of 26.

The hour for the Chinese dinner preceding the tour has also been changed to 6, while sightseeing is slated to begin at 7, Ong said.

Highlights of this jaunt through Chinatown will be visits to the Family Association, a Chinese Theater, Jai Chong, a Chinese temple, the Chinese Six Companies, and the Chinese Telephone Exchange.

Tickets are being placed on sale at 52 cents, including tax, for the tour and dinner, and 15 cents for the tour alone, Ong added.

Window Display

Teall Messer, College Instructor Announces Student Successes

Placement of a former student, an offer of employment, and a regional winner of a national display contest by a college display student, were announced by Teall Messer, college window display instructor.

Elmer Freeman, former member of the display group, is now employed as a traveling salesman for a display material house in Seattle, according to a letter received by Messer from Freeman. Preparation for the position was through the college course, Freeman said.

Last Christmas, Herman Tunick, of the Tunick Display House, San Francisco, asked Messer to send him some students on the chance part time work might be available. Employed was Jack Kloss, who did satisfactory work, and as a result received an offer of permanent employment on the staff as soon as he finished the course, Messer said.

Another student, Theodore Babow, who works as a part-time employee at a local restaurant, won first prize for this area in a national window display contest sponsored by the American Can Company, he said. The prize was a large dictionary.

Messer also announced lectures by two guest speakers. Harvey Weymeler, of the Emporium, discussed buying problems in merchandising and women's ready to wear, on April 16. On April 23, Jack Kane, assistant director of display at the Emporium, will discuss store displays.

According to Messer, no other junior college in the country offers this course.

Models Chosen For Fashion Revue

Selection of college women to model in the April 30 fashion show at Galileo Auditorium has been partially completed, announced Bette Nelson, City of Paris representative on the campus and organizer of the show.

The women who have been selected as of this date are Shirley White and Jean Christianson of Lambda Chi; Marion Schrick and Elma Ravazzano of the Home Economics Department; Muriel Nolan and Lyba Mackie of Alpha Phi Omega.

Two representatives each will be selected from the Women's Service Society and Phi Beta Rho, making a total of 10 women to act as models, Miss Nelson said. Three or four men will also be selected from the Associated Men Students very shortly to model the men's clothes, she added.

A group of pictures of college women in sports clothing have already been taken for use in The Guardsman's special fashion supplement. Models for these pictures were June Holmes, Loretta Egan and Dorothy Plowden.

The fashion show is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 30, in the Galileo Auditorium. Registrar J. Paul Mohr has given permission for classes to be excused for that hour, Miss Nelson said, adding that all students of the college were invited, and drawing special attention to the fact that men's fashions as well as women's would be modeled.

The show is being put on through the cooperation of the City of Paris, which is supplying the clothes.

'Span Of Gold' Thespians Snapped With Cavalcade

College students participating in the Wells Fargo era of the Span of Gold pageant were photographed Wednesday in the costumes of the period, with the Cavalcade set at the Exposition for the background, announced Marie Weller, college radio broadcasting instructor.

Students being photographed were Harold Hoffman, Bob Holmes, Malcolm Kelley, Tony Manov, Blas Narro, Nancy Oberg, Thomas Redmond, Geraldine Ryan, and Vera Walsh.

Little Brown Jug

"My friend," he wept, effusive tears cascading down his curving tusks. "My dear and good friend! My liberator!"

The Jinn was obviously tight, but then so was everybody else in the world.

"Have a drink!" gurgled Pete, slapping the Jinn at the base of the spine and holding a bottle up to the towering presence.

The Jinn accepted the offering, finished it in a gulp, and turned to Pete.

"By Allah!" he grinned, brushing away the tears. "You are not angry with me! I am forgiven! I am sorry for the way I talked to you, my great and good friend! I swear that I was mad! Surely, I shall never harm you!"

"Thanks," said Pete, sympathetically. "Have a drink!"

The Jinn gulped it down. "Now I must be off to greener fields!" he said, and vanished.

At the end of the 24 hours, Pete found his powers gone. At the time he was esconced in a luxurious hotel suite with 99 gorgeous blondes . . . and lots of bottles.

Pete got his job back because McGahey had been drunk, too. And McGahey kept his job because the publisher had also been thoroughly under the table. And if no paper came out, it was all right, because nobody could see straight enough to read it, anyway.

For 20 years thereafter, the world was destined to have peace and democracy.

For a week thereafter—one hell of a hangover.

NYA Wages Slashed As $1,000 Shortage Is Bared

Lack of funds with which to pay student NYA workers has necessitated an average of from two to three dollar cuts in NYA salaries, announced Edward H. Redford, college NYA director.

"In spite of the fact that an additional $1,500 was given to the NYA department this semester," Redford continued, "we are still short approximately $1,000, which must be made up by these salary cuts."

This Collegiate World . . .

By Associated Collegiate Press

THE nation's collegiate job-hunters can take heart—there are at least 251,000 jobs "going begging" in the nation!

That fact has been revealed by the University of Wisconsin's Dr. A. H. Edgerton, who has just completed an exhaustive survey of the employment situation in 29 states.

"Amidst the scarcity of work opportunity last year, more than 251,000 good jobs were discovered going begging in 29 states," Dr. Edgerton said the survey showed. "These 251,000 jobs were uncovered in the 12-month period ending December 20, 1939. There may be more today, for somewhat improved business conditions have increased demands for workers trained to fill the better positions."

Two words—"adequately trained"—were blamed by Dr. Edgerton for the unfilled jobs, and they spelled the difference between employment and unemployment for at least a quarter-million men and women, he said. This does not mean merely that they must be skilled in technical processes of occupation, he explained, but it does mean that they must possess the fundamental knowledge on which those processes are built, and that "they must be able to adjust and adapt themselves to changing conditions."

"Personality and adaptability are the yardsticks by which the qualifications of applicants are being increasingly measured," Dr. Edgerton explained. "If rudimentary education is based upon the three R's—reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic—the acceptable personality depends upon the three C's—courtesy, courage, and cooperation.

"With few exceptions, a well-rounded personality is more essential to success than either a brilliant intellect or a highly-specialized training, since a prime requisite is the ability to adjust to people with ease," he maintained.

COLLEGIATE hazing, European style, makes American college hazers look like Little Lord Fauntleroys. Such is the observation of Joop Ruurs, a Washington State College exchange student from Amsterdam, Holland.

The blonde, blue-eyed Dutch Miss related that at some of the European universities she has attended—she has studied at Amsterdam, Munich, Cologne and Paris—freshmen are hazed unmercifully. They must shave their heads completely, wear green caps and ties, and jump to do the bidding of any upperclassman who stoops to give any order to the lowly frosh.

One of Miss Ruurs' brothers, during his shaven-headed, green-capped period, was made to hold on to a rope with his hands and hang on as the rope dangled three stories from the ground. His hazers then began lowering the rope slowly. At the end of 20 minutes, when his hands and arms were almost numbed from the strain, he finally got his feet on the ground.

Military Science

College Soldiers To Inspect Sixth Artillery Today

Military Science classes of the college will journey to Fort Funston today to observe target practice of the Sixth Coast Artillery, according to James S. Hughes, military science instructor.

The trip will be made in reconnaissance cars furnished by the 250th Coast Artillery, of which the men making the trip are enlisted members.

Major Phillip F. Biehl, CAC, will supervise the trip and explain the methods and equipment used to conduct the firing.

"Students will have the opportunity to observe the operation of observation stations, plotting rooms, and guns in action," Hughes said.

According to Hughes, the following are qualified to make the trip:

Stanley Doughty, Robert Hawes, James Hunchman, Ezra Morgan, William Noble, John Procter, Raymond Rhode, Eugene Senter, John Stamann, and Edward Terzian.

The field trip is an all-day affair and is the second of the semester.

Mohr To Excuse Classes For April 30 Fashion Show

Registrar J. Paul Mohr has given permission for all 2:30 o'clock classes to be excused on Tuesday, April 30, to allow students to attend the City of Paris-Guardsman Fashion Show at Galileo, according to Bette Nelson, organizer of the show.

Miss Nelson emphasized that the show will be of interest not only to women students but to the men as well. Three or four men are being chosen from the Associated Men Students to model men's campus wear clothes, she pointed out.

The women models are being chosen from various college organizations. Those selected at the present time are Lyba Mackie and Muriel Nolan of Alpha Phi Omega; Elma Ravazzono and Marion Schrick of the Home Economics Department; Jean Christiansen and Shirley White of Lambda Chi.

From Phi Beta Rho and the Women's Service Society other models will be selected, Miss Nelson said.

Loretta Egan, June Holmes and Dorothy Plowden have already posed for sport clothes pictures which will be used in The Guardsman's forthcoming special fashion supplement.

The show is put on through the cooperation of the City of Paris, which is supplying both men and women's clothes to be shown, Associated Women Students, Associated Men Students, Home Economics Association, and The Guardsman.

Balboa Park Campus - 2500 Feet Below

Where students are assured ingress by August of this year, in time for the 1940 fall semester, is shown in the above aerial photograph snapped by Beverly Pasqualetti, college instructor of landscape gardening, from a height of 2,500 feet. Looming large in the foreground, now appearing practically completed from the outside is the science unit, which will house most of the classes until additional buildings are constructed. While the scaffolding has been removed from the main facade, it can still be noted on the central stairway. The round dome, centered on the roof, will house a telescope and laboratory for the astronomical classes. Further roof space is expected to be utilized by hothouses for botany courses.—

Running parallel to the front of the science building is Phelan Avenue, which may be widened to provide parking space for the 300 cars that are estimated will be used by students. At the extreme upper right can be seen the southern boundary of the campus grounds.

At lower right, spotted by a large grove of trees, is the proposed site of the library, student union buildings, and cafeteria.

At the extreme lower right will some day rise a super-auditorium. Just behind that, slightly to the left, is the intended location of an additional parking lot.

Ticket Sale For High Soph Excursion Limited To 250

Tickets for the May 1 excursion sponsored by the high sophs are now on sale, Art Pomares, class president, announced last week. They may be purchased from Jack Baker, Elmer Hubacher, Jean Kelly, Adele Kuhn, Muriel Dodsworth, Wilton Latz, Slim Thorogood, or Pomares, it was revealed.

All students are invited to the excursion, Pomares added. A launch which has been chartered from the Crowley Company will leave Pier 14 at 9 a.m., cruise San Francisco Bay, sliding around Treasure Island, past the Golden Gate Bridge, Marin County, and Tiburon, and arrive at Paradise Cove about 11:30, where all will disembark.

The program for the afternoon, as released by Wilton Latz, chairman for this cruise, is as follows:

11:30, lunch; 12 to 1, games; 1 to 2, swimming; 3 to 5, dancing; 5 to 6, homeward cruise.

Dancing on board ship depends on the amount of space available, Latz said. Since no more than 250 tickets will be sold for this excursion, he urged, "Buy now, because the number of tickets is limited."

Further plans of the high sophs place their traditional rally on May 17, to tie up with the "Know-Your-Campus" Sirkus at Balboa Park.

The sophs' formal dance will be held May 24, Pomares revealed, adding that only 150 bids will be out for this affair. Considerations are at hand for the Burlingame and California Country Clubs, he added, and bids have been submitted from such orchestras as those of Noel, Thomas, Henry Gallagher, and Johnny Falconer.

Century Club AWS Tea Declared Great Success

Popularly acclaimed as one of the semester's most successful affairs, the Associated Women Students tea and program for parents of the college women took place at the Century Club last Sunday.

"I think that we may safely call the event a great success," Gloria Miller, AWS president, declared.

After a program by the college A Capella Choir under the direction of Flossita Badger of the music department, and featuring the voice of Charles Piper, college student, tea was served by a committee of hostesses and hosts chosen by AWS officers.

"At this time I should like to express my extreme gratitude to the men and women who acted as hostesses and hosts for us," Miss Miller said.

"Since this type of tea and program seemed to meet with such approval, we are considering making this a traditional AWS event," Miss Miller added.

AWS Tea Work Lauded; Graduate Wins Honor

Asking that her gratitude to college women be expressed, Margaret Dougherty, Associated Women Students adviser, announced that she considered Sunday's tea and program for parents a success.

"I should like to thank not only the AWS officers for their cooperation, but also those men and women who served and ushered as hosts and hostesses," Miss Dougherty declared.

Possibilities of making the event a semi-annual or annual affair are being discussed, according to Miss Dougherty.

The key of Phi Beta Kappa, highest scholastic honor, was awarded recently to a graduate of this college, Edward Allan Davis.

Davis was one of the pioneer group that attended college here from 1935 to 1937. He majored in engineering and continued his schooling at the University of California, where he was named to the honor society.

Shakeup Of Hotel Division Catering Dept. Planned

Reorganization of the college catering department, a branch of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, was announced last week by Thomas Caswell, in charge of publicity for the division.

Purpose of the shakeup of the department, Caswell said, is to give better catering work by the department.

No drastic changes have been made in the department's personnel, according to Caswell. Ernest Godfrey, hotel division student, who headed the department before its reorganization, remains as its head, he said.

Godfrey and 10 students from the hotel division make up the catering department, which plays an important part in the more serious side of college social life—namely, eating.

The refreshment side of several college events in the near future is to be handled by the department. The Rifle and Pistol Club's barbecue on April 21, as well as the barbecue planned for the opening of the new campus will be the handiwork of the catering department, Caswell said.

He declared the department to be equipped to cater for any club, organization, or student in the college. Students desiring further information on the department's activities should contact any hotel division student or the hotel division office.

Low Sophs Polish Alum Rock Picnic Plans For April 28

Swimming, dancing, and baseball will be the high points of the low soph picnic at Alum Rock on April 28, announced Dan McHugh, class president.

The picnic is open to all students and not to low sophs alone, McHugh said, asking that those who wish to attend see the picnic committee in charge about transportation arrangements: "I am taking a list of those who have no means of getting there, and the committee will try to provide automobile accommodations for all."

McHugh asked also for volunteers from students who have a car and can accommodate others.

Dancing at Alum Rock will be 25 cents, McHugh revealed. As to the baseball game which is being planned by the committee, he added that two teams will be chosen from these picnickers who wish to play. All who wish to join this outing are to bring their own lunch, McHugh added. Students will meet at Sloat Boulevard and 19th Avenue at 9 a.m., according to previous plans made by the committee.

High freshmen also plan a picnic sometime this month or the next, according to Leo Leggett, president.

A committee, not named at this writing, will be appointed this week, he said, and although no definite picnicking spot has been chosen as yet, Muir Woods and Searsville Lake are being considered.

Chinatown Tour May Be Postponed To Next Week

Because of the School Week program scheduled for Thursday, the tour through Chinatown which the Chinese Students' Club had planned to sponsor on that evening may possibly be postponed until the following week, according to word from George Ong, president of the club.

Since the tour is open to both faculty and students of the college and their friends, officers of the club wished to set a date which would be convenient to all, they said.

Student guides will assist on this jaunt through Chinatown, reports from the club revealed. Among those spots to be visited will be the Family Association, a Chinese theater, Tai Chong, a Chinese temple, the Chinese Six Companies, and the Chinese Telephone Exchange.

Preceding this tour will be a Chinese dinner at one of the better known restaurants at 6 p.m., with sightseeing slated for 7, Ong added. Tickets to be on sale will be 52 cents, including tax, for tour and dinner, and 15 cents for the tour alone.

Public Schools Week

Pres. Cloud, Students, To Appear On Council Program Thursday Eve.

Sponsored by the Junior College Council, the college will present a program at the YMCA Auditorium, 220 Golden Gate Avenue, at 8 o'clock, Thursday evening, according to Claude Shull, faculty member and council president.

Held in connection with the annual Public Schools Week, the program will feature addresses by Commissioner Philip Lee Bush of the Board of Education, and by President Archibald J. Cloud of the college, a panel discussion by college students, and selections by the A Capella Choir and Men's Chorus, Shull revealed.

President Cloud will speak about recent developments concerning the Balboa campus, Shull said, while the discussion will be on the topic of various phases of college life. Taking part will be students Rema Corbitt, Janet Fellows, Barbara Smith, Bill Hall, and William Letcher, who were selected by Lloyd Luckmann, college faculty member.

Under the direction of Flossita Badger, music instructor, the A Capella Choir will present the same program as that which was given at the Associated Women Students tea last Sunday. Tentative plans also call for the Men's Chorus, directed by Charles McKiernan of the music department, to offer two selections, Shull said.

Members of the Board of Education have received special invitations to attend, and the program is open to all who are interested in the college.

Forum Deadline Is Closed Today

Today is positively the last time in which entries submitted by students for publication in the Forum Magazine will be accepted, Dorothy Mercer, faculty adviser of the current issue, announced.

No announcement concerning rejected manuscripts will be issued to the students before the publication of the magazine, and authors will find the knowledge they desire in current issue, Miss Mercer said.

Entries in the field of poetry were described as excellent by Miss Mercer, who also praised several essays and dramas.

A book will be awarded to the student whose contribution shows the most artistic merit and literary value, the Forum staff promised, selection of which will be left to the winner.

Entries received yesterday or today will merit the same careful procedure as those contributions received at an earlier date, Miss Mercer announced.

"The Forum Magazine should be of interest to all students," she said, "no matter how varied their interests may be, as the diversity of literary subjects in the publication should appeal to most of them. Variety is the keynote of the publication, in subject matter as well as in literary form."

Past issues of the Forum Magazine set a high standard in literary forms and originality, according to Thomas Parkinson, editor of the current issue of the magazine.

"We hope that the coming issue of the publication will maintain the excellence possessed by its predecessors," he emphasized, "and if possible surpass them."

Past issues have been characterized by original and artistic essays, poems, and short stories. Satires were also much in prominence, as well as stories possessing human situations.

Tickets For College Ice Carnival Still Obtainable

Tickets for the college ice carnival to be held April 27 at Winterland Ice Rink are still available from all skate club members, the Galileo bank, the college office at Powell Street, and the Powell Street bookstore, according to Joseph Williams, faculty adviser of the ice skating club.

Admission will be 35 cents for spectators, 50 cents for those with skates, and 65 cents for those desiring to rent skates, Williams said.

Exhibition figure skating will start the carnival at 6:30 and will last until 7:30. Everyone will be allowed to skate from 8 to 11 o'clock.

Stuart Ross, Marcella Mae, Murray Galbraith, and Bill Hart will be featured in the entertainment, Williams commented.

He further stated that besides the individual presentations, a 14-step dance, composed of four college couples, will be included in the program.

Police, Civil Service Classes To Hear Coleman

Members of the police training class will be addressed by Supervisor Coleman on a subject not as yet chosen. The date of the lecture has been set for May 5.

According to Lloyd Luckmann, instructor in the police training and civil service courses, this address should prove of interest to all who attend the lecture.

The subject will be announced in the near future, stated Luckmann.

Captain Layne, of the police training department of the college, is being sent to Los Angeles to serve on the Oral Examination Board during the cities examination this week, according to word received from Harold W. Leuenberger.

Taking over Layne's classes for this week will be Officer Edward Penat, added Leuenberger.

Councils Take Up Money Requisitions At CAB Meet

Whether or not every council in the Club Advisory Board will have filed complete requisitions for use of CAB funds by this week, Alden Thorogood, president, revealed that the requisitions will be considered at the club board's meeting at 1 p.m. today in the lecture hall.

Meanwhile, the chairman of those groups which have not drawn up a detailed budget for what tentative activities they have in mind, will be asked to do so, Thorogood added. Those plans which have been unofficially announced, subject to change, are as follows:

Council 5 (restricted social organizations). Tea dance, May 9, at the California Country Club, from 4 to 6 p.m. Hosts and hostesses to be the presidents of the fraternities and sororities represented.

Council 4 (Army and Navy Club, Chinese Students' Club, Japanese Students' Club, and Rifle and Pistol Club). Sightseeing tour by Greyhound Bus on May 12.

Council 1 (Pi Mu Gamma, Nu Epsilon Sigma, Home Economics Association, Phi Rho Pi, Astronomy Club). Series of lectures or forums.

Plans for club participation in the coming Sirkus at Balboa Park have not been set, but Gene Powell, CAB representative of the new flying club, has been named to consult with Bob Ogg, Sirkus chairman, Thorogood said.

Galileo Bank To Sell Fair Tickets This Week

Reduced rate Fair tickets will be on sale this week at the Galileo bank if everything goes according to schedule, announced J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of educational management.

The books offered for sale will be those selling for $3.75. These books afford 130 admissions to the Exposition and are non-transferable.

Also for sale will be books that provide admission to the Fair and to five exhibits within. The value of these is $4.20, the price is $2.50.

Both offers will be withdrawn at the end of this week, Sullivan said. He urged all students to make haste and take advantage of the bargains before they are withdrawn.

College Debaters Thresh Out 3rd Term With Modesto

Arguing the question of the third term, two teams of college debaters will meet a group from Modesto Junior College on May 15 or 16, according to Lloyd Luckmann, college debate instructor.

The college will be represented in the discussions by Leland Martin, Edward Cohen, Gene Cahill, and Jack MacKay. Luckmann said these people were chosen because of their lively interest in the forensic art.

May 15 AMS Fights Date; Helen To Present Medals

Fights in eight weight divisions, with winners being awarded medals by Helen Crienkovich, will highlight the Associated Men Students fights scheduled for Wednesday, May 15. The Coliseum Bowl at 11th and Market will be the scene of the fights, according to Lyle Shultz, AMS president.

Shultz also brought out the fact that this year's fight program will be conducted so that men and women students may attend together, and so that students may bring their parents.

All the fights will be refereed by Joe Amori, AMS adviser. Shultz also added that there is a possibility that George Malley, football coach of the University of San Francisco, may help judge the fights.

Student Pilots Slated To Take CAA Exams Soon

Date for the Civil Aeronautics Authorities Examination, which college student pilots must pass in order to receive their pilot licenses, has not as yet been set, according to Captain George Richards, college director, Civilian Pilot Training.

Only student pilots who have a solo flying record of 35 hours are eligible to take the examination, which will cover questions on meteorology, air navigation, and civil air rules.

. . . Of Sound and Fury

NOW that the effervescent suds of Student Peace Day have subsided into the customary furlined taste, and the riotous celebrants have crept away to their ivory towers to sober up pending the arrival of May Day and all points Left, the dopes and reactionaries among us are plaintively asking what all the shouting was about.

That's a hard question to answer, because pint-sized world-savers of the Student Peace Movement would much rather cruise the stratosphere bucking intangible windmills than dirty their heels with anything remotely approaching the concrete.

For years, supported by the upstanding American Student Union, the Hallelujah Singers have pulled their annual demonstrations on hundreds of American college campuses, to the intense mortification of the wolves and Morgans of capitalist imperialism.

These demonstrations have generally assumed the belligerent form of "peace strikes," in which the embattled intellectuals picket everything in range and harrangue slighty spring-feverish students from strategically situated soap-boxes; but at colleges of a less liberal administrative mind, God's Gifts to World Harmony must content themselves with sponsoring scandalously conservative "assemblies," at which they stoutly declare that they "will have peace—even if we have to fight for it!"

At this point, it is interesting to note that the slogans paraded by the Student Peace Movement are, as the advertisers have it, "subject to change without notice."

Right now, the battle-cry is "The Yanks Are Not Coming." Not very long ago, the Anvil Chorus was grinding out "Quarantine The Fascist Aggressor" and "Save Spanish Democracy." A brief inquiry into the causes of these sudden and capricious shifts in policy might be in order.

In the first place, the Student Peace Movement is undeniably the baby of the American Student Union.

Further, it must be understood that every time Joe Stalin sneezes, the American Student Union "Gesundheits!" Formerly the Student League for Industrial Democracy, and later the National Student League, the Union was the American section of the Proletarian Youth League of Moscow.

As it now stands, the Union is predominantly a coalition of young Socialists and Communists, and its formation in 1937 was lauded in Moscow as "one of its (communism's) greatest triumphs."

Perhaps this will make the Student Peace Movement easier to understand, for it is the creation of the American Student Union, and is unreservedly under that body's domination.

In the course of a few short years the "party line" of the Peace Movement has changed from condemnation to toleration of Nazilism, from defense of democracy to denunciation of democratic nations as "imperialistic," from advocacy of American help to China and Loyalist Spain to insistence, in the present war, of a strict isolation which amounts to aid for the forces of Hitler.

The irony of the situation is not only that the vaunted Student Peace Movement (by the Young Communist League out of the American Student Union) is a preposterous fake, but even more, that this stooge organization which indirectly carries out the propaganda and agitation of now publicly wedded Communism and Nazi-ism should flourish and exert influence IN THE NAME OF PEACE!

The tragedy is so profound as to verage on the slapstick. Had Fate had it that Germany was fighting the Soviet Union instead of joining it in unholy matrimony, there could be little doubt that the current membership of the Student Peace Movement would be plugging with zeal for an American crusade against the Fascist Aggressor.

Fellows

. . . The Spectator

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT is portraying Alexander Woollcott, alias Sheridan Whiteside, in the latest Kaufman-Hart farce, The Man Who Came to Dinner. There is less than a week left to laugh at the ribald humor that has been going on at the Geary Theater for the past month.

Whiteside, after exhausting all of his excuses, finally accepts the dinner invitation of the Stanleys, typical leading citizens of a small American town. An innocent bit of ice on the Stanley's doorstep brings about the downfall of Whiteside, with a broken hip as the result.

As the play opens, the Stanleys and their friends are all a-dither because Whiteside is about to come out of his two weeks of enforced hibernation.

As far as Woollcott's acting is concerned, he is a splendid author, critic, and commentator. The acting of other members of the cast was far superior to Woollcott's. Claudia Morgan as Maggie Cutler, Whiteside's exceptional secretary; Doris Nolan as Lorraine Sheldon, the ambitious actress; Rex O'Malley as Beverly Carlton (a superb impersonation of Noel Coward); Robert Allen as Bert Jefferson, journalist from the local paper; Joseph E. Marks as Professor Metz, the erratic professor of entomology; and Borrah Minevitch as Banjo, the Hollywood slapstick comedian personified, are all better performers than Woollcott.

Adding insult to injury, the weak plot is Woollcott! When Maggie gives "Sherry" notice that she will leave his employ to marry Jefferson, Whiteside does all in his power to break up the romance. He summons the flirtatious Lorraine from New York to lure Jefferson away from Maggie, and Beverly and Banjo, in their turn, try in their ingenious ways to remove the sensuous actress from the scene.

Though the booming dialogue is one good belly-laugh after another, there is no comedy, for the humor has no subtle wit whatsoever. The Man Who Came to Dinner is a nonsensical farce, with a flimsy plot for an excuse to weave the gags together. The exaggerated immorality of the intelligensia and the narrow-mindedness of the Stanleys gave us the idea that Kaufman and Hart had attempted to write a satire on "The Great American Way," but on second thought we're not sure just what Messrs. Kaufman and Hart were attempting to do, if anything.

The few redeeming qualities of The Man Who Came to Dinner were that it was well balanced, every part was essential to the whole, and the mood was consistent throughout—even the murder Whiteside digs up out of his memory is humorous. Every character is necessary in advancing the plot, if one can call it a plot! Most of the characterizations, especially that of Beverly Carlton, were good. The most lamentable part of the whole play is that Woollcott lacked spontaneity in the execution of his lines, which should have carried plenty of punch, even though they did lack in sheer comedy.

Business Group Views Film At Girls High Tomorrow

A talking film entitled A New Voice for Mr. X, will be presented to business classes on next Wednesday, April 24, at 9 a.m., in the auditorium at Girls' High School, announced F. Grant Marsh, chairman of the department.

The picture will be presented by Ralph Bender, a representative of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, and will show the use of the telephone in business, said Marsh.

Another announcement was made by Marsh concerning a placement by the Business Department of Dorothy Behrmann in a full-time secretarial position at Sears, Roebuck & Company. "The department is continuing to place students on a full-time or part-time basis as soon as we receive calls for jobs," commented Marsh.

Grenelle Calls Social Committee Confab Tomorrow

Social committee members are urged to attend an important meeting in Dean Edwin C. Browne's office at Galileo at 2:15 tomorrow afternoon, announced Muriel Grenelle, Associated Students vice-president.

"This will be one of the semester's most important committee meetings, as we shall discuss seriously policy and membership changes previously proposed," Miss Grenelle said.

Completion of plans for possible policy and membership changes in the social committee Miss Grenelle indicated as being still pending.

"Because of midterm examinations and numerous activities, we were not able to devote much time to altering committee plans during the last week," she declared.

Miss Grenelle said that when time permits a thorough examination and consideration of potential changes, a revisal of policy may be made.

"At present," she added, "we are working on plans for the low sophomore semi-formal dance in the Gold Ballroom of the Palace Hotel on May 3."

Carvel Craig and his orchestra have definitely been chosen to play at the affair, Miss Grenelle revealed.

"We are now working on actual plans for the affair," she said, emphasizing the fact that the event will be semi-formal and asking that students cooperate with the request of the committee by wearing appropriate clothes.

Local Tennisters Trip Sacramento, Smother Stockton

Against the toughest of conference competition, the college netsters defeated Sacramento Junior College, 4-3, at the Palace of Fine Arts Saturday, to remain the undisputed leaders of the northern California tennis loop.

In the singles matches, Bill Madamba trounced Dan Sullivan (S), 6-2, 8-6; Bill Nathan (S) defeated Howard Pennypacker, 6-2, 6-4; Blake (S) drubbed Hare, 7-5, 7-5; Calagos (SF) took Thorne, 6-4, 6-4; Waxman (SF) shaved Van Metre, 8-6, 8-6.

Madamba and Hare led the college No. 1 doubles team to victory, defeating Sullivan and Nathan, 6-1, 6-4. Blake and Thorne of Sacramento squeezed by Calagos and Waxman, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

Six matches to one in favor of the college Rams was the final score of the net battle between the college team and Stockton Junior College, held last Friday at College of Pacific.

This encounter was a return match, the first having been held here three weeks ago when the Rams managed to take every game. Of the seven games played yesterday, the Rams managed to take six, with one game lost through default.

Winning the first set 6-2 and leading the second 3-2, Chet Mead, college No. 2 man, suffered a sore deltold, and although ambidextrous, he was unable to serve, thus defaulting his match to Wilford Traphagen. Hunefeld, Stockton's regular No. 2 man, was unable to play because of suffering from a severe case of poison oak.

Ray Berns, Ram No. 3 man, was declared ineligible just before the match because of his participation in a non-conference match with the University of California last semester, consequently the players were moved up a ring higher than they usually play.

The S. F. State match is next, Coach Tom Wilson said, with the date not yet announced.

Guardsman Net Trophy Till Opens Round Robin Program

Playing off a round robin instead of the usual elimination tourneys, tennis players will start April 22 and continue through Tourney Week, the winning couple having their names engraved upon the Guardsman trophy.

Today, Tuesday, is the deadline, according to Bertha Keller, for any couples wishing to sign up for participation. Students will be allowed to play during class hours if arrangements are made beforehand, Miss Keller said, adding that this arrangement is also true of Tom Wilson's tennis classes.

Golfers Take State, 18-9; Meet Gators Again Today

Fresh from an 18 to 9 triumph over San Francisco State, the Ram golf team will meet the Gators in a return match this afternoon, announced Louis G. Conlan, golf instructor, this week.

"We seem to have a good team this season," Conlan revealed. "We will travel to Modesto next Saturday, and should know how we stand after the Modesto matches have been played."

The leading divoteers, Barney Rice, Bill McLaughlin, and Bill Hoffman, have been steadily improving, and the Ram chances will rest on these men, Conlan added.

The divot diggers have three matches remaining before the conference championships in Modesto, Conlan revealed. After meeting State and Modesto, the locals will compete against Menlo in a return match on May 10.

Ty Cobb, baseball's leading immortal, hit over .300 for 23 consecutive years for the most amazing batting record in the game's history.

Relay Sprinters Win Triangular Speedster Duel

Three minutes, 30.7 seconds, the time of the Ram relay team, won a triangular track meet with Marin and Santa Rosa at Kentfield Saturday for the local squad, finishing with a tally of 54 1-6 points. Marin and Santa Rosa followed with 52½ and 44 1-3, respectively.

With the college men Don White, Jack McMeekin, Bob Lowery, and Bert Korn hitting the tape several yards ahead of their Marin rivals, the relayers saved the day for the Rams by a slim margin of two digits.

The mile run was taken by Louis Vasquez in 4:44. McMeekin and Robin finished third and fourth, respectively, in the quarter-mile. Santa Rosan Dale won the event with a clocking of :52.2 seconds.

Hoffman, Marin speedster, ran the century in :10.3, to beat out Ram-man Korn, who finished in third position. Raine and Jorgensen, college, garnered second and third, respectively, in the high hurdles event. Hale of Marin scaled the timbers in :16 seconds for first place.

Bob Lowery of the Ram team sped around the Santa Rosa oval in the 880 yard run with a fast timing of 2:01.7. On Lowery's heels was White, who snared second position. Running 180 yards in :18.1, Bert Korn passed three Marin men to take that event going away.

The college was blanked in the 180 yards low hurdles. Santa Rosa and Marin split the points with a fastest time of :21.3. Jim Wagstaff secured a first place for the college in the discus throw, with a heave of 111 feet. Wagstaff also placed second in the shotput with a try of approximately 35 feet.

A three way snarl for first place occurred in the pole vault among Perry and Hancock, college, and Roland, Santa Rosa. Best height attained was 11 feet. Mossler and Hagen, college, and Abbott and Hall, Marin, were tangled in a four-way tie for first position in the high jump. Five feet 11 inches was the height reached.

Don White, in addition to his sprinting prowess, turned on the heat and took a fourth in the broad jump.

Two College Riflemen Bid For National Recognition

Nominations of two of the finest marksmen on the college Rifle and Pistol team were forwarded to Washington for official recognition, last week by Captain Fred McFarland.

Including the names of Charles North, team captain, and George Humphrey, No. 2 rifleer, an airmail letter was sent to the National Rifle Association.

During the recent Golden Gate Bridge League season, North garnered the highest marksmanship average, with Humphrey following a close second. Both men are veteran rifle handlers, and are being groomed by McFarland to reach "great heights" relative to rifle marksmanship, in years to come.

Quoting the general voice of the spirited rifle squad, it's "Good luck, Charlie and George—here's hoping you make the grade."

AMS Fighters In Training For May 15; Squad Strong

Left jabs, right hooks and crosses, "bolo punches," and sundry "roundhouses" are now on display in the Galileo gym on Mondays and Wednesdays at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, according to Joseph A. Amori, college boxing coach.

The reason for this display of fisticuffs is the semi-annual Associated Men Students fights to be held on May 15 at the Coliseum Bowl.

The leather pushers who are pointing to the fights are the mainstays of the college team, Amori said. By divisions, they are Raine, at 169; Edwards, at 149 and 159; Robinson, at 139; Matsumoto, at 129; and Momii, at 105, announced Amori.

Several dark horses may enter the affair before the elimination begins, Amori said. Anyone interested in entering the wars should report to Amori at once.

Only 20 years old, Mariana Scott is the University of Cincinnati's youngest candidate for a Ph.D. degree.

Local Diamond Team Splits Double Contest; Ram Still King Of Swat

Still resting in first place in league standings after splitting a double header with Sacramento last Saturday, the Ram baseball team will journey to Modesto next Saturday to defend its lead, according to present schedules.

Losing the first game 9 to 2 after blowing up in the eighth inning, the Ram nine settled down in the second contest to come out on the long end of a 7 to 4 score.

Harry Aleo pitched the first contest, and all went smoothly until the eighth inning, with Sacramento leading in a tight game 3 to 2 before the awful eighth began. Then Aleo ran into trouble. The first batter, Bob O'Shaughnessy, Sac pitcher, got a hit. The next batter sacrificed him to second.

Kirtlan, left fielder, reached first on Roscoe Wolicott's error, and the first batter went to third. Then Ures blasted out a single, scoring O'Shaughnessy. The next batter struck out.

"Doc" Stalle, Sac shortstop, came through with a timely single to score Kirtlan. Ures strayed too far from second base, and Leo Mezzetti, catcher, threw to Wollcott. However, the ball was thrown away and the runner reached third, and another run was scored.

Schmidt, the Sacramento left fielder, flied out to end the inning. In the ninth inning three runs crossed the plate when a Sac batter flied out to center field with the bags bulging. A series of errors for Ram fielders chased all three men across the plate.

The second game was different. Bob Hvidt turned in another of his fine pitching performances for the locals, when he held the Sacs in check throughout the game.

The Rams got off to a flying start in the first inning when they scored six runs off Mike Knezovich, rookie Sacramento hurler. Roy Kirtlan relieved Knezovich and allowed only one run afterward.

Even though four runs were made off Hvidt, the Ram hurler was not in trouble at any time. Hvidt has one weakness. He is inclined to worry when men get on base, and is usually behind the batter. Hvidt does have marvelous control, however. He only allowed two walks to opposing batters during the seven inning contest, and made four strikeouts.

Jack Gaddy, baseball mentor, felt that the locals could have won both contests. He declared that only two earned runs were made off Aleo in the first contest. Had Aleo received hitting and fielding support, he would have won the first game, Gaddy said.

WAA Tourney Week Slates 12 Sports

Already making plans for the semi-annual Tourney Week activities, Women's Athletic Association officers have set the dates for their semester finale, as beginning on May 2 and extending to May 9, when the Tourney Week banquet will be held as a climax, according to Thursa Scott, WAA president.

Archers will start Tourney Week activities with a novelty shoot similar to the one held last semester. May 3 will be the date of the WAA horse show at San Francisco, while May 4 will find the horseback lassies at San Mateo for another show.

WAA Dancing-Baseball

Folk Dancing Club will go to the Russian Community Center at 953 De Haro Street tonight, April 23, at 8:15 o'clock, Marion Dickie, manager, announced. All those interested are cordially invited.

Baseball practices for the playday at Santa Rosa on May 11, are being held at the Palace of Fine Arts on Thursday mornings at 11:15 and Saturday mornings at 10:15, Blanche Noyes, manager, revealed.

Badminton finals will be played off on May 3. Tentative plans are for a WAA vs. class rifle match during Tourney Week, according to Rita McDonald, rifle team manager. Also in the formative stages are plans for a baseball playday with San Francisco State on May 4.

Committees and chairman for the week's activities include: Arrangements, Annette Schunick; decorations, Marjory Lowsen; rearrangements, Grace Nell; hostess, Joyanna Mack; program, Aileen and Marleen McCrae; entertainment, Rema Corbitt; publicity, Rita McDonald; invitations, June and Irene Schunick.

Toastmistress for the evening will be Alma Koopman, vice-president of the WAA, according to Miss Scott.

Tentative plans are to make the theme of the Tourney Week activities Hawaiian, and a Father-Daughter affair, Miss Scott concluded.

Final Ski Club Conclave Called For Fall Elections

Tentatively scheduling the last meeting of the semester for May 10 at the home of Alden Smith, club adviser, college skiers will at that time nominate and elect fall club officers, according to Bob Ogg, club president.

The local skiers rounded out their first semester as a group with a competitive team, when they participated in the Vanderbilt Memorial Trophy Meet, April 13 and 14 at Norden.

Although official results have not yet been released to the colleges that entered, unofficial scores posted at the Sugar Bowl at the finish of the meet placed the junior college in ninth place, beating out the University of California at Los Angeles by 32.61 points.

Competing for the college in the Vanderbilt meet were Ogg, Stan Pittman, Bill O'Neill, and Falk Falkenburg.

Previous to the Vanderbilt meet, the college skiers took part in their first ski meet when they held a meet with Salinas Junior College in March. The Salinas skiers took first place in all the races, followed by the locals in second place.

Ski Club Casaba Quintet Conquers Block Society

Biggest upset of the week's Club Advisory Board basketball tourney was the Ski Club's defeat of the strong Block Society five, 30-16, announced Mel Chicazola, who is in charge of the schedule.

Other results of the playoff week, according to Chicazola, proved that the Beta Tau has been eliminated by the Forestry Fraternity in another crushing defeat, 30-11.

One of the toughest games of the entire schedule will be played off Wednesday, April 24, at 4 o'clock, in the Galileo Gymnasium, with the Newman Club and the Ski Club, now first place leaders in the league, tangling, concluded Chicazola.

Kegler Coach Discovers New Bowling Prospects

Carrying on with the intramural kegling tournament, Joe Amori, college bowling instructor, believes he has unearthed some prospects for future meets with other teams.

Posted on the wall of the Golden Gate Bowling Alleys is a list of the scores of the pin topplers in both the Tuesday - Thursday and Monday - Wednesday classes.

Amori said that if any of the keglers now rolling in the 170's can keep it up, there may be another change in the personnel of the quintet that is currently doing the chores for the college.

The present team of Robert Riordan, Jack Schmale, Bill Snooks, George Stockwell, and Norman Guinasso are expected by Amori to roll 850, but as yet are untested in intercollegiate competition.

"For a college team, 850 is a fine score, but maybe we can find a better combination," Amori commented.

Ice Carnival Comes To Winterland Tomorrow Night; Collegiate Stars Compete For Honors

Kicking up a shower of icy spray, Bill Hart whirls into range of The Guardsman camera-eye. Photographer Beverly Pasqualetti, college instructor, snapped the spinning college veteran as he completed an expert figure-8 in a practice session for the College Ice Carnival to be held tomorrow evening.

Hart will prform at Winterland in the distinguished company of such topnotch skaters as Murray and Sheldon Galbraith, Ed Bodell and Stuart Ross when the big show begins at 6:30 sharp.

By LUCRETIA ANTONICELLI

It's Ice Carnival time at the junior college!

Tomorrow evening at 6:30, college skaters, supporting such headliners in the art of the ice skate as Stuart Ross, women's European titleholder, Murray and Sheldon Galbraith, Marcella May, Margaret Field, Ed Bodell, and Bill Hart, will stage their semi-annual Ice Carnival at Winterland Ice Rink.

Tickets for the affair are on sale today from all club members, at the Galileo bank, the Powell Street office, and the Bookstore, according to Bill Hart, skate club president. Prices are 35 cents for spectators, 50 cents for those with skates, and 65 cents including skate rental.

Best Skaters To Participate

Revealing that this would probably be the last semi-annual Ice Carnival to be held, future carnivals becoming annual affairs, Hart said that the program would include some of the best skaters in the West.

"They are," he said, "Murray Galbraith, who is the senior men's champion of the Pacific Coast and runner-up in the national junior figure championships; Marcella May, San Francisco's own, who took first place in the women's junior figure skating championships; Ed Bodell, who is runner-up in the men's novice championships, and Margaret Field, diminutive ladies' novice champion of the Pacific Coast."

Carnival Begins At 6:30

The program, which will start promptly at 6:30 and extend until 7:30, will include the following numbers, as released by Hart:

(1) Fourteen-step dance by college skaters Lucille Jacke, Ed Bodell; Dorothy Jacke, Wiley Burnett; Margaret Meader, Fred Quandt; Dorothy McKenna, Bud Vodden; Bill Grothe, Edith Musser.

(2) Solo by Ed Bodell.

(3) Solo by Bill Hart.

(4) Games — Balloon race (for women, broom race (for men).

(5) Dance exhibition by Bill Hart, Stuart Ross; Murray Galbraith, Marcella May; this will include a tango, Viennese Waltz, Swing 14, and a fox trot.

(6) Solo by Margaret Field.

(7) Solo by Murray Galbraith.

(8) Grand March in which all the skaters will take part.

(9) Everybody skate.

Highlights of the program, Joseph Williams, club adviser, said will be a broom ball game between two teams of college men, the reds and the blues. Similar to ice hockey, the broom ball game differs in that the contestants use brooms instead of hockey sticks and a beach ball instead of a puck.

While Thinking

COLLEGE

LAST week we discovered an interesting fact about one of the southern colleges.

The executive council of this college down south, reportedly under the control of the administration, spent three weeks discussing and bickering over toothpicks. They couldn't decide whether the toothpicks in the Co-op store should be round or square!

This leads us to believe that perhaps our Executive Council isn't so bad, after all. Of course, the council spent about 10 weeks trying to vote on a plaque, but a plaque is a little more important than toothpicks.

TABULATION of the results of the questionnaire given by the welfare council is still under way. What are the members going to do with the results when they get them?

The council has spent the entire semester working on that questionnaire. Although the results may prove valuable, it seems to us that there are other and more important problems confronting the college than getting the results of a questionnaire.

What about looking into the housing situation around the new campus next semester, or discovering whether special buses will be put in service for the convenience of an expected 3,000 students?

IT HAS been estimated by reliable sources that from 1,500 to 2,000 students were at the AMS barn dance last week.

Of course, not all those who attended were from the college, for it was almost impossible to keep a check on the incoming throngs.

Judging from the favorable comment on the affair, Alvarado Barn will no doubt be the scene of other college dances (we hope).

Incidentally, college student Eddie Ticoulat surprised a rather dubious audience by presenting a swell band. Too bad the acoustics weren't better so that more people could have heard his outfit.

ONE of the biggest days in the history of the college will be May 17. On that day not only the college, but the general public as well will turn out to celebrate the completion of the new building.

Plans for the affair are rapidly taking shape, so perhaps it would be well to jot down "May 17" on your calendar as a day not to miss.

WORKMEN at the new campus report that an ever increasing pilgrimage of students to Balboa Park is taking place.

We don't blame them for being curious over the new building, for it is certainly a beautiful piece of work.

If you haven't seen it as yet, try and get out there some Sunday afternoon. We guarantee you won't be disappointed.

Crlenkovich Presentation Of AMS Fight Awards Off

Previous engagements make it impossible for Helen Crlenkovich to award medals to the winners of the fights sponsored by the Associated Men Students and set for Wednesday, May 15, according to Lyle Shultz, AMS president.

Shultz added that both men and women students should attend the fights beginning at 8 o'clock in the evening and taking place in the Coliseum Bowl.

"Although it is regrettable that Miss Crlenkovich will not be able to award the medals in the eight weight divisions, students will nevertheless see some great fighting," stated Shultz.

Headliner of the fight show is the 149 pound fighter, Bill Edwards.

Rivera To Execute Mosaic On The Future Civilization Of Americas

Approved by the Board of Education is the appropriation for a Diego Rivera fresco for the proposed library building at the Balboa campus, according to J. Paul Mohr, registrar.

The fresco will be constructed at an artist's workshop in the Exposition Fine Arts Building, and all materials will be paid for by Exposition officials, Mohr revealed.

Future Civilization Is Theme

With the theme Future Civilization of the Americas, the fresco will be put, Mohr said, upon the southern wall of the library building and will measure approximately 42 feet by 19 feet.

Rivera was approached by Timothy L. Pflueger, architect for the campus, in Mexico City this year, and he consented to create the fresco for the college at the Exposition this summer.

"Really, this fresco is by way of being manna from heaven," Mohr said. "We are most fortunate to obtain the work of a man so famous as Rivera."

Da Vinci, Mosaic Also Featured

Two other works for the science building at the new campus will be made at the Exposition Fine Arts Building, he declared. They are a bust of Leonardo da Vinci and a mosaic by the Public Works Administration Art Project.

McHugh Gives Directions For Low Soph Sunday Trek

All students planning to attend the low soph picnic this Sunday, April 28, should meet at 9 o'clock at Sloat Boulevard and 19th Avenue, according to Dan McHugh, class president.

Swimming and baseball, in addition to various picnic games, are being planned by the picnic committee, McHugh said, adding: "Dancing will be 25 cents, with the orchestra now playing at Alum Rock. However, we plan to have a radio dance for our own group in the afternoon, also. There'll be a good time for all who come, and we hope this picnic will promote more class activity."

Plans for another class picnic, that of the high frosh, have not materialized as yet, Leo Leggett, president, announced. A committee is to be appointed later which will set the time and place for this outing, according to Leggett.

College Models Compete In O'Connor, Moffatt Show

Seven college women will model for O'Connor, Moffatt & Co. tomorrow afternoon from 12:30 to 3:30 o'clock, as part of a citywide competition between the eight San Francisco high schools, San Francisco State College, and the junior college, according to Margaret Lamplugh of the O'Connor, Moffatt advertising department.

The models from the high schools have already appeared, and the junior college models will compete tomorrow, with State following next Saturday.

The girls will be judged on poise in modeling, selection of clothes, and interest in merchandising. The school that wins the prize will be announced in the near future.

Mary Bartholomew, Ruth Rehbock, Elma Ravazzano, Marion Schrick, Ethel Beard, Elede Morris, and Patricia Herbert will represent the college.

The models will fashion a varied wardrobe from street dresses to sports outfits.

Chinatown Tour Set Finally For Tuesday

Final date for the Chinatown tour as released by the Chinese Students' Club is Tuesday, April 30, it was announced this week. Postponement of the event, previously scheduled for this week, was necessary because of the School Week program April 25, George Ong, president of the club, said.

The dinner preceding the tour will be held at the Far East Cafe at 6 p.m., Ong revealed.

Dinner To Be Served

Edward Sandys, club adviser, commented: "People who visit Chinatown usually ask for chop suey or chow mein, but that is not really Chinese food. Those who join this tour will be served a regular Chinese dinner cooked in the Chinese manner."

Tickets for the tour and dinner are 52 cents, including tax, and may be purchased at the Galileo bank or Thomas O'Neill's office, or from Sandys or any member of the Chinese Students' Club, it was announced. Those who wish to go on the tour only may buy tickets at 15 cents and join the guides at 7 p.m. at the Chinese YMCA, Grant Avenue and Sacramento.

Student Guides Chosen

Students who have volunteered to act as guides are Hing Dare, Frederick Hong, Jack Lee, and John Leong, all of whom have had experience on other tours, said Ong.

Recalled by Sandys was an occasion two years ago when students of the Chinese Club conducted several of the faculty through Chinatown. "The general reaction was that it was the most interesting and unusual evening they had spent there. I am sure the club this semester is putting on something even more interesting. An ordinary tour through the same places, without the dinner, would cost the visitor $1.50."

Included in the tour of high spots will be the Family Association, a Chinese theater, Tai Chong, a Chinese temple, the Chinese Six Companies, and the Chinese Telephone Exchange.

CAB Accepts Councils' Plans For Fund Expenditure

Approved at the Club Advisory Board meeting last Tuesday were plans submitted by three of the five club councils for activities which would be financed by the CAB allowance of $60 for each group.

As reported at this meeting, the plans are:

(Council 2 (Foresters' Fraternity, Omicron Phi Pi, Physical Recreation and Recreation Majors' Club, Pick and Hammer Club, Skating Club, Ski Club). Entire sum to be turned over to Sirkus committee and redistributed to the clubs in this group for Sirkus participation.

Council 4 (Army and Navy Club, Chinese Students' Club, Japanese Students' Club, Rifle and Pistol Club). Tour on Greyhound bus, May 12, including a stopover at Stanford University campus.

(Council 5 (restricted social organizations). Tea dance, May 9, at the California Club, 4 to 6 p.m. Hosts and hostesses to be presidents of the clubs represented.

No report was forthcoming from Council 1. Council 3, which includes Block SF Society, Forum Club, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Newman Club, Peace Society, and Women's Service Society, is divided on the question of turning the $60 over to the Sirkus committee or holding an educational social at Sigmund Stern Grove. Meanwhile, Alden Thorogood, CAB president, named Gene Powell as official representative of the club board on the Sirkus committee.

COLLEGE TEAMS WIN RADIO QUIZ

Winning the safety quiz program which was broadcast over Station KFRC last Saturday was the team of men representing the college, announced Terry Dearborn, college health coordinator.

The team was composed of Elliot Feigenbaum, Dale Jost, James Hammond, and Herman Zimmerman.

Student Plaque

Permanent Honor Trophy Voted By Executive Council

Culmination of an idea conceived more than a year ago to honor outstanding students in the college was reached last Tuesday when the Executive Council finally stamped approval on the purchase of a bronze plaque on which will be enscribed, annually, the names of one college man and one woman deemed worthy of such mention.

Ability, service, and character, as testified by fellow students and faculty members, will form the bases for the citizenship awards, Murici Grenelle, chairman of the plaque committee, commented.

Bronze, Walnut To Be Used

The plaque, to be known officially as the President's Award, will be cast from bronze and mounted on a black walnut wood backing. Designed to cover a period of 20 years, 40 blank spaces have been provided on the plaque face to accommodate the names of the outstanding students that will eventually be enscribed.

Miss Grenelle indicated that the plaque will be finished in time to record the names of the two students selected for this year. As yet the judges have not been determined.

Board Ruling Slowed Procedure

One of the multifarious reasons for the delay in action on the plaque this semester was the necessity of complying with a Board of Education ruling which makes it mandatory that all college purchases more than $25 be referred to at least three business firms for bids. At the beginning of the semester, two bids from jewelry firms had been received along with preliminary sketches for the plaque designs.

The third bid was only received about two weeks ago.

From the three drawings submitted, the Executive Council, in a secret ballot, chose one from Granat Bros., local jewelers, costing $65.

High Sophs Get Ticoulat's Band For May 1 Excursion

Eddie Ticoulat and his band will play at the high soph excursion to Paradise Cove, May 1, according to an announcement by Art Pomares, class president.

Tickets for the excursion are now on sale, he added. As there are only 250 tickets available, Pomares advised students to buy now to make sure of going. Tickets are 75 cents per person, not including lunch.

A launch chartered from the Crowley Company will leave Pier 14 at 9 a.m. and cruise San Francisco Bay, around Treasure Island, past the Golden Gate Bridge, Marin County, and Tiburon, arriving at Paradise Cove at 11:30.

Art Pomares

The program for the afternoon, as released by Wilton Latz, chairman of the cruise, is as follows:

11:30 a.m., lunch; 12 m. to 1 p.m., games; 1 to 2 p.m., swimming; 3 to 5 p.m., dancing; 5 to 6 p.m., cruise homeward.

Tickets may be bought from Jack Baker, Elmer Hubacher, Jean Kelly, Adele Kuhn, Muriel Dodsworth, Wilton Latz, Alden Thorogood, or Art Pomares.

Pomares emphasized that all students are welcome on the cruise.

Last Day At Galileo Bank For Cut-Rate Fair Ducats

Today is the last day to take advantage of the bargain Fair offer, according to J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of education.

The bargains offered by the Exposition company are scrip books that give reduced rate admissions to students of the college.

These books contain 30 non-transferable admissions for $3.75. This reduces cost by 75 per cent, as each admission then costs but 12½ cents as compared to the usual 50 cent flat rate.

These books may be purchased at the Galileo bank by those students who did not order them at the beginning of the month. Those students who did order the tickets should pick them up and pay for them today, Sullivan said.

Also on sale are books that contain admission to the Fair and to five exhibits within the Exposition for $2.50. These books are transferable and are a $4.20 value.

Fair officials and exhibitors are promising a much better Exposition than was offered last year. This does not mean a lowered general admission, but it does mean bigger and better free exhibits, lower transportation cost, and 25 cent parking for those who drive to the island, Sullivan said.

"No Politics In Education" Says Williams At Forum

Youth Looks at the School, was the subject of a student forum, held in connection with annual Public Schools Week, at the auditorium of the High School of Commerce on Tuesday evening, April 23, 1940.

Five students, representing different school levels in San Francisco, spoke upon the merits and demerits of their respective schools and colleges.

Theme of the speech given by Allen V. Williams, Associated Students president, who represented the college, was that "Education must be free from coercion by politicians, by an uninformed public, or by selfish minority groups. And to the extent that we do promote academic freedom — to that extent the aims and objectives of education will be achieved."

Other speakers were Robert Sweeney from San Francisco State College; Dan Victor represented Samuel Gompers Trades School; Tony Sorich, Mission High School, and San Francisco Continuation School was represented by Ray Price.

Sweet Demands Change In Football League Status Quo

Meeting in the athletic director's office at Galileo last Monday, the Men's Athletic Council previewed the present football situation, discussed awards, and postponed recognition of skiing as a minor sport.

Present at the council were Dean Edwin C. Browne, Adviser Russ Sweet, Associated Students President Allen Williams, Athletics Manager Bob Owens, and Mel Chicazola, council representative.

Football Policy Discussed

The quintet attempted to get to the bottom of what has been termed a poor football policy.

At present, according to Sweet, there are two football leagues in the Northern California Junior College Conference, League A of which Modesto, Sacramento, San Mateo and the college are members. League B is made up of seven "smaller" colleges.

The conference has ruled that teams in League A are eligible to play only within that particular league. Thus, at the close of the season, there are only three conference games played by League A members—a farce, Sweet believes.

On the other hand, League B has a maximum of six conference games to fill out a season. The weakness of the present setup, Sweet said, is that League A is virtually tied up.

Little Money Made

First, there can be little money made in a four team conference. Second, a limited conference such as this automatically limits enthusiasm and large crowds. Third, it gives League A teams limited trips and few contacts.

Sweet remarked that Leagues A and B might organize into a round-robin league. Another possibility is that the college might withdraw from the league and establish its own schedule.

"Whatever happens," Sweet said, "there must be a change made."

Because of an insufficient amount of knowledge concerning skiing in neighboring colleges, the council postponed discussion of how skiing should be recognized, if at all.

Medal Presentation Suggested

Chicazola introduced a movement to present awards in the form of medals and trophies at the college Sirkus which is now being planned for the new college construction site.

Because sports will be included within the entertainment program, Chicazola maintained that it would be suitable to present awards to winners of various events.

Collegians Largest Donors To Legion Art Exhibition

Largest exhibitor in the Fifth Annual Northern Junior College Art Exhibition now being held at the Palace of the Legion of Honor, is the college, Richard Allman, art instructor, announced Wednesday.

Students who have work on exhibit are Robert Kovacic, Hazel Marion, Marian MacKillop, Lucille Scanman, George Simitizim, Tedda Kosh, and Romer B. Roberts.

These pieces had been picked from a group entered last week, and approved by the judges of the museum staff.

"The exhibit is the culmination of a year's preparation," Allman said, "and all work done by students during the period has been with this in mind."

Commenting on the work, he said, "The work done by students this year is very good—if anything, superior to effort shown in the past."

Four junior colleges in this area participated. They are Marin, San Mateo, Salinas, and the college.

This is the first year the exhibit has been held at the Palace of the Legion of Honor. In the past, exhibits have been held at the San Francisco Museum and the deYoung Museum in Golden Gate Park, he said.

Because of the ever increasing popularity of photography, Allman believes that next year a definite space will be allotted to this field.

The exhibition will remain here for one month.

Good Books Should Be Read To Gain Sufficient Background For Success

WHEN a survey of the reasons men fail to succeed is taken, high on the list will be the "Failure to read enough good books."

This may sound ridiculous to some, but it is true. First of all, the whole matter depends entirely on the connotation of success. Success to some is the securing of a job, doing the same work every day at the same time, and in general leading a stereotyped life.

Others feel that success is not attained until they have consistently advanced and forged ahead and reached the top.

Not everyone is able to be tops in his particular field, but undoubtedly the greatest stepping stone to the pinnacle of success is good books.

Reading gives a person the background, understanding, and foresight that can be had through no other means. In all walks of life, prominent men who are ostensibly successful reiterate again and again that the main fault of American youth is his lack of background and perspective.

Some go so far as to insist that the reason for this is that the good books published year after year are left neglected to gather dust.

American youth is laboring under a great delusion. It is the delusion that reading is a tough, distasteful job and one to be avoided whenever possible.

Such an attitude is absolutely wrong and very far from the truth. Persons who have made a hobby of reading can vouch for this statement.

One is inclined to wonder sometimes at the many persons who search for a hobby to occupy their spare time and absolutely ignore the wide realm of good books. Reading is one of the most fascinating of all hobbies and at the same time one of the easiest and most profitable.

It is hard to convince people of this fact, but it is interesting to note that once they yield to the advice of their friends and read a book, from then on they become ardent missionaries for the cause of reading.

Most college students when queried about their lack of interest in books answer with "I haven't the time." That is the easiest answer and, of course, is the one most frequently heard. The truth of the matter is that the student has never tried to find the time necessary for this purpose. It is very easily done. Reading to and from classes alone will enable the student to amass a surprising amount of interesting information that can be found no other way.

American education methods are more and more tending to emphasize the necessity of devoting time to the reading of good books, for the educators of today are, as in the past, aware of the necessity of instilling in the minds of youth the desire to read.

Today's System Not Wholly Responsible For Abuse Of Opportunity By Lackadaisical Americans

ANYTHING that saps the sense of the individual responsibility will rot the American character. With rare exceptions, your future is in your own hands, and anyone who tells you that you are the creature of circumstances is doing you no favor. The typical American in times past has manhandled circumstances, and you have got to do it now.

The greatest curse that has come upon us is a theory that we are all victims of something or other. A long-faced economist tells you that you are a victim of a system and that you are doomed to failure and misery unless the system is changed. His colleague tells you that we must take all the risks out of life and see that somebody else is going to help care for you in old age or any sort of trouble; your security, he says, must be a social and not a personal responsibility. Another reminds you that the one thing you must keep in mind is that you are always entitled to a subsidy for living. Opportunity disappeared from America in 1890 when the frontier line was shoved off into the Pacific, but we have just found it out.

Profanity is stupid and offensive, but I confess I feel a strong temptation to swear when I read the various long catalogues of reasons why young men cannot succeed in these times.—President Dixon Ryan Fox, Union College.

AMERICAN newspapers on the whole are giving us objective, factual, straight news reporting which is unique in the world today. In a world that has turned black under government censorship, we can thank God that here in America, faulty as our press may be, it is nevertheless, free.—Northwestern University's journalism dean, Kenneth E. Olson, lauds the U.S. press for its editorial integrity. (A.C.P.)

From "Ma" Frister's To Union Square

RECENTLY, to the great cooperative boarding house of Ma Frister's, that is, The Guardsman's editorial page, there came the refreshing Irish wit of Mary Frances Malone. The expression "Irish wit" has been handed down from English postman to English postman, but in using it here the expression applies to the natural charm and humor of the Irish. Also, it may be well to straighten out the use of the word "refreshing." Most people described as "refreshing" seem to take the description literally, and they come into a room like walking advertisements for foam baths. Miss Malone does not do this.

From the evident sophistry and ambiguity of Miss Malone's first column one does not catch the warmth that is Miss Malone the woman. It is no secret that every Christmas night Mary Frances Malone goes around putting a little bit of Irish stew in the pot of every street corner Santa Claus.

Twentieth-Century-Fox produced "Stanley and Livingstone," and by doing so inflicted on the nation a period of "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" jokes. MGM has just taken the star of the aforementioned picture and placed him as "Edison, the Man." The Secretary of the Navy should be warned at once. Any moment now someone will go up to that august personage and say, "Spencer Tracy's son, I presume?"

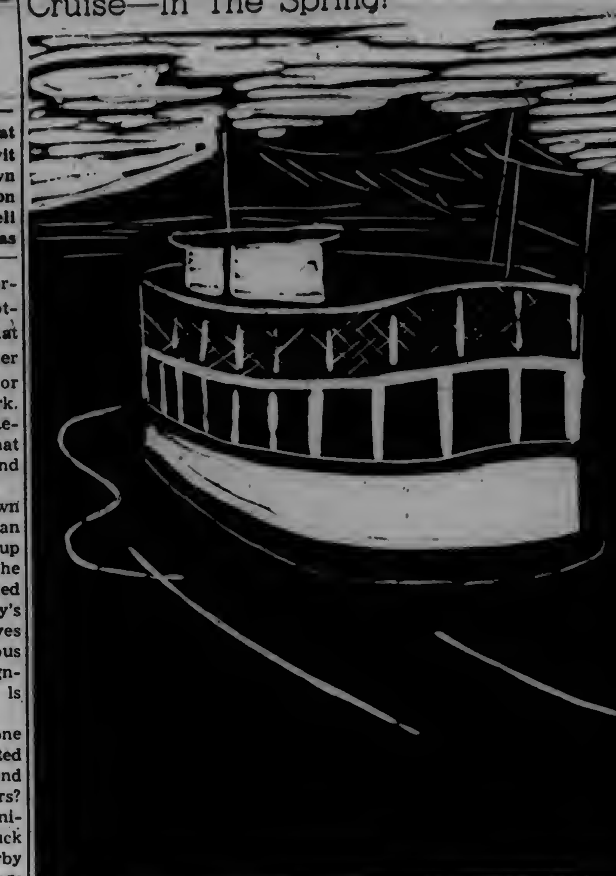
Every once in a while a call runs through the paper to get something "real," something "down to earth and with a good college life angle." For a week or so after the student-interest plea, readers of the paper come across such homey gems as "Whose face was red in Mr. Blooey's 20B class yesterday?" or "It is estimated that junior college students eat 16,550 pounds of hamburger a week."



Last election, after just such a personalizing campaign, one of the voters, waiting to register, suggested that a vote be held to determine whether Union Square would go C.I.O. or A.F.L. Nobody picked up the remark.

(Hang on tightly, you muddleheaded readers. You should read what follows very slowly. Don't finish and then ask what it's all about.)

Union Square is filled with its own humor. There are days when you can see and hear a Salvation Army group beseeching for peace on earth. The entire Salvationist group is huddled around a statue dedicated to Dewey's victory at Manila. When your eyes get tired of squinting at the religious gathering, you can look up at a signboard where a smiling gentleman is advertising Calvert's.

Almost any day there is someone discussing politics. A white-coated street-cleaner works idly by and listens. "What do you want, brothers? Do you want them to put you in uniform and make you live in the muck and the dirt?" Bellhops from nearby hotels push through the gatherings escorting well-fed wire-hairs and spaniels. "If you don't act now, boys, they'll treat you like dogs." Corpulent looking elderly gentlemen walk through the Square, smoking big smelly cigars. "D'ye hear what I say, my friends? We must organize, and no buts about it!"

THIS is a story called "No Appreciation." Any resemblance to human beings, either living or dead, is a tribute to our ability as a writer. (Time out while we shake our hand.)

He is an altruistically-minded young gentleman. She believes in the newer and more sophisticated ideas about boy-girl procedure. She probably got that way reading our column. (Pat my back, Lennie.)

Anyhow — the young gentleman sorta went steady with the girl without too much reciprocation. The young man dropped many a "scoot" on this particular "beetie"—and we do mean particular!

The payoff was on Camera Day, which took place a week ago last Monday. The young lady brought her camera along and took a young man other than the above-mentioned altruist to the top of a local skyscraper and had a very uncompromising shot taken which she circulates among the friends of the old b.f.—now ain't that discoombooberating?

But now he knows—and she doesn't know he knows—but the payoff—now that the photo has circulated, several young ladies have telephoned the boy in the story for dates—and they won't have cameras!

That just goes to show you what can happen when things are supposed to be going along without any hitch. For a while things seem to be going along smoothly and all of a sudden, whiz-bang, things happen so fast and furiously that you just can't fathom what really is going on.

For example, someone will suddenly say, "Joe Beanstalk used to be my best friend, but have you heard the latest?" And then the story pours out to half a thousand ears, and the half-thousand are very mysterious and won't tell a soul. They go around and smile in that haunting way, as if they guard the very secret of their lives!

But why be so serious about it all, anyhow? It isn't something that's going to follow you around for the rest of your lives. Be more friendly and not quite so cliquey!

Now for the brighter side of the news, and bouquets to Gloria Miller and her officers for the splendid AWS concert and tea sponsored by them last Sunday. The dulcet tunes which poured forth from the entire A Capella Choir should tend for a future Nelson Eddy or Lily Pons.

Although some persons of notable repute around the college site were quite noticeably missed from the affair, the Associated Women Students can chalk up another success in their little book of teas.

Bill Frantz, former collegian and man about town, is now working for a local dairy company, and to quote the gentleman, "If I don't stop eating ice cream, I'll begin to say MOO!"

Someone once said that if you took one half hour out of the day to laugh at yourself, what a more understanding and congenial world this would be to live in.

Ships Today Named After Heroes Of 1916

ACROSS city desks of all large newspapers a story began to arrive, page by page, from the wire rooms three weeks ago.

"Large German fleet reported moving up Kattegat." — "Nazi warships seen in convoy off Norwegian coast."

In the succeeding days the teletypes have continued to bring in news pertaining to the naval phase of warfare, and a constant succession of ship names has flashed across headlines from coast to coast.

"Germans admit sinking of 'Bleucher' and 'Karlsruhe' by Norwegian shore batteries."

"British claim successful torpedo attack on 'Admiral Scheer' in Skagerrak."

At one time or another during the past weeks almost the entire roll-call of the German navy has found its way into the newspapers of the world. Names formerly without significance have begun to be associated with war vessels of various classes, but in most instances they remain mere names, their historical significance and the wealth of romantic past behind each unknown to the average reader.

VON SPEE, Scheer, Admiral Hipper, Von Tirpitz, Scharnhorst, Gneisenau, Bleucher and Bismark — each ship bears a name famous in German military, naval or political history, each has a reputation to maintain.

The dramatic story behind the name of the German pocket-battleship Graf von Spee has already been told, but equally dramatic are the backgrounds for each of the others.

Scheer—the German vice-admiral who led the High Seas Fleet into the North Sea that fateful 31st of May in 1916 that marks the date of the Battle of Jutland. It was Scheer's naval genius that evolved the "gefechtskehrtwendung" or "emergency retirement" plan whereby the entire fleet, in the midst of violent action, suddenly and at a single command executed a complete and simultaneous 180 degree turn during the course of the battle, and by this brilliantly conceived and carried out maneuver succeeded in saving the Kaiser's navy from the possibility of complete destruction.

Admiral Von Hipper—the dapper little Prussian who led the battle-cruiser squadron in the same action, commanding them throughout their almost suicidal rear guard action, protecting the retreat of the main force.

But no list of German admirals could be complete without mention of the huge, fork-bearded giant after whom Germany's greatest battleship has been named, Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz. Commander of the German Navy during the period of the World War, it was this fierce old seadog, his bald head shining and his famous beard jutting out ferociously, who invented and undertook the infamous "unrestricted submarine warfare" program that eventually did its share in bringing about the entrance of the United States into the conflict.

BUT admirals are not the only German heroes who have been honored by the naming of a battleship. The speedy heavy cruiser "Bleucher," which was sunk in Oslofjord in the first stages of the German invasion, carried a name long familiar to students of history.

It was old and crochety Marshal Bleucher who spent the night before the battle of Waterloo feverishly driving his weary Prussian troops onward across the difficult terrain in order that the prayer of the hard pressed Wellington, "Dear God! either Bleucher or night, else we are lost," might be answered. Last week it was the "Bleucher" that was lost.

Again the generals are called upon for names, and the 26,000 ton battleship that slid off the ways with the name "Gneisenau" on her bows perpetuates the deeds of a young Prussian who began his military service as one of the Hessians fighting for George III against the American colonists, ended it as Bleucher's quartermaster general, the man responsible for arranging the successful transportation of the German troops to Wellington's aid that day when he and Bleucher saved England.

Unfortunate that war knows no gratitude, gives rise to English glee as the "Bleucher" goes down in Norwegian waters while British cruisers scour the seas for a chance to give the "Gneisenau" a similar fate.

Unfortunate that war's strange, grim coincidences may one day cause the British battleships "Beatty" and "Jellicoe," named after the English commanders in the Battle of Jutland, to meet in deadly combat with the "Scheer" and the "Von Hipper" over the same stretch of wave-lashed ocean where their namesakes fought a short 24 years ago.

CAB Action Unconstitutional; Goldstone A 'Red'!

● CUT TO THE BONE

Editor, The Guardsman:

Relative to a letter from the Club Advisory Board to the Executive Council published in The Guardsman of April 19, I take advantage of these columns to make partial answer thereto.

Quoting from the letter, the Club Advisory Board states, "Aside from the possible, even probable, illegality of such an action (i. e., cutting $200 from the CAB budget) after a certain sum of money has been allocated for a specific purpose . . ."

Quoting in turn from the Constitution of the Associated Students, "The Executive Council . . . shall be responsible for, and shall have final authority in, the supervision of the affairs, policies, properties and conduct of the association."

May I venture the interpretation that the term properties very properly covers all funds of the association, and therefore the Executive Council under the terms of the above article had full authority to withdraw or cut from the original grant. If they did not have this power, then by what power did they make the grant in the first instance?

Daniel Rosenblat,
Chairman, Finance Committee

● PEACEFUL BUT FURIOUS

Dear Editor:

There wasn't much sound but a good deal of useless fury in Goldstone's editorial, Tuesday, April 23. Nothing is so easy as to carry a banner in a parade that is full of banners like your own.

Congratulations to your bid for a berth on the Hearst Streamliner. He pays well! Keep shooting "Red" at everything that dares to differ with the voice of militarism. If calling for peace makes one a "Red" then the Army-Navy club must be a paper organization for Moscow. Doesn't it urge arms for defense to keep peace at home? No, both the Army Club and the Peace Society fall out of the category you have placed them in.

As for s o a p - b o x i n g on other campii. Perhaps they were driven to maintain American democracy in opposition to a tide that was fast flowing toward the arms of this fascism that we are both fighting. We are thankful to have an administration which can see through the red and yellow camouflage of super-super-patriotism. Or maybe it isn't patriotism at all—it might be grapes of fury.

Please, sir, let the "pint-sized world-savers" do their little bit in keeping the Yanks over here so that the Junior College can turn out more ball teams and swimmers. You should be happy, Goldstone, but your eyes are bloodshot. See a doctor and tell him that your seeing red spots. They aren't really there!

Peaceful Mason.

Dr. Cyclops—Builds To Awful Let-Down

ONCE upon a time there was a big bad giant who wanted to play in the movies, so he went to Hollywood and got a job as Dr. Cyclops. He played an ogre who transformed men into tiny creatures, and then—the old meanie—tried to kill them.

Paramount has put out a film which would not even have taxed the ingenuity of Hans Christian Andersen or Jacob Grimm. It is a story the authorship of which the fairy-talers would be ashamed to claim. Aside from the photography, which is excellent, the film, on the whole, is nothing but a lot of meaningless gibberish about a mad scientist who tries to discover the secret of life by reducing his assistants to one-fifth the size of a normal man.

Albert Dekker, as Thorkel the biologist, is the only one of the cast who gives a performance that even approaches credulity.

Aside from Dekker, there are included in the cast some five people, none of whom contributes anything worth while to the art made sacred by Marie Dressler and Bette Davis. Listed as actors (although this is extremely doubtful) are Janice Logan, a young lady who manages to convey the idea that the whole thing is just a joke, so why should she bother to call forth her meager histrionic ability; Thomas Coley, the quintessence of the perpetual juvenile, in his first part, and if ability counts when a director is casting, it will most certainly be his last.

Charles Halton, with a whiney voice and frustrated look, acts as though he thinks Hollywood hasn't yet reached the adolescent stage; Victor Kilian meanders around as a 13 incher looking for a mouse hole, so the audience won't have to watch the agony he goes through trying to convince them he is an actor; and Frank Yaconelli, with his diminutive horse, gives by far the best performance of the sextet.

Ernest Schroedsack, the director who made Chang and King Kong so memorable, didn't bother to exercise any originality at all when confronted with the bizarre problem of how to photograph foot high people and still make it look intelligent. After the spell of viewing the trick photography has worn off, the audience begins to look for some better form of entertainment, like playing tic-tac-toe or honeymoon bridge, at least expecting to see something on the screen that will enable them to figure why Paramount went to the trouble of filming Dr. Cyclops behind closed doors. Had they known how it was going to turn out, nobody would have even bothered to open the doors and take a peek.

At best, the pseudo-scientific films that Hollywood turns out are badly done, but none, in the knowledge of the oldest inhabitant, has turned out like Dr. Cyclops. With the aura of mystery surrounding it, one at least expected an amusing picture. The net result reminds us of a song—"Building Up to an Awful Let-down." Amen!

. . . And they killed the giant and lived happily ever after.

Bulldogs Set As Track Victors; Rams Outclassed In All Events

By VINCENT VANDRE

By comparative times, heights and distances, the college cinder meet with San Mateo on the Burlingame High track tomorrow morning will probably culminate in a wide margin of victory for the Bulldogs.

Although results of the Ram tangle with State last Wednesday will not be released for publication until the Tuesday issue of The Guardsman, a close scrutiny of the scoring at the Gator contest and the results of the San Mateo sprint fest should prove interesting in connection with the forthcoming conference trials at Modesto in May.

Rams Meet Weak Squads

Marin, Santa Rosa, Menlo, State, and the Cal Frosh have been met and conquered, with the exception of the Frosh, by the local aggregation. However, the aforementioned squads are the weakest in the conference; therefore, San Mateo, which is one of the strongest outfits in the northern California loop, is picked to win 12 out of a possible 14 events.

This prediction may appear to be exaggerated, but a comparison of scores between the Stanford Frosh and San Mateo, and the Rams and Santa Rosa-Marin, should prove the point. The Bulldogs took the Frosh meet with a tally 79 to 43. By two hard-earned digits, the Rams were barely able to squeeze by Santa Rosa and Marin, 54-1/6 to 52½—44-1/3.

Probable SM—Ram Score

Coming to actual statistics, The Guardsman sports prophecy of the Ram-Bulldog shapes up as follows:

San Mateans Bob Joost and Laurie placed first and third, respectively, in the mile run of the Indian meet, with a best time of 4 minutes 41.4 seconds. Finest miler of the college, Louis Vasquez, took a first last week with a clocking of 4:44. On this basis, the mile grind tomorrow will go to San Mateo in first and third positions, and Vasquez snagging a second.

Leon Purchase of the Bulldogs broke the quarter-mile record of the Peninsula college last week with an effort of 49.3 seconds, which is four-tenths of a second faster than the previous record held by Archie Williams of UC fame. Dick Hinze, also of San Mateo, followed Purchase in the Stanford battle with a third place. Hinze is capable of running the 440 below :52 flat. Thus far, college quarter-milers Jack Meekin and Robin have not approached those times. Therefore, the 440 event should fall to Purchase and Hinze.

Bulldog Dashman Fast

A clock-stopping century sprint of 9.8 seconds was turned in by Hylton of San Mateo at the Card duel, dogged by San Matean Finck. Hoffman, Marin, exerted himself to 10.3 last week to beat out collegian Bert Korn, who was satisfied with a third. Thus, 100 yard dash to the Bulldogs.

In the shotput, Jim Wagstaff placed second in the Santa Rosa meet with a push of approximately 35 feet. Fred Boensch of San Mateo secured second place at Stanford with a heave of 41 feet 11½ inches. Shotput to San Mateo.

Both the low and high hurdles offer no Ram abstacle to San Matean MacLean, who has topped each of the events in :24.6 and :15.5, respectively. If in top condition, Ram-men Bob Raine and Jorgensen may give MacLean some competition, but their times are much slower on the average. Timbers to the Bulldogs, with a second and third for the Rams.

SM Half-milers Speedsters

Ben Olson and Bob Joost, San Mateo, are a certainty to make a clean sweep in the half-mile. Although Bob Lowery of the college has done 2:01.7, he is no match for the 1:56.8 accomplished by Olson. 880 to San Mateo.

Because javelin throwing is banned on the college practice fields, the Rams will not enter that event. Moreover, Bulldog Gerdau has tossed the spear 147 feet 1 inch. Javelin to the Bulldogs.

Mossler, Hagen, and Raine, college, possess the "oomph" to leap over 6 feet in the high jump, and one of them will be forced to do just that if the Rams expect to conquer Cox or Sheean of San Mateo, who have each reached the 6 foot mark in trials. High jump to the college.

Hylton, Finck, and Purchase, Bulldogs, are sprinters par excellence in the 220 yard dash, all running the distance below 22 seconds. Bert Korn is the only college cinderman who can present any competition in that event. 220 to San Mateo.

Peril to SF Vault Hopes

The Bulldog pole vault record of 13 feet was tied by Lyle Taggard last week. Keith Groswird, college, can if pressed, attain that height, but whether he participates in the San Mateo meet tomorrow is undecided. Eddy Perry and Hancock are progressing rapidly, but 13 feet is a doubtful mark for each man. Pole vault to the Bulldogs.

The figures: Trevisan, 22 feet ¾ inches; MacLean, 21 feet, 6 inches; Cox, 21 feet 1 inch; all of San Mateo, speak for themselves. Broad jump to San Mateo.

With a throw of 111 feet last week, Jim Wagstaff garnered a first place in the discus event at Santa Rosa. However, Bowles of San Mateo, with a toss of a mere 120 feet, took a third at the Stanford Farm. Discus to San Mateo.

Local Relay Quartet Strong

One redeeming feature of the meet will be a tentative victory for the Rams in the mile relay. Jack McMeekin, Don White, Bob Lowery, and Bert Korn, who comprise the relay squad, have stepped the 1760 yards in 3 minutes 30.7 seconds, a good five-tenths of a second better than the 3:35.1 turned in by the Bulldog relay team of Finck, Taggart, Purchase, and Olson. A close first to the college team.

Tabulating a theoretic score on the 5-3-1 system, the final Ram-Bulldogs track meet tally should be approximately, San Mateo, 82; Rams, 41.

Horrors! Gym Dodging Exposed

At the risk of being considered a traitor to the cause, the Guardsman Sports Snooper has come to the momentous decision that all is not well in college Physical Ed. classes.

Offering to expose the nefarious racket of "g y m d o d g i n g," the Snooper donned his moth-eaten shorts, sweat-shirt, tennis shoes, etc., and intrepidly lurked in the vicinity of several suspicious-looking half-nude stalwarts. Unable to believe the testimony of his ears, the Super-Snoop finally convinced his shocked soul that what he heard was indisputable proof of sabotage in the athletic ranks.

From the Snooper's personal office files: "Listen, you mugs, I've figured out a way to crack this joint. (Chorus of, "Yeahs?" and "Hows" from the mob.)

"Here's the setup," continued the head mobster, "You know the tunnel under Bay Street from the gym to the main Gal building. Well . . . Hold it! There's a rat listenin' in. Let's scram."

From Snooper's files comes this notation: "Followed suspects to hide-out. Continued in next issue—if I live that long!"

Baseball Crisis

Batters Battle At Modesto Tomorrow; Loop Lead Periled

Modesto is the next hurdle for the Ram baseball nine in their quest for the league baseball championship. The locals travel to Modesto tomorrow to engage the southern team in a pair of diamond contests, Coach Jack Gaddy announced this week.

Hoping to take both contests, Gaddy will start his leading pitcher, Harry Aleo, against the Modesto nine in the first game, and will give the second game mound duties to Bob Hvidt.

"We will have to take at least one of the Modesto tilts to stay in the running," Gaddy confided. "I hope that we can take two, but I will be satisfied if we can take one of the games. Modesto is tough; probably tougher than Sacramento was."

Infielders Need Improvement

Gaddy expressed anxiety over his infielders. The first Sacramento contest last week was lost through sloppy fielding, and the second game might have been lost the same way. If his pitchers come through, and the batters can hit in the clutches, the Rams should have no trouble in staying on top of the league, Gaddy commented.

All batting averages dropped last week. Harry Aleo, last week's leader, dropped to third place behind Roscoe Wollcott, second sacker. Bob Hvidt, a newcomer to the charmed (.300) circle, is resting in second place.

This week's averages, as released by Gaddy, are as follows: Wollcott, .451; Hvidt, .363; Aleo, .347; Roy Micheli, third baseman, .325; Bob Webber, left field, .305; and Leo Mezzetti, catcher, .303. The team batting average has also dropped. The players, as a whole, are batting .290.

Hvidt Leading Hurler

Leading Ram pitcher is Hvidt, with three victories and no defeats. Aleo is close behind with four wins to one loss. Martin Zernicke is in third place with one win and one defeat.

The first Sacramento game spoiled the Ram error column. Up to that tilt the locals committed no more than two errors a game.

The starting lineup for the first Modesto game will be the same as for past games, Gaddy announced: Al Giovanetti, first base; Wollcott, second; Micheli, third; Frank Mullins, short; Webber, left field; Bob Nishi, center; Russ Brabant, right; Mezzetti, catcher and Aleo, pitcher. Batteries for the second game will be Hvidt, pitching, and George Moreira, catching.

Three More Opponents

Three teams remain to be met by the Rams after the Modesto contest, Gaddy revealed. Present schedules call for the locals to engage San Mateo on the peninsular diamond a week from Saturday, May 4. The local nine will next play Placer at Funston on May 11. The season will wind up with the playoff of the postponed Salinas contest at Salinas after the regular season has ended.

Gaddy expects the San Mateo contest to decide the diamond champs for the 1940 season. If the Rams win both games, they are practically assured of the championship, he said.

Boxing Class Stars Train For AMS Fights, May 15

With the Associated Men Students fights less than a month away, the college boxers are mixing it up hot and heavy, according to Joe Amori, boxing coach.

Among the regulars selected to appear in the wars are Bob Raine, the 169 and heavyweight champion of last semester; Bill Edwards, who will enter the 149 and 159 pound divisions; Jim Robertson, 139 pounder, who stretched the Salinas captain in the recent intercollegiate meet there. Frank Matsumoto, the Japanese boy whose fists won him a scholarship to the University of Pennsylvania, will also defend his 129 pound title won last semester; and diminutive Tak Momii, the 105 pound battler, will also battle, Amori's present schedule promises.

All of these boys are "ring-wise," Amori said, are guaranteed to put on good fights, and will be in there pitching on May 15.

Tourney Entries Open

Amori is still accepting entries for the tournament. Any person who is interested in entering the affair should see him at once, as an elimination tournament will soon get under way.

Amori declared that he is especially interested in finding an opponent for the paperweight, Tak Momii. Last semester no opponent could be found, therefore Momii and Matsumoto fought an exhibition bout.

New Ski Technique Course Plans Revealed By Ogg

Possible plans for adding a course in "dry ski technique" to the college sport curriculum, were revealed Tuesday by Bob Ogg, ski club president, pending action by the Men's Athletic Council, in regard to ranking skiing as a minor sport within the college.

The class, if included in the college courses, would require an instructor; Ogg said, and there is a strong possibility that Alden Smith, present club adviser, would fill the position.

Skiers would practice on the San Francisco sand dunes, and would do road work on the side. There is a petition being circulated among students now, to see if and how many would be interested in such a course, Ogg said.

The 'Hot Corner' On Fire

A Sacramento "steal" that didn't pan out. Roy Micheli, Ram third sacker, was caught coaxing the horsehide (shown by arrow) to him on the "hot corner." Needless to say, the runner was out of position on his slide, and fell prey to Michelli's mitt. Standing on the baseline, and calling the play is a Ram line-coach.

Splitting a double-header against the Sacs last week, the conference-leading Rams meet the Bucaneers at Modesto tomorrow.

WAA Lists Four Activities On Agenda; Tourney Sets "All-American Girl" Theme

On the Women's Athletic Association calendar for the coming weeks are four scheduled events, Alma Koopman, vice-president of the association, announced early this week.

Four scheduled events, general-sectional playday at Santa Rosa on May 11, Trail Ride at Marin on April 27, mixed doubles tennis tournament to be played off by April 30, and postal-matches in archery, started on Tuesday, April 23, and to be completed by May 4, constitute the agenda.

Five Activities Slated

Baseball, volleyball, ping-pong, archery and badminton will constitute the morning activities at Santa Rosa, while everyone will participate in ice skating in the afternoon, Miss Koopman revealed. Marion Dickie and Irene Gruenebaum are tentatively scheduling a demonstration of the 14-step for the skaters. Jeanne Arnold is in charge of sign-ups, and anyone in WAA who is interested is advised to see her as soon as possible.

Stockton, Sacramento, Santa Rosa, Modesto, San Benito, Salinas, Bakersfield, Marysville, and San Francisco Junior Colleges are sending representatives to this playday, Miss Koopman said.

Marin Trail Ride

A trail ride will be held at Marin Junior College on April 27. All those interested should see Marjorie Radke, manager.

Mixed doubles tennis tournament is to be played off by April 20.

WAA rifle enthusiasts are to compete in a match with the class rifle team on April 30.

Archery postal-matches, started last Tuesday, April 23, and will continue until May 4, Barbara Smith, manager, disclosed. This year only junior colleges in northern California will be included, but the WAA Council has approved of statewide matches for next year in which high schools as well as junior colleges will participate, Miss Smith revealed.

Club To Tabulate

Members of the archery club will tabulate the scores for all the colleges and send out reports, according to Verrel Weber, club adviser.

Duplicate score sheets will be filled out, one for college files, and one for the clearing house, Miss Weber explained.

With "The All-American Girl" as its theme, Tourney Week activities will start on May 2 and continue until May 9, when the semi-annual banquet will terminate the sport schedule for the semester, Alma Koopman, vice-president of the Women's Athletic Association, announced last Monday.

Tourney Week Schedule

Following is the Tourney Week schedule released by Miss Koopman:

Archery—Novelty shoot on May 2 at the Palace of Fine Arts.

Tennis—Doubles finals on May 2, singles finals on May 4.

Riding—Horse show on May 3. On May 4, college riders will participate in a horse show at San Mateo.

Badminton—Finals on May 3 at Galileo.

Baseball — With San Francisco State College on May 4.

Basketball—Vs. Lowell High School at 3:15 Monday afternoon, May 6.

Dancing—The dancing club, under the direction of Laurine Bergin, physical education instructor, will present a demonstration of American folk dances to carry out the theme of "All-American Girl."

Archery — At Mills College on May 7.

Rifle—Match at Galileo on May 7.

Banquet—May 9. To honor the fathers of the college women, this banquet will be a Father-Daughter dinner. All women of the college are invited, and those planning to attend are asked by the chairmen to bring their own fathers or an "adopted" father chosen from the faculty. Time, place, and price will be announced later.

Committee Chairmen

Committee chairmen for Tourney Week, as chosen by the WAA Council, are the following: Publicity, Rita McDonald; Arrangements, Annette Schunick; Decorations, Marjorie Lowsen; Hostess, Joy Anna Mack; Invitations, June and Irene Schunick; Rearrangements, Grace Nell; Programs, Irene and Marleen McCray; Entertainment, Rema Corbitt; and Toastmistress, Miss Koopman.

College Rifle Team Cancels Sunday Match At Richmond

Captain Fred McFarland announced last Tuesday that the college rifle and pistol team will not make its proposed trip to Richmond.

Plans had been made to participate Sunday in .30 calibre small bore match competition, which was to include the participation of several bay area colleges at Richmond, but it was found that financial conditions and social obligations proved the trek infeasible, McFarland said.

Last week the names of Charles North, men's team captain, and George Humphrey, No. 2 man on the squad, were forwarded to the National Rifle Association in Washington in a bid for national recognition.

Eisan Promotes Punting Tilt At Balboa Football Field

To find the best kickers in the college football team, Coach Lee Eisan has proposed a punting contest, which, he announced, will be held within a few weeks at the new college football field at Balboa Park.

Judged for accuracy, distance and consistency, points will be gained by contestants for each, the highest scorer receiving first place.

Meanwhile, the team is practicing the art of kicking and running off plays.

Coach Eisan has a full team of returning veterans, the weakest spot being the end positions. The backfield is composed of Al Nauman, Leo Leggett, and Dave Cunningham, with possibly Taylor, who may play end with Hagen. The tackles are Meyers and Aguinaldo; guards, Johnson and Leong, and the center, either Johanessen or Wilson, Eisan said.

Tennis Tomorrow

Weakened Net Squad Tangles With Modesto; Crown Lost

Competing against the Buccaneers' net team at Modesto tomorrow, the college players will be minus the services of Chet Mead and Ray Berns, Nos. 2 and 3 men, respectively, on the Ram tennis squad, Coach Tom Wilson disclosed.

This revelation, in relating to conference standings, throws a monkey wrench in the local machinery. Mead is out indefinitely with a wrenched back, and Berns is definitely ousted from the team because of participation in inter-club play last semester. With Modesto, San Mateo, and Placer yet to play, the loss of two valuable squad members deals a severe blow to college conference championship hopes.

The ineligibility of Berns, in particular, is a death thrust, because, as No. 3 man, he was counted upon to win singles matches in the three forthcoming tournaments.

Rule Technicality Disclosed

After two-thirds of the season was completed, a conference coach discovered a technicality in the league rules, stating that any player holding active membership in an amateur or professional club, and competing for that organization after his college team had started its season, is guilty of an infraction of the rules and must be declared ineligible.

Berns played one match against the University of California for the Northern California Interclub League, the highest-ranking and strongest amateur net group in this section, and that contest cost him one year of college eligibility.

Highest Net Average

Up to the present time, Berns possessed a record of five wins out of five starts in conference play, and a list of nine out of ten wins in season play, including practice matches, for the best average on the squad. The doubles combine of Madamba and Berns, which has been conquered only once this season, is now in the discard.

Conference Hopes Dim

With the probable loss of three singles encounters in the three remaining tilts, and the temporary absence of Mead, the Ram tennis contingent, clinging precariously to a second place tie with Salinas behind San Mateo, is left with non-existent possibilities for a championship. Although only one match behind San Mateo, the college players will be forced to reorganize to such an extent that topnotch competitive play will be improbable.

In addition to its present load of woes, the local net men may be without the aid of Tony Calagos and Jack Hare. If so, according to Wilson, Jack McKay and Howard Pennypacker will make the Modesto trip.

Ram Pin-men Bowl At San Jose Today

Another tentative meet has been scheduled at San Jose Friday night for the bowling team, announced Joseph A. Amori, college boxing instructor.

This contest will include Stanford, California, San Jose State, and other bay region colleges which wish to enter. The meet is to be held in San Jose and is sponsored by a San Jose newspaper, Amori said.

The quintet of Norman Guinasso, Jack Schmale, George Stockwell, Bill Snooks, and Bob Riordan, is expected to represent the locals.

Amori has confidence that these boys will roll at least 850, which should be good enough to come in the upper division of the standings.

"This meet should go through," Amori said, "for after all, this is the third tentative engagement, and there is an old saying to the effect that the third time is a charm."

Rams Putt Southern Golfers At Modesto Tomorrow

Coach Louis G. Conlan's Ram golfers will meet Modesto Junior College in a divot match tomorrow afternoon at Modesto, in what he hopes will be another college victory.

Conlan looks toward the Modesto matches as a testing ground for this season's golf team. The conference championships will be played on the same Modesto golf course in three weeks, May 17.

The only match remaining on the practice schedule before the championships is a return match with Menlo at Ingleside on May 10, Conlan said.

After postponing the match twice, the local divoteers met the state squad in a re-match at Ingleside Tuesday afternoon. Although the Rams trounced the Gaters 18 to 9 the last time the two contingents played, yesterday witnessed a reversal of form in the State outfit which culminated in a 3-2 victory over the college.

RAMblings

By Ray Berns

TANGLEFOOT, YOGI, ET AL.

In this week's assortment of nothingness, we are going to delve into the deep, dark, and supposedly dead past and revive two of the college's immortal journalistic characters, who, by the way, are fictitious.

One, Ivan Tanglefoot, was a by-product of that weird melange concocted by the old RAMchopper man, Jack Schmale, and presented to the readers of this page in his column, RAM Chops, a few semesters ago.

The other character, the "Yogi," was given birth in this column by this scrivener at the same time that Schmale was driving the reading public mad with Tanglefoot's diverse calculations.

First, perhaps, we had best differentiate (outside of their names) between the two characters. Ivan Tanglefoot, sometimes referred to as Ivan, was a statistician par excellence, while the "Yogi" was a soothsayer in particular, and a screwball in general.

"SCREWBALL" GHOSTS RESURRECTED

Now that we've got this straightened out, we'll let you all in on a little secret. Don't tell anyone we told you, but, in the near future, both Ivan and the "Yogi" will make their reappearance in this tabloid through the medium of this column and will, once again, delight (we hope) our many readers with their statistics and discourses, respectively, on college sports affairs.

For example, the "Yogi" will present his predictions as to who will be the winners in the AMS fights before the fights have been held, and then, after the fights are over, will explain why his choices didn't win! Ivan will compute the number of punches thrown (right and left hands figured separately, of course), quarts of blood lost, soda pop and ginger ale consumed, and all the rest of it.

MYSTERY CASE NO. XYZ123

So much for the future, but, searching into the archives of the past, we stumble onto one of Ivan's greatest successes—Case No. XYZ123, also known as "The Spaghetti Affair."

"The Spaghetti Affair," or, Case No. XYZ123, as you will, had to do with the amount of spaghetti eaten at the sophomore picnic in May, 1939. Ivan, after weeks of tireless research, during which time he consumed a cup of coffee and two aspirin, found that if all the spaghetti eaten were laid end to end, the result would be a string stretching from Balboa Park to Washington, D.C., back again; thence up Market Street to the Civic Center, and finally, ending at the City Hall. Ivan further discovered that if the spaghetti were wired for sound, it could be run across the Atlantic and the whole group at the picnic could have listened to one of Mussolini's fireside chats.

NO BIAS ALLOWED

To those of you who may be wondering whether we may show favoritism toward the "Yogi" rather than Ivan, you may put your minds at ease. We shall take Ivan to our bosom as if he were our very own (and not the faux pas of Schmale's), and show him the same kindness that will be extended to the "Yogi."

NOW IT CAN BE REVEALED NOTE

Just a few semesters ago, a student of this college, who was an excellent fencer, received publicity in this column and other parts of this page as a result of letters sent in by a friend of his (supposedly).

Interesting, however, is the fact that the address of "the friend" and that of the fencer were one and the same!

A Fashion Show At Galileo

City Of Paris Clothes College Beauties For Tuesday Revue

With the City of Paris furnishing the clothes, five college organizations supplying the models, a fashion show will be held next Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. in the Galileo Auditorium, Bette Nelson, City of Paris representative, announced.

Next Tuesday's edition of The Guardsman features a special fashion supplement with a four page issue instead of the usual two page issue. The supplement will carry a special picture layout to show the types of clothes that will be modeled in the afternoon show.

On the sports page there will be an additional layout of clothes for active sports, as modeled in the pictures by Dorothy Plowden, June Homes and Loretta Egan.

Models chosen from the Alpha Phi Omega are Lyba Maekie and Muriel Nolan; from Phi Beta Rho, Dolores Dixon and Jean Gustavson; from Lambda Chi, Shirley White and Jean Christienson; from the Home Economics Association, Marion Schrick and Elma Ravazzano; from the Women's Service Society, Jean Arnold and Loretta Egan.

Joe Amori, Associated Men Students adviser, has promised several models from the AMS; as yet no models have been forthcoming.

Registrar J. Paul Mohr has excused all 2:30 classes.

More On CAB

ing was the official admittance of the National Intercollegiate Flying Club, San Francisco Junior College Chapter, as a new CAB organization, and the reinstatement of the Music Club with charter renewal. James S. Hughes, CAB adviser, pointed out that this group now includes 30 clubs in good standing, with one club, Phi Rho Pi, in suspension.

Because of insufficient material and for other reasons, CABBY, CAB bulletin slated for issue April 12, will not be out until next week, Editor Bob Schlesinger revealed.

No Cap, Gown Fee For Commencement

No cap and gown fee will be charged graduates of 1940, according to the announcement made by high soph adviser Nelson A. Wells in disclosing present plans for this year's college commencement.

June 7 has been set as the date for the commencement, which will be held, as it has always been, in the Opera House.

"Students will be measured for caps and gowns at Galileo at 2:30 in the afternoons of the 14th, 15th, and 16th of May," Wells said.

All students who attend the graduation in caps and gowns should report to the Opera House on the forenoon of the 7th for rehearsal, he added. Wells said there would be only the one rehearsal before commencement, therefore it is imperative that students attend it.

KSFO Airs College Radio Production Night Of May 2

Depicting the development of the Bill of Rights, and commemorating Citizenship Week, Freedom of the Press, a radio drama, will be presented by the radio broadcasting class of the college over Station KSFO, May 2, at 9:15 in the evening, announced Marie Weller, radio broadcasting instructor.

Rush Hour At The AMS Barn-Dance - - They Listen, They Jig, They Cool Their Heels

So Sadie Hawkins Day—or Night, more properly speaking—was a success, as far as the college was concerned, and the biggest event on the holiday calendar was the AMS Barn Dance.

To say that a mob turned out for the affair would be understating the facts. Look at these pictures yourself, and get a load of the reception the students gave the outing.

The authentic hayseed atmosphere of the big barn at Alvarado Park conquered the sophistication of city folk who went, and rural informality ruled throughout the celebration.

You were probably there yourself, so the glimpses pictured above may have a familiar ring.

First, at left the modernization of a backwoodsy setting, as an entertainer speaks to a dangling microphone, while the guys and gals hover around and gape at the ten-gallon fedora.

Then, in the center, the congested dance floor itself, breeding ground of falling arches and trampled toes. The population is terrific ground of fallen arches and trampled toes. The population is terrific in its square-foot concentration.

And how about sitting one out? Well, after that dance floor, an opportunity to relax in comparative privacy should be welcome. It is. So here you are, caught in the act. Pretty informal, huh?

Beta Taus Schedule Sport Dance In East Bay, May 11

Open to members of the Associated Students, Beta Tau, restricted social fraternity, will present its semi-annual sport dance on Saturday, May 11, at the Montclair Women's Club, according to Barney Blanchard, president of the group.

Bids are selling at 99 cents per couple, with a limited sale of 400.

"Our society is one of the few college organizations which opens its dances to the public," Blanchard said. "We have engaged," he added, "Eddie Ticoulat and his 11-piece orchestra, which was a huge success recently at the Associated Men Students barn dance.

"There is room for only 400 couples at this women's club in Oakland," he continued, "and unless students buy their bids early, we will not be able to insure a successful dance."

Past dances sponsored by the fraternity have been held at the Century Club, and the East Bay location was chosen to provide new scenery for the students attending the affair.

Eighteen pairs of brothers are now attending the Missouri School of Mines.

Summer Camp Openings For Students — Browne

Opportunities for students to spend the vacation weeks gaining practical experience, was revealed by Dean Edwin C. Browne in his announcement today of requests from summer camps for college students to work as camp counselors.

While no salary will be paid, students will receive their board and room as well as valuable training. There are openings for both men and women, the dean said.

Even though no technical qualifications are required for the jobs, Dean Browne pointed out that applicants should be reasonably mature and interested in this type of work.

"It should prove very valuable experience for those anticipating teaching or social service work," he said.

NYA Time Sheets Due In O'Neill's Office May 3

NYA time slips for the month of May are due May 3, and can be turned in to Thomas O'Neill at the Powell Street office, announced Edward H. Redford, college NYA director.

As a result of NYA salary cuts, lists with allotted amounts for each NYA worker have been sent to all instructors who have NYA students working for them.

"Students will be paid only the allotted amount for May and June," Redford said, "and may complete their hours at any time during the next two months."

Lack of sufficient funds, according to Redford, makes it impossible for any overtime or makeup work to be paid for during these remaining months of the semester, though the department is hoping for extra funds.

Any difficulties concerning this matter can be straightened out, Redford advised, by consulting with him.

Bonfire Dance Site Sought For Sirkus; Events Are On

Bob Ogg, general chairman of the "Meet Your Campus" day scheduled for May 17, and Muriel Grenelle, chairman of the dance committee, last week investigated possible locations suitable for a dance to be held after the bonfire.

A college decathlon championship, including 10 track and field events, will be sponsored by the Men's Athletic Council, Mel Chicazola, council representative, revealed. A trophy will be presented by the Walter Levison Company, according to Chicazola.

Worthwhile awards will be given to the winning participants in the three football kicking and passing contests, Ogg said.

For the afternoon program, Thursa Scott and Bob Schlesinger are organizing a coeducational baseball game, with Miss Scott lining up the men and Schlesinger taking the women in hand.

Beta Phi fraternity, under the leadership of Stan Tobiason, has applied for a Coca-Cola concession; and Tri Epsilon, with Malcolm Jacobs in charge, has applied for a hot-dog stand.

Committees and chairmen for the Sirkus that have been appointed by Ogg and Hal Hoffman, general coordinator, are: luncheon, Ernie God-Jones; dance, Miss Grenelle; club activities, Gene Powell; alumni committee, Bob Fex; high soph, Art Pomares; financial, Daniel Rosenblat; publicity, Len Gross and Hoffman; recreation, Chicazola, representative of the MAC, and Thursa Scott, president of the Women's Athletic Association.

What's in a name? Paul Painter has won a water color art contest at the University of Cincinnati.

Nominations

Assembly Set For May 8 In Lecture Hall

Nomination of candidates for next semester's Associated Students offices will take place at a nominations rally, tentatively scheduled for Wednesday, May 8, at the Powell Lecture Hall, announced Al Williams, Associated Students president, this week.

The rally is scheduled to be held at 11 a.m. All students desiring to run for student body offices are warned to have their petitions signed by at least 75 students, and turned in to the election committee before the rally is held, Williams added.

Primaries To Be Held

For the first time in college history, a primary election will be held. Tentative election dates, as announced by Williams, are Wednesday, May 15, for the primaries, and the final elections May 22.

Leonard Gross, Guardsman editor, has been appointed chairman of the election committee. Rema Corbitt and Bill Hall were appointed to the board by Gross. Two or three other students will be appointed, Gross said.

Amendment To Be Voted On

The students will vote on proposed amendments to the constitution now being made up by the constitution committee in the near future, Williams said. One proposed amendment eliminates the office of secretary of the Associated Students. Prospective candidates are asked by Gross not to file petitions for that office.

Voting machines will be used in both elections. The machines have been satisfactory in the past, and have greatly speeded up the final election count, Gross said.

All students are advised to attend the nomination rally, announced Gross, in order to learn about the various candidates and be better suited to choose a good person for the office.

Business Department Film Illustrates Telephone Use

Five placements in full-time positions were made to business students of the college this week, announced F. Grant Marsh, chairman of the department.

These students, who have been doing cooperative work in insurance companies on a part-time basis, were given full-time work beginning on last Monday.

Marsh pointed out that San Francisco is the second largest insurance center in the United States, and approximately 15,000 people here earn their livelihood by means of insurance work. "The field in insurance is very large and offers a good opportunity for well-trained men and women," he said.

The business department is continuing to place students with sufficient training in full and part-time jobs, as soon as calls are received for them. "This is the largest number we have placed at one time this semester," Marsh said.

Two Student Body Cards Confiscated At AMS Dance

Two students had their student body cards confiscated at the AMS Barn Dance in Richmond a week ago Friday night, because of misuse of card privileges, announced Tony Manov, chairman of the judicial committee.

"Please emphasize the fact that the judicial committee is working diligently to prevent the lending of student body cards," Manov continued, "and for next term we have a plan that appears to be extremely feasible.

"Discarding the idea of putting the pictures on the cards because of the lack of facilities for handling the pictures, we hit upon a plan whereby each student will have personal data upon his card, much as is the case with drivers' licenses. When someone appears to purchase his card, the seller will put the buyer's height, weight, color of hair and eyes in the space provided. This, we hope, will provide ample check upon those who insist upon borrowing or lending student body cards," Manov stated.

Williams Will Speak On Citizenship Value

Representing the college on May 5 will be Allen Williams, Associated Students president, who will speak at a program to be held in Golden Gate Park in conjunction with American Citizenship Week, April 29 to May 5, President Archibald J. Cloud announced today.

Williams revealed that the title of his address will be, What My Citizenship Means to Me, and that he will represent the students who will reach the age of 21 this year.

Other speakers, whose names have not been revealed, will present the naturalization side of citizenship and its meaning to them.

Chairman of arrangements for the May 5 program, which will begin at 2 p.m., is George P. Saunders, who is also a vice chairman of the American Citizenship Week committee. General chairman of the committee is the Honorable Jesse C. Colman, city supervisor.

College Radio Class Will Present Pageant May 23

Depicting the history of California, the pageant, Span of Gold, will be presented May 23, in the Opera House in an afternoon and evening performance, by students from Mission, Washington, Galileo High Schools and the college, announced Marie Weller, radio broadcasting instructor in the college.

California's history has been divided into four main periods as a means of presentation. The periods being depicted are: the eras of Fremont, Wells-Fargo, Judah, and Strauss.

Members of the college radio broadcasting class of the college are presenting the era of Wells-Fargo, which envelopes primarily the origination of the Pony Express as a means of delivering the United States mail.

Denman Scholarship Money To Go To Worthy Student

Receiving $250 annually from the estate of James Denman, former principal and superintendent of San Francisco schools, the Board of Education is now making plans on the determination of what worthy junior college women shall receive the scholarship money, President Archibald J. Cloud announced recently.

"Denman originally gave scholarship medals to girls graduating from grammar schools," Cloud said, "but in order to avoid great rivalry and competition, this practice was discontinued."

Judge William Denman of the United States Circuit court, and son of James Denman, proposed the plan of using the funds, which had accumulated since the giving of medals was stopped, for scholarships to women students, graduates of San Francisco high schools, who attend San Francisco Junior College.

A committee has been appointed by the Board of Education of San Francisco, according to Cloud, composed of Deputy Superintendent John C. McGlade, Margaret Dougherty, Associated Women Students' adviser, and President Cloud.

"This group has sent requests to the Deans of Women of all the high schools in the city," he continued, "asking that they nominate for the scholarship money two women formerly of their school and now attending the junior college."

Cloud added that the committee would decide how the money was to be distributed and to whom.

"The scholarship money received from this source is but one of several scholarships that the college receives from time to time, and it makes us feel quite proud to have our students receive such recognition," Cloud concluded.

Broadcasting

Group Presents First Play Thursday Night

Freedom of the Press, a radio drama, will be presented by the college radio broadcasting class, over Station KSFO, May 2, at 9:15 p.m., announced Marie Weller, radio broadcasting instructor of the college.

The play is one of the many events planned by the Citizens Committee of San Francisco for Citizenship Week which is April 29 to May 5, inclusive.

Citizenship Week Declared

Governor Olson has declared this week to be Citizenship Week throughout the state, and the purpose is to acquaint communities with the democratic form of government.

Cast Listed

Students participating in the play are: Bentley Shoenfeld, Hal Hoffman, Marcus Merrymount, Len Gross, Bill Hall, Richard Naftaly, Bill Albertson, Tony Manov, Ray Berns, Blas Narro, Horace Simi, Bob Holmes, Alfred Rodriquez, Ken Pasqualetti, Tom Redmond, Audrey Frelleson, Doug Alexander, Bill Michaelson, Richard Ayre, Al Baker, Jessie McCrary, and Malcolm Kelly.

Each day in the week has been set aside for a certain aspect of the government of the United States. The week has been divided as follows: Monday, democratic government; Tuesday, Trial by Jury; Wednesday, Freedom of Speech and Assembly; Thursday, Universal Suffrage; Friday, Universal Education; Saturday, Freedom of the Press; and Sunday, Religious Liberty.

Sunday has also been set aside as a day of initiation for new citizens, that is those men and women who have just reached the age of 21, and also aliens which have been made United States citizens by naturalization.

Low Soph Dance To Be Held May 3 In Gold Room

Social highlight of the week is the low sophomore class dance to be held in the Gold Ballroom of the Palace Hotel this Friday evening, May 3, according to Muriel Grenelle, Associated Students vice-president.

"We are definitely going to have for this affair the music of Carvel Craig and his orchestra, one of the best-known musical organizations in the Bay region," Miss Grenelle declared.

Admission to the affair will be one student body card per couple, she said, warning students not to lend or borrow cards, as an identification committee will be stationed at the entrance to the Gold Ballroom.

"As this is the second semi-formal dance for this semester, we should like to request student cooperation in coming in suitable attire, as usual," Miss Grenelle said.

Material For Biggest Forum Magazine Selected

Last Tuesday evening, the editorial staff of the Forum Magazine convened, to select suitable material for publication, Thomas Parkinson, editor of the current issue, announced.

"Several poems, some short stories, several essays, and a play were finally agreed upon as possessing originality, and literary value, therefore rendering them worthy of publication," he said, "but a lot more hard work remains before the selection of entries are completed for the periodical."

The issue will contain 50 pages in all, thereby making it the most outstanding issue to date, as past copies of the magazine have never exceeded 35 pages in length.

"From 400 to 500 copies of the magazine will be published, pending the demand," Parkinson announced, stating further that "Students should be able to find many subjects which will interest them in the publication, no matter how varied their interests might be."

Tour Of Chinatown

Sponsored By Student Group To Be Held Tonight At 6

Dining in Chinatown and trekking through its streets—these are the highlights planned by the Chinese Students' Club for the tour which it sponsors tonight.

For those who have purchased a ticket for both the dinner and tour, the "Evening in Chinatown" will begin at 6 p.m. with service at the Far East Cafe, Grant Avenue between California and Sacramento Streets, while those who wish to go on the tour only will meet at 7 p.m. at the Chinese YMCA, Sacra-mento near Grant, according to George Ong, club president. Streetcars stoping at a point within easy walking distance of these places are F, 15 or 16 cars, and California or Clay Street cables.

College students Hing Dare, Frederick Hong, Jack Lee, and John Leong, all with previous guide experience, will take the guests of the Chinese club to such spots as the Family Association, a Chinese theater, Tai Chong, a Chinese temple, the Chinese Six Companies, and the Chinese Telephone Exchange, Ong said.

Edwards Sandys, adviser for this group, announced himself to be highly in favor of this newest activity of the club, calling to mind that upon an occasion two years ago when its members had conducted several of the faculty through Chinatown, much pleasurable comments had been aroused. "An ordinary tour through the same places, without the dinner, would cost the visitor $1.50," he added.

Tickets now still on sale are 52 cents for the tour and dinner and 15 cents for the tour alone. Says Ong, "The battle with chopsticks will be on tonight."

Rivera Fresco To Library; Future Americas Theme

Theme of the Diego Rivera fresco for the proposed library at the Balboa campus is to be The Future Civilization of the Americas, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, announced recently.

According to present plans, Rivera will create the fresco at the Exposition Fine Arts Building in a modern artist's workshop, one of the features of this year's Exposition, Mohr said.

Rivera's plan is to incorporate in his fresco a blending of the commerce and industrialism of the North with the customs and culture of the South. He plans to make use of both detail and generality in accomplishing this end, Mohr revealed.

To be presented to the college by the Exposition officials, the fresco will occupy the southern wall of the library, he added.

"We are indeed pleased and honored to have the work of Rivera on the walls of our campus, since he is undoubtedly one of the greatest artists of our time," Mohr concluded.

Tuberculin Skin Test Available To College

In response to inquiries arising from the showing of hygiene films recently, Terry Dearborn, college health coordinator, revealed that the tuberculin skin test is available to interested college students without charge through the Department of Public Health, 101 Grove Street, on Saturday mornings from 9 to 10 o'clock.

The tuberculin test is a simple skin test for detecting those who may need special protection against tuberculosis. Those students who may have such symptoms as a constant tired feeling, loss of weight, loss of appetite, afternoon temperature, persistent coughing or spitting of blood, should be particularly interested in taking advantage of this opportunity, Dearborn said.

"However," he continued, "these symptoms do not necessarily indicate tuberculosis."

Dearborn also advised that students who wish to receive the tuberculin test obtain the required parent consent blanks.

Further information can be obtained, according to Dearborn, from either Dr. Alice M. Potter in the women's gymnasium, or Dr. R. Duffrey Friedlander, or Miss Sohl in Room 201, Galileo.

Sirkus Plans Grow; New Features Added

By PATRICIA CANTWELL

The Pied-Piper of Balboa, or Davy Jones, the Powell Street Seaman, will festoon a pathway from Galileo to the new campus with trucks, jalopies, and masses of "Meet Your Campus Day" enthusiasts on May 17, Bob Ogg and Hal Hoffman, publicizers and managers of the affair, announced late last week.

Truck, Car Parade Planned

Abandoning the original idea of instituting an automobile cavalcade from Powell Street to Balboa Park, Ogg and Hoffman revealed that Mariner Jones will act in the capacity of Grand Marshall of the reorganized parade. For those students who are unable to secure transportation in automobiles to the "big doin's" at Balboa Park, Jones and his committee will provide trucks to accommodate the crowds.

The trucks will assemble at Powell Street at 10 o'clock, there to load passengers and continue to the Galileo starting point, from where, under direction and protection of the blaring sirens of John Law and Company, the caravan will proceed to the new campus.

"Box lunches, in addition to beans and coffee, will be provided," Ogg disclosed, "as part of the 'Meet Your Campus' program.

"From 1 to 5 o'clock, a football kicking and throwing contest and a 'hole-in-one' putting tilt have been planned as athletic highlights of the afternoon," Ogg continued.

Bombers To Perform

Tentatively scheduled to appear as outside entertainment on this great day, according to Hoffman, is a flight of six of the Navy's newest pursuit bombers which will demonstrate actual "dive-bombing."

A rail-splitting contest, in the Abe Lincoln style, has been proposed by the Forestry Club, according to Ogg. Hoffman revealed that an intrepid adventurer, who prefers to remain anonymous, will assertedly accomplish a parachute jump from a high-flyin' plane.

"Keep Distance From Building"

One fact stressed by Ogg was a warning to students to keep at least 50 feet from all buildings. This measure was inaugurated to prevent any damages to work under construction.

All during the afternoon there will be open booths, sponsored by the various clubs and organized to exhibit various club activities and play games, Hoffman revealed.

As for clothing, the committees urge students to wear rugged outing

Boat Cruise To Paradise Cove Set For Tomorrow

By THEODORA WONG

With all plans for the high soph excursion to Paradise Cove completed, it will be but a matter of hours before local collegians will be on board a Crowley launch at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning bound for a day of cruising, dancing, swimming and general picnicking, Art Pomares, class president, announced.

Ticket sales (75 cents per person not including lunch) are going so well that a large crowd is anticipated, Pomares said.

Launch To Cruise Bay

The launch will leave Pier 14 and cruise the south part of San Francisco Bay, past the new naval base near Alameda, circle Treasure Island, approach Alcatraz, the Golden Gate Bridge, and proceed to Marin County, Tiburon, and then Paradise Cove.

The program for the afternoon, as released by Wilton Latz, chairman of the cruise, is as follows:

11:30 a.m., lunch upon arrival; 12 m. to 1 p.m., games; 1 to 2 p.m., swimming; 3 to 5 p.m., dancing to the music of Eddie Ticoulat and his orchestra; 5 to 6 p.m., homeward cruise.

Sophs Plan Week

Further reports from Pomares said plans for sophomore week are nearly complete. Because Sirkus day at Balboa Park already has a full schedule, the high soph rally will take place on May 16 instead of 17 as previously announced, Pomares said.

The traditional formal which will climax sophomore week will be held May 24, the place and orchestra to be announced later, Pomares also revealed. Expected to give a more definite report were the committees working for this event:

Dance Committee: Adele Kuhn (chairman), Elmer Hubacher, Marge Meader, Muriel Nolan, Henry Suerstedt.

Bids Committee: Wilton Latz (chairman), Virginia Pearson, Alden Thorogood, Shirley White.

Pomares asked that all sororities and fraternities intending to sponsor a candidate for Sophomore Sweetheart submit names of their candidates to him.

Beta Tau Dance Scheduled For Saturday Night

Scheduled for this Saturday night is the semi-annual Beta Tau sport dance at the Montclair Women's Club, Barney Blanchard, president of the organization, announced recently.

"This event is open to all college students who may purchase their bids from any Beta Tau member for 99 cents per couple," he said.

Eddie Ticoulat, college student, and his orchestra will provide music for the affair, Blanchard added.

Johnny Apollo Danced With The Devil And Burned His Fingers

"HE WHO dances with the devil is sure to get hurt." Dancing with the Devil was the title of Johnny Apollo before the studio saw fit to change it. And a more appropriate name for a film was never coined, for everybody in Johnny Apollo trips the light fantastic with Satan. Then, why did they have to change it?

In this, his latest film, Tyrone Power plays the title role, a Harvardite whose Wall Street tycoon father is sent to Sing Sing for embezzlement.

In trying to arrange for a parole, Johnny falls in with a gang of crooks, the leader of which is Mickey Dwyer (Lloyd Nolan). Mickey, being anything but a dumb-bell, recognizes in this scion of the rich the latent talent that made him (Mickey) the most feared crook in the state. Between the two of them they manage to reap a pretty profit before they, too, adjourn "up the river for a rest cure." There, the immovable object, in this case the father, meets the irresistible force, the son, and it takes a beautiful girl to pull the irons out of the fire.

Dorothy Lamour is the beautiful girl, "Lucky" Doharty. The fact that she pulls her skirt above her knees a few times might possibly be mistaken for acting, but this is extremely doubtful. No, Miss Lamour is no actress, but she certainly knows how to put over a song. Her rendition of "Dancing for Nickels and Dimes" is done in her usual sultry manner, and is her best contribution to the film.

Tyrone Power has never been cast to better advantage. This part fits him like the proverbial glove. Casting aside his forte of society scatterbrain, he manages to turn in a convincing performance. Although he is especially good in the first scene; where he learns that his father is a crook, he still can't compete with his father (Edward Arnold) when it comes to acting honors.

Arnold steals the film. He walks away with it look, stock, and barrel. Having been typed as a "robber baron," Arnold nevertheless manages to make each of his portrayals distinct and separate.

The only other person who comes close to Arnold in the histrionic field is Lloyd Nolan. His Mickey Dwyer is smooth, suave, and slimy.

Johnny Apollo is sure-fire entertainment that packs a punch in every reel. It is a film that should appeal to all types of movie-goers, because it is an above-the-average drama. Different from the usual run of prison films, it has an ending that at least cannot be guessed, until it arrives. Even the sacrifice motif is subdued, so that it does not become maudlin.

The photography, too, is good, and both the screen play and dialog contribute toward making this a picture that is tense, dramatic, and full of suspense. Perhaps the fine hand of Director Henry Hathaway is partly responsible for the succinct quality of the film. His competent handling of the reins has made a terse document out of a picture that could easily have been spoiled. Not the least of his contributions to the movie was his skilled handling of the last sequences, all of which build to the unexpected climax, and which help make Johnny Apollo a film of distinctive merit.

Truly Johnny Apollo is a film that will rank among the year's best dramas because of the true portrayals and lively action that convincingly shows that all who play with fire will get burned!

Flag Flying Order

Of Sound and Fury

Stupid, Dangerous; No Test Of Patriot

IF THE recent proclamation asking all San Franciscans to display American flags outside their homes is to be judged a criterion of current public sentiment, then there are influences at work which are shoving us along an extremely dangerous path.

Certainly there can be no objection to the act of displaying the flag itself, and for the patriotic citizen who displays it of his own volition we can to those who understand and respect the American flag, it is insulting to have such a short-sighted and outrageous decree issued—especially in times like this, when every effort of rational people is being devoted to the cause of American non-involvement in the World War.

The uninformed, the emotional, the drum-beaters will laud the proclamation to the skies. The scoops of tyranny will do their damndest to make life unbearable for the few people who are too intelligent to fall for this nonsensical hokum, and too courageous to scuttle their convictions out of expediency.

In short, those who support this program of false patriotism are either appallingly ignorant of the thing they are about to unleash, or they are inhumanly confident of their ability to confine the whirlwind once it breaks.

The proponents of the proclamation seek to justify it on the grounds that display of the flag is a sure-fire sign of patriotism.

Earl Browder addressed Communist rallies from a rostrum loaded down with Stars and Stripes. Fritz Kuhn harangued his Nazis in the mixed company of American flags and swastikas.

Display of the flag is a sign of nothing. Patriotism is, to Americans, linked with self-respect, and is the possession of the man who has the conviction of his intelligence and the courage of his convictions.

"Hello, H. B. K—! ! . . . which is a nutty way to start a column, but Oscar is nutty anyway, Oscar didn't say that. Gloria Jean did. Gloria Jean Miller, of course.

Oscar doesn't know what HBK is, but "it" has a sense of humor and dances. So has Gloria J. This is where O. came in.

In the month of December, in 1920, Gloria J. was born. This soft spoken lass went to Redding and Galileo, is now a sophomore here, and the president of the AWS, formerly secretary of same.

Active in extra-curricular activities, Gloria J. is a rabid sports fan, taking up tennis, archery, swimming and enjoys the sport pages of all newspapers, including The Guardsman. If one would call dancing a sport, she is an expert at that, too.

She leaves the best part for last consumption, whether it be food or otherwise, eats the frosting first in cakes, and has a terrific sweet tooth, and likes everything sweet.

For blondes she does not care much, and emphatically says—the wisp of hair by her right temple is not gray—'tis platinum, by gum! She'll defend it too—and don't think she can't, for once G. J. broke her father's jaw . . . with a box of dice. Ask her to tell you about it sometime. By the way, her father was in the Marines once.

Gloria is extremely popular 'round the campus, because she has a mah-y'lous sense of humor, and likes anyone else with one. Sophisticated people she doesn't care for.

Most important in her purse she considers to be her compact; the most important in her compact, her lipstick . . . and this is where Oscar came in.

GJ is a lover of the great outdoors, and enjoys picnics. Russian River is her favorite camping ground, and she likes to soak in vitamin D.

In concluding this interview, she again whispered "HBK".

Oscar says "Who's HBK? Any relation to Yehudi?"

College Choir To Sing In Stockton Festival May 7

Participating in the annual Northern California Junior College Music Festival to be held in Stockton on May 7, will be the college A Capella Choir, according to Flossita Badger, college music instructor.

This year the annual event is to be held at College of Pacific. This college and San Jose State College usually are hosts for the festival, with each college holding the event every other year. Last spring, however, proved an exception, for the festival was held on Treasure Island in honor of the Fair, Miss Badger said.

Seven colleges in the northern California area will be represented. They are: Marin, Modesto, Salinas, San Mateo, Santa Rosa, Yuba, and San Francisco.

During the afternoon, each choir will sing selected numbers. In the evening, dinner will be served, and later the College of Pacific orchestra and chorus will present a concert. They will perform Rio Grande, by Lambert.

Since the college is only five years old, it will be the fifth time of participation for the choir.

"The trip is eagerly looked forward to," Miss Badger said, "for participation here in the past has always proved a great success. The hospitality shown by the College of Pacific and its beautiful setting has always proved an excellent combination."

"The choir this semester," she continued, "is one of the finest in the history of the college. I am particularly pleased with the fine inclination and quality, as well as pitch."

Tentative plans are for the choir to present three selections.

Dances Too Raucous; Goldstone Called Every Color Of The Rainbow

EDITOR'S NOTE: Students desiring to have their letters inserted in the Ram's Horn should deposit them in The Guardsman box at the Powell Street Building or turn them in to room W1 at Galileo. Deadline for the Friday paper is Monday at 2:30.

Because of the extraordinary interest shown in the Ram's Horn this semester, The Guardsman has found it advisable to request that all contributors limit their letters to 250 words. Letters are not edited in any way by the staff except when they exceed the maximum length.

● ORIGIN
Editor, The Guardsman:

Amen the current discussion of the column appearing this semester in the Tuesday issue of the Guardsman, entitled "Of Sound and Fury."

To those to whom the emotional aspects contained therein (which sometimes appear to be combined with a thrust of dogmatism) cause concern, I have found a note of balm.

Let them read the immortal bard's rendition found in Macbeth, Act V, Scene V, for source of the title of the column.

May I humbly quote from that scene;

". . . It is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing."

Most sincerely yours—for added impetus to the fine job that you are doing with the Guardsman in the Friday issues.

● MASTER OF VITUPERATION
Editor, the Guardsman:

In dealing with that master of vituperation and invective (Goldstone —Who else?) it is indeed a temptation to bring oneself to his level. Perhaps by employing his own smooth brand of name calling and his slick and easy censure of differing opinions we might conceivably approach him in his unique and convenient distortion of facts. But back-biting is not my particular forte, so I leave an open field to Goldstone and will contend myself with some plain; simple, colorless refutation.

Not the least of Goldstone's qualities is his outspoken frankness. It is unfortunate, however, that whenever he calls a spade a spade it usually turns out to be a shovel.

It becomes a bit tiresome to constantly reiterate the same old tune to those who instist on distorting it, but it is an old tune and it has not changed. If we refer back to Goldstone's brilliant treatise on the Student Peace Movement we can verify this point.

The policy of the Student Peace Movement has always been and will ever be one in absolute opposal to fascist and imperialism in any form, with their inevitable and unceasing wars for economic supremacy.

Those three slogans of the Peace Movement do not represent "sudden and capricious shifts in policy." We must still "Save Democracy" and in order to do it we must "Quarantine the Fascist Aggressor." But this time "The Yanks Are Not Coming" in a war in which the basic issue is not democracy, but involves only the struggle of selfish imperialistic powers which are desolating an innocent land.

The Student Peace Movement has been and is in favor of economic aid in a true defense of liberty as typified by those in Spain and China.

Goldstone's bumptious branding as communistic of practically all with which he disagrees is as unfounded and hysterical as the ramblings of Rep. Dies. The only difference between the two is that Goldstone utilises the more artistic approach with a certain subtlety of technique.

The National Student Peace Movement in general and specifically the S.F.J.C. Peace Society are not under the domination of the American Student Union or any other group. Each point in our policy has been discussed and democratically voted upon by the members themselves.

I defy Goldstone or anyone else to prove fairly and honestly that the Student Peace Movement is carrying out directly or indirectly "the propaganda and agitation of now publicly wedded Communism and Nazism—" or is a "preposterous fake" as he so glibly claims.

The "Sound" of truth is overwhelmed by the magnitude and distortion of his "Fury".

● HAIL, BRITANNIA!
Editor, The Guardsman:

Lately there has been much anti-British talk in the college with no foundation for this claim. There have been such statements as "Why don't the British do this, why don't they do that?" and many other foolish statements with no basis for a claim. When people say they are anti-British, they imply that they are pro-Nazi, and believe that a government founded upon oppression, aggression, cruelty, racial prejudice and anti-God, is the best type of government. The Nazis are anti-God because they believe that Nazism is their God and must be worshipped!

In this present war the British and French allies are trying to rid the world and civilization of this great menace which is a threat to every law of decency in the world. A victorious Germany is a direct threat to our freedom!

And then people have the gall to say they are anti-British! The only answer to their opinions is that they too have succumbed to Hitler's anti-God, vicious propaganda!

Wake up students and see the light!

● SEMI-FORMAL RAT RACE
Editor, The Guardsman:

Once again I wish to blot the pages of your worthy rag with a protest which will probably go unheeded by the powers that be. I want to express my opinion so that you will know that you have a reader who appreciates the higher things in life.

Now, I like dancing . . . collegiate dancing. I would like to go to the semi-formal of May 3, much as I dislike the thought of pushing around some babe dressed in a formal. But if Carvel Craig plays, I don't know whether it's worth my time to attend.

My colleagues and I have attended several dances at which Carvel Craig has led his cats through such numbers as "Hawaiian War Chant," "Chinatown," and "Dinah" all in one individual dance. Add up this example for the entire evening and what do you get for an answer? Do you get a smooth, collegiate, semi-formal dance? No. You've got a rat race. I can see the result of using such an organization. A bloody mess. Torn evening gowns. Bleeding elbows. Bruised posteriors. Need I say more?

No. No. No. It won't do. Miss Grenelle and her precious committee had better think twice about whom they acquire for this affair.

Yours for better dances and less litterbugging.

Old Clothes Joe.

● REDS UNDER HIS BED
Editor, the Guardsman:

At last! the reason for Editor Goldstone's red phobia. He was frightened by a big bad communist when he was a baby and has been seeing pink elephants ever since.

Or has his intellectual discernment been ruined by a steady diet of Hearst editorials on the red "peril." In fact I have to pinch myself to find whether I'm reading The Examiner or The Guardsman.

Come, come, Mr. Goldstone, quit looking for red hobgoblins and come down to earth. This country is lousy enough with red-baiters already.

I, for one, resent the slurs cast upon the Peace movement and the American Student Union.

Granted that some of the youthful peace zealots are too frequently guilty of poor taste—nevertheless; Mr. Goldstone, would you liquidate the entire peace movement because you happen to disagree with some of its problems?

"The Yanks Are Not Coming" is a swell slogan and it would be a good idea for you to write an editorial around that theme instead of looking for reds under his bed.

Let us at least offer an adequate substitute before we disparage them wholesale.

Let us thank God they shout for peace and not for war.

DE VILLIERS

● IT'S GETTING MONOTONOUS
Editor, The Guardsman:

I see that the proverbial red herring is being thrown out as bait again. Mr. Goldstone's last article, in which he attacked the American Student Union and other organizations engaged in voicing their desire to keep out of the European massacre, fairly smelled of herring. Mr. Goldstone is seeing red!

When over one million students on 500 campuses in the United States strongly voiced their desire for peace on April 19, it wasn't a Communistically inspired action. They were symbolic and they represented only a section of the American people who want it known that the Yanks aren't coming again to fight on the pretext of democracy.

And if Mr. Goldstone wishes to credit the Communists with inspiring and directing this powerful movement for peace, then I say: more power to the Communists!

As for his reference to the program of the American Student Union. A year or more ago they called for a quarantine of the aggressor (so did President Roosevelt) to stop fascism when it was trying to strangle the legally elected government of Spain, and when China was, and still is, fighting for her independance. And now the same organization calls for a program to keep us out of the war which broke out, as a direct result of the successes of Hitler and Mussolini in Spain, Austria, etc. Mr. Goldstone overlooks the fact the fascism wasn't stopped, and not due to any weakness in the program of collective security, but due to the policy of the British Empire of feeding fascism. It has been since shown clearly that Britain and France aren't out to protect the integrity and independance of smaller nations. Neither are they fighting for the maintainance of democracy, as is demonstrated by the trampling of democratic rights within the two countries. And when the present war broke, it was obvious the Allies weren't fighting "our fight" to make the world safe for democracy.

Mr. Goldstone's article is a rank piece of raving and name calling. And we know what intelligent people think of people who use methods of defaming, rather than arguments.

Trends Of Employment Shown In Occupational Survey; Proposed Expenditure Will Allow For Better Courses

Action will be taken today by the Board of Education members, regarding recommendations for an occupational survey, which were made by Superintendent of Schools Joseph P. Nourse, President Archibald J. Cloud revealed.

According to President Cloud, the recommendations made provide for the organization of a survey committee to discover all possible facts and figures in community and industrial life that will show what the trends in employment are, and what the prospects for young people are who wish to engage in these occupations.

"The idea is to set up better courses of training by finding out what the opportunities are, and how they relate to students of Samuel Gompers Trade School, adult classes, San Francisco Continuation School, senior high school, and the college," Cloud explained.

An expenditure of $16,000 was proposed, which will begin, if adopted, June 1, 1940 and continue for the period of one year, President Cloud said.

First introduced at a board meeting held last Tuesday, the recommendations for the survey were not passed upon, but set aside for a week, pending the establishment of the legality of the proposed expenditure.

General Sectional WAA Playday Scheduled May 11 At Santa Rosa; Tourney Week Sets Parental Theme

Highlighting the regular calendar of the Womens Athletic Association is the coming General Sectional Playday to be held at Santa Rosa on May 11, Alma Koopman, vice-president of the association, announced this week.

Full Day Planned

Badminton, archery, tennis, baseball, and volleyball will be played in the morning, and ice-skating will be enjoyed by all participants in the afternoon, Miss Koopman revealed.

The college will send 35 women representatives, and those interested are urged by Jeanne Arnold, who is in charge of signups, to see her. Price for lunch is 30 cents.

Each representative is to participate in one team sport and one Individual sport.

Tourney Week Theme

Theme for the Tourney Week banquet has finally been decided upon and is to be carried out as a Father-Daughter affair, according to Miss Koopman.

The Galileo cafeteria is the only place available to hold the dinner. Tickets went on sale yesterday and may be purchased from team managers or from the bank at Galileo.

"The banquet is open to all women of the college and all of us in charge urge the women to attend," said Thurza Scott, president of WAA, who added, "since the affair is Father-Daughter, please bring your father, or if he is unable to attend, 'adopt' a faculty member."

Locals Drop Tee Matches To Strong Bucaneer Squad

After losing two straight matches to Modesto Saturday, Coach Louis G. Conlan's golf team will take a two week rest before journeying to Modesto to compete in the Conference championships on May 17.

The divoteers were nosed out 11½ to 9½ by a superior Bucaneer squad last Saturday. Barney Rice, leading Ram golfer, carded a 76 for low score honors, but one man was not enough to win the match.

Conlan remarked that his players had become over-trained, and he feels that a rest will give the divot diggers a chance to get back into winning form.

Bucaneer Tennis

Racquet Men Mop Modesto Off Cage Map By 5-2 Tally

Smashing through the Modesto defenses to a 5-2 victory last Saturday, the Ram tennis squad holds slim chances to finish in the upper brackets of the conference title race, Coach Tom Wilson commented yesterday.

Top Men Victorious

Without the aid of Nos. 2 and 3 men, Chet Mead and Ray Berns, the college team was conceded a close loss in the Modesto matches. However, Bill Madamba, playing number one; Jack Hare and Tony Calagos, competing as number two and three, respectively, turned on the power against the Bucaneers.

Madamba trounced Ashton, 6-4, 6-3; Hare vanquished his opponent, 6-1, 6-4; and Tony Calagos was forced to three sets to defeat Maroney, 6-1, 5-7, 6-0.

Take Two, Lose Two

A score of 6-4, 6-8, 7-5 proved a win for Maurice Waxman, and Howard Pennypacker lost his match 6-3, 6-4, 6-4.

Madamba and Hare defeated the top Modesto doubles pair, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2. Calagos and Waxman were defeated, 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

Placer and San Mateo remain on the Ram schedule, according to Wilson, the former this Saturday, and the Bulldogs, the following week-end.

Conference Baseball

College Errors Lose Modesto Diamond Tilts

Championship hopes of the Ram baseball nine were dimmed last Saturday when Modesto dumped the locals twice, 12 to 6, and 2 to 1.

Poor umpiring, a sloppy field, and many Ram errors contributed to the downfall of the college diamond team. Several bad plays were made by the Ram infield during the first game, and two definite miscalls by the umpires started the Modesto team on their way to victory.

Rams Use Four Hurlers

Harry Aleo, starting Ram pitcher, was batted out of the box in the second inning when Modesto scored six runs. Martin Zernicke followed, and lasted for two innings. Robert Nishi then took over. Nishi was batted out in the sixth inning, and Al Giovanetti, regular first baseman, did the mound chores for the rest of the game.

Bob Hvidt, colorful Ram pitcher, started the second game. Hvidt pitched a wonderful contest, probably the best one he has pitched this season; yet lost in an overtime game 2 to 1. Had Hvidt received any hitting support from his teammates, and an even break from the umpires, he would have added another victory to his string, and would have helped to keep the locals up near the top of the league.

Hvidt Injured By Drive

The winning Modesto run was scored in the last of the ninth inning after two were out. Hvidt tried to stop a screaming line drive, and was struck in the wrist of his pitching hand by the ball. Losing all control of his pitching hand, Hvidt fed the Modesto leadoff man a good ball. The pitch was hit to Frank Mullins, shortstop, but it took a bad hop, and got away from him, allowing the winning run to score.

The next team to be met by the Rams is San Mateo, on next Saturday. According to Coach Jack Gaddy the locals still have a mathematical chance to win, if they take all of the remaining six ball games.

State, San Mateo Slaughter Rams; Bulldogs Loaf To Lop-Sided Victory

Although Walt Potter, pictured broad-jumping in the Ram-State track meet last Wednesday, was unable to garner a win for the college, his team-mates strove valiantly to turn the tide of victory against the Gators. Final tally was Rams 31; State 90.

Harried to defeat by Gators last Wednesday, 90-31, and Bulldogged off the San Mateo oval Saturday, 88⅔-33⅓, a war-weary Ram of the college cinder-path stumbled into the realm of the conquered last week.

Gators Monopolize Firsts

State elected to grab 12 first places out of 14 events Wednesday, leaving the bare pickings for the humbled college sprinters.

The Bulldog score might have been reasonably higher with the services of Purchase and Hylton, ace San Mateo quarter-miler and sprinter, respectively. San Mateans Olson and Joost, distance runners, and MacLean, hurdler, starred for the Peninsulans. Louis Vasquez, Bert Korn, Eddy Perry, Hagen, Bob Raine, and Bob Lowery were the mainstays of the Ram squad.

Vasquez Wins Mile

Vasquez won the mile run in 4 minutes 46.6 seconds. McDade (SM) and Lowrie (SM) finished second and third.

Although Bulldog MacLean stole first honors in both the low and high timbers, college hurdlers Bob Raine and Jorgensen followed second and third, respectively, in the highs, and Jessup plunged a third in the lows.

Jack McKeekin surpassed himself to hang on conference star Olson's flying footsteps to garner a place position in the 440. Hinze (SM) and White (SF) tied for third. Time was a close 51.5 seconds.

San Mateans Slow In 880

Bob Lowery of the college failed in the 880 yard run, and hit the tape in third place far behind Joost and Olson, whose best time was 2:01.6, a come-down for track-men who have run the half-mile in 1:56 and a fraction.

Sheean (SM) and Mussler, college, tied for first in the high jump at 5 feet 11 inches. Jim Wagstaff took a second in the discus, and Eddy Perry tied with Lyle Taggart (SM) in the pole vault, at 11 feet.

The first college daily to be published was the Daily Illini of the University of Illinois, Champaign, Illinois, the first edition appearing in 1907.

Style Fads

The Nation's Coeds Make Them; The College Has None

It's a well-known fact that American women have turned out some weird concoctions under the heading "dress." The majority of these sooner or later become our fashion fads, with college campi all over the country proving breeding grounds for the cute, the fantastic, and the extraordinary. Of course, most of the affected fantasies die a quick death, but while they last, they are the center of attraction.

As far as fashion fads are concerned, San Francisco junior collegiennes have an individualistic style of their own—THEY HAVEN'T any fads!

So take a look at some of the fashion eccentricities that other colleges take in their stride, then think up something good for San Francisco. It needn't be ridiculous, NOR need it be common.

"Necessity is the mother of invention" someone said once, and if that doesn't hold true for the local scattered campi, then we've been under a dreadful misapprehension.

From Harper's College Bazaar we've taken a few items designed to lead the Ramettes into fields of stimulating individuality and originality. It's all in the mind!

". . . Musical pocketbooks that play 'Vienna, Vienna' and 'Ferdinand' every time you reach for your lipstick."

". . . Everyone's mad about things Scottish, kilts, tweeds, or thistle pins. One girl made a name for herself by getting a pair of white plaid topped socks from a Scotch laddie. She wore them all winter."

". . . The biggest success on the campus has been the rubber boot, that a girl wore during a rainstorm one day. She certainly had something when she thought of that because there's no place as wet as a college campus."

Those are only a few of the things that college women have brought into being. Why not try "fadding." It's lots of fun and often the most impracticable-looking invention turns out to be of real value. Come on, let's see what the San Francisco Ramettes can do!

. . . Setting the Season's Styles

Spring blew into San Francisco a week or so ago with a burst of errant California sunshine under one arm and the Infant Guardsman fashion show under the other.

From Powell Street to Girls High, and from Girls High to Galileo, have come some of the loveliest of the college women to model and to marvel.

They've donned clothes that cover every phase of college life from the Stanyan Street stables to the "Top O' The Mark." They've posed in store windows and on escalators for the staff photographer, and today they will parade before the student association at large. How they've loved it! But then, what woman wouldn't?

So . . . compiled by the representative of Lambda Chi, Phi Beta Rho, Women's Service Society and the Home Economics Association, comes this list of THE spring clothes for San Francisco Junior Collegiennes.

Got a date?

. . . THE SOPH FORMAL—the big event of the season, bright lights, handsome campus males, and the city in its night life—calls for a smooth number in canary yellow marquisette, with a fitted bodice supported by two tiny black shoulder straps. Add short black bows marching down the front of the bodice and a full skirt with black lace inserts.

. . . OR, MAYBE you're the demure type, the kind of girl who has the male of the college species carrying your books for you. Then you'll enter the ballroom in a pale blue shirred bodice, puffed sleeve affair, with a fitted diaphragm from which billows a full net skirt with appliqued satin circles of the same color. Can't you see HER? — shimmering blonde hair, shining eyes, and laughing lips? Oh, my!

. . . "AND THE AWS Tea Dansant should be a thrilling success!" Why? Because she's tall and dark and will wear in Life-red one of the season's smartest date dresses. Elbow length sleeves, gathered at the bottom to set off a plain bodice, with a front filled Schaiparelli bow pocket skirt.

. . . OR ELSE, the easy informality and gay setting of the dansant will blend graciously with a "date dress" styled in a V neck, a draped waistline and a full skirt. Available in many colors. This one dusty pink.

. . . FOR DINNER at the Drake or a later after theater-dinner party, there's a black coat with the very feminine lingerie touch in a white collar and cuffs. It's buttoned down the front, with a circular skirt and a gored back. Nice for San Francisco's cool evenings.

. . . ALSO IDEAL for shopping is the soft tailored two-piece suit in Tripleigh twill with braid trim, pockets and a gored skirt. To wear with it, choose, for instance (happily), the Vogue Blouse of the Month, georgette sheer with lace trim and a lace insert in front, topped with tiny buttons.

. . . AS THE BOAT slides into Paradise Cove to drop off the High Soph picnickers, why don't you be there in a tailored slack suit of saddle-stitched hop-sacking. The coat is worn outside the trousers, the suit comes in pastels or navy . . . or better still, the sun's t'arin' to tan (or do you burn?) so there's a tricky three-piece shorts set that more than suits the occasion. A blouse skirt and shorts in natural and pale blue denim.

. . . THESE SHOULD see you through your dates. Now, to turn to more "serious" matters. Discover what to wear at college in column five.

For Evening Wear

Jean Arnold doing full justice to a canary yellow marguisette formal with inserts of black lace. Shoulder straps of black velvet ribbon.

Going to college?

. . . "BUT THEY gazed in wonder when she entered the classroom!" No, she didn't have gaposis, nor did she have her homework. What she did have was a streamlined version of the old college standby, the jacket suit. Matching jacket and skirt to be had in soft pink and grey plaid. To complement the suit, a ribbed knit sweater (or of many varieties) with a button front and short sleeves.

. . . THE DAY is dark and dreary (not April, surely!), but a spot at the blackboard brightens the room, for as our bonnie young lady-mathematician delves deeply into the dark secrets of —X's and +Y's, her bright orange, navy, and brown plaid suit go along to light the way. The short jacket, tailored exquisitely, may be worn with a contrasting skirt in navy or brown. The same is true of the former suit, with contrasting skirts in pink or grey. Smooth? They've even tamed the instructor's head! Or is the problem wrong?

. . . OF COURSE the girls must have hats (don't laugh, boys) to go with their new spring clothes. One of the newest hats ideal for wear with suits and date dresses, is an off-the-face pirate hat of quilted taffeta. Your little girl hat of straw, with the wide brim and the streamers down the back, has grown up. It is now made in toast-colored straw and seems quite sophisticated with summer dresses and sheers.

. . . FOR THOSE bright, sunny days when hours between classes will be spent at Union Square or down at Aquatic Park, there are the Jeanne D'Arc cottons. One, a circular striped print in pink with a large white belt, is quite catchy. Another in printed spun rayon comes in red, blue, white or green. Then there are the ever-popular Sea Mist creations, one a tailored design with a white pocket motif. The other of the two modeled was quite the daintiest piece of imagination we've seen. In pastel colors, it was embroidered with small flowers and had as a crowning touch, impudent matching buttons. Grand for the unexpected hot days San Francisco has.

. . . NO NEWS (but no news is good news) is the fact that there are only 28 days left before Finals. Why not cram (don't go poker-faced, we know you cram) in what we consider an appropriate end to a day's hard work—a "butcher boy" pajama outfit, consisting of the two-piece pj's, the coat worn out, in printed gingham, and a matching robe of quilted gingham. Most conducive for staying up late at night to study. They're the last word!

Style Parade Will Feature Men's And Coed's Clothes

Onto the stage of Galileo Auditorium at 2:30 p.m. this afternoon will step a bevy of beautiful coeds to bring before the eyes of the college all the latest styles in feminine finery.

Nor will the women be the only ones, for representatives of the Associated Men Students will also be on hand to demonstrate what the well dressed campus man will wear.

The occasion for all of this is The Guardsman sponsored City of Paris fashion show, prevues of which are shown on this and the following page.

For The Afternoon

Dolores Dixon featuring a black crepe afternoon dress with set-in panel of turquoise blue, front fullness in skirt and draped waistline.

Pictured on this page and on page three are college women in a variety of feminine clothing typifying the models that will be shown this afternoon. Pictures on page three are of sports wear, while those on this page represent campus, afternoon and evening wear.

Models have been chosen from each of the major women's organizations on the campus and from the Associated Men Students in order to make this afternoon an all-college show for all the college. Classes have been dismissed for the event, which will be open to all students of the college and their friends.

Because the college has from time to time been neglected by the city's department stores in the matter of playing up to the local coeds' buying tastes, The Guardsman undertook to interest the City of Paris in a special junior college fashion show designed particularly to meet the needs of the local men and women.

The result is today's fashion parade, which will bring before the students a complete selection of clothing for all types and all occasions, ranging from sports wear to evening dress.

Announcer for the show will be Bette Nelson, City of Paris representative on the campus, and organizer of the event, who will describe the dresses worn by the models while they are on the stage. During the intermission Anita Welt, vice-president of the high freshman class and winner of a recent singing contest will entertain with one of the season's popular tunes.

COLLEGE

THE unhappy coincidence of the college dance and the WAA horseshow occurring on the same night has produced considerable consternation among some of the students of the college.

Happily enough, advance reports indicate that students riding in the horseshow will be able to leave in time to arrive at the dance and enjoy themselves for the major part of the evening.

It seems rather strange that with all the calendar to choose from, May 3 hdd to be the date of two important functions.

We suggest that next time the WAA and the social committee confer on their respective dates and so avoid confusion.

IT WAS rumored recently that the high freshman class was planning to hold a dance at Simpson's Rendezvous on Clement Street.

No official request for such an affair was presented to the Executive Council, however, so let us hope it was nothing but a rumor.

Although the Clement Street location may be a nice enough place for some things, it certainly is far from the ideal spot for a college function.

Class officers should remember that any affair in which their class participates makes the college responsible for the function.

Simpson's may be a good place for a private party, but let's keep it to that.

STATE

THE California State Teachers Association recently approved a resolution calling for aid from state teachers in stemming the tide of subversive and un-American propaganda that has been flooding the nation recently.

No doubt the great majority of California's educators will willingly cooperate with the CTA, for they must realize that the continued prosperity and survival of the democratic system depends upon the controlling of such influences.

The quickest way of reducing the effectiveness of propaganda is by enlightening the minds of American youth.

NATIONAL

THE wolves are after Bertrand Russell again.

Not content with preventing his hiring by the City College of New York, the same factions are now at work to have Russell disrobed from the University of California at Los Angeles, where he is now employed teaching mathematics.

It seems as if Russell many years ago, when he was perhaps younger and less accustomed to the false and hypocritical ways of man, publicly wrote and declared himself an advocate of free love.

Now, many years later, he is being attacked by narrow-minded, hypocritical parents and clergymen because of his beliefs. These people contend that he should not be allowed to teach because he is a bad influence on his pupils. (How anyone teaching math can be a bad influence has not been explained.) As far as a bid influence is concerned, from what we have heard of the present day American youth, they could probably teach Professor Russell a few things.

What is the matter with these conscientious objectors? Are they so stupid as to believe that elimination of Russell will do anything but aggravate and create interest in the situation? Are these people so naive as to believe that the college student of today does not know the so-called "facts of life?"

They tell students from childhood that America is a free land where everyone has a right to express his opinions. That seems to be so much hooey. All Bertrand Russell did was express his opinion on a subject that a group of bigoted, mid-victorian persons feel is forbidden in society.

Rationalize it if you wish, but the fact still remains that an attempt to oust a man from his job for having the courage to say what he thinks is the rankest kind of persecution in existence.

People have been shot in Germany, Russia, and Italy for the same thing, but of course here in America we are absolutely free and democratic.

Tradition Shattered

AWS Abandons Tea Dance Plan; Money Shortage Given As Reason

Because of a shortage of funds, plans for the semi-annual Associated Women Students' tea dansant have been cancelled for this semester, Margaret Dougherty, AWS adviser, announced this week.

"Unforseen expenses and a curtailment of funds for our budget by the finance committee have made such an affair impossible," Miss Dougherty declared.

"Provided that there will be an adequate financial allotment next semester, we will then hold our traditional tea dance," she continued.

It is rumored that the finance committee, by discriminate apportioning of college funds, may be able to find sufficient money for the affair.

In the past, the AWS tea dansants have been generally regarded by all attending as highly successful.

Miss Dougherty further announced that Gloria Miller, AWS president, will return to college next semester.

"Although Miss Miller has taken a leave of absence for the rest of the semester, she will continue to serve

Leave Of Absence

Gloria Miller

officially as president," Miss Dougherty said, explaining that the limited amount of time left in this semester made an election at this time impractical.

Science Laboratories Will Get New Equipment

Details of equipment to furnish the science laboratories in the new college building were released last week by Dr. Glenn A. Noble, college science instructor.

"New equipment includes," Noble revealed, "complete bacteriology supplies, special microscopes, refrigerators, sterilizing ovens, store room cases, numbers of models, charts and specimens for human anatomy and physiology classes."

Labs To Have Aquarium

According to Noble there will be five well-equipped laboratories, which will accommodate 33 students. Each one will be furnished with an aquarium.

Upstairs from the laboratories there will be constant temperature animal rooms. A special feature in the science department will be a sub-soil heating apparatus for the germinating of seeds.

Five hundred distilled water stills will be installed for use in microtechnique courses.

Increased Lecture Facilities

There will also be increased facilities for lecture demonstrations, such as motion pictures, lantern slides, as well as demonstrations of actual animals.

"With our new equipment we expect to make real progress towards an ideal situation on the part of both instructor and student," Noble said.

An announcement of new science courses to be given in the new building was also made by Dr. Noble.

Two New Courses Announced

There will be two new courses given in bacteriology, one for prenursing students, he said. Prerequisite for the bacteriology courses is chemistry 1A.

"A course in marine biology was tried out this semester and its success warrants its being given next semester," he explained.

New course in botany to be given by Thomas Porter, of the college faculty, will involve a study of the classification of wild and domestic plants, Noble revealed.

"This course will appeal to those students who want to know the names of the plants that they see," Noble commented.

Candidates Bid For Primaries

Candidates for Associated Student offices for the Fall, 1940 semester will make their initial bid to students on Tuesday, May 14 at 2:30 in the Galileo auditorium, instead of the date previously announced in The Guardsman, Len Gross, election committee chairman, revealed this week.

All petitions for office must be turned in to Dean Edwin C. Browne, properly filled out, on or before May 13, Gross emphasized.

On May 15, for the first time in college history, primary elections, to precede the final elections of May 22, will be held at both Powell Street and Galileo. As in the past, voting machines are to be employed at both locations.

Lapel cards will be given to all those voting. The election committee has asked that students receiving badges wear them to remind those who have neglected to exercise their constitutional rights to do so at once.

Culminating several weeks' work on the part of Al Williams, Associated Students president, and his constitution committee, a constitution assembly, to ratify several amendments to the aforementioned college document which Williams deems necessary to efficient operation of the various college organizations, will be held Wednesday, May 9, in the Powell Street study hall.

All students particularly interested in attending may be excused from their classes at the instructor's discretion.

Course In Dental Training For Women Next Semester

Courses in Dental Assistant training will be offered next fall to women of the college, President Archibald J. Cloud announced.

According to President Cloud, plans for the new course were approved by the Board of Directors of the San Francisco District Dental Society, and the board resolved also to make available to the college the facilities needed for presentation of the course.

The board also resolved to appoint a committee to act in an advisory capacity to the college.

"We have set aside a room in the new science building to be used for the dental assistant training. It will be fully equipped for the purpose," President Cloud said.

"Courses of this type are being given successfully at Los Angeles City College, Pasadena Junior College, and Lux Junior College," he added, "and many young women are gaining employment when they have passed the requirements of the course."

The course will include classes in dental office procedure, dental anatomy, radiography, bacteriology, as well as classes in the business end of the occupation.

"It is by installing courses of this kind, one after another, that vocational opportunities are being afforded students of this college to enter occupational life," President Cloud emphasized.

Spring Is Suicide Time; Humidity, Crimes Related

CLEVELAND, Ohio — (ACP) — A Cleveland College psychologist, Dr. Oliver H. Ohmann, maintains that a correlation can be made between police records and weather records. He states that assault and battery cases are most numerous on days of low humidity, and that suicides are most common on clear days late in the spring. Inmates of mental institutions are most disorderly during extreme variations in temperature. Further experiments indicate that teachers have the most disciplinary problems in windy weather.

Festival

A Capella Choir To Participate In Stockton Fete

Journeying to Stockton on May 6 to participate in the annual Northern California Junior College Music Festival will be the college A Capella Choir, according to Flossita Badger, college music instructor.

Seven colleges in the northern California area will be represented. They are: San Francisco, Marin, Modesto, Salinas, San Mateo, Santa Rosa, and Yuba.

Choir Sings In Evening

During the afternoon, each choir will sing selected numbers. In the evening, dinner will be served, and later the College of Pacific orchestra and chorus will present a concert. They will perform Rio Grande, by Lambert.

The college choir will sing three numbers, Emitte Spiritum Tuum, by Schuetky; Ballad of the Trees and Master, Matthews; and Turkey in the Straw, arranged by Schaeffer.

Past Participation Successful

"The trip is eagerly looked forward to," Miss Badger said, "for participation here in the past has always proved a great success. The hospitality shown by the College of Pacific and its beautiful setting has always proved an excellent combination."

The festival is usually held at a four-year college. Last year, however, it was held at Treasure Island in honor of the Fair.

Three Groups Request Fund Return From Ex Council

Repercussions of the three-week old general budget slash by the Executive Council were again felt in the Executive Council last Tuesday when the football team and the Associated Men Students asked for a partial return of the funds deleted from their respective budgets.

A $7.50 request by the football team for a sled for practice blocking was granted after considerable discussion, while a $30 request by the AMS to reenforce the AMS fights fund was also approved.

High Sophs Fund Short

A further unofficial request for additional funds came from Wilton Lutz, acting for high sophomore president Art Pomares, in which he explained the inadequacy of the present high sophomore budget allotment to care for the forthcoming sophomore formal.

From an original $360, $130 was cut from the high sophomore fund, leaving a remainder of $230. Lutz said that a sum of at least $325 would be necessarily to finance the dance satisfactorily.

Formal Request Expected

Expected by the finance committee today was a formal request for the additional money from class leaders. In the latter event, judgment on the petition will doubtless be rendered to next Tuesday's Executive Council session.

Additional business at the council concerned approval of the judicial committee's recommendation that next semester's Associated Student cards contain a personal description of the holder, the granting of funds to Al Williams, Associated Student president, and Mel Chiarando, chairman of the Men's Athletic Council, to finance a trip to Modesto, in which they will aid in determining a workable, satisfactory football schedule for the ensuing semester. The conference is convening tonight and tomorrow.

Nominations For Denman Scholarship Received

Nominations for the scholarship money to be given by the James Denman Estate to some worthy junior college women have been received from the deans of women of the various high schools of San Francisco, President Archibald J. Cloud announced.

"It is likely," Cloud said, "that two to four women will be chosen by the committee from all the names submitted."

The committee composed of Cloud, Margaret Dougherty, Associated Women students advisor, and Deputy Superintendent John C. McGlade will meet next Monday for the purpose of the selection.

Tourney Week, Social Tonight

Horseshow Highlights Women's Activities; Low Sophs Dance To Craig In Gold Room

Highlighting Tourney Week activities of the Women's Athletic Association will be the Horse-show to be held tonight, May 3, at the San Francisco Riding School, Haight and Stanyan Streets at 7:30 o'clock, Marjorie Radke, riding manager announced early this week.

Participating will be all students who have taken riding this semester and one representative of the advanced class from each of the San Francisco high schools, Miss Radke revealed.

For the three classes, beginners, intermediates and advanced, riders will walk, trot, canter, and have pairs, with the advanced group having fours. Miss Radke explained. Beginners and intermediates will ride in a ribbon game, and the advanced riders will have a musical chairs game. Winners of each game will receive a free ride.

Trophies To Be Presented

Trophies will be presented to the winner of each class, the winner of the jumping class, and the winning high school representative, Miss Radke disclosed.

Eleanor Blinn, head of the college reserve bookroom, will officiate as ringmistress, and Ernestine Syferd and Captain Christianson will judge the contestants, according to Miss Radke.

Admission is free and the public is cordially invited, Miss Radke concluded.

San Mateo Horseshow, May 4.

College riders are planning to accept an invitation to compete in the horseshow to be held at San Mateo on Saturday evening, May 4, at 8:30 o'clock, as a sectional sportsday, Laurine Bergin, riding instructor, announced this week.

All junior colleges in northern California are sending riders, and the college representatives are June Holmes, Sylvia Mooney, Dolores Dixon and Virginia Pierson of the intermediate class, and Peace Alvarez, Teddi Kosch, Bob Bourne and Leon Kollmorgen of the advanced class, Mrs. Bergin revealed.

Contest Judges Chosen

One judge from each college has been chosen, and Miss Syferd is to represent the college, according to Mrs. Bergin.

An announcement from San Mateo stated that the horseshow would be held in the Gymkhana and afterwards there will be a dance and refreshments for the participants.

Further details and schedule for Tourney Week are on page 2.

Hi Soph Cruise Cancelled; Lack Of Ticket Sales

Scheduled for last Wednesday, and anticipated since early this semester, the cruise to Paradise Cove which the high sophs were to have sponsored was cancelled because ticket sales were not up to the minimum set by the Crowley Company, from which the boat and picnicking grounds were to have been rented, Art Pomares, class president, announced on Tuesday.

Refunds have been made to all those who made and paid for their reservations on the launch, he said.

In explaining the situation, Pomares expressed his disappointment that lack of support had necessitated the cancellation of this long-planned affair.

Plans for sophomore week, however, are progressing very well, he commented. The announcement of May 16 as definite date for the high soph rally has been revealed to include May 16 and 22 as tentative dates.

The high soph formal of May 24 which climaxes sophomore week will be held at the California Country Club, Pomares revealed. Bids will be on sale possibly next week at $1.25 per couple, following action of the Ex Council this Tuesday in cutting the price from $1.50, according to announcement of the bids committee. Orchestra to play at this affair has not been named as yet.

College sororities and fraternities intending to sponsor a candidate for Sophomore Sweetheart are asked to submit names of their choice for "queen" to Pomares, who announced that voting will probably take place in about two or three weeks.

CAB To Nominate Fall Officers

New officers of the Club Advisory Board for the fall semester will be nominated at the next CAB meeting this coming Tuesday, Alden Thorogood, president of the group, announced. Election is scheduled for May 21, he added.

Candidates are to be named for the offices of president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer, in accord with the CAB constitution, which also stipulates that each must have been "a member of the Board in good standing for one semester previous to his election."

Plans of the club board in relation to the May 17 Sirkus have not yet been developed, Thorogood said, stating, "The CAB has no official sanction from the Executive Council or Sirkus committee to go ahead in planning anything." Because of this, the special meeting of the CAB scheduled for last Tuesday was not held.

It is understood from unofficial information released from these sources, however, that the CAB or its individual clubs will definitely be asked to sponsor concessions on the future campus grounds on that day set aside for students to acquaint themselves therewith.

Specific activities of the group were to have been determined when a report from the Sirkus committee would be heard, discussed, and acted upon at a special meeting of the Executive Council yesterday, but were not available at this writing. If this report is accepted, booths for the various clubs interested in participating will be obtainable without cost to them.

Publication of the second issue of Caltby, the club magazine, is tentatively set for sometime this week, Robert Schlesinger, editor of the publication, announced.

WSS Party At Empire Theater May 9 and 10

The Women's Service Society is sponsoring a theater party at the Empire Theater, West Portal and Vicente Streets, on May 9 and 10, Annette Schmick, president of the society, announced this week.

Feature pictures tentatively scheduled for those evenings are "The Light That Failed," starring Ronald Colman and Ida Lupino, and "I Take This Woman," starring Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr.

Thirty cent tickets for adults and 10 cent tickets for children may be purchased from officers or at the bank at Galileo, Miss Schmick said.

CAB Approves Business Department Places Two Students

Announcement of two more placements by the College Business Department was made last week by F. Grant Marsh, chairman of the Business Division.

The two students placed were Mary Keating and Margaret Somerset, given work on a part-time basis at the Pearl Assurance Company.

"The department is still making placements as fast as possible," said Marsh. "There are still jobs available for persons with certain exceptional qualifications. There are so many applicants for one position that employers can pick and choose the most capable people," he commented.

Primary Elections Coming Soon; Aid For Selecting Best Men

ASSOCIATED Student elections are almost here again. Next week, the nomination rally will open the hectic weeks of the semester known as "election time."

For the first time in the history of the college, a primary election will first be held, then followed a week later by the general or final election.

This new method should serve to get the best persons in office. As a matter of fact, this type of election is really the only fair method, since it eliminates all but the top contenders so that the students may vote for the one best qualified. This is an improvement over past elections where, when several candidates were running for the same office, the best man sometimes did not win because the vote was split among several factions.

First thing to take into consideration when discussing elections is the problem of nominating suitable candidates.

There are undoubtedly many students in the college qualified to hold an office capably. The problem is to find them, for not all of these persons are in the public eye today.

By this time the observant members of the student body have had a chance to know some of the persons who are qualified to hold office. It is up to these observant members to do something about it and put their man up before the rest of the students at the nominations rally.

Many are under the impression that ability doesn't count but that officers are elected because of their friends and personality.

Although to a certain extent this is true, it is not wholly correct. It should be remembered that the majority of the voting student body does not know the persons running for office personally but only through their previous records. Consequently there is still a chance for the best person to be elected.

Nomination rallies in the college have for many years been a neglected step-child. For some unknown reason, many students fail to give their support to this rally.

Of course it is understandable that some persons are just not interested in student government and the betterment of the college but it is presumed that in the majority of cases such is not true.

Usually the nomination rally serves to give the interested students a preview of their next semester's officers. It also gives the candidates for office a chance to explain their ideas and platforms and at the same time introduce themselves to the voters.

This semester more than ever before there is a capable corps of student leaders needed. Entrance into the new building next semester will give rise to many important problems and situations that must be confronted and solved by the college officers.

There has been much talk of late about next semester being the greatest of them all because we will have a new building of our own and will be more able to concentrate on building a great college. That may be true. It is also true that next semester will be one of the most difficult for student government for it will mean many readjustments and perhaps changes.

New Campus Cause For Gigantic Celebration May 17; Come One, Come All And Help Put The Sirkus Over!

NOT often does a college get a change to kick up en masse its heels and celebrate, for it is only very infrequently that there is occasion to warrant such a display of enthusiasm.

We have that occasion—the completion of the new building.

On Friday, May 17, the college will play host to all San Francisco and kick up its heels and celebrate. Invitations to the "Meet Your Campus" day are even now being issued, invitations to every man, woman and child who wants to join in the fun.

It's going to be a gala day for it is not every year that a college receives a new and beautiful home such as the one we will enter next Fall.

Plans which were once only in the minds of the student committee delegated to handle the affair, are fast assuming a concrete shape.

Is it necessary to ask student support on that day? We think not. The youngest freshman or the most blase sophomore can but feel a thrill of anticipation and excitement when the vision of a new college rises before their eyes.

May 17 will mark the culmination of five years of fighting, hoping, and praying for a place to call our own. It means that all those long treks from one building to another will soon be over, to become nothing but memories.

When the 17th rolls around don't get lost in the crowd. All San Francisco will turn out to visit the carnival, view the new campus, and celebrate.

But it isn't their celebration, it's ours, ours alone. At long last we've got something to shout about and let's really shout.

If we can't exude more excitement and enthusiasm than any two persons who don't attend the college, then we don't deserve a new building.

Let's make May 17 a day that will long be remembered by the future students of the college. Let's make it something that students everywhere will remember long after it is over.

Test Your I.Q. And Find Your Movie Aptitude Rating

TODAY we live in an age of testing, a test for everybody and everybody tested. Psychologists and educators, caught by the intoxicating exuberance of their own glorious hokum, are forming tests with machine-like rapidity.

Take an American. Take any God-fearing, clean-living, club-joining, 100 per cent American. At the age of six months he is placed in a completely bare room. The obliging house of Gerber has furnished a small portion of baby food guaranteed to hit the spot with all kids. A man who has gone seven years to college places the Gerber dish on the opposite side of the room from the six-month-old, somebody takes out a stopwatch, and the test is on. The bright kids get money for endorsements such as "I'd walk 14½ feet for Gerber's tasty baby treat!"

When, as the novelists say, "the first exciting wave of youth breaks and rolls in the adolescent, splashing him with awakening," another testing stage has begun.

Tests are originated by some persons to augment incomes and to help build that summer cabin at Lake Wahoo. Others originate tests on a transcontinental basis. Educators and psychologists in California make up a test and then beat it back East to explain "What we're doing out West," and vice versa.

Shots At Ramdom has a test idea of its own. The idea calls for close cooperation from Harry Frister, who, incidentally, scored a miserable low on the Ladies Home Journal marriage test. (Gad, Frister and I don't want to travel back East; we just want to make L.A. by June 10). Within a few sentences the upper 10 per cent of The Guardsman readers will be immediately introduced to the Frister, Hall—make that Hall, Frister—Movie Aptitude Test.

Each entrant who answers the following questions will be given a thoroughly personalizing analysis of his movie aptitudes. Readers with high or unusual M.A.T. ratings will automatically become eligible to buy chances in the Hall, Frister raffle for a sand-filled, ornament vase. This slightly rococo, but thoroughly agreeable vase was once used to make the Camels feel at home, and was placed in the lobby of El Granade Theater in North Livermore.

Please answer these questions in a considerate manner:

1. Do you believe that moving pictures are occidental opium?

2. Is it true that movie actors are hairless uglies off-screen?

3. Do movies made by Goldwyn, Mayer, Selznick, Lesser, and Pasternak deserve esthetic and artistic interpretation?

4. Explain in 25 words, or less, your reason for sitting through "Everything's On Ice" or "Forty Little Mothers."

"Gym-Dodger" Confesses Guilt; Communists N. G.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Because of the many letters that have come in pertaining to the April 23 Of Sound and Fury column, The Guardsman feels that, to avoid repetition, the matter is closed. No more letters concerning it will be published.

● COATED WITH HONEY
Editor, The Guardsman:

In your April 19 issue, you state that as to the truth and honesty of statements in certain Communist leaflets, there is little doubt. And in black bold print you tell us: That sometimes the Communists aren't so bad after all.

Dear Lenny, don't let those communistic pamphlets fool you. You see, those damn Communists inoculate their doctrines into unsuspecting people. It sounds good . . . in fact, it sounds as if they really are right and want to help us solve our problems. The theory of communazism comes coated with honeyed words and is being handed to us—wrapped in camouflage.

Dear Lenny, please remember: an open foe may prove a curse, but a pretended friend is worse!

We must not let ourselves be confused! Through the bleak night of our times pierce the rays of a star of first magnitude, the polar star that allows us to steer without swerving the ship of society, the star that we must never lose sight of, the highest and the most sublime of all human ideals, the realization of all justice, the accomplishment of the laws of morality, the liberator, the fulfiller, the friend and savior: Democracy!

David Breman

Editor's note: It has always been our policy to attempt to give credit where credit is due. We felt and still feel that the literature you refer to was an example of public interest. Because it happened to come from the Communists is no reason to claim that it is a subversive attempt to influence the public. There is a difference between realizing the menace of Communism and painting everything a Red plot.

Incidentally, you credit us with being a lot more naive than is humanly possible these days.

● SUB ROSA REBEL
Editor, The Guardsman:

I had best begin by stating unequivocally that I number myself among those sub rosa rebels known as Gym-Dodgers. An almost mortal blow was hurled at our existence in the form of an article in the columns of your otherwise respectable paper. Briefly, I protest.

For the writer of the article, I have only scorn, very deep scorn. No doubt he felt quite proud of that little blurb. He prided himself on the nauseating vein of humor that ran thru those lines, perhaps. He may even like to think of himself as being on a par with M. Zola in disclosing a condition that, tho undeniably meat for a story, is but one refuge for those who dislike wasting their time bouncing a basketball around the joint when they might be doing some pressing work or at least resting from the rigors of a day filled with grueling lectures and tests.

Yea, Mr. Ed., I protest. This article was not a step above sensational muckraking. After all, we Gym-Dodgers do not stoop to pleblan cutting. We at least show up, transitory tho our visits may be!

Speaking for the Gym-Dodgers, I plead with a contrite heart that you forego further mention of our noble clan. Tho, unfortunately, the lid is off, the blow has been struck; Sweet, Gaddy, Wilson, etc., have been shown the dismal light.

Disconsolately,
William Persiflage

Tally-Ho! By Marion MacKillop

Counter-Point

Origin Of French, German, And English Military Decorations

A LARGE, barren parade ground "somewhere in France." Along one side silent ranks of troops, the grim drabness of their battle dress offset only by sun flashes on their bayonets. On the other side a small group of officers.

From the latter group a figure steps forward, and his voice rings out sharply in the silence of the morning, "Persons to be decorated, front and center."

As war clouds darken Europe again, one of the sidelights of conflicts begins to make itself apparent, the awarding of medals, honors, and decorations. And as Croix de Guerre, Iron Cross, and the Order of the Garter become household words, the stories behind these symbolical bits of ribbon and metal take on a new significance.

To her premier soldiers, France gives a little piece of bronze about the size of a coin, suspended from a yellow and green wisp of silk, the Medale Militaire. It is not overly pretentious at first sight, but its bearer is a man of distinction in France. No matter what his rank, the holder of this decoration is saluted by officers and enlisted men alike, for his citation reads, "For conspicuous service, above and beyond the call of duty in the face of the enemy and at the risk of his life."

Should the holder of the Medale Militaire, by some ill chance, be forced to serve a term in military prison, his medal will be mounted on a backboard, hung outside his cell door, and up and down the corridor in front of it an armed sentry will march day and night to guard the precious bauble.

IN ENGLAND the corresponding decoration is a small bronze cross on a dull red ribbon, known and respected by Englishmen all over the world as the Victoria Cross. Originated during the Crimean War, it was first known as the Victory Cross, but popular feeling held that such a name would tend to indicate that only the wearers of the medal had contributed to the victory. In order to erase this impression, the name was changed to Victoria Cross in memory of Queen Victoria, and in order to perpetuate the origin, a supply of captured bronze Turkish cannons was stored at the War Department in London. From the metal of these same cannon every Victoria Cross that has ever been issued was cast and will continue to be cast as long as the metal supply holds out.

ONE of the stranger aspects of modern war decorations is the name of Germany's highest award. Contrary to general impression, it is not the well popularized Iron Cross, but instead a medal with a French name, the Pour le Merite. It was Frederick the Great, the lover of French culture, who introduced French names into German surroundings, with the result that the royal palace in Potsdam near Berlin bears the name Sans Souci, just as the highest German award which he found is known by the French equivalent of "for merit."

BUT of all the awards with a history, none is as interesting as Britain's top decoration of honor (to be distinguished from the Victoria Cross, which is the top decoration for valor). Even kings have smiled their genuine appreciation when "His Britannic Majesty has been pleased to bestow" upon them the Order of the Garter, a strange name, but with a reason.

It all began during the reign of Edward III in the fourteenth century, when the king graced the ball of a certain Lady Hamilton with his presence. During the course of the festivities, the unfortunate hostess suffered a disquieting loss in the middle of the dance floor, one dainty garter having slipped to the ground amid the subdued snickers of the rowdier element.

The silence that followed was suddenly broken by the voice of the king. Observing the accident, he retrieved the garter, then turning to his assembled nobles, made a statement which has gone down to history, "Honi soi qui mal y pense" (Evil to him who evil thinks).

Placing the garter on his own leg, he turned to Lady Hamilton and added, "Madam, your garter shall be the symbol of the highest honor in my land. These noblemen who are gathered here today shall some day look with envy upon those privileged to wear it. So long as this kingdom shall continue, its highest award shall be the Order of the Garter."

Even today, the holder of the Order wears, as one of his insignias, a blue velvet garter inscribed in gold with the motto, "Honi soi qui mal y pense."

WHAT will we do without Union Square? Its green lawns, park benches and city characters? The band concert at noontime, and the pigeons blabbing as fast as the college crowd.

Ah, yes, this will all be changed after June. After many moons, youth will leave the famous square for a beautiful new home where city characters, band concerts and blabbing pigeons will all be missing.

Instead of the familiar newsman who makes his daily run of the park crying, "Daily noos, daily noos," we will probably hear, "Get your latest Guardsman and read about the newest misogynist that is going around." (We even surprise our own imagination at times, and don't say, "How could you?")

And unless someone wants to go into business at an early age, we won't hear another familiar voice which usually sells his ware with one word "SHINE." "Get your shine," "Shine, mister," but somehow he never seems to open his mouth when passing a group of students. Maybe he's afraid one of them might want a shine sometime, and the thought frightens him. Why doesn't someone get a shine before finals, just to see what would really happen?

Lots of things have happened down in Union Square—and while we go reminiscing why don't you wander back to the days when you were a bewildered freshman, and you paused wondering if it would be wise to go and study in the park. Your mother had told you there was a place set aside for women and children, but when you got to that designated spot, it was completely occupied with war veterans and pigeons.

Do you remember the day you wanted to study for a final and you thought it would be quiet in the park? Some newly acquainted classmates came along and just had to let you in on the latest gossip? And your hopes of getting an "A" were scattered to the trade winds.

Well, you were getting along famously in the second semester, and instead of spending a few minutes in the study hall, you were seen strolling along with your buddies for a bull session down at "The park." Milk shakes and paper cups and sandwiches out of a bag were the thing that semester, because the days were warm and sunny.

Then came the winter quarter and the streets were wet, and when you got to the corner of Powell and Sutter, you could have sworn the wind carried you an extra block off your course. This was the year the crowd gathered in a local beanery, and you were beginning to get into college affairs. And at the end of the year, you were recognized by "the crowd" as an important person.

Some say this last year was the best—you and "the crowd" were mighty busy and didn't spend much time down at the park. "Let the freshmen get acquainted with the city and the park." Now we're about to leave Union Square for good; to go to a home of our own, and how do you feel about it?

The Doctor Takes A Wife And Finds He Has A Headache, Too

WHAT a life for the doctor who takes a wife! Bachelor girls becoming your wife without benefit of clergy; your fiancee objecting to the fact that you are "married"; having to stay married so that you can keep the professorship you weren't entitled to in the first place; and a host of other things that would drive even an insane man crazy. But, doctor, go to see The Doctor Takes A Wife and your marital problems will be settled in an instant. Maybe!

A zany comedy if ever there was one, The Doctor Takes A Wife nevertheless manages to be extremely pleasant at the same time, perhaps because of the deft touches that Loretta Young and Ray Milland inject into their parts. Miss Young plays June Cameron, author of the best selling novel of the moment, "Spinsters Aren't Spinach," whose politeness to Dr. Tim Sterling is motivated only by a desire to get a ride to New York.

Exacting a fee for the trip by drinking the best 10-year-old stuff June has in her apartment, the doctor finds himself delightfully swacked. This, coupled with the fact that there is "Just Married" on the back of the car and that June sent a telegram from Greenwich, leads the Fourth Estate to the wrong conclusion that the two are one. The pretense has to be carried out because the sales of the book would drop off, and because Tim would lose his professorship. After June starts writing a sequel, "Marriage Ain't Measles," the fun really starts!

Ray Milland and Loretta Young are perfectly cast in this none too pretentious comedy. They seem to have a lot of fun while enacting their roles, and that may be the reason that they are so good in them.

Alexander Hall has made excellent use of the comic opportunities that are offered him. One that the audience seemed to like especially was that where Tim and his "wife" were entertaining some guests. Having told his fiancee that he lives there alone, he naturally doesn't want her to see June. So he connives to get her into the next apartment. To see Sterling jumping through the kitchens, along the balcony, a glass in one hand, hors d'oeuvres in the other, is really side-splitting. The audience was convulsed at the efforts of the poor doctor to be in two places at once.

Another good gag occurs when the newsman asks if the half-dressed man in her bedroom could, by any chance, be her husband. June answers, "That's a prowler." Right back quips the reporter, "Lady, I don't care what your husband does for a living."

The best crack in the film comes when Marilyn, Tim's fiancee, is about to announce her engagement to him. June rushes blithely in, sits down, and calmly starts knitting a tiny sweater. Marilyn turns to Tim, aghast, and inquires if it is true. Tim answers lamely, "Well, you know, one thing leads to another."

The Doctor Takes A Wife is fast and furious fun that never lets up from start to finish. It sparkles with witty dialog, and bubbles over with good comedy. In fact, it's just the kind of movie to see these troublous times—even your doctor would describe it as a cure for all ills, foreign or domestic.

WAA Tourney Week Participants

May 2-9, inclusive dates of the Women's Athletic Association Tourney Week extravaganza, will be featured by a multitude of sports, including those pictured above.

In the left-hand upper corner, Lucille Jacke draws a long-bow, preparatory to scoring an archery bulls-eye—she hopes.

Opposite Miss Jacke is shown the location of the college archers' stamping grounds at the Palace of Fine Arts. A WAA novelty shoot was held yesterday.

At the San Francisco Riding Academy, Haight and Stanyan Streets, WAA equestriennes will present a horseshow tonight at 7:30; and at San Mateo, Saturday evening, 8:30 o'clock. The Academy site is pictured in lower left-hand corner.

Emily de Iongh (lower right), member of the WAA Tourney Week tennis unit, tiptoes for a high serve. Net play is a top-notch WAA attraction.

Sharpshooting Amazons In Tourney

The championship women's rifle team of the college WAA, seriously demonstrating its expert technique for the benefit of the Guardsman photographer, has been awarded several honors for marksmanship this semester.

Shown above, the quintet of feminine sharpshooters will endeavor to outshoot their opponents in an intramural Rifle Match in the Galileo Armory at 2:30, Tuesday, May 7, as part of the WAA Tourney Week.

RAMblings By Ray Berns

ATHLETIC SIMILE IN RAMDOM

A sensationally interesting parallel with but one element, time, out of place, may be drawn between the baseball and tennis teams of this and last year.

Last year, at the beginning of the season, both the ball club and the net squads were considered championship contenders. Each was stocked with returning veterans, and each had a tailor-made schedule. Then, misfortune, in the persons of ineligibility, leaves of absences, and injuries, stepped in, and the coaches, Gaddy and Wilson, were left with but the fragments of potentially great teams. The quality of mercy was not lacking in whosoever saw fit to deplete the squads, however, inasmuch as 'twas done at the outset of the season, and, consequently, no titles were expected.

REPETITIOUS TALE OF WOE

This semester, exactly the same story has been repeated, but, as we have said before, one element has been changed, that of time.

Both teams were allowed to get under way before misfortune set in—in fact, both were leading the league, and then, four out of the first five tennisers were declared ineligible, and, although no report has been forthcoming at the present writing, Zeus knows how many horsehiders are out after the last midterms.

It's a strange story and one that might possibly carry a moral. We don't know, do you?

LEAGUE RESULTS PARADOXICAL

An amazing story and box containing the standing of teams appeared on the sports page of The Guardsman last Tuesday. It was the box containing the standings of the CAB basketball league.

According to the release, the league is led by the Ski Club, with a record of three wins, as against no losses, while the Block Society, the college's stellar athletes, in a seven-team league, are resting comfortably (or uncomfortably) in fourth place behind the Ski Club, the Newman Club, and Phi Alpha Omega.

BUCK UP, BOYS!

We don't like to say anything, and of course we realize that varsity basketball players are prohibited from this intramural competition. Consequently, the Monogram Men are forced to use such local yokels as Mel Chicazola, Al Nauman, Dave Cunningham, Elmer Hubacher, and Ken Pasqualetti, most of whom have won their blocks in dominoes, but, nevertheless—and we'll let it go at that!

Title Race

Nine Tracksters To Enter NCJC Conference Trials

In order to match the pace of Modesto, San Mateo, and Sacramento cindermen at the Northern Junior College Conference track meet at Modesto, Saturday, Ram Coach Russ Sweet will enter nine college runners.

In addition to the aforementioned squads, Salinas is rated a top scorer in the battle tomorrow; therefore, Sweet has been grooming his most promising ovalers in the sprints, distance runs, and one field event.

Ram Sprint Hopes

Bert Korn, college dash-man, has been entered in the 220, 440, and the relay. Jack McMeekin will also participate in the quarter-mile and relay events.

Don White and Bob Lowery, in the 880, 440, relay, and half-mile and relay, respectively; Don Mavor, in the century and 220; Louis Vasquez, in the mile run; and Bob Raine, in the high hurdles, complete the roster of Ram sprint entrants.

Hagen, Mossler Enter

One field event only will be entered by the local contingent, as the majority of competition is conceded to Salinas. George Mossler and Hagen of the college have attained a height of 6 feet 1 inch in the high jump, and are expected by Sweet to reach that distance tomorrow.

Reluctant to comment definitely on the results of the championships Saturday, Sweet remarked, "The college has a chance to pick up a few second places, namely, in the high jump and relay. However, we may get the breaks and come out better than expected."

AMS Ring Extravaganza Draws Cream Of Ram Boxers

Twelve more days, and the semi-annual Associated Men Students fights will be held at the Coliseum Bowl, announced Joe Amori, college boxing instructor.

Coliseum Bowl Scene

According to Amori, the fights will be held on Wednesday night, May 15, at the Coliseum Bowl, on Eleventh Street near Market. "This marks the first time in the history of the college that the AMS fights have been held in a public arena," he added. The public will be admitted free of charge and a special section will be reserved for college students.

No Elimination Bout

This is not an elimination tournament, according to the instructor of the manly art. "The elimination tournament will be held previous to this, and the boxers will be the cream of the college crop," he continued.

Among the boxers expected to be seen in the AMS matches are Bob Raine, Bud Calloway, Jim Robinson, Frank Matsumoto, Tak Momii, and Bill Edwards.

Six Boxers Entered

Raine is the current 169, 175, and heavyweight king of the college. Calloway is entered at 159, and is expected to give his opponent a tough fight. Robinson will step into the squared circle tipping the beams at 149.

Matsumoto has been dubbed the Japanese Sandman, and has earned a scholarship to the University of Pennsylvania by his fists. He weighs 129. The diminutive Takeshi Momii will engage the enemy at 105, if an enemy small enough can be found, Amori concluded.

Tentative Football Roster Released By Coach Eisan

Formation of most of the positions on the Ram football squad for 1940 was completed with possible changes, Coach Lee Eisan announced last week.

Bill Ross, Herb Taylor, Cliff Maychek, El Bernstein and Tom Reilly are out to fill the gaps left by last year's graduating ends. Clark Johnson and Bob Hufnagel filled guard positions during last week's scrimmage, and George Meyers and Aguinaldo Vernon filled the tackle spots. The pivot position was guarded by Dick Wilson, with Gil Johanasen assisting. The backfield composed of Leo Leggett and Dave Cunningham at left half; last year's spark, Al Nauman, in the tailback spot; Luke Lowell at half; and Bob Cavender at full, assisted by Art Ekdall, Eisan said.

Tourney Week Dates Fill Current Sport Agenda

Riding — Horse show tonight, May 3, at 7:30 o'clock, at the San Francisco Riding Academy, Haight and Stanyan Streets.

Badminton—Finals this afternoon, May 3, at 2:30 o'clock at Galileo.

Baseball—With San Francisco State College, Saturday morning, May 4, from 10 o'clock until 12 o'clock noon.

Riding—Horse show at San Mateo, Saturday night, May 4, at 8:30 o'clock.

Basketball—Vs. Lowell High School, from 3:20 until 4:30 o'clock, Monday afternoon, May 6.

Banquet—May 9 in the Galileo Cafeteria.

Top Tennis Trio Declared Ineligible For Placer Tilt

Registrar J. Paul Mohr dropped a bombshell into the lap of net coach Tom Wilson last Tuesday, when he announced that Bill Madamba, Chet Mead, and Jack Hare, Nos. 1, 2, and 4 men on the Ram racquet squad, were ineligible for the remainder of the season because of scholastic difficulties.

Rams Vs. Placer

In meeting the Placer net squad tomorrow on the Palace of Fine Arts courts, the local team is conceded a narrow margin of victory, despite the fact that the college group has been virtually decimated by ineligibilities.

The ineligibility of the trio, which comes upon the heels of the ousting of No. 3 man, Ray Berns, last week because of a technicality in the conference rules, removes the last vestiges of any chances that the local racquet-wielders may have had for the title.

Makeshift Squad

Although they have won a total of seven straight team matches, and still hold a slim lead in points in the league standings, the Ram netsters, nevertheless, must put together a makeshift squad to face Placer tomorrow and San Mateo next weekend, in the two remaining matches.

Tony Calagos and Morris Waxman, Nos. 5 and 6 men, will move up to the Nos. 1 and 2 positions, while Howard Pennypacker and Jack McKay, untried newcomers, will join the team at Nos. 3 and 4.

Super-Snoop Out Quips Admitted "Gym-Dodger"

In reply to a Ram's Horn Letter concerning the "muck-racking blurb" on so-called "gym-dodging" (an illegal, unrecognized, and sinister form of athletics) printed in this issue, may the Guardsman Sports Snooper assert his unbiased and frank opinion of the entire situation.

Granted that Physical Education curricula are oft times superfluous and highly irritating in the course of human college events, also conceded that the honorable profession of "gym-dodging" is in peril of violent death through the subversive efforts of the Super-Snoop—what basis of fact has William Persiflage for condemning the honest attempt of a brow-beaten reporter to make a name for himself in the local athletic realm by exposing a subtle vice which will lead its followers into the depths of degradation and cinches?

Verily, we say; the man must be senseless to calm and logical reasoning. Kudos to Coaches Gaddy, Sweet, Wilson, Eisan, and Conlan. Truth will out!

Helen Crlenkovich To Star At Palo Alto Pool Ceremony

Helen Crlenkovich, college diving star, will be the principal guest performer at the dedication of the new Palo Alto Municipal Pool, Saturday, May 11, at 3:30 o'clock.

Holder of the world's record in the 50-yard breast-stroke, Roy Vitousek, of Stanford, will attempt to shatter the established world record mark in the 50-meter breast-stroke at the opening ceremonies.

An open invitational affair, free swimming will be offered after the dedication. The pool is located near the Community Center in Palo Alto.

Batter Up!

Ram Diamond Squad Quests Title Hope On San Mateo Lot

At San Mateo tomorrow, the Ram baseball nine will resume its quest for the 1940 conference championship, Coach Jack Gaddy revealed.

Gaddy was depressed after the Modesto tilts, but this week he has been busy trying to work out a new infield combination, since Roy Micheli, regular third sacker, was declared ineligible for competition this week.

"We still have a mathematical chance to tie for first place," Gaddy commented. "If our lads will play the type of ball that they are capable of during the next six games, we should end up near the top."

Pitching, Hitting Weak

Gaddy added that the pitching and hitting of the college squad had been very weak lately. If the hurling was good, as in the case of Bob Hvidt's twirling at Modesto, the boys would not get any runs. If the team batted in many tallies, the pitchers would seem to blow the lead with ease.

The Rams have yet to play San Mateo, Placer, and Salinas. All three are good teams and will be hard to beat, Gaddy said, but he believes that it can be done.

The revamped lineup, according to Gaddy, will probably find it a little tough at first, but should perform smoothly after practicing together.

Wolcott Still Leads Batters

Ross Wolcott, hard-hitting second baseman, still leads the team in batting with an average of .410. Other leading hitters are Hvidt, .357; Bob Webber, .305; Roy Micheli, .304; and Harry Aleo, .300.

Those who will start the first game at San Mateo tomorrow, according to Gaddy, are as follows: Bob Hjort or Charles Donovan, first base; Wolcott, second; Al Giovanetti, third; Frank Mullins, short; Webber, left field; Bob Nishi, center; Russ Brabant, right field; Leo Mezzetti, catcher; and Aleo, pitcher. Gaddy indicated that there might be later changes to the announced lineup.

Women's Athletics Fest

WAA Tourney Week, May 2-9, Set As Kaleidoscopic Sport Finale

Climaxing the Women's Athletic Association's activities for the semester, Tourney Week, May 2-9, is in full swing, with each sport scheduling various tournaments and exhibitions, according to Thursa Scott, president of the association.

Tourney Week is a traditional event that occurs semi-annually and was inaugurated the second year after the college was founded.

The main purpose, Bertha Keller, adviser of the association, stated, is to give recognition for achievement in WAA and an opportunity to present awards.

Concentration Of Sports

Tourney Week is a combination of all the sports on the college women's curriculum, and also a social occasion where members of the WAA have a chance to meet all participants.

In the past a different theme has been selected for each year, and this year's choice is "The All-American Girl," Miss Scott said.

"Previous banquets have been very successful," Miss Keller said, "with 120 and 131 persons attending the last two. We expect to break that record this year with an even greater number."

College Women Invited

All women of the college are invited to attend this banquet, and in keeping with the Father-and-Daughter arrangements, women are asked by those in charge to bring their fathers or an "adopted" faculty member.

Archery members had a novelty shoot on May 2. Riders have a horse show scheduled for tonight, May 3, here, and one Saturday night, May 4, at San Mateo. A baseball game with San Francisco State College is slated for May 4, and a basketball game with Lowell High School on May 6. Rifle enthusiasts will compete against class members in a shooting match on May 7. The grand finale of Tourney Week will be the banquet, to be held in the Galileo Cafeteria on May 9.

Priscilla Lane Named As Ideal Mate — Wow!

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz.—(ACP)—Priscilla Lane, cinema star, may be the ideal mate. That is the unanimous opinion of the 27 male members of Dr. John J. Harton's class in psychology at Arizona State Teachers College here.

The men in the class, after answering detailed questionnaires, selected entertaining, friendly, beautiful, cheerful, considerate, helpful, honest, and intelligent (in that order) as the adjectives most applicable to the perfect wife.

After choosing the desired traits, it was the decision of the group that the embodiment of these characteristics is Miss Lane.

Council Okehs WAA Office Nominations

Nominations for the Women's Athletic Association officers for next semester have been approved by the council, and the list released by Thursa Scott, president of the association, is the following:

President, Barbara Smith and Betty Teter; vice-president, Rita McDonald and Blanche Noyes; secretary, Rita Wyman and Jeanne Arnold; and treasurer, Bernice Strube and Elizabeth Van Emmon.

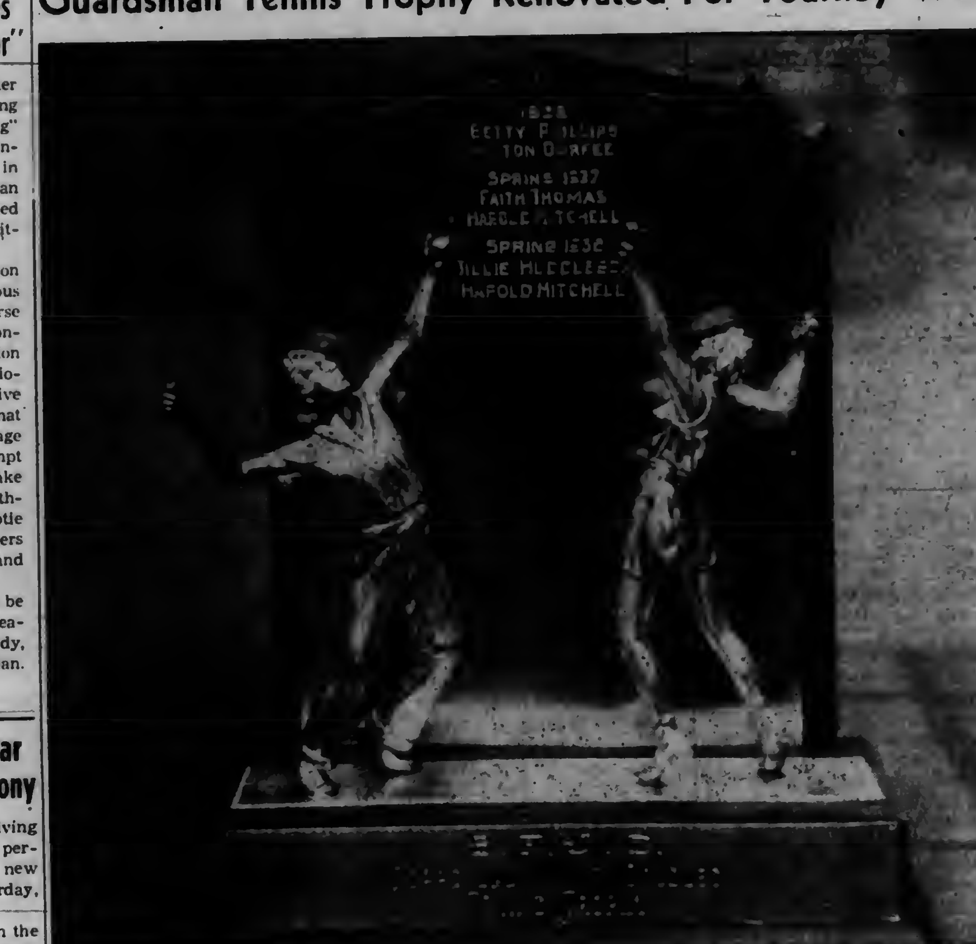
Close Race Expected

"All these girls are excellent for their respective offices, and it will be very hard to choose," Miss Scott said, and further stated, "We hope that every member of the WAA will get behind these girls and vote. Members will be allowed to vote upon presentation of this year's membership cards, and voting will take place in the ticket office at the Powell Street building, and at Galileo."

Voting starts Friday, May 3, and will continue until May 9, Miss Scott concluded.

College Team Bowls Cards; Intramurals In Final Bow

Hoping to score a success over a strong Stanford team, Joe Amori, college bowling instructor, featured his all-star players on Wednesday evening, May 1, at 8 p.m., at the Golden Gate Bowling Alleys.



Robert Riordan, Jack Schmale, Bill Snooks, George Stockwell, and Norman Guinasso participated for the Rams.

The intramural keggling tournament, which has aroused much interest in college bowling circles, is still being played and, according to Amori, will be over next week.

Amori said that if any of the keglers now rolling in the 170's can keep it up, there may be another change in the personnel of the quintet that is currently doing the chores for the college.

The results of the Stanford match will be announced in the Tuesday issue of The Guardsman.

Guardsman Tennis Trophy Renovated For Tourney Week

Mixed tennis matches during Tourney Week will culminate in the awarding of the renovated Guardsman Perpetual Trophy to the victorious team which reaches the conclusion of the final round.

In the past, ardent interest and support has been accorded the net angle of the WAA Tourney Week, and officials of the women's organization express confidence in the support of college tennis enthusiasts. The contests will be played at the Palace of Fine Arts.

In last semester's Tourney Week blow-off, tennis matches held a position of prominence as the WAAers, stressing "Beauty and Brawn," staged their usual widely diversified exhibitions.

Opportunity Knocks

Job Hunters Face New Deal; Million Open

College and high school grad- College and high school graduates of 1940 face a new deal in locating jobs, according to George Keith, founder of the nationally known Keith Approved Job and Opportunity Service of Los Altos, California.

In the current issue of the Keith Approved Job and Opportunity Digest, Keith states all evidence indicates more than a million job vacancies will exist this summer, available to youths just out of school.

He bases this figure on data collected from records of more than 80,000 job-seekers he has handled during the many years of work in helping job-hunters locate employment. These records show that for each applicant placed in a job that was listed or advertised, 19 other job-hunters were placed in positions neither listed nor advertised. These hidden vacancies had to be hunted out by applicants using up-to-date, efficient job-seeking technique.

Since the jobs listed and advertised throughout the country amount to about 50,000 each day, there are, according to Keith's calculations, some 950,000 hidden vacancies existing today, or a total of 1,000,000 job possibilities available at this time. The current issue of the Keith Approved Job and Opportunity Digest, now on local newsstands, lists some 487 salaried vacancies selected from the huge list available on the date the Digest went to press.

The 132-page, pocket-size publication also lists many ways for earning money while in college.

Summer Jobs Available

Excellent opportunities for summer and spare time selling jobs have been offered to students of the college by a reliable sales concern, Edwin C. Browne, Dean of Men, said today.

His office has received requests, he said, for the names of students who would be interested in such work as a way of earning money with which to finance further education.

"The offer comes from a reliable source," Dean Browne assured applicants. "It offers an opportunity to make money providing the applicant is really able to sell."

"Students who are interested in selling as a means of earning cash with which to carry on their education in spare hours and also some time through the summer should see me at their earliest convenience," he advised.

Perhaps If You Don't Cut You'll Get On Honor Roll

HAVERFORD, Pa. — (ACP) — Although college and university cut regulations vary in length and complexity, the general tendency in most is to make the subject of unexcused class absences increasingly a discretionary matter between students and officials of the institution.

This is the finding of Haverford College's Dean H. Tatnall Brown in questionnaires returned by 16 institutions.

Academic standing of the student largely determines the degree to which he will be entrusted with keeping his class appointments as he sees fit.

In this respect, half of the institutions answering the questionnaire—Bowdoin, Wesleyan, Yale, Williams, Princeton, Lafayette, Lehigh, and Smith—grant special privileges regarding classroom absences to undergraduates on a so-called Dean's List or Honor Roll.

The remaining eight either exempt students doing honors work or leave it up to the professor to determine whether or not a member of his class is impairing his scholastic standing by the failure to attend lectures.

None of the colleges or universities supplying information, however, grants the student an unlimited cut allowance.

Freshmen in order to qualify for a Dean's List are usually required to score grades higher than those demanded of upperclassmen.

Cutting classes immediately preceding and following a vacation without a valid excuse is forbidden by all 16 institutions. Penalties range from lowered grades and even a failure at Swarthmore, Mount Holyoke, and Lafayette to curtailment and possible loss of cutting privileges at Bryn Mawr.

Pageant Of America

Cavalcade Of A Nation Premier For Fair Opening

World Premier of America! Cavalcade of a Nation, theme spectacle of the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition, will be held on the opening day of the Fair, May 25.

Produced by A. L. Vollmann, producer-director of last year's Cavalcade of the Golden West, this year's Exposition spectacle will present on the world's largest stage a re-enactment of the history of America from the time of the discovery of the New World by Christopher Columbus in 1492.

Three hundred actors will portray more than 2,000 historical characters. Giant motorized sets and large sets mounted on freight cars will be moved on stage in less than five seconds during the one hour and 10 minutes of the swift-moving show.

28 Scenes Billed

The 28 scenes, depicting the story of the country, are each climaxed by a rainbow water curtain extending the length of the 400-foot stage and rising to a height of more than 50 feet.

The production opens with a full size replica of the Santa Maria, floating onstage on a miniature ocean, 525 feet in length.

Such scenes as Captain John Smith at Jamestown, the landing of the first white women in America, the early pilgrims attending church, the public punishments with culprits confined to stocks and ducking stools, the Colonials aroused to taxation without representation, Patrick Henry's famous speech, and the immortal ride of Paul Revere will be depicted.

Going into the Revolutionary period, the Exposition pageant features such highlights as: the battles of Lexington and Concord, the portrayal of the Spirit of '76, Washington at Valley Forge, and the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

Historic Events

The post-revolutionary period includes protests against trade barriers between the states, the Constitutional Convention and Washington's inauguration at Federal Hall in New York.

The great pioneer movement westward is shown as it begins with the adventurous Americans moving through Ohio. Following this movement, there is the Louisiana Purchase, the fall of the Alamo in Texas, the acquisition of the Oregon territory, the California Gold Rush, the Pony Express, the Wells Fargo Overland Mail, the uniting of the East and West by rail at Promontory, Utah, the great cattle drives to eastern markets, the Cherokee Land Rush which opened the Oklahoma territory, and the development of San Francisco as it was at the turn of the century.

Patriotic drama is stressed in such scenes as Francis Scott Key writing the Star Spangled Banner, the writing of the famous Monroe Doctrine, Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, and the Grand Finale, Cavalcade of a Nation.

The Cavalcade amphitheater will feature a heated grandstand for the 1940 season. Three performances will be given daily, with four on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays.

Commencement To Be Held June 7 At Opera House

Rehearsal for this year's commencement will be held at the Opera House on the morning of June 7, according to high soph advisor Nelson A. Wells.

Only this one rehearsal will be held before commencement, he said. All students who plan to graduate in caps and gowns must attend the rehearsal, Wells announced.

Commencement will be held in the evening of June 7 at the Opera House.

Wells said there would be no cap and gown fee this year and that "all graduates will be measured for caps and gowns at Galileo at 2:30, in the afternoons of the 14th, 15th and 16th of May."

Last year's cap and gown fee for graduates, he said, was $1.50.

Apostoli, Malley, Roach May Give Trophy At Coming AMS Fights

Possibility that Fred Apostoli, former prize-fight champion, George Malley, University of San Francisco football coach, and Spider Roach, Olympic Club boxing coach will judge the Associated Men Students fights was voiced by Lyle Schultz, AMS president.

Schultz announced that he was trying to get Apostoli, Malley and Roach to judge the fights and award a trophy to the outstanding fighter of the evening, the fight program being set for Wednesday, May 15, at the Coliseum Bowl on Market at Eleventh.

Shultz also wanted to emphasize the fact that since the fights were being held in a respectable place, men students were urged to bring along their "dates" and also to invite their parents.

As an added attraction for the fight program, Shultz has announced that two college students will put on a humorous wrestling exhibition.

Shultz also explained that the regular fight program would feature bouts in eight weight divisions. Referee for the fights will be Joe Amori, AMS adviser.

AIB Second Floor Lobby No Place To Loiter — Sullivan

Reminding students of their position as guests of a downtown building, J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of educational management, asked that they kindly refrain from loitering or gathering in the lobby on the second floor or the entrance of the first floor of the American Institute of Banking Building at 58 Sutter Street.

"It is important that we maintain the good will of the Institute," Sullivan said, "and your cooperation will be greatly appreciated."

Publicity Committee Wants Criticisms, Suggestions

Criticisms or suggestions for previous work done by the publicity committee are being solicited by Hal Hoffman, chairman.

Work of the committee has been evidenced by posters on exhibit at the Powell Street building.

The Internal Publicity Committee was inaugurated to publicize all important matters of student-wide concern, and this work was to be carried out through the use of photographs and colored posters or other suitable methods, Hoffman disclosed.

Members of the committee are building a morgue—that is, a collection of posters and photographs—for future reference and use, Hoffman added.

"We really want to know just what the students think of the work that the committee has done, and we would appreciate any criticisms that are offered," Hoffman concluded.

17,000 Books For New Library

Plans for the new building will also include spacious quarters for the library. The new quarters will occupy the southern section of building on the top floor, announced Francis J. Colligan, college librarian.

The library will accommodate 192 students at a time and about 17,000 books.

The books will not be set out on shelves around the wall as in most libraries. They will be kept in a separate room, where the students working in the library will issue them to those desiring to use them.

There will be rooms for periodicals, and reference books. Also a reserved book room is being spaced.

For students who wish to return books after the library is closed there will be a book slot where these books may be placed.

The librarian will have a separate office, and on the mezzanine floor the filing and re-issuing of books will be done.

The library will be finished in a medium brown birch wood paneling and the floors will be made of a cork and rubber combination. This type of floor covering is being used to deaden noise.

Colligan stated, "We are hoping to be in the new building by August 1."

He also revealed the fact that the books had to be out of the Powell street building by the end of this semester.

Luckmann Civil Service Class To Hear Coleman

Students of Lloyd Luckmann's civil service 52 class will hear an address by Supervisor Jesse C. Coleman during their regular class hour next Tuesday, May 7, Luckmann announced this week.

Coleman's subject will be The Present Charter (City of San Francisco) and Opportunity for Young People in Civil Service.

Coleman, a member of the Board of Supervisors of the city for the past 12 years, will be introduced by Louis Conlan of the college's civil service faculty.

The address will be given in room 352 at Galileo at 2:30 p.m.

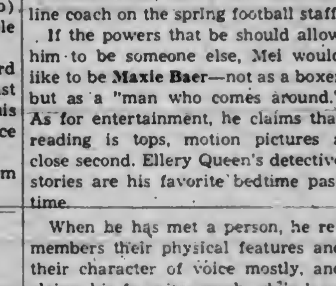
With a name like Melvin Anthony Joseph Chicazola III, we'd make the fellows call us Mel too. So'd Oscar. Anyway, he always looked to us like a Joe.

Although born in the year 1917, and having graduated from Galileo High in 1935, Mel is only in his fourth semester in the college. The 6 feet 1 inch 215 pound behemoth returned to school after three years of work, and may stay some more, inasmuch as his last initials spell out "J.C."

Looking over some old (not too old) copies of the Galileo year book, Oscar has found that Chic was once a yell leader for that high school. As a youngster, Chic was a "bad boy," always fighting, which may have led to his fighting in the Golden Gloves Tournament, representing the western division, and having gone as far up as the semi-finals in Chicago.

President of the Men's Athletic Council, Mel is majoring in Police Administration, and is also assistant line coach on the spring football staff.

If the powers that be should allow him to be someone else, Mel would like to be Maxie Baer—not as a boxer but as a "man who comes around." As for entertainment, he claims that reading is tops, motion pictures a close second. Ellery Queen's detective stories are his favorite bedtime pastime.



When he has met a person, he remembers their physical features and their character of voice mostly, and claims his favorite punch while boxing is an overhand right while breaking from a clinch, which isn't cricket, but is effective . . . or so he says.

His greatest problem which he at present confronts is getting a job after getting out of here. Pet gripes are the lack of student interest in sports, and their lack of attention given to the instructors when a lecture is given.

Although he does not like to dance, this German-Italian lad would gladly cavort on the floor with his size 11½ dreadnaughts (which he claims are shoes) should Betty Grable come waltzing by.

Once a Joe, always a Joe . . . or so Oscar says.

Two Can Live As Cheaply As One At UCLA Dormitory

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(ACP)—Four married couples on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California are learning that two can live almost as cheaply as one—and get an education, too!

They are members of Falkirk House, the first U.C.L.A. married students' cooperative dormitory. By pooling domestic arrangements, their savings run from $15 to $20 a month.

Falkirk House got its start last September when Lee Sterling Christie, a junior student, wanted to get married. He didn't know whether or not his finances would stand the strain, but he recognized that his problem was not unique. If he could find several other married couples, they could organize a cooperative dormitory.

He found them all right—three other couples, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Canham, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Mayfield, Mr. and Mrs. H. Leffert. They rented a two-story stucco house near the campus. The men do the heavy work around the house and yard while the women do the cooking and cleaning. All food is purchased through the U.C.L.A. Cooperative Housing Association. The cost of cooperative living is about $48 per couple each month.

The average age of the married students is 22 years.

"During the spring semester, four other couples applied for admission in Falkirk Hall," says Christie, "but we didn't have room for them."

May 11 Beta Tau Dance To Feature Ticoulat

Definitely scheduled for the Montclair Women's Club on Saturday, May 11, is the Beta Tau semi-annual sports dance, Barney Blanchard, president of the organization, announced recently.

"This is the only event sponsored by a restricted social organization which is open to all members of the Associated Students," he said.

Bids may be purchased from any Beta Tau member for 99 cents, he declared, adding that music for the dance will be by Eddie Ticoulat and his orchestra, who played at the recent Associated Men Students' barn dance.

Adler Speaks!

Lack Of Liberal Education Seen In College Today

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—(ACP)—Colleges attached to large universities are failing almost completely to give their students a liberal education, Mortimer J. Adler, professor at the University of Chicago, told a meeting of the Student Council's Committee on Liberal Education at Harvard University recently.

Adler did not except Chicago from his radical criticism of the university-college system, and stated that almost everything for which Chicago is famous, including the survey course system, was an educational failure.

His attack on the present set-up hit mainly the narrow and unreal division of subjects into departments, the bad effects of close relations between the post-graduate and undergraduate sections on the liberal arts college, and the "research" criterion for academic promotion. The necessity of early and frequent scholarly publication was making the supposed teacher a mere specialist, he said.

Claiming that students who finish the "introductory general" courses at Chicago have at best a "superficial indoctrination" in courses' contents, Adler remarked that the five courses advocated by the Student Council to give a "common content" to education at Harvard would turn into reading courses, similar to the St. John's "great books" plan, if the ideals back of them were logically followed out. He sees the department system as the chief obstacle to their success.

Adler and Chicago's President Robert M. Hutchins both believe strongly in the St. John's plan of liberal arts college education. This provides for training in the complicated arts of reading and writing by a chronological study of the so-called "100 great books" of the Western world, with laboratory and tutorial work but almost no lectures. However, both Adler and Hutchins believe that not more than 60 of these books can be read in their meaning of the word read, in a four-year score of study.

Class Activities Featured In College Fair Work

Feature spot in the San Francisco school system exhibit on Treasure Island this year will be occupied by the college's display, J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of educational management, announced this week.

Evans Ecke, college art instructor, will assist Samuel Eckert, instructor of advertising art at the Samuel Gompers School, in designing the exhibit.

Awards

All-American Editors Voted Honorary Keys

Acting upon a suggestion by Dean Edwin C. Browne that The Guardsman receive some sort of reward for being named among the nation's six best junior college weeklies, the Executive Council last Thursday voted to award keys to the members of last semester's editorial staff responsible for gaining the college country-wide recognition.

Those who will win keys for their merit-winning work on The Guardsman are Bill Frantz, editor; Len Gross, managing editor; Daniel Rosenblat, assistant managing editor; Isadore Maloff, assistant editor; Louis Goldstone, sports editor; and Edmund Wunsch, business manager.

Allen Williams, Associated Students president, appointed Alden Thorogood, Club Advisory Board president, and Mel Chicazola to choose suitable awards for the staff members.

It is probable that the keys will be similar to those awarded Executive Council members, but with crossed quills on the face rather than crossed gavels. The keys should be ready for presentation within two weeks.

The winning of the top-ranking All-American award for junior college weekly papers marked the first time the college had come in for nation-wide recognition, Len Gross, Guardsman editor, commented.

Junior College Publicized In Exhibition Art Show

Feature spot in the San Francisco school system exhibit on Treasure Island this year will be the college display, announced Evans Ecke, college art instructor.

The college display will consist of blown up photographs, possibly to three feet, depicting the high school graduate before and after 1935.

The first group, before 1935, will consist of three photographs showing students attending outside junior colleges, seeking employment, and entering universities.

The second group, after 1935, will be a group of six enlarged photographs. They will include a student selecting courses in the new San Francisco Junior College, various types of training available, graduation, and the former student employed, Ecke said.

Between the two groups, there will be an architect's drawing of the new college campus.

Ecke is working in connection with Samuel Eckert, of Samuel Gompers Trade School, who is in charge of the entire school exhibit.

Last year art work of college students was displayed.

The exhibit will be held in the San Francisco building.

Former Students Awarded Academic Scholarships

George Barden, who attended the college in 1938, won a scholarship to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, for the duration of his sophomore year, according to Alice C. Cooper, Alpha Gamma Sigma college scholarship society adviser.

"Two students have already applied for the University of California scholarships which are being awarded during the latter part of May," Miss Cooper said.

Commenting on the fact that no date has yet been set for the next meeting of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, Miss Cooper said she hopes to announce the date soon.

Executive Council Approves Revised Associated Student Constitution; College Votes Thursday

Carnival

Posponed Until Next Semester; Picnic Instead

Meeting in executive session for the second time the college Executive Council last Sunday postponed until next semester the proposed carnival and sirkus scheduled for May 17.

After considerable debate in last Tuesday's meeting, the matter was held until the Sunday meeting for the final decision.

"No Time" Is Reason.

Reasons given for the postponement were that there was not sufficient time to plan the affair adequately and that it would be a waste of money since the buildings would not be open and there would be little to draw a crowd to the site.

As an alternative, the Executive Council Sunday accepted the report of Bob Ogg, carnival committee chairman, that a picnic and field day be held on May 17, with the actual carnival coming as a finale to next semester's Orientation week.

The picnic will have as its theme "Meet Your Campus" and will serve as a preview of the grounds and exterior of the new building.

Classes To Be Dismissed

According to Ogg, classes will be dismissed on that day at 11:45 a.m. and a parade will leave from Powell street for Balboa Park at 12:15 p.m. At one o'clock lunch, consisting of a box lunch which will be bought at the campus, and free beans and coffee will be served. From 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. game and athletic events will take place, including the final day of a decathlon, a Block Society-Faculty baseball game, and sack and potato races.

Prizes will be awarded for the winners of the games and athletic contests, Ogg announced.

There will be no booths or concessions at the picnic. "It will simply be a day of festivities and merriment at the site of the new building," Ogg concluded.

Sigmund Stern Grove Scene Of CAB Weinie Roast Today

Under the sponsorship of the Club Advisory Board, a special bean bake and weinie roast will be given for six different college organizations at Sigmund Stern Grove today, according to Mel Chicazola, in charge of activities for the occasion.

Thomas O'Neill and Russ Sweet, faculty members, are sponsoring the day for the Newman Club, Forum Club, W.A.A., Hotel and Restaurant Society, and the Block Society, added Chicazola.

Activities begin at 5 o'clock and dancing at 8 o'clock, according to plans released by Chicazola.

Text Of Proposed Constitution And By-Laws Read Carefully, Attend Assembly At 10 a.m.

Constitution of the Associated Students of The San Francisco Junior College

PREAMBLE

We, the students of San Francisco Junior College, in order to promote and control social, athletic and scholastic activities as delegated by the President of the College, do hereby establish this constitution.

ARTICLE I.

Name and Membership

1. The name of this Association shall be the Associated Students of the San Francisco Junior College.

2. All registered students of San Francisco Junior College who have paid their incidental student body dues shall be active members of the Associated Students of the San Francisco Junior College and shall, as such, be eligible to hold office in, and enjoy the privileges of the Association.

ARTICLE II.

Officers

1. The officers of the Association shall be the members of the Executive Council.

2. The Executive Council shall be composed of:

a. The President, who shall be the executive officer and official representative of the Association. He shall preside at all general assemblies of the Association and shall be chairman of the Executive Council and ex-officio member of all other committees and councils. He shall appoint all other committees and councils unless otherwise provided for by this constitution. He shall be a member of the High Sophomore class.

b. The Vice-President, who shall pro-tem assume the duties of the president during his absence or the vacancy of his office. The vice-president shall be a member of the Sophomore class.

c. The Director of Social Activities, who shall be chairman of the Social Activities Council.

d. The Rally Commissioner, who shall preside at all rallies of the Association.

e. The General Athletic Manager, who shall be appointed by the president of the Associated Students. He shall be the chairman of the General Athletic Council.

f. The President of the Club Advisory Council.

g. The Representative of the Publications Council.

h. The Chairman of the Scholarship Council.

3. The President, ~~Vice-President~~, Director of Social Activities and the Rally Commissioner shall be elected by a majority vote at a general election of the Associated Students.

4. a. The Executive Council is the Administrative and Legislative body of this Association and it shall be responsible for, and shall have final authority in, the supervision of the monies, affairs, policies, properties and conduct of the Association.

b. The Executive Council shall appoint and provide for the reasonable compensation of a technically qualified office secretary to carry out such duties as the Executive Council shall specify.

5. Regular meetings of the Executive Council shall be held once a week during each regular academic semester and six members shall constitute a quorum.

ARTICLE III.

Elections

1. The Associated Student officers shall be elected on a date selected by the Executive Council, this date to be published in The Guardsman at least two weeks previous to the election.

2. A candidate must file an intention to run by such a date as shall be specified by the Executive Council.

3. A student must be enrolled for a minimum of twelve units and must have maintained a "C" average in the second mid-term grades in the semester in which he is a candidate in order to be eligible for an Associated Student office.

4. Officers of the Freshman and Sophomore classes shall be elected at a date set by the Executive Council, this date to be published in The Guardsman at least one week previous to the election.

ARTICLE IV.

Amendments

An amendment to this Constitution shall become effective if proposed in one of the following two ways:

1. The proposed amendment to be signed by ten percent of the members of this Association and approved by a two-thirds majority vote of those present and voting at an official meeting of this Association.

2. The proposed amendment to be presented to the Executive Council and accepted by that body by a two-thirds majority vote of its members and approved by a two-thirds majority vote of those present and voting at an official meeting of this Association.

The president shall call a meeting of this Association for either or both of these purposes within two weeks after the amendment has been properly signed or has been accepted by the Executive Council. Such amendments shall be published in The Guardsman or posted in a public place at least one week previous to the meeting it is voted on.

Constitution Digest

If the new constitution is adopted on Thursday, under its terms the Executive Council will be composed of the following:

The President of the Associated Students.

The Vice President of the Associated Students.

The Director of Social Activities.

The Rally Commissioner.

The General Athletics Manager.

The President of the Club Advisory Council.

The Representative of the Publications Council.

The Chairman of the Scholarship Council.

The first four officers listed above will be elected by the general student body elections, the other will be appointive with the exception of the President of the Club Advisory Council, who will be elected by the Council he represents.

By-Laws To The New Constitution

Editor's Note: The following By-laws to the Associated Student Constitution have been proposed by the committee. If the constitution is accepted they will be passed or disapproved by the Executive Council. It should be understood that they will not be voted on at the assembly Thursday, but that action will be solely by the Executive Council. The present status of the By-laws is entirely unofficial, and they are printed only for the purposes of information.

BY-LAWS

ARTICLE I.

Parliamentary Authority

Robert's Rules of Order shall be the parliamentary authority of this Association, subject to special rules that have been adopted.

ARTICLE II.

Referendum

Sec. 1. A petition to review an official act of the Executive Council shall be submitted by the president of the Associated Students to the members of the Association at a meeting to be called within two weeks after such a petition (signed by at least ten per cent of the active members of the Association) has been presented to the president.

Sec. 2. A two-thirds majority of votes cast at a general meeting of the Association shall be needed to rescind an act of the Executive Council.

ARTICLE III.

Councils

There shall be six representative groups to carry on and supervise the major activities of the Association. In addition, the president is empowered to appoint such standing and special committees as he shall deem necessary. In general, each shall be independent within its own sphere and shall formulate its own policies, subject to the approval of the Executive Council of the Associated Students.

The president of the Associated Students shall give public notice of his intention to appoint the chairman and members of the Judicial Committee, Welfare Committee, Finance Committee, Publicity Committee, the Intramural Athletic Board, and members of the Social Activities Council at least one week previous to the time that the appointments are to be made.

The councils shall be as follows:

Sec. 1. a. The General Athletic Council, which shall be composed of the General Athletic Manager who shall be the chairman of the group, a representative of the major award winners, a representative of the minor award winners, the president of the Women's Athletic Association, a representative from the award winners of the Women's Athletic Association, and the chairman of the Intramural Athletic Board.

b. The General Athletic Council shall be empowered to make recommendations on all athletic awards, subject to the approval of the Executive Council.

Sec. 2. a. The Social Activities Council shall be composed of the Director of Social Activities, and four members at large.

b. The function of the Social Activities Council shall be to regulate all social activities of the Association subject to the approval of the Executive Council.

Sec. 3. The Club Advisory Council shall be composed of one representative from every duly chartered organization in the college.

Sec. 4. a. The Rally Council shall be composed of the Rally Commissioner, three yell leaders appointed by the Rally Commissioner, and such other members at large as the Rally Commissioner shall deem necessary.

b. The powers and duties of the Rally Council shall be to promote spirit for athletic activities.

Sec. 5. a. The Publications Council, which shall be empowered to make all rulings relative to publications within the college.

b. It shall be composed of a maximum of two members of the editorial staff and one member of the business staff of each official publication and one representative of each recognized publication of the college.

c. The chairman of the Publications Council shall be the editor of The Guardsman who shall be appointed by the president automatically upon the recommendation of the chairman of the Journalism department.

Sec. 6. a. The Scholarship Council shall be composed of a chairman and two members at large who shall be appointed by the outgoing president at the close of each semester.

b. The Scholarship Council shall be empowered to promote all scholarship activities of the Association.

ARTICLE IV.

Committees

Sec. 1. a. The Welfare Committee which shall undertake any duties that concern the welfare of the college, either of its own accord or at the request of the president.

b. The Welfare Committee shall be composed of a chairman appointed by the president and six members at large.

Sec. 2. The Finance Committee shall be composed of a chairman and two members at large appointed by the president. It will undertake the supervision and control of the allocation and expenditure of all Associated Student funds, subject to the approval to the Executive Council.

Sec. 3. The Publicity Committee, which shall consist of a chairman and four members to be appointed by the president, who shall undertake to promote and supervise the external and internal publicity of the Associated Students.

Sec. 4. The Judicial Committee shall be composed of a chairman and two men and two women members at large appointed by the president. Its duties shall be to exercise control over and pass judgment upon all matters pertaining to student conduct that are referred to it by the office of the Dean of Men.

ARTICLE V.

Cabinet

The president shall be empowered to appoint an advisory cabinet composed of five members from the Association at large. Meetings of the cabinet shall be called by the president not less than once a month. Its duties shall be to carry on intelligent discussion relative to the Association.

ARTICLE VI.

Policy

The policies, constitutions and by-laws of all councils and committees shall be submitted to the Executive Council for approval within the first three weeks of the semester.

ARTICLE VII.

Jurisdiction

Any questions and/or disputes arising over interpretation of any article or section of this constitution and by-laws shall be governed by a decision rendered by the faculty advisor of the Executive Council.

May 11 Beta Tau Hop Has Ticoulat, Spring Setting

Decorations of spring blossoms, Eddie Ticoulat and his 11 piece orchestra, and the beautiful Montclair Women's Club, all go with the Beta Tau semi-annual sports dance on Saturday, May 11, which is open to the entire college, said Barney Blanchard, president of Beta Tau.

As a special aid to students going to the east bay dance, which is only three-quarters of a mile from the bay bridge, a map of direction is being given to students buying bids, added Blanchard.

Specialties Arranged

Ticoulat has prepared several special songs and arrangements for the dance and has promised even more surprises than he presented at the recent AMS barn dance; and according to Ticoulat himself, the band will wear super-red sport jackets to fit in with the spring spirit of the occasion.

Bids may be purchased from any member of the Beta Tau for 99 cents, but, added Blanchard, students wishing to go should purchase ducats early, because there is only room for 400 couples.

WSS Theater Party This Thursday, Friday

To raise money for club needs, the Women's Service Society is sponsoring a theater party to be held at the Empire Theater, West Portal and Vicente streets, on May 9 and 10, Annette Schunick announced last week.

Feature pictures tentatively scheduled for those evenings are The Light That Failed, starring Ronald Colman and Ida Lupino, and I Take This Woman, starring Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr.

Home-made candy will also be sold in the lobby to add to the profits, Miss Schunick concluded.

PUBLICATIONS BOARD TO CONVENE

The Publications Board will convene this week to discuss next semester's Women's Athletic Association Handbook, Len Gross, Guardsman editor, announced.

FACULTY ASSOCIATION OFFICERS NAMED

Next year's officers of the Junior College Council were revealed this week by Claude A. Shull, president of the group, as follows: Vice-President, Percival Dolman; secretary, Helen Reveal; treasurer, Mrs. A. J. Mitchell; and historian, Beverly Pasqualetti.

MAY 10 LAST DAY TO PROCURE FAIR TICKETS

This Friday will mark the final day that Fair tickets will be sold at the Galileo bank, Carl W. Stough, comptroller, affirmed.

GRADUATES REMINDED OF CAP, GOWN MEASUREMENTS

Measurements for graduate's caps and gowns will be taken in the Galileo Auditorium on the afternoons of May 14, 15, and 16, Nelson A. Wells, high soph adviser, announced. A final decision on the commencement rehearsal date is still pending, he said.

New Laws To Be Approved Or Rejected In Study Hall

Assembly

Classes will not be officially excused for the Constitution Amendments Assembly, to be held Thursday, May 9, in the Powell Street study hall, at 9 a.m., Al Williams, Associated Students president, announced.

Students may attend the assembly by gaining permission from instructors, or else instructors may excuse their classes en masse to attend the meeting, Williams said.

"Recommendations for the amendment of the constitution have been proposed by the constitutional amendment committee and ratified by members of the executive council. Purpose of Thursday's assembly is to permit explanation of the proposed constitutional amendments and to give students the opportunity of voting upon the issue," Williams pointed out.

One proposed amendment eliminates the office of secretary of the Associated Students, he added.

Nomination Rally On 14th

Scheduled definitely for Tuesday, May 14, is the Associated Students Nomination Rally, which will be held in the Galileo auditorium at 2:30, Len Gross, election committee chairman, announced.

Candidates for offices, whose petitions have been properly filled out and turned in to Dean Browne by May 13, will appear on the program.

First College Primary

Setting a precedent for the college, a primary election will be held May 15, while final elections will be held May 22 at both Powell street and Galileo by means of the usual voting machines.

According to Williams in order to be considered elected a candidate for office must receive a majority of votes, instead of a plurality, as in past elections.

"If, for instance," Williams explained, "three candidates receive respectively, a vote of 200, 210, and 214, the one who has received the plurality of votes (214), is not elected. It is necessary for him to have received a majority (313 in this case) of the votes cast."

Next Semester's Officers To Be Nominated By CAB

Nominations for next semester's officers will be made at the Club Advisory Board meeting today at 1 o'clock in the lecture hall, Alden Thorogood, president of the group, announced.

Candidates to be named will be for the offices of president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer, as stipulated in the CAB constitution, which also requires that each must have been "a member of the board in good standing for one semester previous to his election."

Thorogood warned that only those members listed in writing as official representatives of their clubs are entitled to vote at the election, which will be held May 21.

Plans of the CAB club councils were reported this week as going satisfactorily. Representatives of Council 4, consisting of the Army and Navy Club, Chinese Students' Club, Japanese Students' Club, and Rifle and Pistol Club, are now taking sign-ups from their respective groups for the Greyhound tour scheduled for May 12, they announced. Each club is allowed a limited number of seats on the bus, allotted according to membership, they also said.

Council 5, which is composed of the college's fraternities and sororities, announced through its chairman, Adele Kuhn, definite plans for a tea dance on May 9 at the California Club. Playing host or hostess from 4:00 to 6:00 on that day will be the presidents of each group represented.

Constitution

By DANIEL ROSENBLAT

Passed unanimously by the college Executive Council at a special meeting last Sunday evening, the proposed revised constitution will be presented to the Associated Students for final vote on Thursday, May 9.

In addition, the council considered a set of by-laws for the new constitution, but did not take any official action for their passage until the fate of the constitution proper has been determined.

Under the terms of the new measure, the Executive Council membership would be reduced from its present ten to eight representatives by the elimination and consolidation of several offices and the introduction of new posts.

Specifically, the Associated Men Students and the Associated Women Students would be eliminated as organizations within the framework of the association, thus eliminating their representatives from the council.

In the words of a spokesman for the constitution revision committee, "It is felt that the A.M.S. and A.W.S. are only 'on paper' organizations whose only duties are the sponsoring of a limited number of social affairs during the course of the semester. By eliminating these organizations and giving their duties to a central social council, the entire student organization will become more centralized and efficient."

The central social group referred to is the proposed Social Activities Council which would be set up under an elective Director of Social Activities. Its duties would be the coordination and in a measure direction of

Soph Formal Bids Cut Down To $1.25; Sell This Week

Members of the high soph dance committee last week announced they would try to secure Noel Thomas and his orchestra to play at the California Country Club May 24, when they will hold their traditional formal.

As soon as the selection of an orchestra for this affair could be made definite, they said, the bids will be printed and thus probably made available this week. The original price of $1.50 per couple was reduced by vote of the Executive Council last week to $1.25, which has been the amount charged for past high soph formals.

Since the affair will cost in the neighborhood of $325, and high soph funds total but $230, a request for an additional $100 has been made to the Executive Council, and consideration of the matter is expected to be made at today's meeting of that body.

Names of three candidates submitted for Sophomore Sweetheart were not divulged by Pomares, who said approval on these must be first made by a high soph committee.

A Capella Choir To Sing For Portalhurst Guild

Singing for the Portalhurst Women's Guild today will be the college A Capella Choir, announced Flossita Badger, college music instructor.

The guild is composed of 250 women of the Portalhurst Community Church, located in the Parkside district.

The choir has sung for the group in the past, and this will be a return performance at the request of the guild.

In addition to the choir program, soloists will also appear.

Dorothy Mills, soprano, will sing Knowest Thou the Land, from Mignon by Thomas, and Adele's Laughing song, by Stradur.

Charles Piper, baritone, will sing the Largo, from Xerxes by Handel, and Because, by deHandelot.

He will be accompanied by Blaine Rogers.

Goldstone

Of Sound and Fury

This Is Possible—America Should Look To Its Future

LET'S establish a hypothesis of peace. The war is over. The guns of the western front are silenced. Only a short while ago the field-gray colossus smashed through France's vaunted defensive line, wheeled northward to sever the channel ports.

Columns leaping through Belgium and the Netherlands swerved south, crushing all resistance, encircled Paris with a hangman's noose while the main body smashed the besieged capital with irresistible hammer-blows.

This time there was no Marne. It was the old Schlieffen plan revised and executed to perfection. This time there was no chance for a counter-attack, and the battered Allied forces, mangled and scattered by the lightning Nazi thrusts, were mopped up quickly and efficiently even as gray divisions marched through the Arc d' Triomphe.

The war is over.

And B r i t a i n's proud war-fleet thundered in futility as low-flying air-squadrons devastated London and Liverpool, Glasgow and Newcastle.

The war is over, and Britain's flag of empire is finally struck. Her invincible navy surrendered or scuttled, her territorial armies in the Near-East and in the North shattered beyond redemption, Albion bows to the Nazi yoke.

Germany, glutted temporarily with fierce jubilation at victory over the hated foe, now settles down to consolidate her vast hegenomy that stretches from the Baltic to the Adriatic, from the Black Sea to Gibraltar and the Atlantic.

Britain and France are saddled with an indemnity whose enormity would make the tortured shades of Ghenghis Khan and Timur weep in compassion.

The war is over.

Perhaps there are ramifications. If Italy is a German ally, she is given the Mediterranean coastline as far west as the Baliearics, plus Salonika and the shores of Dalmatia. Africa is re-partitioned. To the victors the spoils.

Japan and the Soviet Union have been waiting—watching out for Number One. With startling rapidity, a world alliance of totalitarianism takes form.

To Germany, Europe west of the Vistula and the Black Sea and European Turkey. To the USSR, the Near East and India, north to Tibet and east as far as Sakhalin. To Japan, all of China, French Indo-China, Burma, Siam, the Dutch East Indies.

Australia and New Zealand declare their independence, are quickly submerged by Japanese arms.

H e l p l e s s l y, the United States watches the Philippines fall.

The war is over. British imperialism is crushed. Let God Save the King—but God didn't save the King.

With all of the world's resources at their command, the New Coalition gazes on the Western hemisphere with undisguised avidity.

The war is over, and Armageddon is on the way.

America is glad she kept out of it. "Anschluss" with Canada is realized. America sleeps while the world turns.

America tries not to think of her ultimate awakening.

Dark Command—Kansas In Those Days When North Fought South

"BLEEDING KANSAS," deep in the throes of the Civil War, was neither free-Northern or Southern-slave in sympathy. Indeed, Kansas was at the crossroads, torn between two loyalties, and as strife thus laid waste the corn fields, Kansas became the private plundering ground of William Cantrell.

Cantrell, who rode on the wind with the devil at his side, was the Jesse James of the middle-west. He and his marauding guerrilla band spread terror throughout the helpless state, looting towns, burning villages, living off the fat of a land that was undecided as to whom to give its loyalties. This indecision only made Cantrell's task easier, for he took no side in the struggle, thus making himself all the more vicious.

Dark Command is the story of Kansas in those days when the North was piecing the Union together with bayonets. It is a story told in the blood of a people "without a country." Raoul Walsh has made a neat little epic out of this virile outdoor drama. His intelligent handling of the directoral reins is especially good in the outdoor sequences that show the guerrillas at their work. Victor Young's music score is in no small way responsible for making these scenes memorable.

Walter Pidgeon gives the best performance of the principals. He draws a fine line to distinguish between Cantrell, the highly educated school teacher, and Cantrell, the gun-runner and slave smuggler. Pidgeon can turn from charming boulevardier to ruthless bandit without turning a hair, a characteristic that makes one of the best that Hollywood has too long overlooked.

John Wayne and Claire Trevor, in their third co-starring venture, will soon be the perennial Hollywood backwoods lovers. Their portrayals give evidence of the fact that their work together in the future will be even better than it is now.

In the supporting cast, the best work is done by Roy Rogers and Marjorie Main. Rogers has a pleasing personality which more than offsets his slight tendency to go "juvenile."

Miss Main, as Cantrell's mother, makes her few moments count. Her performance reflects all the shame and misery that her son brought on her. Uneducated as she was, she was determined not to let Will lead the life of crime that his four brothers had led. Although she failed at this, she succeeded in her vow that she would kill her son rather than have him kill any more men.

Parts of Dark Command are taken from history. Much of it is fictitious. But factual or feigned, it is still as fine a picturization of a little known era as has come out of Hollywood in many a moon. With it Republic definitely establishes itself as one of the major producing companies, for it has made a compact drama full of suspense and action. Dark Command may never go down in history, but at least it provides better-than-average entertainment.

More On Constitution

all social events of the association. It will be noted that the vice-president no longer serves as a social committee head, but rather is elected solely as a vice-president.

Eliminated entirely from the association under the terms of the new constitution would be the office of Secretary. Since the council hired a full time non-student office secretary, the necessity for such a student officer was no longer felt by the council.

Also eliminated has been the Men's Athletic Council. In its place a General Athletics Council has been established to be under the chairmanship of the General Athletics Manager who would represent the group on the council. W.A.A. representatives would have a place on the Athletics Council but would not have a separate representative on the Executive Council.

The old Rally Committee has been revamped into a Rally Council under the chairmanship of an elective Rally Commissioner who will appoint the yell leaders. "We felt the need for a special officer to handle the details of athletic rallies, rather than merely delegating it to the yell leader. Under the new setup yell leaders will be appointed on the basis of their yelling ability and will concentrate on that phase of their activities," a committee member remarked.

Last addition to the Executive Council is the Chairman of the Scholarship Council who would be appointed by the president to undertake the supervision of activities of a scholarship and educational nature.

The President of the Club Advisory Board will continue to hold office on the Executive Council as before, but the name of the organization has been changed to Club Advisory Council in keeping with the new constitution's terms whereby all organization represented on the Executive Council are termed councils, while all others will be constituted as committees.

Under the terms of the constitution, if it is accepted, the offices for which students should consider running for are the following: President of the Associated Students, Vice President, Director of Social Activities and Rally Commissioner. Other offices will be appointive.

THE GUARDSMAN SPORTS

Diamond Mixup

Wrong Schedule Gives Ram Nine Win Over Placer

Only one game of the scheduled double-header was played against Placer last Saturday by the Ram baseball nine. The locals won easily, 8 to 3, behind the six-hit pitching of Al Giovanetti.

A mistake in the schedule, which had named San Mateo as the Ram opponents last weekend, was discovered too late to reserve a field.

According to Jack Gaddy, Ram horsehide mentor, the two fields at Funston were reserved for last Saturday afternoon. There was not enough time to play two games, since the teams were almost an hour late in starting the games, after drying out the soggy field.

"Placer will concede us the second game if we are in the running for the championship after the season is ended," Gaddy said. "We have yet to meet San Mateo and Salinas. If we win all four of the remaining contests, we should tie for first position."

Locals Explode In Fifth

Trailing three to one, the Ram batsmen exploded and collected four runs in the fifth inning. Bob Webber, left fielder, was hit by a pitched ball and sent to first. Mike DeStefano, second sacker, walked, sending Webber to second.

Giovanetti walked to fill the bags. Harry Aleo, right fielder, struck out. Frank Mullins, s h o r t s t o p, came through with a hit to score Webber and DeStefano. Then Ross Wolcott, leading batter and third baseman for this contest, blasted out a hit, scoring Giovanetti and Mullins. Leo Mazzetti, catcher, walked. Walt Hjort, first baseman, was the second man to be hit by a pitched ball, and once more the bases were filled, but two men were out.

George Donovan, right fielder, struck out to end the inning. After getting a two run lead, Giovanetti allowed only three hits, and no Placer runner reached third base.

Clock Stops Second Tilt

Even though the time was running short, Gaddy started the second game with Bob (Old Faithful) Hvidt on the mound. The contest ran for three innings, then was declared "no contest" by both coaches.

Gaddy, together with the one Ram rooter, Mel Chicazola, spent at least half an hour trying to locate an open field for the second game. But every diamond in San Francisco was in use.

Gaddy was pleased with the first game, since the boys returned to hitting form. Wolcott, Mezzetti, Giovanetti, and many others added many points to their batting averages. Though some of the players were not used to the new positions they were in, and made errors, neither side made more than three errors during the game.

Loss Of Regulars Felt

The loss of Bob Nishi and Roy Micheli was felt. Giovanetti was shifted to the mound, and Hjort came in to play first. DeStefano, after a long absence, took Wolcott's place at the initial sack, and Wolcott played a good game at third. Aleo, former starting pitcher, played center field in place of Nishi.

"We can take a pair of games from San Mateo next week with the team as it now stands," Gaddy confided to dressing room listeners. "I am glad to see that Giovanetti has returned to pre-season hurling form. With two dependable pitchers we could have won all of our league games. I think that I have two pitchers now in Hvidt and Giovanetti."

Gaddy plans to use the same lineup at San Mateo as started the first Placer contest.

End Of The Season For Them

Pictured above is the 1940 Ram track team. These athletes have had a good season this year, considering the handicap of having no home practice facilities. With the completion of the Balboa Park campus, they will have their own oval, and should make a better showing, especially in home meets. The gentleman at the right of the rear row is Coach Russ Sweet, who has given the cinder stars much needed training and instruction this season.

About half of this season's team will be returning next year, and Sweet should turn out a team that will truly represent the college in 1941, if he receives a fair share of new prospects.

Trackmen Wind Up Season After Loss At Modesto

Sacramento won the Northern California Junior College track championships at Modesto last Saturday, while the Ram cindermen came in next to last, after garnering 2½ points.

The 2½ points were earned by the relay team of Don White, Bob Lowery, Bert Korn, and Jack McMeekin; and Hagan in the high jump.

The Ram trackmen will probably not enter the Fresno Relays, scheduled for next Saturday, although this statement could not be confirmed.

Following Sacramento for high point honors were San Mateo, Modesto, and Salinas. Santa Rosa and Marin were also entered in the meet.

If the locals do not enter the Fresno Relays, the college track season will be over. The Rams have had a good season, considering the scarcity of material, and the lack of a home track for practice.

Ram Tennisters Beat Placer, Face Bulldogs Saturday

Though the local tennisters are still leading the league, having won seven matches from Placer Saturday by default, the crucial test for the champion tennisters is San Mateo, who will be met next Saturday.

Placer has defaulted all of her matches for the past several weeks. No one knows the reason for the default, but it is thought that Placer has a weak team, and doesn't wish to spend the money to send a losing team around the conference loop.

If the Rams can win the San Mateo matches next weekend they will be assured of the championship, since next week's matches wind up this season's play.

WAA Fall Election Polls Open To Active Members

Election of officers for the Women's Athletic Association for next semester is now in progress, with active members of WAA being allowed to vote upon presentation of membership cards, according to Thursa Scott, president of the association.

Nominees are president, Barbara Smith and Betty Teter; vice-president, Rita McDonald and Blanche Nyes; secretary, Rita Wyman and Jeanne Arnold; and treasurer, Bernice Strube and Elizabeth Van Emmon, Miss Scott revealed.

Found Your Future Mate! College Records May Help

MADISON, WIS. — (ACP) — Last June a dapper young University of Wisconsin alumnus of the Class of 1934, back on the campus for class reunions, walked into the Alumni Records office to inquire as to the present whereabouts of a certain former classmate. She—yes, it was a member of the opposite sex in whom he was interested—had been a pretty nice girl on the campus and he had dated her several times.

Did the office know where she was living? Had she married? The office did, and gave him all the vital information. She was not married, it so happened, and was living in a city not too far distant from our hero's home.

Not long ago the Records office received a notice of the forthcoming marriage of the pair with thanks for the "cooperation" in bringing about the match.

"All-American Girl" Reigns Over Tourney Week; College Women Invited To WAA Sports Banquet

Reigning over the college this week is the "All-American Girl," ideal of every college woman. Setting the standard, she is being used as the theme of Tourney Week, the climax of activities for the semester of the Women's Athletic Association.

For the remainder of Tourney Week, the following program was released by Alma Koopman, vice-president of the association:

Rifle—WAA vs. Rifle class at the Galileo Armory on May 7.

Swimming—Wednesday, May 8, a program by all swimming classes, from 12:30 until 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Banquet—May 9 in the Galileo Cafeteria, at 6:30 Thursday evening.

College Women Invited

All women of the college are invited to attend this banquet, and those planning to attend are urged by the committee in charge to invite their fathers or an "adopted" faculty member, or to come alone.

Tickets for the banquet are 50 cents and may be purchased from club managers, the bank at Galileo, and the ticket office at the Powell street building, Miss Koopman revealed.

Toastmistress for the evening will be Miss Koopman; Thursa Scott will present the first team award and announce election results; Bertha Keller, adviser of the WAA, will present the highest awards; and Margaret McLaren, guest speaker, will discourse on the topic The All-American Girl, according to the Tourney Week program book.

Banquet Entertainment

Also taken from the program book is the entertainment for the banquet. The dancing club will demonstrate three American folk dances; a Hawaiian dance will be given by Marjorie Lowson; Priscilla Finley will sing a song; a monologue will be presented by Muriel Davis; a novelty will be given by Maxine Turner and Rema Corbit; and two tap dances will close the entertainment of the evening.

Campus Sports Personalities

By KEI HORI

Many people despise their middle name. So it is with Rosie. Of course, you don't know just who Rosie is yet, but when Oscar calls for Thursa Rose Scott, immediately all the men on the campus jump up and take notice . . . or so we were led to believe.

Rosa Alias Thursa

Nineteen years of hiding under Thursa when Rosie could have done just as well is more than Oscar can figure out. 'Course there were a few in Oakland who knew her as Rosie, as did a fella (let it go at that), but how she got away from being called Rosie, especially when she is a camp director . . .

After finishing her P.E. major's course, she plans to settle down, just as any good Rosie should do . . . and why not, when she can cook the best fried aigs this side of a frying pan. There is, however, an imp within her that wants her to become an actress. (Imp, as in Oscar.) She is better qualified than Oscar is, because, by some tie-up somewhere, she personally knows S p e n c e r T r a c y, Pat O'Brien and many other luminaries.

Votes For Date Fun

Rosie, in a date, expects to have fun, as do other Roses, and this one enjoys singing and dancing for entertainment. She is very proud of the extra half inch in her 5 feet 3 inch construction.

Fried chicken and French fried "patootics" are what she dotes upon, but her topic of conversation usually swings toward sports and "moom pitchers."

"Chi-ye arre grrand," Oscar said. We think so, too.

Oscar's Faux Pas

A few weeks ago Oscar interviewed Pete Aydellote, aspirant yell king, and stated he attended "Cabrillo" Junior and Senior High School. 'Zamatterofack, there ain't no such school in Oakland. Oscar, you're fired!!

Championship Match Lure As Amori Hunts Talent

Anxious to find the leading bowler in the college, Joe Amori, bowling instructor, announced that he will place the five highest scorers of the Monday-Wednesday beginner's class against the five best bowlers of the Tuesday-Thursday advanced class. In this way the handicap will narrow down to two members who will bowl for the championship.

The match which was to have been played against the Stanford Bowling team on Wednesday evening, May 1, at the Golden Gate Alleys, was called off because of the college holiday.

Conlan Grooms Ram Golfers For NCJC Tee Championships

With only a week and a half remaining before the Northern California Junior College golf championships are held at Modesto, Coach Louis Conlan is hurrying to ready his team of Hoffman, Rice, McLaughlin, and Kamper for the matches.

College Women To Present Programs In High Schools

For the purpose of acquainting high school girls with the curriculum and social activities of the Junior College, a group of women prominent in scholastic and social circles in the college will present programs at five of the city's high schools, according to Bertha Keller, WAA adviser.

The following program will be presented, Miss Keller said: College activities, Barbara Smith; Ramette Harmonisers, Priscilla Finley and Barbara Smith; Jaycee social life, Muriel Grenelle; folk dance, WAA dance club; semi-professional courses, Rema Corbit; tap dances, dance class; university preparatory, Priscilla Finley; songs, Dorothy Mills; dances, Irene Wood.

High schools included in the itinerary are: Girls High School, Galileo, Washington, Balboa, and M i s s i o n High School.

While Thinking

COLLEGE

EVER eager to gain public attention, two esteemed members of the college athletic society turned pyromaniacs last Tuesday and lit a match to a copy of The Guardsman and what was left of a copy of one of the daily newspapers.

We are puzzled as to whether the boys engaged in their somewhat childish act for the purpose of assuming the role of tough he-men who cared for nothing, or because they were unable to comprehend the contents of the newspapers.

If the latter is correct, we are flattered; for the efforts of The Guardsman are not directed towards those students who are still in their adolescent period.

Perhaps it would be wiser for the two athletes to confine their grandstanding to the gridiron.

It is not the burning of the newspapers that has aroused indignation. That in itself is a small matter. It is the underlying lack of courtesy and politeness, and evidence of disrespect for the feelings of others that has caused comment.

Although at times we are inclined to forget, we are in the Powell Street building through the courtesy of the University of California. On several occasions the owners of the building have registered serious complaints and threatened to throw the college out.

If it were not for the efforts of several members of the administration, we would even now be without the Powell location.

Of course, it can be said that the whole matter was but a childish prank played by persons with somewhat immature minds, but there is an old saying that "Ignorance is no excuse" (and we do mean ignorance).

Acting on impulse may be a commendable trait at times, but in a situation such as this it would have been much more intelligent to pause for a second and consider the possible results of the prank.

STATE

WE SEE where a Los Angeles judge threw the complaint against Bertrand Russell, the much discussed math professor at UCLA, out of court.

Which just goes to prove that there are still some broad-minded, intelligent people left in the nation.

To be noted with more than little interest is the sweeping victory President Roosevelt achieved in California's primaries this week.

Left in a swirl of ignominous dust were Lieutenant Governor Patterson and "Cactus Jack" Garner. The defeat of the Ham 'n' Eggs candidate requires little mention. Let's hope that's all it receives in the future.

Incidentally, who said Roosevelt was on the wane?

Astronomers To Scan Skies At Lick Observatory

If atmosphere and the celestial bodies permit, the local astronomers will view the heavens from the 36 inch refractor telescope at at the Lick Observatory tomorrow night, May 11.

"The Astronomy Club will be the host to anyone in the college who is interested in this field of science. Not only students, but their parents also are welcome," Louis Berman, of the college Astronomy Department and faculty adviser for the club, said.

The Astronomy Club has been planning this field trip all semester. Before ascending the summits of Mt. Hamilton in the evening, the future men and women of mirrors and stars will picnic and swim at Alum Rock Park, which is on the way to Lick Observatory.

"San Francisco students and friends of astronomy will meet at 12:30 p.m. in front of the Public Library at Larkin and McAllister Streets. East Bay persons who are going will meet us at Alum Rock Park," Berman continued. "All students who take astronomy should go on this trip, although it is not compulsory. Most science majors would likely be interested. Although I cannot say what will be visible that night, I think we will observe the planets that are now in view.

"We are going in private cars, and those who can provide a car or those who have no transportation should get in touch with me this week," Berman concluded. The group will return before midnight. The observations will begin around 7 p.m.

Club Advisory Board

Nominees To Have Future Decided May 21

By THEODORA WONG

After a short delay until a quorum gathered, Club Advisory Board nominations for next semester's officers got under way last Tuesday with the following results:

President: Robert Ogg, Robert Schlesinger, Burton Wines. Vice-president: Ruby Klistoff, Lyba Mackie, Marion Schrick. Secretary: Gus Waegemann, Theodora Wong.

With precedent set by the Associated Students this semester, Alden Thorogood, CAB president, announced that this group will also hold two elections, primary and general; both, however, will be run on the same date, May 21, since that is the last meeting of the group.

Reminding the club board that only official representatives of clubs in good standing, who have attended a majority of meetings, may run for office or vote, Thorogood asked that new members obtain a written identification of their capacity, signed by the president of their respective organizations.

Constitution Discussed

Of high interest at this meeting of the CAB was the proposed new constitution and by-laws of the Associated Students, under which the club board functions. Discussing the sections directly concerning the CAB, Thorogood noted that under the new order this group would be renamed Club Advisory Council, "which is all right," he smiled broadly, "but I can't imagine the name CACCY (pronounced "cacky") across the front page of our bulletin.

This remark was in reference to CABBY, first issue of which was put out by the CAB in March. Second issue, after many postponements, will definitely come out May 21, at the group's final meeting, Robert Schlesinger, editor, announced.

Council 5 Dances

Scheduled for yesterday afternoon was a tea dance at the California Club given by CAB Council 5, composed of the college's sororities and fraternities, Adele Kuhn, chairman for this group, announced. For Sunday, May 12, Council 4, consisting of the Army and Navy Club, Chinese Students' Club, Japanese Students' Club, and Rifle and Pistol Club, has reserved three Greyhound buses for an all-day tour. Those who have signed up for the tour are asked to meet at Market Street and Grant Avenue at 10 a.m.

Bean Bake Postponed

A bean bake and weinie roast, announced earlier this week for Council 3 (Block Society, Forum Club, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Newman Club, and Women's Service Society), was postponed because Sigmund Stern Grove was not available.

Funds for these club activities were made possible by an allocation from the Executive Council this semester, which first gave the CAB $500, but later reduced the sum to $300 after the finance committee's revised budget for nearly all groups receiving Associated Students funds was approved. Member clubs of the CAB, which had been divided into five councils so that each would receive an allotment of $100, therefore now have $60 for financing their respective activities.

WAA Representatives Join Santa Rosa Playday

Nearly 30 representatives of the Women's Athletic Association will travel to Santa Rosa Junior College on Saturday, May 11, to participate in a General Sectional Playday, Alma Koopman, vice-president of the association, announced late last week.

Those interested should sign up with Miss Koopman or at the gymnasium at Galileo, Bertha Keller, adviser of WAA, said.

"Transportation by bus has been arranged for and is being provided by the WAA," Miss Keller said.

Postpone Final Ratification Until Next Monday At 9 a.m.

The student-body assembly for final ratification of the new Associated Students Constitution was postponed until 9 o'clock Monday morning, as a result of a motion introduced at the first assembly at Powell Street yesterday.

Meeting place for the final vote will be in the Study Hall of the Powell Street Building.

The motion for postponement, made on the grounds that the full seven days required between publication of the new constitution's text and its ratification by the students must be allowed to expire before action, came at the suggestion of Al Williams, Associated Students president.

STUDENTS CARDS TO BE ASSEMBLY ADMISSION

Because members of the Associated Student organization only are entitled to vote in organization meetings, students who wish to attend the assembly Monday morning are advised by President Allen Williams to have their student cards ready for presentation at the door of the Study Hall.

"In the common interest," Williams explained, presiding at the assembly, "the students should be permitted to exercise their full prerogative, as regards the duly sober and unhurried judgment and study necessary for an intelligent decision on this important proposal."

Previous to the unexpected adjournment, the constitutional assembly, attended by approximately 250 students was the scene of heated controversy over misunderstood clauses of the new constitution, whose complete text was published in The Guardsman of Tuesday, May 7.

Under fire of angry partisans was the proposal for reconstruction of the representation on the college Executive Council, and particularly violent recrimination was leveled at the plan for the elimination of the AMS and AWS, and their subsequent replacement by the Social Activities Council, a body on which both men and women would be represented.

Commenting on the suggested change, however, both AMS and AWS presidents viewed the revision favorably.

"I am in favor of the proposed change as long as it gives both men and women an equal share and responsibility in the conduct of student government," said Gloria Miller, AWS President, "and there can be no objection as long as no disparity or discrimination between the men and women is shown."

Adding his voice in favor of the change, Lyle Shultz, AMS President, declared that the proposed Social Activities Council should be able to handle the duties now performed by the men's and women's organizations —perhaps with greater efficiency.

"The new setup," said Shultz, "will avoid unnecessary duplication of functions. I feel that the Social Activities Council will be able to cope adequately with all college social events."

Optimistic over the outlook for Monday's final assembly Al Williams expressed his confidence in eventual passage of the new constitution.

May 20 Set Tentatively For Forum Publication

Selections have been completed for this semester's issue of Forum Magazine, according to Dorothy Mercer, faculty adviser of the publication.

"The editorial staff convened last Tuesday evening, to discuss the various problems which have arisen in connection with the publication and, if possible, to select a contest winner," she said, "whose contribution, in the eyes of the judges possesses, real literary value and artistic merit."

Tentative date of publication has been scheduled for Monday, May 20, and a total of 400 copies will be on sale.

Students may obtain their copies in the check room of the Extension building or at the bank in the Galileo building.

Miss Mercer suggested that students wishing to buy a copy of the publication do so on the first day of sale, and thereby eliminate the last minute rush which has resulted in past years.

"Considered the most outstanding issue to date, the editorial staff feels justified in recommending the periodical to every student in the college," she continued, "for diversity of subject matter will be presented, as well as variety of literary forms."

Three Candidates Named For Sophomore Sweetheart

Names of candidates for Sophomore Sweetheart, that queen who will rule over sophomore week, May 20-24, were released by Art Pomares, class president, as follows:

Mary Bartholomew, Alpha Phi Omega; Elizabeth "Zib" Harrison, Phi Beta Rho; Anita Welt, Alpha Lambda Chi.

Winner Selected May 15

Selection of one of these candidates candidates will be decided May 15, Pomares announced, and an attempt is being made to secure voting machines for the purpose so that students voting for their choice may not turn in several ballots, as some have done in previous semesters.

Definite date for the high soph rally has been set finally for May 23, 2:30 o'clock, at the Galileo Auditorium, Hal Hoffman, rally chairman, revealed. Plans, now nearly complete, include the prominent participation of the Block Society, he added.

Formal At Country Club

Culmination of high soph events will be a formal dance held in the Colonial atmosphere of the California Country Club, Pomares said. Bids now on sale at the Galileo bank are at $1.25 per couple, he added, and will be limited to 150. Orchestra for this affair has not yet been secured, but members of the dance committee hope to engage Noel Thomas and his band, according to Pomares.

Business Students Find Full-Time Positions

Two students of the college business department were placed in full-time positions last week, announced F. Grant Marsh, chairman of the department.

Gloria Miller, president of the Associated Women Students, was placed at the Sun Life Insurance Company, and Mary Keating, a business major, was placed at the New York Life Insurance Company, in San Francisco. A part-time position was opened to Borghild Thorsen at the Phoenix Insurance Company.

Lack Of Funds Balks Plans For AWS Tea Dansant

Plans for the semi-annual Associated Women Students tea dansant have been definitely dropped for this semester, Margaret Dougherty, AWS adviser, announced this week.

Lack of funds was responsible for the decision not to have the dance, she said, adding that various extra expenses had arisen during the course of the semester.

Candidates Vie For Offices At May 14 Rally

Candidates for student body offices, whose petitions have been properly filled out and turned in to Dean Edwin C. Browne by Monday, May 13, will appear at the Nomination Rally, which will be held May 14 in the Galileo Auditorium at 2:30, according to Len Gross, election chairman.

Students will be officially excused from their classes for the rally, according to Registrar Paul Mohr, but the usual reporting to their classes must be done first.

Three For President

Candidates for the office of president includes Lyle Shultz, AMS president; Alden Thorogood, CAB president, and Mel Chicazola, Men's Athletic Council president.

Personnel of the election committee includes Daniel Rosenblat, Hal Hoffman, Thursa Scott, Florence Hansen, Bill Hall, Rema Corbett, and committee chairman, Gross.

Primary Election May 15

Setting a precedent for the college, a primary election will be held May 15. Both Powell Street and Galileo will be the scene of this as well as the final elections, which will be held May 22, by means of the usual voting machines.

Also in effect, according to Al Williams, Associated Students president, will be the ruling that the winning candidate must receive a majority instead of a plurality of the votes cast.

Students Warned To Make Up Entrance Tests

Registered students who have not as yet taken the required group of aptitude tests must report for them on both Wednesday, May 15, and Thursday, May 16, at 1:15 p.m. in the Galileo cafeteria, announced Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

On Wednesday, May 15, the Subject A test (Thurstone Psychological) will be given. Thursday the Iowa high school content and the Strong Vocational Interest tests will be given.

Change In Art Schedule Swells General Fund $100

Unique in Executive Council records this semester was the return to the general fund of $100 which had been previously allotted to the college art department to undertake display decorations at the Balboa campus.

Since the art department was at present engaged in a project to appear in the San Francisco Building at the Exposition, Lloyd Luckmann, faculty association head who returned the money, explained that the department would have to forego its work for the campus until next semester, hence there was no need for the money.

After this acceptance, the council returned to its customary process of dispensing Associated Student funds, and disposed of $45 to the A Cappella Choir, $100 to the high soph budget, and $70 to cover the modified version of the proposed Sirkus at Balboa Park.

A decision to abandon the dance to have been held as a climax to the picnic and field day, was arrived at following a lively discussion.

On a review of remaining Executive Council funds, by Daniel Rosenblat, finance committee chairman, the council finally agreed that a dance held at this time did not merit the approximate $225 that the event would entail.

To pay the salary of the executive secretary during the summer months, $170 was transferred from the college reserve fund to the Executive Council fund.

Constitution Held Best Ever; Objections Believed Unfounded

MONDAY the students of the college will again convene to discuss and vote on the proposed amendments to the Associated Student constitution.

The constitution to be voted upon is undoubtedly the best improvement in student government that has ever been made in the college.

Reason for much of the objection to the article is because many students are either uninformed or misinformed as to its purpose.

For the sake of clarity and understanding let us examine the document.

First, let us examine the proposed change in the AMS and the AWS. These organizations in the past have had as their function the sponsoring and presenting of social affairs such as teas, smokers, and dances. The proposed change would give this job to the Social Activities Council, thus eliminating the necessity of having three separate organizations handling social affairs.

In an efficient democracy, such as is necessary in a college government, there is no need of having duplication of jobs. The forming of a general social activities group to handle all social affairs within the college is the most efficient and intelligent manner of conducting student government.

Contrary to popular belief, the elimination of the AMS and the AWS does not mean that the men will plan women's functions or women plan the men's functions. The Social Activities Council will be composed of BOTH MEN AND WOMEN WHO WILL CARRY ON THE ACTIVITIES OF THEIR RESPECTIVE SEXES. Instead of having two representatives on the Executive Council however, there will be but one, the Director of Social Activities.

There has also been considerable question raised as to the advisability of eliminating the representation of men's and women's athletics on the Executive Council in favor of one student representing the entire field of athletics.

Here too, students seem to fear that one sex is getting slighted in favor of the other. This is most definitely not true. There is no need of having two representatives from the same department when one would serve as well and be much more efficient.

The General Athletic Manager would be responsible for both men's and women's athletics and would act as the representative on the Executive Council. This method has been carried out in many of the major universities throughout the nation and should prove successful here.

This does not mean that the WAA is being given the cold shoulder. Quite the contrary. The General Athletics Council will be composed of students from BOTH THE MEN'S AND THE WOMEN'S ATHLETICS WHO WILL HANDLE THE ATHLETIC ACTIVITIES OF THER RESPECTIVE DEPARTMENTS.

Here again, the function and activities of the men and women are the same but the duplication of having the general field of athletics represented by two persons on the Executive Council is eliminated.

There has been considerable fear shown in some quarters that a dictatorship was being set up because the president of the Associated Students had the power of appointing all committees. It was feared that this would lead to a highly systematized spoils system.

The entire system of American democracy is based on the check and balance system. In the new constitution this system of checks and balances is amply demonstrated. It is true that the President has the power to appoint committees and their chairman. He has always had that power and examination of our present constitution will prove as much.

The important fact is that the new constitution specifically states that THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL HAS FINAL AUTHORITY ON ALL DECISIONS PERTAINING TO THE ACTIVITIES OF THE ASSOCIATED STUDENTS. This means that the council has the power to disapprove any appointment made by the president.

Minority groups within the college have raucously attempted to shout down any explanation of the new constitution. Don't be fooled by their asinine attempts to appear important. The Executive Council and the constitution committee spent many hours trying to construct a constitution that would serve the best interests of the college as a whole.

The result is one of the most democratic and at the same time efficient constitutions that has ever been written. It would be folly to return to the ways of the old constitution when the new document is such a great improvement.

JUNE 3 DEADLINE FOR NYA SLIPS

NYA time slips for the month of May will be due June 3 at the Powell Street office, Edward H. Redford, college NYA director, announced.

FINAL SCHEDULE CHANGED

No final examinations will be held on Friday, May 31, because of a school holiday declared by the Board of Education, according to word released by the registrar's office.

Finals that were originally scheduled for this day have been changed to Monday, May 27.

The 12 o'clock Tuesday-Thursday classes will have their finals at Powell Street from 1 to 4 p.m. on Friday, June 7, instead of as previously planned.

This will permit graduating students to attend rehearsal that morning at the War Memorial Opera House.

Wednesday Primaries Give Chance To Practice Democratic Privileges

WEDNESDAY, the primary elections for next semester's Associated Student officers will be held.

These primaries will serve to eliminate the candidates with the fewest votes, so that the winner of the final election can receive a majority, such procedure being in keeping with the principles of our American democracy.

This subject of voting is rather a touchy matter. It has caused much wonderment and speculation from many persons including those in the outside world who have no connection with the college. It is hard to realize that in a college of this size, there have never been a thousand votes cast. Last semester, when the number of votes reached almost 700, was the closest the college has yet come to the thousand mark.

Of course it isn't necessary to have a thousand votes cast in an election, but from the standpoint of fairness and intelligence, it would certainly be most advisable.

Someone is always willing to offer the old and worn excuse that he does not have the time to vote. This is of course ridiculous to the extreme, since voting time is only five minutes. Other persons claim that they have to wait in line for too long a time. That contention also is without basis, for last semester additional voting machines were added to eliminate any such condition.

Strange, that here in America men are forever urging their fellows to exercise their constitutional rights while in many countries in Europe, such a privilege is denied.

Democratic people seem to be wrapped in an attitude of complete lassitude when it comes to realizing their rights and privileges.

This lassitude is particularly noticeable among a great many of the present generation of college students, who, like those of us here, fail to appreciate their advantages and act accordingly.

The primary election next week isn't merely something for the benefit of the candidates for office. It is much more than that. It is a perfect example of the procedure we will go through when we become voting citizens. It is the opportunity for each member of the Associated Students to exercise his most democratic privilege; the right to vote.

Such an opportunity should not be wasted.

May 17 Picnic At New Campus Offers Adequate Substitute For Originally Planned College Sirkus

AN EXPLANATION of the reasons why the proposed college sirkus was postponed until next semester and a picnic substituted instead would seem to be in order.

First, there is the time element. May 17 is only one short week away. The possibility of being able to prepare and publicize the event adequately to get a large turnout is exceedingly unlikely.

In addition to the factor of time, there is the factor of finance to be considered. Naturally it will cost as much money (or more) next semester but there will be ample time to assure a large attendance, so that the money will not be wasted.

Perhaps the most important point considered was that the college really had nothing to offer the public in the way of entertainment. Since the theme of the day was to be "Meet The Campus," it was felt that unless the buildings were open to the public, there would be little or no point in urging people to come to Balboa Park merely to view the landscape. Unfortunately, the campus will not be completed by May 17; consequently, it would be impossible to gain access to the building.

Although at first glance, the plans for the picnic on May 17 may not seem as colorful as the plans for the carnival, it should be remembered that it also will provide the students with a good time and an afternoon of gay celebration.

There is still a reason for celebration, and perhaps the picnic and the events to be held during the day more suitably indicate the underlying spirit of the occasion: the near completion of the new building and the end of jouneying from campus to campus in search of an education.

FREEDOM of thought and of action is threatened in our world, and if we are to preserve the freedom which has been won for us at great cost, it is imperative that universities, and university men and women, be alive to the issues and alert in playing their part.—Queens University's Dr. R. C. Wallace tells today's collegians to take their place in the world of affairs. (A.C.P.)

AS WE sit here and ponder over this faithful old typewriter which has pounded out reams of gossip (good and bad), it suddenly dawns upon our soft, whitish convoluted mass occupying the cranium of a vertebrate, seat of consciousness and volition (brain to you), that finals are approaching with sudden unawareness.

Some of us are just beginning to realize that term papers are due; back homework that wasn't done has to be made up; too many cuts, just because it was nice weather and everyone was down at Union Square—and to top off this nice affair that we are embedded in, is the fact that Treasure Island opens two days before finals commence.

"Ha, ha," laughs the bewhiskered scholar, who incidentally better watch his step in math, "you have nothing to worry about if you start in now and study every spare minute." "Izzat so," we mutter. "Don't you ever pass steamship offices, whose windows show posters of beautiful maidens with leis on sunny beaches?"

Or railroad offices, where you can ponder through tons of information about the mountains of dear old USA. That's the cause of the so-called dead pan expression seen on many a face these days—truth of the matter is that this person of the SCDPE is thinking about the cool streams, trout fresh from the mountain lake slowly being cooked over the fire (gosh, can't you almost smell it cooking?), and lazy summer evenings spent killing harmless (?) little mosquitoes and other bugs.

But let's get on with other things or else we'll start packing our sleeping bag and pots and cans, ready for a journey—only where, no one knows.

The college is, during its short history, already noted for many outstanding students—and in many fields which include sports, business, and the arts. This year's GGIE should bring fame and possible fortune to a few more erstwhile young men and women who are destined to become ROSEBUDS in the next few weeks.

Yes, that man known to young and old as a top rank producer of outstanding hits of the theatuh, is staging an Aquacade at Treasure Island. Mr. Billy Rose is planning to feature many of our more puchritudinous young men and women of the Pacific Coast, a few, no less, from our college. We can't quote any names right now, but from inside sources, which are usually correct, a young woman from the college is PLENTY GOOD.

The 60th annual national archery tournament will be held at Massachusetts State College next August.

Counter-Point

In Retrospect—
Events Of The Past
Repeat Themselves

EUROPE is at war—and across the news pages of the nation's press there pours the story of that war, the tactics, and strategy, the events, the actions and the sudden death.

Headlines scream their wares—gains, losses, invasions and attacks, peace rumors and war rumors—and behind each headline, behind each blazoned streamer there lies a story of the past.

When black type announces the offer of a reward for the capture of Hitler, the mind turns back to another war and another day when a small, misguided but determined group so dramatically violated the neutrality of Holland in an ill-conceived attempt to kidnap the fleeing ex-Emperor of Germany in order that the cry of "Hang the Kaiser" might not be in vain.

When the busy linotypes pour out their leaden stories of Italy wavering on the brink—not at war, not at peace, swaying with the wind of events, there comes the memory of another fateful spring in 1915 when Italy once before stood at the crossroads, and a rather ineffectual little Socialist editor, Benito by name, shouted loudly first for peace and then for war.

When a feverish, cursing editor desperately rearranges his front pages at the last moment to tell a tale of British withdrawal from an ill-fated Norwegian expedition, it is not difficult to imagine his predecessor in the midst of similar activity as the cables brought news of British abandonment of the Gallipoli campaign a quarter of a century ago.

THROUGH the theme and point of today's war there runs another theme, a counterpoint of things that have been, the strange affiliation of event to event as history repeats itself.

Twenty-five years ago the Empire tottered towards inescapable destruction. Victorious German legions poured across France with such determination that only Von Kluck's blunder at the crucial moment saved Paris from the hands of the invaders. On the seas a single German submarine sank three British cruisers within the space of five minutes, and the pessimist predicted staunchly the end of Britain's naval might before the crushing force of the enemy's own weapon. On the home front the cabinet was on the defensive against harsh attacks, would eventually fall while the world shook its collective head and spoke of dusk of Empire and the impossibility of further hope for a nation so decadent that it could not maintain an internal stability in the face of the foe.

THERE is a lesson in counterpoint, a lesson in the past that should be heeded. In the war that was—the opening phases showed the might of the would-be conqueror, and the world spoke of a new order and a new master, yet before the grim play's curtain rang down to the finale, the scenes had shifted as no one had hoped but only prayed they would in the dark days of 1915.

In the war that is—the opening phases have shown the might of the new Napoleon, but the story of the final curtain has not yet been written—the Empire is not yet dead.

Little Sir Oyan,
How Do You Do?
G.J.B. Bids You Hello

OF LATE publishing houses have been collecting extra shekels from the presentation of plays in book form. Plays have been presented in reading form for some time and it is impossible to predict the financial future. However, it looks as though the publishing houses may glorify plays in a way comparable to the glorification of the American baby.

Pick up any play for reading and you may find . . . Step Right Up, by William Oyan, with a preface by George Jean Bernard, dedicated to the American Veterans of Foreign Wars. Negligible, but effective.

. . . A Little Child Shall Lead Them, by G.J.B. Under the noses of the most astute drama critics has come a smell entirely different from the usual Broadway Borsch. The Altadena Kid has done it again! Step Right Up deserves the same anti-Jahrbuch reception tendered the august Otto H. Kahn when he appeared in his first dress suit.

Oyan is someone who will make Maxwell Anderson look like an empty seidel of Lowenbrau, and Chief Justice Hughes like the west end of a Bock Panatela.

There is no truth in the rumor that Step Right Up is a great play; it's a sensational play. Oyan disproves the current American credo which believes that dentists who advertise are phonies, that all policemen are Irish, and that city officials get their parking tags "fixed." Read 'em and creep—

Characters in Step Right Up:
"Inky" Dink....Old Vaudeville Pianist
"Bluenose" Mimi....................
A Woman with a yearning
Mr. Sittle, Former Landon press-agent
Jed......An Iraquan, who knows a mite

Scene—A broken-down elevator midway between the Block Building basement and the imposing offices of a religious head on the 30th floor. It is midnight and "Inky," Mr. Sittle, "Bluenose," and Jed are trapped in the express elevator. A kindly custodian has let the group in to give them a chance to talk with Mr. Spiritual Guidance, who is working late.

Inky: Can't we get out of here?

Mr. Sittle: It's no use. We have to stay here 'til morning.

Bluenose: I've slept in some places before, but never in an elevator.

Inky: Too bad we couldn't see Mr. Spiritual Guidance.

Jed: Bring him in the elevator with us.

Inky: Yeah, then he could say he came down to earth with us.

Mr. Sittle (looking upward): Strange, isn't it? We never seem to make it up there.

Bluenose: Aw, shut up, I don't want none o' that religion. I'm gonna see him about my sister.

Double Bills Are Suited For Only
Saturday's Children

DOWN through the ages man, in his infinite wisdom, has evolved all sorts of tortures to make his fellow man suffer. The rack, the "Iron Maiden," the water torture, and the more sadistic pleasures of those who seek something; all contribute toward making people more congenial.

Modern man, however, is much more subtle. He, having a higher I. Q. and a greater degree of sophistication than his medieval ancestor, has developed a never - to - be - forgotten torture for people who seem to be able to take it indefinitely—the double bill!

Because they give away Hedy Lamarr with a set of dishes, modern theater men think they can, with malice aforethought, shove on an unsuspecting public an appaling amount of drivel. Perhaps it is because they think the public still has the intelligence of a 12-year-old. But, it has been definitely proved by Freud, Jung, the Gallup poll, and the census, that the American mind has reached an all-time high. It now has the mentality of a 13-year-old. Therefore, there is no justification whatsoever for the double bill, yet they continue. Why?

These modern causes of coffee nerves, these home-wreckers, started at the height (or is it depth?) of the depression. Way Down East was the place. Some super-moronic exhibitor thought he would show two films for the price of one, and thus draw customers in to his box office. That started it.

Like a plague of locusts, the craze—let's call it a disease—spread from Key West to Walla Walla. Even the respectable houses finally succumbed. They, too, were forced to cater to the demands of a public that was knocked silly by the depression, and, as a consequence, wasn't sure of what it wanted.

But like sticking-plaster or poison oak, the darn thing refused to disappear. And then, came the revolution! Bank nite, et al. The theater, far from being a mecca for those who appreciated entertainment, drifted toward a spider web for those who couldn't afford a sweepstake ticket. And this continued for nigh on to seven years.

1940—at long last, the trend is toward single bills. Again why? Let's hope it is because the movie-goer is waking up, and not because his cupboard is too full of dishes. He's won a cancelled Australian stamp, split a $200 jackpot 30 ways, and he's seen a plethora of double bills; now, he's coming to his senses long enough to realize that a well-rounded bill does not have to have Mae West.

The ideal situation — Hollywood Utopia — is approaching. The double is going, but all too slowly. When a good feature is shown with a series of excellent featurettes, then mankind's greatest cause of insomnia will have gone the way of the cigar store Indian. Requiescat In Pace!

Maybe the younger generation started the darn things so they could sit in the balcony a few hours longer. Who knows? But it is a thought, and a very good one, at that.

LIFE can be tragic and, at the same time, slightly humorous. It is this slight incongruity of our existence that makes many a fine movie, and no finer example can be cited than Saturday's Children.

This little drama is about the trials of a couple who try to make both ends meet during a time when the entire world is rushing into madness. John Garfield and Anne Shirley give sincere performances as the young couple caught in the maelstrom that is the modern world. Claude Rains also contributes a neat characterization as the father who has seen enough of the world to understand its cruelty.

Saturday's Children is one of those films that is liable to slip by unnoticed if one is not careful. So true to life is it that it seems the actors had shed their make-up for an instant to give you a peek into life as it really is. The whole production is a well-rounded, slowly paced movie that catches that "will o' the wisp" note of sincerity that all too often is missing in the more pretentious epics that Hollywood grinds out in its leisure time. But for once we have a neat little drama that makes it entirely possible to hope that some day Hollywood will grow up and give us more of this type.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Wanted: Boat Ride!
Noms des Plumes
Carry No Weight

● SORRY, NO TRIP

Editor, The Guardsman:

Twelve hours before the scheduled High Soph Boat Ride was to take place there was a rumor going about that the aforesaid ride was to be cancelled because of insufficient funds. At the same time the latest issue of The Guardsman was issued containing a large column devoted to the Boat Ride. To quote the column—"the ticket sales (75 cents per person) are doing so well that a large crowd is expected."

Although the rumor was later verified there was no attempt on the part of the committee to inform the unfortunate possessors of tickets that the trip was cancelled. This is the third time a disappointment of this sort has taken place, and it's very embarrassing to explain to people that "it's called off—there will be no trip," besides being disgusting.

If there were posters informing us of the cancellation it might help some, but you can imagine the obvious disappointment and ill-feeling bred by the ones who were not informed and waited at Pier 14 at 9 o'clock for a boat that didn't show up.

Whether the failure was because of lack of interest or publicity is probably unknown, but it seems to be a practical suggestion that before anymore half-baked schemes are put into effect to have a student vote or opinion instead of just that of a committee.

A disgruntled soph,
Al King.

● WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Editor, The Guardsman:

This started out to be a tirade against those students who write in to the Ram's Horn and for some deep, dark reason refuse to sign their names. This specifically refers to the issue of April 30.

The reason that this letter has toned down is because upon reading these letters (all of them) for the 'nth time, it is apparent that anyone would be ashamed to sign his name to thoughts such as emanated from those letters.

To go through them one by one, there is first a letter that cries for intervention to pull England's chestnuts out of the fire. Oh, well, it takes all kinds to make a world—even Englishmen.

Next on the program is a wail about Carvel Craig being a swing band. It makes the dance into a rat race, is the cry. Well, Benny Goodman, Bob Crosby, the two Dorseys, and Glen Gray (to mention but a few), are swing bands and they play even in the most conservative places. Perhaps it would be best for "Old Clothes Joe" to get a haircut, or buy some Stokowski records.

Next is the one giving the source of "Sound and Fury." Even if the columnist is an idiot, quoting Shakespeare won't prove it.

At last comes the only signed letter. The writer has either nerve or desire to become a leftist champion by signing his name to that. Maybe the Peace Society isn't red-hot but makes a hell of an effort to give that impression. What is the official song, "Internationale"?

The same as the above goes for the next two—except they haven't the intestinal fortitude to put their names after their epistles. At least, right or wrong, Goldstone signs his name.

Come to think of it, so should I.

PIGSKIN GRUDGE FRACAS

Reliable sources report that two of Lee Eisan's footballers, Al Spieller and Dick Wilson, are going to engage in a grudge battle which Joe Amori has lined up as a special event for the forthcoming AMS boxing show.

Spieller, a quarterback, and Wilson, a pivot man, have not, according to rumor, been getting on too well as of late and, as a result, are going to settle their dispute in the squared circle.

BELLIGERENT CUSS, AIN'T HE?

Weighing but 165 pounds, Spieller is giving away over 30 pounds to Wilson, who tips the scales at slightly over 195, but contends, nevertheless, that "I'll knock his block off."

Mel Chicazola, ex-Golden Gloves champ, has already taken over the management of Spieller, and will be "the man in the corner" when the southpaw steps forth to do battle with his heavier opponent.

Letting our imagination run rampant (don't we always?), we find that a scene such as the following may occur.

IT'S COLOSSAL, TERRIFIC, ETC.

The bell rings and both boys come dancing (well, all right) out of their corners to the center of the ring. They circle each other warily, sparring for an opening, and then it's Spieller, it's Spieller forcing the play, hammering away at Wilson with lefts and rights, with Wilson backtracking. And so the fight goes on, second after second, Wilson on his bicycle and Spieller, a fierce gleam in his eyes, ploughing in for the kill.

Above the din of the crowd, one may hear the voice of "Chick" shouting instructions from the corner.

"C'mon, 'Lefty,' give him the old one-two. Force him, 'Spiell,' force him into a corner. That's it. Pocket him."

END OF A PERFECT ROUND

Ten seconds later, above the din of the crowd, one may hear "Lefty" shouting to "Chick":

"Well, don't stand there. Pick me up!"

It could happen, couldn't it? Or could it!

If Jack Schmale isn't careful, his "Joe's JC productions are going, in the future, to be the stamping ground of talent scouts.

The reason? Because four of Schmale's hamactors, Bentley Schoenfeld, Bob Holmes, Ken Pasqualetti, and this scrivener, were in that radio broadcast produced by the college on KSFO last week.

DON'T SAY IT, DEAR READER

Of course, we know, one may say, "Joe's JC and that radio broadcast, hmm, one and the same thing," but, still—and we'll let it go at that.

Don't tell anyone we told you, but the smaller colleges in the conference, at the semi-annual coaches' meeting last week, finally capitulated and, as a result, a league schedule calling for eight games instead of the customary three will be in practice next season.

Introducing Mr. Leggett

Hunting for material which dear readers will read, we hope the college will okeh, just for today, the character Leo Verdon Paul Leggett, 5 foot 6 inch, 18 year old, 150 pound dynamo of spring football.

He spends most of his spare time at a playground, chewing the fat, his philosophy in life being one of ease. His eyes are blue.

He was born in Wyoming and went to Roosevelt, George Washington, and is president of the high freshman class. His hair is neatly cropped and brown in color.

His most prized possession is his '31 Dodge, has been playing football since the seventh grade. He plays the saxophone for entertainment. His tonsils are out, and he reads the funny papers. ("I ain't proud!")

His nickname is "Legs," which was given to him by a daily's sports writer, and he has never caught himself dreaming. Leo Leggett never wears a hat. He also enjoys "light" music.

Although playing high school football all the way through, he does not remember his greatest thrill. His favorite sleeping position is flat on his back. He does not sing, nor does he speak any foreign languages.

He gets up in the morning as late as possible, and would like to own a Spanish hacienda—with a dark patio. He attributes his ability as a ball carrier to diligent practice, and thinks country life is better than city life. He figures that JC girls bore him most.

He has no definite definition of "Oomph," but he can see it when it comes by. He has four suits of clothes; his greatest disappointment was when he had to go to school. His favorite play is off-tackle.

He likes to wear jeans, but mostly likes to dress comfortably and neatly. He doesn't know who Oscar is. He also figures he was a pleasant and considerate baby.

He makes snap judgments, and is not temperamental, but very sentimental. He is very fussy over food, and his pet peeve is waiting in line in a show. If he had three wishes, they would be a blonde, a brunette and a redhead.

Local Nine Treks To Double-Header On San Mateo Lot

"To do or die," is the motto of Coach Jack Gaddy's Ram baseball nine, for they meet San Mateo tomorrow noon on the peninsula diamond, in what should prove to be two hard-played contests.

The Rams are currently resting in second place in league standings, and will need to take two contests from the Bulldogs in order to tie for first position honors with Santa Rosa and Modesto.

Gaddy Confident

"I know that we can take the games," Gaddy disclosed. "With Al Giovanetti and Bob Hvidt doing the hurling for us, we will have two steady and dependable pitchers; something we have lacked until now," Gaddy added.

Gaddy further stated that his boys looked greatly improved in the Placer contests last week, and have played a better defensive and hitting game.

Though San Mateo has lost several games, the Bulldogs are capable of upsetting the dope if taken lightly. The peninsulars have a fair pitching and catching staff, and boast of several heavy hitters.

The locals traveled to Fort McDowell last Wednesday to meet an army team. Gaddy planned to take all of his players, and give them some extra game experience. The Ram pitcher was to be "Admiral" Gaddy himself.

Batting Averages Up

Many of the players boosted their batting averages during the one Placer game last Saturday. Batting averages released this week by Gaddy disclose that Ross Wolcott still leads the team, and the league, with an average of .440. Wolcott has led his teammates for the past six weeks.

Bob Hvidt, leading pitcher, still bats .357, since he did not see action last week. Other .300 hitters are Mike DeStefano, second sacker, .333; Leo Mezzetti, catcher, .325. The team, as a whole, is batting .299, a boost of 18 points over the previous week.

Revised Lineup To Play

Gaddy's revised infield of Walt Hjort at first, DeStefano at second, Wolcott, third, and Frank Mullins, short, played well together last week, and Gaddy plans to use them in the San Mateo tilts.

If the Rams win the two Bulldog tilts Saturday, they will travel to Salinas to play off the two postponed games. Gaddy is not worried about the lettuce lads, since they have been beaten by teams that were easy meat for the locals. His main problem is to beat San Mateo.

Rams Have Goal

If the Ram nine does win, or tie, for the championship, they will be awarded white sweaters by the college. That should explain why they are not lacking in spirit.

That loyal Ram rooter, Mel Chicazola, will accompany the team as "official" batboy, errand boy, scorekeeper, and stooge. Many of the past games have been livened up by the umpire-baiting of Chicazola. The only thing that worries Gaddy is that Chicazola might eat up the sandwiches meant for the players.

College Roster

Players to make the San Mateo trip tomorrow, as announced by Gaddy, are as follows: Harry Aleo, Russ Brabant, DeStefano, Charles Donovan, Giovanetti, Charles Gratiot, Hjort, Hvidt, Mezzetti, George Moreira, Mullins, Bob Webber, and Wolcott.

WAA, Phys. Ed. Majors Plan Balboa Picnic June 8

Old and new members of the Women's Athletic Council and Physical Education Majors are planning a picnic at the new campus on June 8, Thursa Scott, president of the WAA, announced this week.

Bertha Keller, adviser of the association, will guide the women through the buildings and demonstrate the equipment to be used at the new buildings, Miss Scott said.

Box lunches will be sold for 25 cents, and money will be collected by Betty Teter, according to Miss Scott.

A game of baseball is scheduled for the afternoon program, as well as other sports activities.

WAA council is planning its budget for equipment for the new campus, and the present officers feel that an excellent program is being planned for ensuing semesters, Miss Scott explained.

WAA Shuts Gym Doors, Previews Balboa Park Home

By LUCRETIA ANTONICELLI

Last night the WAA not only terminated another semester of conducting an extra-curricular sports program for the women of the college, but it also closed the doors of the Galileo gym behind its back for the last time. Next fall, the Association will move en masse to the new campus, and the New Women's Gym!

It seems only appropriate, therefore, that a word-picture of what the women's gym will look like when it is completed, be written for those college women who will be taking an active part in the first days of the new building.

The building itself, embodying the spirit of modernization, is the only gymnasium in the West (with the exception of the Men's gym, directly opposite) to have glass brick windows. The glass brick begins directly under the roof and extends downward to a point three-quarters of the distance from the floor. Glass brick entirely eliminates any possibility of glare in the building and yet provides excellent light.

Still under construction, the main gym will have a future addition of a dance studio, a corrective room and a recreation room. The former will be used, according to present reports, for college dances and tea dansants, along with the gym proper.

Bas Relief Features Basketball

Beginning at the south entrance, over which is Richard Howard's bas relief of girl basketball players, one steps into a lobby, directly facing a long corridor, to the right of which are offices for the physical education instructors, a doctor, and a nurse. To the immediate left is an exit; to the right, the entrance to the office of the director of physical education.

At an angle to the observer, and on the right wall, is a bulletin board. Off the lobby to the right is the hall leading to the dressing rooms, to the left of which are the supply rooms with many and varied shelves for sports equipment and two doors to facilitate handling a rush.

Showers In Vault

Directly opposite is the gym administrative office. From here one proceeds down the corridor into a huge underground-like vault, divided into two sections, the shower rooms and the dressing rooms.

The showers, there are about 56 of them, are placed upon the wall at different heights in little, non-skid, tile-floored booths, each with a water-repellent curtain. The dressing rooms are large, locker-filled affairs, each with a built-in seat, the floor is sloped for drainage, and the entire basement air-condition.

Latest In Equipment Planned

One sees as she passes through to the far end, a rest room, squeezed in between the director's office and the shower room, airy and light, a towel room with a towel counter containing laundry bags for soiled towels which will be dropped directly into them, and then the stairs to the basketball, badminton, and volleyball courts.

There will be six basketball practice boards along the wall and benches for spectators backed against the wall. The walls up to the glass brick will be tinted a salmon color, the roof top green. The walls in the lobby downstairs will be finished in rubberized sheeting, and the tile on the lobby floor will be green.

Santa Rosa WAA Playday Draws 30 Women Tomorrow

Under the auspices of the college Women's Athletic Association, a general sectional playday will be held at Santa Rosa tomorrow, May 11, Thursa Scott, association president, announced.

Approximately 30 women from the college will attend the conclave, which will include entrants from all junior colleges in northern California. Transportation for the local participants will be provided by the WAA, Miss Scott revealed.

Badminton, tennis, archery, and baseball, Miss Scott added, have been slated as the principal morning activities of the playday. Following general luncheon, ice skating at a Santa Rosa rink has been planned as an afternoon attraction for the playday group. According to Miss Scott, Irene Gruenebaum and Marion Dickie will demonstrate the 14-step.

This playday will be similar to one held at Treasure Island last year, and those colleges which participated at that time will attend the Santa Rosa meeting.

Ace Ram Boxers Entered In AMS Matches May 15

Spotlighted in the college sports world next Wednesday, May 15, the semi-annual Associated Men Students ring fest at the Coliseum Bowl will include participation of topnotch Ram boxers, announced Joe Amori, boxing coach.

Ram "Dark Horse"

Amori revealed that he has discovered a "dark horse" in the person of 6-foot Francis Baron, a coming southpaw heavyweight prospect.

According to tentative plans, Baron will be matched against Bob Raine, defending top-weight champion. Neither of the two are highly experienced resin experts, but both are showmen and are calculated to present an interesting battle.

Jensen-Raine Go

Also a potential entry is "Swede" Jensen, college footballer, who fought Raine last semester and turned in a fine performance. The two fought to a close decision in which the nod was given to Raine.

Jim Robinson, the local boxer who dropped a dubious decision in the Salinas tournament after flattening the Salinas captain, will step into the ring at 139. His opponent has not yet been determined.

Bud Calloway "Fine Prospect"

Bill Edwards, another college boxer who fought in the Salinas fray, will step into the squared circle to contend for the 149 and the 159 pound titles. His opponent will probably be Bud Calloway, called by Amori "a fine prospect." "This match will probably be the best in an evening of excellent entertainment," Amori declared.

Frank Matsumoto, called the "Japanese Sandman" by his defeated opponents, will fight at 129. Matsumoto has earned a scholarship to the University of Pennsylvania by virtue of his handy dukes.

Momii Enters Battle

Tak Momii, the 105 pound defending champion, will probably go in at 118 because of the fact that no one in the college who is small enough to make 105 seems to want to stand in the way of the little fellow's gloved hand. Amori said that he is one man who doesn't need to apologize for his fists. "He does all right with such little hands as he packs around," Amori said.

Amori Promises Shirt

To draw a bigger and better crowd, Amori has promised to wear his famed zebra shirt while he referees the matches this coming Wednesday at the Coliseum Bowl. "After last semester's bouts were over, I got too many complaints about the lack of the shirt," he said. Last semester he wore what is now called a T-shirt. In naval circles this is known as a regulation undershirt or, more commonly, a "skibby."

After the bouts there will be a banquet for the boxers, announced Amori, who stated further, "As in the past the boxers will be royally feted after putting forth their efforts for the benefit of the assembled multitude."

Coliseum Fights Scene

Amori wished to emphasize the fact that the fights this year will be open to the general public. "For the first time in the history of the college the fights will be held in a public arena," he continued. The Coliseum Bowl is on Eleventh Street between Market and Mission, and will accommodate as many people as can get to the fights, he concluded.

Have Ram Rooters Set This Sport Code In Action Here?

EVANSTON, Ill. — (ACP) — Good sportsmanship is what players and spectators make it—and the Northwestern University Daily Northwestern has a code of its own for the spectators.

Here is the program as recently promulgated for those who attend Wildcat basketball games:

1. Opposing players deserve the same treatment as our own players.
2. Officials may make mistakes, but they certainly deserve fair and courteous treatment.
3. Heckling of opposing players about to attempt free throws simply must not occur.
4. Good sportsmanship is as necessary in the stands as it is on the playing floor.

Net Crown Struggle

Ram-Bulldog Clash Tomorrow Decides Tennis Loop Title

Bolstered by the return of Bill Madamba and Chet Mead, previously ineligible but now reinstated by the registrar's office, Coach Tom Wilson and his little band of Ram tennisers will clash with Sy Bashor's San Mateo racket-wielders in a championship encounter on the peninsula courts tomorrow.

Although they have won eight straight team victories, the Rams, nevertheless, must take all seven matches from the peninsulans tomorrow in order to tie for the championship, inasmuch as Salinas has already wound up its league season with a total of seven more individual wins than the locals and six more than San Mateo. Quite naturally, the San Mateans must take seven matches from the Wilsonmen if they wish to acquire the title.

Salinas Set For Title

The task for either team of copping all seven matches is, of course, a virtual impossibility, and, consequently, Salinas waltzes in for the title while San Francisco and San Mateo are cutting each other's throats.

In the first singles encounter, Madamba, local flash, must be given a slight edge over Chuck O'Neil, Bulldog ace, while Mead, playing at the No. 2 spot, should take his opponent, John Garton, into camp without too much trouble.

Calagos Rated Underdog

Eugene Doyle of San Mateo appears to have a little too much experience for Tony Calagos at the No. 3 position, with Morris Waxman holding forth the favorite for the locals at No. 4, and Bill Hilton holding a substantial margin at No. 5 over Howard Pennypacker, inexperienced Ram netman.

Madamba and Mead, though playing together for the first time, should triumph over O'Neill and Garton in the first doubles fracas, but Calagos and Waxman appear to have little or no chance against the second peninsula combination.

4-3 Victory Probable

Summing up, it looks like a 4 to 3 team victory for San Francisco, with the title, as a result, going to Salinas.

The season record for the locals follows:

RAMS	0	Stanford	9
"	7	Fresno State Varsity	0

Pigskin Ability Contest Planned For College Fest

To climax the successful spring football season, Coach Lee Eisan will hold his football fundamental ability contest at the college picnic at Balboa Park May 17.

Contests will be judged for distance, ability and all-around football excellence. Passing will be judged for distance, ability, and consistency, as will be the punting contest. Prizes will be awarded to the contestant having the highest points, official sources revealed.

The decathlon will be held during the afternoon of the college picnic, to be held on the 17th of this month.

Advising the players for next season to work out during the summer, the coaching staff accented the necessity of keeping the body in shape during the summer months.

Official naming of a possible lineup for next semester will be announced by Coach Eisan in the near future.

"Lack Of Funds" Causes Bowling Season Finale

"Owing to a lack of funds, the college bowling team will not bowl again this semester. Stanford is not bowling, and California is busy with final examinations," announced Joe Amori, college bowling instructor.

The Intramural kegling tournament which has been conducted by Amori during the last several weeks has proved highly successful in unearthing college bowling champions. The present team of Robert Riordan, Jack Schmale, Bill Snooks, George Stockwell, and Norman Guinasso have proved that they are highly competent when it comes to bowling.

During this semester bowling classes have bowled at the Golden Gate bowling alleys on Jones street. Amori has been in charge of two sections, the advanced class on Tuesday and Thursday, and the beginners on Monday and Wednesday.

Trackmen Wind Up Mediocre Schedule

Definitely terminating their cinder-coated season for 1940 by the announcement of non-competition in the Fresno Relays, the college cinder and field men hung up their spikes with an average of 47 1-5 points per contest.

Sweet Lauds Rams

Coach Russell J. Sweet expressed his opinion that, had the team had better practice schedules, the scores would have been higher. As it was, the lack of a home track, as well as illness, played a major part in affecting the athletes.

In looking over the season, considering the conditions, the Rams were not exceptional, but managed to show good points. Consistent point-getters such as Louie Vasquez, in the mile; Bob Raine, in the hurdles; Ed Perry, in the pole vault; George Mossler, in the high jump, and the mile relay team, aided greatly in raising the average score.

Manpower Meager

With few returning veterans, Coach Sweet molded the team into its present standing. Raine with his contemporaries, Ken Hagen and Perry, composed the nucleus of the '40 team. Out of the meager supply of manpower, Coach Sweet has found potential threats in Don Mavor and Bert Korn, dashmen; Keith Groswird, pole vaulter; Vern Genesy and Mossler, high jumpers; and Wagstaff, in the discus.

In its first meet with U.S.F., the college amassed 61 points to 44, winning mostly by second and third places. Raine scored high with two firsts and a third, while a new threat loomed in the quarter mile relay team of White, Lowery, Korn and Meekin.

Vasquez Stars In Mile

In Redwood City in a three way meet with Menlo, Marin, and the college, the Rams were nosed out of first by a mere point by Marin, who totaled 57 points, while Menlo took 36. Vasquez shone in the mile, winning in 4:53.

Winning their next encounter, a three-way contest with Santa Rosa and Marin, the Rams depended upon the cinder events for points. Without the aid of Mavor, Korn of the college bore the weight of the dashes alone, placing in both the 100 and the century.

Taking an awful dumping from a superior State Gator, the college received a low of 31¼ to 90¾, with only three firsts to the Ram credit.

San Mateo Too Strong

Final dual meet was with the San Mateans, where the Bulldog managed to bite off the Ram's horn, giving them 88¾ points to a mere 33¼ for the Ram. San Mateo copped the quarter mile relay, as well as all but one of the firsts. Lou Vasquez stole the only first for the college in taking the mile in 4:46:6.

Winding the season up with the NCJC track championships with 2½ points, the Ramsters closed shop, inasmuch as the official announcement of non-competition in the Fresno Relays tomorrow was revealed by Coach Sweet.

Championship Medals Lure Golfers To Modesto Match

Four medals will be awarded to the highest scorers in the Golf Championships to be held at Modesto a week from tomorrow, May 17.

According to Louis "Dutch" Conlan, Ram golf coach, the highest scorer in the competition will be awarded a gold medal for his prowess.

"We should win the championship this season," Conlan remarked, "if the boys play as they have in the past. We have three of the best putters in the league in Barney Rice, Bill Hoffman, and Bill McLaughlin."

Conlan added that he expected the boys to be in fine shape for the matches. Two warm-up matches are scheduled for today and tomorrow. This afternoon the Rams oppose Menlo at Ingleside, and will play San Mateo tomorrow afternoon at San Mateo.

The college that wins the match will receive a perpetual trophy, Conlan added. The Rams placed second last year, and stand a very good chance of copping first place, Conlan said.

Round-Robin

Football Schedule Supplants League; Boon To Rams

Beginning in 1941 the Northern California Junior College Conference will operate under a round-robin football schedule and will do away with the current A and B football leagues, which, according to Allen Williams, Associated Student president, have placed the Ram team in embarrassing positions for the past two years.

The new schedule is expected to enliven the Ram football program as well as those of other nearby colleges. Three Attend Conference

Three representative from the college attended the NCJC conference held at Modesto last week, to assist in amending the current junior college sports policy.

Coach Louis Conlan, Mel Chiecozola, president of the Men's Athletic Council, and Williams spoke for the college there.

Chiecozola termed the decision of the conference the end of all "squabbling and beefing" over football schedules.

Four Teams In League "A"

In the past, league A was made up of the following four colleges: San Mateo, Sacramento, Modesto, and this college.

At the end of the football season, there would be only three listed conference games played by each and an easy four-way tie was constantly threatening.

Now things will be different, according to Dutch Conlan. He indicated that the round-robin league will be composed of a total of "11 competent teams."

"From 1941 on," Conlan said, "there will be from seven to 10 conference games played, depending upon the size, strength, and reputation of the college which the NCJC teams represent."

Confucius Again; Coeds Improve On Philosopher

UNIVERSITY, LA. — (ACP) — "Confucius say . . . please let humble philosopher rest in peace."

Yes, that's what the ancient Chinese sage would probably say now, had he the power of speech. Jokes, of the parlor, dormitory, and barracks variety, have recently been attributed to that wise old seer.

Confucius has been the inspiration for the latest club to be organized on the Louisiana State University campus. A group of coeds living in the freshman women's dormitory recently organized a "Confucius Say" Club. They hold meetings every night, at which time they gather for a "Chinese bull-session." According to the girls, the only qualification for admission is a good clean, "Confucius say" pun or joke.

Confucius, according to Marye Hicks, of Louise Garig Hall, said, "Change your mind often, good way to keep it clean."

Also "Skip" Jordan is of the opinion that old Confucius was a past master of the art of "dancing" and attributes this purely expression to him . . . "Jitterbug who come in house with ice skates on, cuts a rug!"

Another admirer of the long deceased Chinese philosopher, Necia Garmany, says, "If girl wants to get chap off lips, slap his face."

College Women Go Recruiting

With the theme, "What the San Francisco Junior College has to offer socially, culturally, and academically," a series of programs is being presented by a group of women students of the college at five city high schools, according to Laurine Bergin, college physical education instructor.

Today, the program will be presented to the women students of Balboa High School, she revealed. High schools previously visited were Girls High, Galileo, and George Washington.

Mistress of ceremonies is Barbara Smith, while other speakers and their topics include Muriel Grenelle, social activities of the college; Rema Corbitt, terminal or vocational courses; Priscilla Finley, academic preparation for the university.

Varied Entertainment Given

"Entertainment includes duets by Priscilla Finley and Barbara Smith, songs by Dorothy Mills, a tap dance presented by Nancy Collard, Fumiko Yaki, and Theo Juras. Eight women from the college, Marian Dickle, Ethel Carr, Dorothy Georgette, Dorothy McKeen, Victoria Ovali, Alice Cullen, Alyce Christiansen, and Lillian Urguhart, present folk dances.

"We have had, so far, a very nice response to these programs. High school students are much more aware of the college now than before," Mrs. Bergin commented.

Library Has Magazine For Job-Hunting Students

A monthly magazine giving information about the finding of jobs is now being subscribed to by the library, announced Francis J. Colligan, librarian.

This magazine is a new service for the students of the college. It tells where jobs are to be found and what new fields are opening up for the college graduate.

Each month pamphlets are sent out giving the latest information about jobs.

This service was reviewed recently in Time Magazine with very favorable comment.

Colligan also announced that the P. G. and E. study room will close on June 1, during the finals.

Three-In-One

Rally Presents Officers, Block Nine High, Sophs

Installation of officers, distribution of Block letters, and presentation of a short High Sophomore program, will comprise the program of a triple rally, to be held May 23, in the Galileo Auditorium, according to Ray Berns, chairman of the rally committee.

Classes Excused

Classes will be officially excused for the rally, but students must report for roll call before attending the rally, Registrar Paul Mohr announced.

Plans for the High Sophomore section of the rally are being made by Art Pomares, class president, and Hal Hoffman, chairman of the arrangements committee.

Williams To Handle Installation

Al Williams, Associated Students president, is in charge of arrangements for installation of officers.

According to Berns, awards in track, tennis, baseball, lightweight basketball, varsity basketball, golf and rifle will be made. In charge of this portion of the program is Dan Baker.

Summer Jobs Go To Hotel And Restaurant Students

Numerous summer positions have been obtained by students of the college hotel and restaurant division, according to Thomas Caswell, publicity agent for the division.

Several of the positions, he said, are the result of requests for competent employees, made by hotel men to the hotel division.

"It is a requirement of the Hotel Management course that students work during their summer vacation in the hotel or restaurant industry," Caswell said.

Faxon Bishop, Harold Fraser, John Kay, Joe De Respini, Terry Sandelin, and John Verner will work as third cooks on the Fred Harvey system between Los Angeles and Chicago, Caswell said. The Harvey system composes the dining cars on the Santa Fe trains.

Other students with summer jobs waiting are as follows:

Ruth Smith, cashier at the Hotel Californian, San Francisco; Cynthia Richardson, dining room hostess at Yosemite; Bob Bundy, store room clerk at Tahoe Tavern; Henri Carbonell, porter at Yosemite; Davis Carter, Relief Clerk, El Cortez Hotel, San Francisco; Monty Herman, pantryman at Hotel El Tejon, Bakersfield; Felix Justus, clerk at Hotel Biltmore, San Francisco; and Bill Lewis, kitchen at Camp Curry.

W.J. Sanctum of College Press To Return To Original Role

By MARY FRANCES MALONE

No one will be happier to see the new Balboa campus completed and occupied by college students than the janitresses at Galileo.

For when the students of the college say goodbye to Galileo forever, and when The Guardsman assumes charge of its new office at Balboa, Galileo's janitresses will be restored their private room, W. J.

Prior to the establishment of the college and its subsequent quartering of some of the student body in Galileo, janitresses had a sort of combination lounge and store room in what is now affectionately referred to simply as W. J. That was their own little spot wherein they could relax and chat, or simply rest from the ordeal of helping to keep a large school in order.

However, with the college definitely started and newspaper publication begun, the problem of finding an office for staff members arose to confront, an already problem-weary administration. After combing Galileo's halls and cubbyholes to find a room where reporters and editors could gather to type copy, some observant person stumbled across W. J. Here, it was decided, The Guardsman's sanctum sanctorum would be.

Since that time, when the janitresses were ousted from their room, college staff members have taken W. J. to their hearts. Small almost to the point of discomfort, crowded to and beyond capacity, the room has taken on an aura of deadlines, assignment sheets, newsbeats, and sentimentality for journalism students. Whenever news breaks, whenever important changes are proposed or accomplished, a small, eager group in W. J. is the first to hear.

With prospects of taking over a new office at the Balboa campus, Guardsman reporters are somewhat reluctantly preparing to leave W. J. next semester. But, Galileo's janitresses are impatiently waiting for the day when their old lounge will be returned to them as it was before the advent of the college. Yet perhaps some whiff of a memory of desperately hurried typing, of harmless pranks, of laughing students, and of deadlines that could not be get somehow met, will linger on to haunt the place.

Powers and Rome

Full name, Lyle Britton Shultz, Jr., 5 feet 11, 22 years old, 182½ pounds and wears size 8 shoes.

Lyle looks chunky, but the lumps are muscles, not fat. He works as an usher in a theater, and is not superstitious. Born in Colorado Springs, Lyle majors in psychology, and will go to Stanford after graduation.

For a person who has come to the college—as well as San Francisco—last year, he does very well in getting around. He has no philosophy of life and has no prize possessions. Occasionally, he plays the trombone.

President of the AMS, he is an ardent fan of the funnypapers, sings in the bathtub where the acoustics drown out his overtones. He has a habit of brushing his hair back with his hands when being spoken to.

Athletic by nature, he has played football positions in the backfield, swims and does a bit of track. He does not speak any foreign languages, and like the average collegian, will not wear a hat. His sartorial excellence is equalled only by his reputation as a gourmet . . . or something!

When his ship comes in, Lyle has in mind a house of Colonial architecture, in a small town, average population, 50,000. For his favorite entertainment, he goes dancing, or to the beach, matching feats with Neptune.

A little different from others, Lyle doesn't think much of the American emblem, the Hot Dog. He considers Henry Ford his idol—a picture of a successful businessman. Having three suits of clothes, although he is not a clothes horse, the moths are having great fun with him, and he with the moths.

The field of advertising is going to claim our Lyle if everything turns out okay for him. He thinks Oscar is okay (the rat—Oscar, not Lyle), and has political aspirations.

Most noticeable in others, Lyle finds to be their teeth and hands. Although not fussy over food, Baked Virginia Ham rates tops on the menu. His pet peeve is parsnips.

(When asked if every question was answered truthfully, he blushed and admitted there were slight exaggerations.) His three wishes are three blondes.

Getting out of college is his present problem, and he also hopes everyone will turn up for the AMS fights to be held at the Coliseum Bowl on 11th near Market on the 15th of this month. (Adv't).

In his rambling manner, Lyle closed with looking forward to a successful ending of this semester and ditto for the next.

Window Display Class To Make Survey For Job Data

Students in the window display class are now making a survey of manufacturing stores and advertising display houses to secure original information in relation to the display field, announced Teall Messer, college window display instructor.

Each student in the class is assigned a section of the classified advertising section in the telephone directory to cover. The students make an appointment with a representative of the company in his particular field to discuss the basic functions of each concern.

Among the information to be obtained is whether the houses employ apprentices, the number of workers employed, and if they desire to hire apprentices during the summer.

One of the main functions of the survey, Messer said, is to better acquaint the various companies with the work being done in the college. They are interested in the course, and have employed students during vacation periods.

Messer also announced two guest speakers, Alex Demey, of Roos Brothers, and Robert Stanford, of Stanford and Stanley.

Demey, Messer said, "is one of the most prominent men in the field of display on the Pacific Coast. He will speak Tuesday, May 14, on problems in the field of store display."

The date of Stanford's talk is not definite, but he will appear soon. His firm is one of the outstanding concerns in the country, Messer said.

Lectures, Motion Picture Slated For Business Dept.

Business classes will be given two lectures and a moving picture today, announced F. Grant Marsh, chairman of the business department.

The lecture, a discussion of life insurance, will be presented by Nelson F. Davis, manager of the Guardian Life Insurance Company, to students in Business 26, insurance class.

An educational moving picture showing the various types of advertising methods, will be shown to students in Business 82a, advertising class.

Two lectures were given to insurance classes on last Tuesday. Henry Martin, assistant manager of the Standard Forms Bureau, gave a talk on Fire Insurance Rating, and Clarence Peterson, manager of the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance Company, presented a demonstration on life insurance sales.

Beta Taus Invite College To East Bay Sports Dance

Tomorrow night at the Montclair Women's Club, Oakland, the semiannual sports dance, open to the college, will be sponsored by Beta Tau, Barney Blanchard, president of the organization, announced recently.

Music for the affair will be provided by Eddie Tirosini and his orchestra, Blanchard said, emphasizing the fact that tickets would still be available today from any Beta Tau member for 99 cents.

Blanchard commented that there is room for only 400 couples at the club.

As a special aid to students going to the East Bay dance, which is only three-quarters of a mile from the bay bridge, a map of directions is being given to students buying bids, Blanchard added.

WSS Schedules Last Night For Theater Party

Tonight's performance of The Light That Failed and I Take This Woman at the Empire Theater, closes the two-day theater party being sponsored by the Women's Service Society, Annette Schunick, president of the society, announced.

"Profits will be made only by tickets which are sold through the college," Miss Schunick said, "and to add to these profits, home-made candy will be sold in the lobby of the theater."

Ronald Colman and Ida Lupino share top honors in The Light That Failed, while Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr co-star in I Take This Woman.

Thirty-cent tickets for adults and 10-cent tickets for children are being sold by club members and at the bank at Galileo, Miss Schunick concluded.

Leuenberger Talks On Psychology Test Advances

At a dinner and meeting of the Public Personnel Agencies held Thursday evening, May 2, at a local cafe, Harold W. Leuenberger, of the college psychology department, spoke on the subject, Recent Advances in Test Techniques.

Leuenberger has given numerous psychology tests to students of the college, and it is expected that he will give more in the future, using some of the new techniques.

Birdmen Hear Lectures On Maps When Not Flying

In addition to flying instruction in the air, the college course in aeronautics instruction includes lectures on meterology, study of weather conditions, as well as ground instruction through the use of maps, revealed Captain Richards, college director, Civilian Pilot Training.

Students are required to figure out the effect of the wind at various altitudes, he added. Other instruction includes lectures on the engines of airplanes, their principle action and utilities. Aero dynamics, a subject dealing with the forces that react upon an airplane in flight, is also given, he said.

According to Captain Richards, a tour of inspection of the facilities of the San Francisco Municipal Airport will be made today by Dean Edwin C. Browne and Richards. They will also take a flight over the city, noting in particular the bird's eye view of the new campus, he said.

Announcement was also made that the date for the Civil Aeronautics Examination, which deals with questions on meteorology, air navigation, and civil air rules, has not been set as yet.

"All except three students have now soloed," Captain Richards said.

Citizenship, Democracy Discussed By Williams

"Living in a democracy means ruling and being ruled. The success of a democracy depends upon the extent that the individual allows himself to be ruled in a cooperative democracy," was the theme of an address delivered by Al Williams, Sunday, May 5, at a 2 o'clock program in Golden Gate Park.

Williams represented the college at the final program, held in conjunction with American Citizenship Week, which began April 29 and extended to May 5.

Assembly Rejects Major Proposals In New Constitution; Ex Council Setup Unchanged

Nominations Rally Shifted By Assembly

Owing to the change made in the constitution assembly date, the nominations rally and the primary and general elections have been moved forward so that political aspirants might know for what offices to file petitions, Len Gross, election committee chairman, announced.

"Since the new constitution would effect modifications in Associated Students offices, its passage or rejection will naturally dictate the nature of the petitions for office," Gross continued.

Thursday, May 16, at 2:30 in the Galileo Auditorium, the nominations rally will be held, featuring the appearance of student body candidates for office, according to Gross.

Students will be officially excused from their classes for the rally, according to Registrar Paul Mohr, but the usual reporting to their classes must be done first.

Although the names of all candidates is not known, it is definite that three students are running for the office of student body president. They include Lyle Shultz, AMS president; Alden Thorogood, CAB president; and Mel Chiecozola, Men's Athletic Council chairman.

Scheduled Monday, May 20, is the first primary election to be held in the college, according to Al Williams, Associated Students president. Following the primary election, a final election will be held on Friday, May 24.

Ballots will be used in the primary elections, while voting machines will possibly be used in the final elections, Gross said. Students may vote either at Powell Street or Galileo.

Block Men, High Sophs Featured In May 23 Rally

The college rally to be held May 23, in the Galileo Auditorium, at 2:30 o'clock, will feature distribution of Block SF letters, and presentation of a program by the high sophomore class, according to yell leader Ray Berns, chief coordinator of the program.

"Although plans are not definite as yet, there is a possibility that the woman chosen Sophomore Sweetheart will appear and will preside as queen on the sophomore section of the rally," Art Pomares, class president intimated.

Three Sweetheart Candidates

Candidates for Sophomore Sweetheart are Mary Bartholomew, Alpha Phi Omega; Elizabeth "Zib" Harrison, Phi Beta Rho; Anita Welt, Alpha Lambda Chi.

Also tentatively being considered by Pomares and Hal Hoffman, chairman of the high sophomore committee, is the appearance on the rally of a portion of the Mixed Throat orchestra, which will play for the High Soph Formal on the night of May 24, at the California Country Club.

Blocks To Be Given

Second major portion of the program will be devoted to the distribution of the Block SF letters in baseball, lightweight basketball, varsity basketball, tennis, track, golf, and rifle. Dan Baker has been appointed chairman of the arrangements for this portion of the rally.

"We would like a large student attendance at the rally, for we feel that the college athletes have worked hard to earn their blocks and should have a suitable attendance in their honor," Baker said. "It will be an interesting rally and should not be missed," he concluded.

Students will be officially excused to attend the rally, if they report first to their 2:30 classes, Registrar Paul Mohr announced.

HEA PLANS FINAL ACTIVITIES

To make plans for final activities of the semester, the Home Economics Association will meet at 2:15 o'clock, Wednesday, in Room 317 at Galileo, Marion Schrick, president of the group, announced.

Definitely scheduled for May 19 is a hike to Muir Woods, Miss Schrick added.

Plans for a dinner are under consideration now. However, a place has not been selected as yet.

Miss Schrick urged that all members be at the Galileo meeting Wednesday, since important decisions on these events must be made.

Boxing Matches Tomorrow Night At Coliseum Bowl

Harry Smith, Chronicle sports editor; Walt Daley, Call-Bulletin sports writer; and George Malley, University of San Francisco football coach, will judge, and award prizes at the Associated Men Students fights tomorrow night at the Coliseum Bowl on Eleventh near Market.

There will be championship fights in seven weight divisions plus three exhibition matches. Alex Speller, 165, and Dick Wilson, 195, will square off for a "grudge" fight as the mainstay of the exhibition matches.

All fights will be refereed by Joe Amori, college boxing coach, and the audience will determine by applause the best championship fighter of the evening.

Winner of the audience acclaim will be presented with a new gold trophy. Winners of the fights in the weight divisions will be given gold-plated medals.

Lyle Shultz, AMS president, released the above information, and also made a plea for attendance from parents of college students, and women students. Shultz warned that the matches begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

Increase In Enrollment In Terminal Courses

Student enrollment in predominantly terminal courses in the college has increased from 12 per cent in 1937, to a new high point of approximately 25 per cent of the total enrollment, according to a report submitted by William Goss, college faculty member.

President Archibald J. Cloud's comment was, "There has been a steady increase in the number of students taking terminal courses. This is probably because of the fact that new courses of a so-called terminal nature have been introduced during the past year. The richer the set of offerings, the heavier the enrollment."

A study of student program choices at the college, which is being made by Goss, revealed the increase.

With the increase in enrollment anticipated for next semester, student enrollment in terminal courses is expected to go even higher, Goss concluded.

Text Of Constitution As Passed Yesterday By Assembly; Articles 2 And 3 Unaltered

Constitution of the Associated Students of The San Francisco Junior College

PREAMBLE

We, the students of San Francisco Junior College, in order to promote and control social, athletic and scholastic activities as delegated by the President of the College, do hereby establish this constitution.

ARTICLE I.

Name and Membership

1. The name of this Association shall be the Associated Students of the San Francisco Junior College.

2. All registered students of San Francisco Junior College who have paid their incidental student body dues shall be active members of the Associated Students of the San Francisco Junior College and shall, as such, be eligible to hold office in, and enjoy the privileges of the Association.

ARTICLE II.

Officers

1. The officers of the Association shall be a president, vice-president and a secretary.

2. President: The president shall be a member of the High Sophomore class. He shall be the executive officer and official representative of the organization. He shall preside at all meetings of the Association and shall be chairman of the Executive Council and ex-officio member of all other committees and councils, unless appointments are otherwise provided for by this constitution.

3. Vice-President: The vice-president shall be a member of the Sophomore class. The vice-president shall assume the duties of the president during his absence. The vice-president shall be the chairman of the Social Committee.

4. Secretary: The secretary shall be a member of the Sophomore class. The secretary shall keep a record of the proceedings of the Association and Executive Council and perform such duties as may be alloted by the Executive Council.

ARTICLE III.

Executive Council

1. Composition: The Executive Council shall be composed of:
1. The President of the Associated Students
2. The Secretary of the Associated Students.
3. A representative of the Social Committee.
4. A representative of the Rally Committee.
5. A representative of the Associated Men Students.
6. A representative of the Associated Women Students.
7. A representative of the Women's Athletic Association.
8. A representative of the Men's Athletic Council.
9. A representative of the Club Advisory Board.
10. A representative of the Publications Board.

2. Powers and Duties: The Executive Council is the Administrative and Legislative body of this Association and it shall be responsible for, and shall have final authority in, the supervision of the affairs, policies, properties and conduct of the Association.

3. Meetings: Regular meetings of this Executive Council shall be held once a week and seven members shall constitute a quorum.

Who Will Be Soph Queen? Student Votes Will Tell

Which of the candidates named for Sophomore Sweetheart last week will win the title, is to be decided by the vote of college students Wednesday, May 15, Art Pomares, class president, announced.

Aspiring to the role of queen for sophomore week are: Mary Bartholomew, Alpha Phi Omega; Elizabeth "Zib" Harrison, Phi Beta Rho; Anita Welt, Alpha Lambda Chi. Their photographs are to appear at the college bookstore this week, Pomares said.

Because election machines were not available, he announced that students will vote instead at the Powell Street ticket office. Votes will be taken from 9 to 1 o'clock upon presentation of student body cards, Pomares added.

As queen of Sophomore Week, the winner of this contest will receive a free bid to the high soph formal, and may also appear at the high soph rally which has been scheduled for noon, thence it will proceed to Galileo, the official starting point. From Galileo, under the direction and protection of a police escort, the cars will go directly to the new campus.

Palace Donates Prize

"A free cover charge to the Palace Hotel has been chosen for the prize to be given for the 'best dressed' car in the parade," Hal Hoffman, publicity chairman, said.

At 1 o'clock, box lunches will be issued to students who present student association cards, Ogg revealed.

Athletic Events Planned

From 1:30 until 4:30 in the afternoon, all sorts of athletic events have been planned by the committee, which will be highlighted by a baseball game between the Block Society and the Faculty.

Other field and track events are scheduled for the afternoon activities and, according to Ogg, if it is possible, prizes will be given.

The committee hopes to have a more elaborate day of festivities next semester when the new campus is available, Ogg concluded.

Forum To Select Contest Winner After May 20

Selection of a contest winner for the Forum Magazine will not be made until the day of publication of the magazine, Monday, May 20, according to Thomas Parkinson, editor of the current issue.

"Last Tuesday evening, the members of the editorial staff convened, to complete the placement of material on the individual page," he said, "as well as to comment on the merits of each contribution."

The cover of the periodical will be a replica of those adorning past issues, but with slight modifications. Blue will be the predominant color.

Students are advised to get their copies of the Forum Magazine as soon as possible, to avoid the last minute rush which was characteristic of sales conducted in the past. The issue may be obtained at one of the following places: Extension building, the bank at the Galileo building, or at Girls' High School.

"Variation of subject matter as well as literary form is being stressed in the current issue, so all students should find something of interest in it, no matter how limited their interests are," Parkinson continued. "Contributions were judged on their ability to entertain the college student, as well as their artistic merit and literary value."

The publication will contain 50 pages in all, thereby making it the most outstanding issue to date, as past copies of the Forum Magazine have never exceeded 35 pages in all.

Parkinson announced that the periodical will be printed on a fine grade of paper, but as yet no specific quality has been decided upon, and the best print obtainable will be used.

This is the first semester the magazine has been printed. In the past it has been published in mimeograph form. The printed form should enhance the beauty of the magazine and make it more attractive and more readable.

Tuxedos Available For Sophomore Formal

Tuxedos for the soph formal may be rented at the Rochester Clothing Company, Third and Mission Streets, for $2.25, in single or double-breasted models, complete with all accessories, Art Pomares, high soph president, remarked.

All the tuxedos will be new," Pomares commented, adding that "students should get fitted as soon as possible."

If additional information is desired, they are directed to Hal Hoffman, Edmund Wunsch, or Pomares.

May 23 at 2:30 in the Galileo Auditorium.

To top off the many events planned for Soph Week, May 20-24, the high soph dance committee has engaged Noel Thomas and his orchestra to set the musical mood for the soph formal which will be held at the California Country Club, May 24, Pomares revealed.

Bids for the dance, limited to 150, are now on sale at the Galileo bank at $1.25 per couple, and with the selection of an orchestra decided, handmade programs are also expected to be completed soon, he added.

Patrons and patronesses at this dance, according to the committee, will be: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cloud, Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Mohr, Dean and Mrs. Edwin C. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sandys, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Ross, Margaret Dougherty, Verrel Weber, and Nelson A. Wells.

ARTICLE IV.

Elections

1. The Associated Student officers shall be elected on a date selected by the Executive Council, this date to be published in The Guardsman at least two weeks previous to the election.

2. A candidate must file an intention to run by such a date as shall be specified by the Executive Council.

3. A student must be enrolled for a minimum of twelve units and must have maintained a "C" average in the second mid-term grades in the semester in which he is a candidate in order to be eligible for an Associated Student office.

4. Officers of the Freshman and Sophomore classes shall be elected at a date set by the Executive Council, this date to be published in The Guardsman at least one week previous to the election.

ARTICLE V.

Amendments

An amendment to this Constitution shall become effective if proposed in one of the following two ways:

1. The proposed amendment to be signed by ten percent of the members of this Association and approved by a two-thirds majority vote of those present and voting at an official meeting of this Association.

2. The proposed amendment to be presented to the Executive Council and endorsed by that body by a two-thirds majority vote of its members and approved by a two-thirds majority vote of those present and voting at an official meeting of this Association.

The president shall call a meeting of this Association for either or both of these purposes within two weeks after the amendment has been properly signed or has been accepted by the Executive Council. Such amendments shall be published in The Guardsman or posted in a public place at least one week previous to the meeting it is voted on.

Two Students To Speak At Commencement June 7

Two students of the graduating class will be selected to speak at commencement, June 7, Nelson A. Wells, high soph adviser, announced today.

Wells said the students, who have not as yet been chosen, will be coached by Lloyd D. Luckmann, college debate instructor.

Measurements for caps and gowns, he reminded graduates, will be held at Galileo at 2:30, May 14, 15, and 16, under the direction of Verrel A. Weber, also a sophomore adviser.

Field Events, Free Box Lunches For Campus Picnic

Previous plans for a parade, carnival, and dance on May 17 at Balboa Park have been cancelled and a new program has been announced by Bob Ogg, general chairman.

As the new arrangements are now, on Friday, May 17, a car parade will start at the Powell Street building at

Reorganization Plans Are Killed By Decisive Margin

Rejecting the major changes in the newly proposed Associated Student constitution by a large majority, the college yesterday finally accepted what was left of the proposed measure.

Article two concerning the elimination of the AMS, AWS, and WAA, from the executive council, and the setting up of a social council , a general athletic council, the electing of a rally committee was defeated.

Articles two and three of the old constitution which provided for a president, vice-president, and secretary of the Associated Students, a president, vice-president and secretary of the AMS and AWS respectively a head yell leader, the president of the Club Advisory Board, a representative of the Men's Athletic Council and a representative of the Publications Board, remains unchanged.

Two major changes made in the constitution were that only students purchasing Associated Student cards will be eligible to take part in the activities of the association. This includes admission to athletic and social events and participation in any activity which is supported by Associated Student funds.

The other change made was that students running for office are no longer required to have petitions filled out and signed by seventy-five members of the Association but instead merely have to file an intention to run in the office of the dean of men.

Amid considerable confusion and cries of "Mr. President I rise to a point of order," "I object," "I move we adjourn," the assembly was terminated at approximately 10:30 a.m.

The bewilderment so much in evidence at the first assembly Thursday was not as noticeable yesterday indicating that the students had used the postponement of decision to acquaint themselves with the new constitution.

For the benefit of those persons intending to run for Associated Student office the following offices which will be voted upon in the primary election next Monday, May 20, are as follows:

President of the Associated Students, Vice-President of the Associated Students (one who will still be chairman of the Social Committee) and Secretary of the Associated Students.

President, vice-president and secretary of the AMS.

President, vice-president and secretary of the AWS.

Head Yell Leader.

Three Men Running For President

By MARY FRANCES MALONE

Declaring their candidacy for the presidency of the Associated Students are three men—Melvin Chiecazola, Lyle Shultz, and Alden Thorogood.

Chiecazola, chairman of the Men's Athletic Council, is a member of the Block SF Society. A Police Administration Major, he is also an assistant line coach on the spring football staff. He will be recognized as a high sophomore next semester, his fifth in the college.

Shultz, Associated Men Students' president, was a transfer last year from Santa Monica Junior College. He plans to continue his education at Stanford University when he graduates from the college next semester, and he intends to work this summer as a life-guard.

Thorogood, president of the Club Advisory Board, is a graduate of Berkeley High School and is a resident of Albany. He wants to be a mortician and is at present the assistant coroner of Alameda County. Passing the State Board Examinations will be his main objective when he finishes at the college after next semester.

All three expressed their interest in student government and have been active in college affairs. Format, declaration of their campaign promises will be made at the nominees' assembly at 2:30, Thursday, May 16, at Galileo.

Ogg, Schlesinger, Wines Vie For CAB Presidency

Contending for the presidency in the Club Advisory Board election of May 21 are these candidates named last week: Robert Ogg, Ski Club president and chairman of "Meet-Your-Campus" activities; Robert Schlesinger, editor of the club board's new publication, CABBY; and Burton Wines, secretary-treasurer for this semester.

The candidate elected will automatically become a member of the Executive Council next semester, and will represent in this governing body of the college, approximately 900 students, members of the 30-odd organizations recognized by the CAB.

Other nominations for CAB positions were made last week as follows: Vice-president, Ruby Klistoff, Lyle Mackie, Marion Schrick; secretary-treasurer, Gus Waegemann, Theodora Wong.

To assure the election of all officers by a plurality vote, a primary will be held at the beginning of the meeting on May 21, Alden Thorogood, CAB president, announced. New members to the club board were asked to obtain a written identification of their capacity as official representatives from the president of their respective organizations.

Two of the club councils, 4 and 5, have already sponsored activities with funds allocated by the Executive Council to the CAB in general and re-allotted to these groups, Thorogood announced. Should the other three councils in the CAB fail to use their funds, the money will be returned to the general fund of the Associated Students, he added.

Peace For A Dollar; 'Advertising Will End War'

WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.,—(ACP) —Sell peace to the United States through a giant advertising program to be financed by asking each citizen to pay a dollar for the campaign's expenses.

This was the new peace proposal made to Williams College undergraduates by Paul Hollister, executive vice-president of R. H. Macy & Co., of New York City.

"Using the classic technique of modern advertising, let us buy one-fifteenth of the total time and resources of the advertising people and media owners of the country and mobilize them," said the department store executive.

"They will prepare and carry on the most educational, dramatic and urgent campaign of which they are capable, but their product will not be a can of food, a bar of soap, or a motor car; or a health examination. Their product will be peace—America's active self-interest in keeping at peace. They will duly place this copy before the American people as they alone best can.

German Conquest Mania, Brutality Will Justify Post-War Partition

So damnably base in concept and execution that it is scarcely credible, Germany's wanton barbarity enjoys the unenviable dishonor of having no parallel in all the dark and bloody annals of history.

It is a peculiar quality—one which, to a free and decent-minded people, is inconceivable in its accumulated entirety, but which may be broken down to its fundamental components and analyzed in disconnected detail.

The ruthlessness itself is the composite of every characteristic, individual and racial, that is foul and abhorrent when judged by our own moral-ethical standards. The sum total is a degenerate aggregate of coarse brutality, despicable treachery and brazen mendacity whose malodor, individual and collective, ranks a wide field.

Germany is patently guilty on all counts; nor is her judgment dictated by the indefensible events of this last week. The murder-lust, the savage cowardice so characteristic of this state are by-products without novelty.

Here is the smoke, not the fire; here is the bellowing outward manifestation of an intrinsic putrefaction so corrupt and malevolent as to preclude any minimization of its virulence or rationalization of its actual nature.

Not alone derived from post-1933 developments, but rather from the lessons contributed since 1870, is the inescapable conclusion that the German race numbers among its natural gifts a definite paucity of moral fibre.

There is something here which goes deeper than ideology, something which can neither be explained away nor disregarded. There is in the German constitution a grave ethical weakness, a reluctance to abide by individuality, a lamentable eagerness to blindly follow the blustering hero, coupled with a horribly overstuffed conceit whose progenitor, a self-imposed frustration complex, demands a sadistic iron heel with which to grind down all the other peoples of the earth.

These peculiar and appalling temperamental qualities can hardly be credited to National Socialism, for the ideology seems admirably adapted to its environment.

National Socialism is the sophisticated offspring of Communism, and, like Communism, is of strictly German origin. And, in the final analysis, it is German Communism, altered to meet in harmony its environment.

No governmental system has ever thrived, which was not tailor-made to suit the specifications of the people for whom it was intended. And Hitler's National Socialism is no exception.

The early valedictories on the new order to come out of the chaos, the animated concern expressed over an eventual just and equitable peace, these roseate bubbles are already forgotten.

If Allied arms overcome the irrepressible aggressor, it will be a seemingly harsh peace that is imposed. But it will be in all respects a just peace.

Because there is no common denominator of justice. The Germans have never been troubled with ethics, and to them justice is whatever is expedient. In the event of a German victory, the world would experience a type of justice very strange to us, who subscribe to Anglo-Saxon standards.

Experience is a hard teacher. It has undoubtedly demonstrated by now that the only final solution—the only course open for victorious Allied arms—is the complete and unqualified dissection of the German state.

Anderson's Key Largo Fails Short In Try To Express Ideals

ROMANTIC adventure lured the eight comrades from America to the slaughterhouse called Spain. Here we first meet them in Maxwell Anderson's newest play, Key Largo, now playing at the Geary Theater in San Francisco.

King McCloud (Paul Muni), leader of the Yankee group, realizes his Lost Cause was just a grand illusion. Trying to save the lives of the remaining four buddies, he plans an escape out of the tumultuous land. His closest friend, Victor d'Alcala (Joseph Pevney), has a different idea. Victor tells King that in order to believe that there is something in the world that isn't evil he must die for what he believes. Otherwise, he will die inside, which to him is worse than actual death. The other men follow Victor's example, so King sets out alone, while his friends remain on the hills awaiting death.

King returns to America to tell the families of the seven men. We find him next, carrying out his mission in Key Largo, Florida, at the home of Victor d'Alcala's father and sister.

Here a band of crooked gamblers has imposed its unwelcome presence on the d'Alcala's. Murillo, ruthless leader of the gang, who dislikes King intensely, has murdered a man. The blind father of Victor orders two fugitive Indians to free the body from its weights and wire bindings in order that it can be discovered by fishermen. When the body is discovered, the sheriff, afraid of Murillo, tries to pin the murder on King or the escaped Indians.

King's internal struggle, to save the life of the innocent Indians or his own life, leads up to a climax that had the possibilities of being full of suspense and pathos, but somehow failed.

That was the main trouble with Key Largo. It had great possibilities of being an outstanding play. For one thing it is too religiously profound, while the plot construction was not strong enough to support the universal struggle of mankind against the soul.

Muni's acting, conspicuously better than that of any other member of the cast, is not as convincing as it is on the screen. Perhaps it is the limitations of the legitimate stage, but more than likely it is the fault of the play.

Before Key Largo plays New York, Anderson will have to revise it almost completely. The dialogue, full of weight and meaning, is written in blank verse. The preponderance of dialogue upsets the balance between plot and action required on the stage. Anderson supposedly solves his problems of justice, truth, love, and the soul, yet his answer does not satisfy.

Entrance Exams Tomorrow For High School Seniors

Preparing to enter the college next semester, several hundred students of Lowell, Polytechnic, Balboa, and Galileo High Schools, have been taking a series of entrance examinations given by Harold W. Leuenberger, head of the psychology department.

The tests, which are being given in the Galileo Cafeteria, began on Wednesday, May 8, at 1:30 p.m.

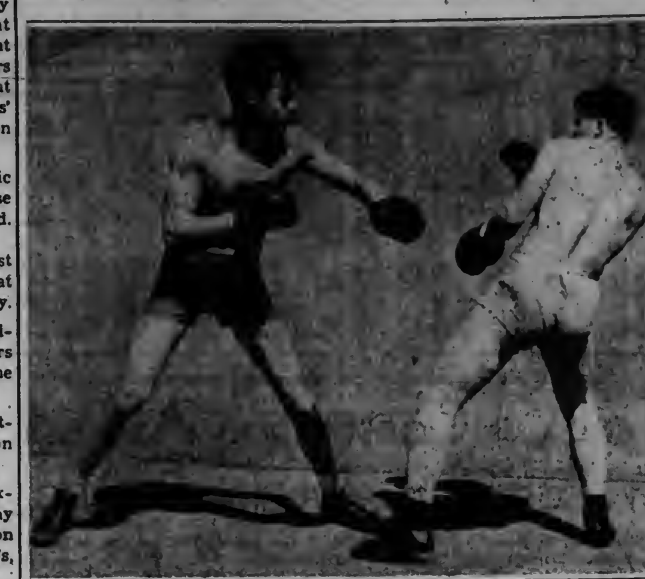
The first set included the Psychological and Subject A examinations, while on Thursday, May 9, the High School Content and Strong's Vocational Guidance Tests were given. The same set of tests will be repeated on Wednesday, May 15, and Thursday, May 16. Following this the tests will be given in Oakland on May 22 and 23.

The Merritt School of Business has been tentatively set for the place of the Oakland examinations, but in case of a large crowd, the examinations will have to be held elsewhere, revealed Leuenberger.

Each entering student is required to take the Subject A, High School Content, Psychological, and Vocational Guidance Tests, Leuenberger commented.

Faculty Elects Officers, Honors Cloud At Luncheon

A general meeting of the Faculty Association will be held on Wednesday afternoon, May 22, at 4:30 p.m. in the Galileo Little Theater, Lloyd Luckmann, president of the organization, announced recently.



Main order of business will be the election of next semester's officers, he declared.

Nomination blanks may be obtained from Mrs. Eileen Rue, secretary, or from Tom O'Neill. Nominations may be made by filling in one or more of the forms provided for this purpose.

Luckmann also announced that the annual luncheon tendered to President A. J. Cloud will be held at 12:30 on Wednesday, May 29, at Aquatic Park.

San Mateo Forfeits Net Championship By Ram Defeat; Salinas Undisputed Leader

San Mateo's tennis championship pipe-dreams were caught in a trap coming and going at the Ram-Bulldog net fracas, lost by the locals, 5-2, last Saturday on the southern courts.

Although the college tennis squad is definitely out of the running for the league crown, it will be well represented at the individual title matches at Modesto next week-end.

Bulldogs Slate Clean

The Bulldogs are the only undefeated Northern California conference team, but Salinas holds the championship secure by a margin of two matches. Under the scoring rules of the conference, one point is scored for each individual match won. The Bulldogs have defeated all other colleges by close scores, but have dropped two more contests than Salinas.

Chuck O'Neill, who will be San Mateo's chief contender at the Modesto battle, lost for the first time this season when Bill Madamba outfinessed him 12-10, 7-5. O'Neill and Madamba will fight it out Saturday for the conference singles title.

S.M.—Ram Scores

John Garton (SM) defeated Chet Mead, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4; Gene Doyle (SM) trounced Tony Calagos, 6-2, 6-2; Ed Talbot (SM) defeated Maurice Waxman, 6-1, 6-8, 6-2; George Pennypacker subdued Bud Hink (SM), 5-7, 6-2, 6-2.

In the doubles matches, O'Neill and Garton (SM) took Madamba and Mead, 6-2, 4-2, 6-3; Doyle and Bud Fischer (SM) defeated Calagos and Waxman, 6-2, 6-4.

Despite the fact that conjecture is never proof, the consensus of the "grandstand players" was that the Rams could have won the San Mateo matches with the aid of Ray Berns, ineligible No. 3 college player. Bern's singles prowess, and the Madamba-Berns combine was sorely missed.

Bob Ogg Re-elected To Ski Club Presidency Friday

Bob Ogg was elected Ski Club president for the third time, when college skiers gathered for the final meeting of the semester, Friday evening at the home of Alden Smith, club adviser.

Ogg with Smith founded the club in the fall of '39. Since then he has held the club presidency.

Antonicelli, Windeler Also Officers

Voted into office as secretary was Lu Antonicelli, while Bill Windeler was re-elected treasurer. The executive committee which is composed of the above club officers and four members of the club-at-large will consist of Eleanor Buffum, Falk Falkenberg, Foster Jessup, and Jack Smythe.

"Although no definite plans were made for next semester," Ogg remarked of the meeting, "we are considering enlarging our field of competition. We hope to include in next semester's list of ski meets, as many junior colleges with ski teams as possible.

Salinas Scheduled

"At present the only junior college we have made any arrangements with for ski meets is Salinas. In March, our first meet with the team, went to Salinas. But with the large turn-out we had at the meeting Friday night, in which there were many new members, we feel confident that the college ski team will prove strong competition for any and all takers."

Conlan Trains College Tee Aces For Modesto Title Bid

With the expectation of returning with the championship, Louis G. Conlan, Ram golf coach, is spending this week readying his team for the annual league golf championships to be held at Modesto next Saturday, May 17.

"The Modesto course will not be new to the players," Conlan remarked. "We played on the same course three weeks ago, and should do a lot better on it this time."

The team winning the championship will keep the perpetual trophy for one year. The four leading scorers will receive medals.

Local Bowlers Complete Victorious Full Season

"Because of a lack of funds, there will be no more bowling contests this semester," announced Joe Amori, college bowling instructor.

Nevertheless, the bowling teams are looking forward to next semester, in which they have prospects of a successful season.

The bowling team has had a successful season, in which they have played with Sacramento, Marin, and Salinas Junior Colleges, San Jose State, and College of the Pacific, aside from the local teams about the city.

Baseball Team

Bulldog Nine Trounces College In Double-Header, 11-6, 4-2

Championship hopes of the Ram baseball nine this season were blasted last Saturday, when San Mateo clubbed three local pitchers to take both ends of a double header, 11 to 6, and 4 to 2.

Coach Jack Gaddy will take his team to Salinas today to meet the southern team in a pair of contests postponed from last March. Since there is no title at stake, Gaddy may use several inexperienced men in the lineup.

Al Giovanetti hurled the first game for the Rams. He ran into trouble in the first inning, when three runs were scored on three hits and one error.

Sixth A Crucial

In the first of the sixth the college nine took the lead, 6-3, by scoring five runs with three hits, and aided by two Bulldog errors. The San Mateans, however, rallied in their half of that inning when they scored seven runs.

Harry Aleo replaced Giovanetti on the mound and held the Bulldogs in check, but the Rams couldn't overcome the five run lead of the peninsula nine.

Bob Hvidt, most effective Ram pitcher, could not control his hurling in the second contest because of an injury he received in the first game. He was playing in right field during the first encounter, and pulled a muscle sliding into second base.

Hvidt had trouble keeping his fast ball in check, and hit three Bulldog batters, two of them during the third inning, when four runs were scored before the side could be put out.

Benchwarmers To Play

Among those who have warmed the bench during past games are Bob O'Neill, southpaw hurler, who showed promise in the Cal Frosh contest. Charles Gratiot, infielder, saw enough action to win his letter last season, but has been benched in favor of Ross Wolcott, hard-hitting third sacker. Other bench warmers include Charles Donovan, Russell Brabant, and Martin Zernicke.

The umpiring was very poor in the San Mateo games. It was later learned that the men serving as umpires had never done so before. The umpire behind the plate was so bad that he resorted to alternating his calls (ball, strike, ball, strike, etc.).

Regular Lineup Indicated

Gaddy had not definitely decided upon his starting lineup at press time but it is believed that he will use most of his players in their regular starting positions. Aleo and Hvidt are scheduled to pitch the two Salinas contests.

Information released by Gaddy concluded that the Salinas squad, which showed promise at the season's start, would be a tough finale on the Ram schedule. A singular factor in the prognosis of the Salinas tilt is the site of the battle, the Rams rarely winning on a foreign lot.

Barbara Smith Elected WAA Head

Following tradition, WAA election returns were released at the Tourney Week Banquet last Thursday evening when the Association concluded its Tourney Week activities.

Succeeding this semester's group, and acting as first WAA officers on the Balboa Campus, will be Barbara Smith, president; Blanche Noyes, vice-president; Jeanne Arnold, secretary; and Betty Van Emon, treasurer.

White blazers, the college's highest award to women in sports, were awarded Barbara Smith and Betty Teter.

Also given the women athletes were first team awards, based upon skill in a sport, scholarship, initiative, and appearance, consisting of a white chenille with with red motifs of the sports in which they made the team.

The women receiving awards and the teams they competed on are as follows: Alma Koopman, Bernice Stroube, archery; Blanche Noyes, Betty Teter, baseball; Betty Teter, badminton; Ann McAuliff, Janet McLean, basketball; Alice Cullen, dancing; Lucille Jacke, Margarite Wood, ice skating; Annette Schunick, Priscilla Finely, rifle; Margery Radke, riding; Estelle Mouridian, tennis.

Fire Chaser?

Born in Montara, California, Johnny, all 5 feet 8 inches and 155 pounds of him, has had an ambition within him to drive a car with a siren on it. He considers his most prized possession his Block SF key . . . which he hasn't got, at present. He enjoys ice skating and riding in his spare time, and is majoring in general chemistry.

Sweater and slacks is his favorite dress, occasionally wears a hat (Joe College—Tyrolean style) and likes Strauss Waltzes. Orrin Tucker and Kay Kyser are his likes in swing bands.

Modest Mazuma Wish

In his drawling manner, Johnny bashfully stated he would like to trade places with John D. Rockerfeller . . . Jr. He is taking German as a foreign language study. Also, he would like to hitch hike around the country just to see what the other half—or is it two-thirds?—is doing. He has never got an F final.

Edwards Takes Titles, Trophy In Boxing Matches

By RAY BERNS

COLISEUM BOWL, Wed., May 15.—Coach Joe Amori's Ram leather-throwers, aided and abetted by a number of "imported" boxers and wrestlers, treated a crowd of 1000 members of the student body, alumni, and populace to one of the finest AMS boxing carnivals ever put on, in this arena tonight. All bouts were scheduled for three rounds.

Edwards Wins Trophy

Winner of the gold trophy for being the outstanding fighter in the championships was rangy Bill Edwards, who boxed and fought his way to titles in two divisions—the 159 and 169 classes. Award was determined by acclamation of the spectators.

Edwards triumphed over Bud Calaway in a clean, hard-fought three-round fracas for the 159 pound title and later reappeared to outslug George Jensen, varsity footballer who had previously defeated Clark Johnson in a semi-final bout, in the 169 pound affair.

Casey Outpoints Robertson

In one of the best bouts of the evening, Skip Casey brought blood to the proboscis of Jim Robertson and emerged victorious as the 139 pound titleholder after three gruelling rounds.

The 112 pound event went to the clever Tak Nomii who copped a handy decision over Gene Barbero, while Frank Matsumoto retained his 129 pound title by virtue of a well-earned decision over Henry Low.

Other championship encounters produced Bill Windeler as the new 179 pound "king" through a decision over Frank Barron, while Frank Lemii bested Leon Svirsky in the 149 pound class.

Grudge Fight A TKO

The feature boxing exhibition of the evening, the "grudge fight" between Al Spieller and Dick Wilson, which, by the way, was awarded to Wilson on a TKO in the second inasmuch as Spieller suffered a cut over his left eye and was unable to continue, was overshadowed by a match between two hard-hitting 145er's, Warren Grant and Nick Marota.

A terrific slugfest which saw both Grant and Marota spouting "claret" before the end of the first round, the contest was terminated abruptly in the third as Marota's second, realizing his boy was in dire straits, was stopped.

Emil Hayrahlah punched out a three-round victory over Bill Postals in the first match.

Wrestlers Provide Comedy

Comedy relief of the evening was provided by two wrestling exhibitions.

Masquerading under the pseudonym of "Baron Von Strike" and reputedly "the pride of the Deutschland Reich," a 205 pound crowd pleaser went down to valiant defeat at the hands of John Getas. Angelo Getas, earlier in the evening, was given the nod over "Young Ed Lewis."

AMS prexy Lyle Shultz acting as MC, announcer Elmer Hubacher, and judges Harry B. Smith of the Chronicle, George Malley of USF, and Walt Daly of the Call-Bulletin, all contributed to the evening's festivities, while the newly-crowned Sophomore Sweetheart, Mary Batholomew, presented the winners with their medals at the conclusion of the bouts.

Student Primary Elections Monday At Powell, Galileo

Hi-Jinx

Meet Your Campus Today; Fun Begins At 11:45

"Meet Your Campus Day" festivities and merrymaking will start promptly at 11:45, this morning, Friday, May 17, when a car parade will leave the Powell Street building to go to the official formation point at Galileo, Bob Ogg, general manager, announced this week.

From Galileo, under the direction and protection of a police escort, the automobiles will proceed to Balboa Park, Ogg said, and continued with, "A free cover charge to the Palace Hotel will be given to the owner of the 'best-dressed' car in the parade."

"At 1 o'clock this afternoon, box lunches will be issued to the first 400 students who present student association cards," Ogg said.

Events Begin At 1:30

Athletic events scheduled for the afternoon will begin at 1:30 o'clock, under the supervision of Thursa Scott, president of the Women's Athletic Association. Included in this program are a coeducational baseball game with both men and women on each side; a volleyball game; a three-legged race; a potato race and a sack race for women only, and the same races for men only; a football kicking and throwing contest; and a baseball game between the Faculty and the Block Society to highlight the sports program of the afternoon, Ogg revealed.

May 17 is also the final day of the decathlon championships which are being held at Balboa Park, Ogg disclosed.

Many Prizes To Be Awarded

"Prizes, including four gold cups from Van Wormer and Rodriquez; three box cameras and two picture frames from Bear Photo Service; five orders for corsages from the Quality Florist, Seventh Avenue and Clement; an Eversharp pencil from the San Francisco Junior College Bookstore; and others will be awarded to the

Conrad March wins Forum Honors

Conrad March was selected by the members of the Forum Magazine editorial staff as the winning entrant among student contributors to the literary magazine which will be off the presses and ready for sale on Monday, May 20, Tom Parkinson, Forum editor, announced this week.

Price of the magazine has been set at 15 cents. They may be obtained at the Extension Building, the Galileo Bank, or Girls' High School.

The poems which won March the award were entitled as follows: Sea Swamp, Pacific Edge, In A Prairie Dust Bowl, and Passage Tonight, and were considered by the editorial staff as both original and possessing real literary value.

Poet Has Had Works Printed

The youthful poet has had several poems published in Seattle magazines in the past, but as yet none has been accepted for publication in the periodicals of California.

"Embryology holds my attention now, and I hope to further my scant knowledge of it when I enter California, as I hope to make it my life work in the near future," March explained, "but at the present time, poetry is more or less of a side line."

March believes that courses in creative writing given in the college do aid students, but self-help is a necessity where the creation of literature is concerned.

Outdoor Summer Jobs Open To Students; See Browne

Students with a yen for the great out-of-doors can combine business with pleasure this summer, or so it seems, inasmuch as Dean Edwin C. Browne today announced three more summer positions to be open to men students.

All three jobs, he said, have been offered by summer camps.

The jobs are as follows:

1. Life guard—pays $25 a month and board and room.

2. Director—pays $25 a month and board and room. Applicant must be able to organize games, singing groups, etc.

3. Truck driver—pays board and room.

All students interested in applying for these jobs should see Dean Browne immediately.

Where Sophs Will Swing

Pictured above is a shot of the California Country Club, scene of the Sophomore Formal next Friday night. Although taken some time ago when the college once before held a formal at this location, the picture still shows the beauty of the setting.

Students desiring to attend the affair, which closes the college social season for this semester, may purchase bids at $1.25 per couple at the Galileo Bank.

Mary Bartholomew Elected Queen For Sophomore Week

Blonde, freshman Mary Bartholomew of Alpha Phi Omega, by vote of almost 100 students, has been declared Sophomore Sweetheart — to rule as queen during Sophomore Week, May 20 to 24.

Miss Bartholomew polled 92 votes out of 260 in an election carried on last Wednesday by a high soph committee headed by Wilton Latz. Running a close second and third were the other two contestants, Elizabeth "Zib" Harrison with 86 votes, and Anita Welt with 84.

Favorite

Mary Bartholomew

Miss Bartholomew's reign during the next week, which has been set aside to honor the high sophs of the college, will be climaxed by her appearance at the soph formal, to which she will receive a free bid, Art Pomares, class president, announced. The dance is to be held Friday night, May 24, in the colonial atmosphere of the California Country Club, and bids at $1.25 per couple are now on sale at the Galileo Bank. Since a limit of 150 reservations has been set, Pomares urged that students obtain their bids as early as possible.

When interviewed, "Queen" Mary Bartholomew found herself too breathless to say more than, "I'm very happy . . . I want to thank everyone who voted for me."

A graduate of Lowell High School, Miss Bartholomew is 18, and vice-president of the low freshman class this semester. She majors in merchandising, and plans to finish her third and fourth year of college at Stanford.

Political Triumvirate

The brows of the three gentlemen above are doubtless knitted now as they struggle in the throes of their campaigns for president of the Associated Students.

From left to right, they are Melvin Chicazola, Lyle Shultz and Alden Thorogood.

Voting for all student officers will take place Monday.

Radio Class In Fiesta Drama; Gross To Narrate

One of four episodes and the complete announcer's duties for the Golden Forties Fiesta Committee's program from the War Memorial Opera House, May 23, will be taken by students enrolled in Marie Weller's radio broadcasting course.

Miss Weller announced that following competitive auditions, Len Gross had been selected as the announcer for the entire Fiesta program, and that 12 other radio broadcasting students have been selected for parts in the Wells Fargo episode.

High Schools To Take Part

Three high schools will present one part each of the Exposition opening celebration, in addition to the college's contribution. Mission High School will give the story of John Fremont, George Washington will enact the story of Theodore Judah, and Galileo will conclude with the modern story of the Golden Gate bridge architect, Joseph Strauss. It will be the job of announcer Len Gross to tie the four episodes together.

There will be two performances of the Fiesta program, one at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and one at 8 o'clock in the evening, with a possibility of another set for 10 o'clock that same evening. The third presentation depends upon the demand for tickets. Tickets are being handled by the Golden Forties Fiesta Committee and are given out free of charge.

At the 2 o'clock show San Francisco's elementary and secondary schools will attend and will enter the Opera House in colorful marching order.

Lowell To Provide Orchestra

Fiesta committee member Arthur Gleditsch is in charge of the entire program. Music will be provided by a Lowell High School orchestra and an A Capella choir from George Washington.

College students from the radio broadcasting class chosen for roles include Tom Redmond, Tony Manov, Blas Narro, Earl Pereira, Marcus Merrymont, Malcolm Kelly, Bill Michelson, Hal Hoffman, Jessie McCary, Ray Berns, Bob Holmes, Everett Hayes, and Bentley Schoenfeld.

All of the high school and college performers will be attired in typical western costume.

Debate Course To Return To College Curriculum

After being discontinued this semester, debate returns to the college curriculum in August as Speech 16a, according to Lloyd Luckmann, instructor of last season's debaters.

Luckmann explained that when debate was dropped by the college heads it became popular, necessitating its return as a course.

Speech 16a offers opportunities in speaking to outside groups as well as inter-college debating. The college debate team takes frequent trips and usually individual orators represent the college at business, civic, and fraternal functions.

All College Bills Must Be Paid By June 3

Official announcement from the comptroller's office was made last week stating that all bills of the student association should be paid on or before June 3, 1940.

If bills chargeable to Spring semester budgets are not received on or before June 3, they will not be paid until Fall and will then be charged against the Fall 1940 budgets," he said

He advised that it would be "advantageous" to pay debts as soon as possible.

Sponsors of activities at the college are asked to make sure that all bills relative to past activities are received. Nichols said that information concerning unpaid bills will be given to those who wish it by coming to Room 260 or the bank any school-day between 2:30 and 4:30 at Galileo.

Returning Students Should Sign Up Early; Limit 3,000

Passage of a Board of Education ruling limiting next semester's college enrollment to 3,000 will not affect normal registration procedure for next semester, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, announced this week.

"Blanks will be available for students who plan to return next semester in the offices at Powell Street," Girls' High School, Galileo, and 58 Sutter," Mohr declared. "They will hold places for students until the regular registration date to be announced later."

According to the rules of the Board of Education, students must be admitted in the order of registration, he explained. In keeping with this ruling, places will not be reserved after the date assigned for registration of returning students. Students will then be accepted in the order of their applications for admission.

"I should like to emphasize the fact that it is important for those who plan to attend the college next semester to fill out one of the blanks," Mohr said.

Blanks can be obtained Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of next week.

He added that there was no truth in the rumors to the effect that East Bay students would not be allowed to attend the college next semester.

Four Students Find Jobs Through Business Dept.

Four students of the college business department were placed in full-time positions this week, announced F. Grant Marsh, chairman of the department.

The students placed were Bill Eiset, put in charge of the stock rooms of two large departments at Hale Brothers; Charlotte McCormick as salesgirl at Cosgraves Cloak and Suit Company; Victor Ricohermoso at the Women's Club, Golden Gate International Exposition; and Winifred Read as a stenographer at Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Scribner's Contest Open To Students Until June 1

Nearly two weeks remain before June 1, closing date of the Scribner's Commentator Prize Article Contest, and undergraduate students of all American colleges are urged to compete for several prizes, the first of which is a position with the magazine, according to the publishers of the periodical.

Typical old-fashioned essays are not desired, and therefore it is suggested that prospective authors scan a recent issue of the publication, before writing their contributions, so that articles suitable for printing will result.

Awards will be made on the basis of suitability and originality, and it is requested that students be well acquainted with their topic, so as to insure a better chance of winning, because familiarity breeds realism.

19 Prizes To Be Awarded

Writers will be competing for 19 prizes, and the winner of the first award will secure a position working for Scribner's Commentator. Choice of the department, whether editorial, circulation, or business, will be left to the victor's own discretion, and a regular salary will be secured from June to October, or longer if his return to college is not imperative in the fall. The student's major in college will be taken into consideration by choosing a department which will allow further research in his chosen field of endeavor.

Second prize is $200 cash and the third is $50 cash, while 16 awards of $25 each, conclude the awards.

Manuscripts Limited To 3,000 Words

All manuscripts should be typed and double-spaced, and must not exceed 3,000 words. Students should retain a carbon copy of their entry, as no contributions will be returned at the conclusion of the competition. Large Response At Polls Asked By Williams

Balloting for the Associated Student primaries will be held Monday, May 20, at both Powell Street and Galileo from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Al Williams, Associated Student president, stated.

Williams urges everyone to participate in the primaries. This is the first time in college history that primary elections have been carried out. For the first time, also, candidates will be elected on a majority rather than a plurality basis.

Student Card Needed To Vote

Students were reminded that presentation of Associated Student cards is required before they may vote.

Candidate for the office of Associated Students president are Lyle Shultz, Associated Men Students president; Alden Thorogood, Club Advisory Board president; and Melvin Chicazola, Men's Athletic Council chairman.

Joseph Velarde is a candidate for the office of AMS president, and Pete Aydelotte is unopposed for the office of head yell-leader.

Running for the office of Associated Student Body secretary is Edith Callaghan.

Arnold Running For Vice-President

Jean Arnold is a candidate for the office of student body vice-president.

Candidates for the office of AWS president are Virginia Hubbert and Marion MacKillop.

Mary Francis Malone is a candidate for the office of AWS vice-president.

Tentatively set for May 24, is the final election, which will be by means of election machines placed at Powell Street and Galileo.

Dean, Faculty Will Name Honor Students For Plaque

Named by President Archibald J. Cloud as the faculty committee to select the outstanding man and woman student of the college were Dean Edwin C. Browne, chairman; Margaret Dougherty, Annemarie Delfs, Alfred P. Agosti, and Lloyd D. Luckmann, revealed Muriel Grenelle, Associated Student vice-president, this week.

The names of the two students chosen will be engraved on a 20-year bronze plaque, now nearing completion, and for which the Executive Council recently appropriated $65.

Judging will be based on service, character, and ability, and the plaque with the names of the outstanding students will be presented to the college on the eve of graduation, June 7, in the War Memorial Opera House.

Culmination Of Five-Year Effort To Be Gratified At Carnival Today

TODAY the college goes on a spree and unofficially celebrates the near completion of the new campus.

For those who have worked and fought for years to attain this end, it should be a happy and thankful day. For those who did not have such an opportunity it should be a day of grateful celebration that they were spared the work of fighting for a building but will nevertheless share its privileges.

Everyone is no doubt glad of the chance to celebrate (unless there are a few among us who enjoy jerking along on the "F" car every day), and it is to be expected that everyone will avail himself of this chance. To a few of the students, today means merely getting out of classes. Let us hope that only a very few take this rather cold attitude. To most of the college it will mean much more than can be expressed in words.

Many find it hard to realize that the end of journeying about from pillar to post is nearly here. Perhaps this doubt and dubiousness is because those sceptics have never taken the time to visit the new campus.

The vision of a modern structure, to house thousands of students, rising atop a hill almost before one's eyes, will soon dispel any doubts of that nature.

For this afternoon an interesting program has been arranged. In addition to athletic contests there will be many types of games in which everyone can participate. Prizes will be awarded to the winners of the contests, and the entire affair should be successful. Picnics are always enjoyable and this one should be no exception.

The opportunity to visit the new campus in a large group and celebrate its completion comes but once in a lifetime.

It is going to be a swell day, so don't miss it.

A "Line" Is Not Necessarily The Criterion Of A Good Student Officer; Choose Candidates Carefully

WITH election of Associated Students officers approaching, now is the time for college voters to think carefully of this matter of student officers.

Unless this semester is to be an exception, there will probably be the usual flurry of propaganda and sales talks favoring such and such a candidate and discrediting such and such an opponent. In a week or so students will possibly be deluged with pamphlets, handbills, blotters, chewing gum, and letters, praising the ability of certain men and women.

Although such heavy campaigning makes college life more colorful and interesting, it also presents a grave problem with serious potentialities. Too often students are carried away by a marvelous "line" camouflaging a vacant head. Too often the woman with the charming smile and the man with the wavy hair are elected in preference to the man and woman who have been preparing themselves for office by studying various aspects of student government and activities. And too often the hero of the athletic field and the belle of the dance floor prove to be "fizzles" on the speaker's platform.

Now, before excitement and partisanship take over, students of the college must decide in their own minds which of the candidates are best equipped for office. A new campus with new and disturbing problems and a new student body with untried interests are only two of the situations with which next semester's officers will have to cope.

Student voters should not let them be tried and found lacking.

Hooton Gives Blueprint For Utopia: Proper Social Niche Must Be Found For Capacities Of Individual

"THE chaos of modern civilization can scarcely be attributed to the acts of God. The structure of human society is not rotten but sound. It is the defective utilization of human culture that lies at the bottom of our present trouble. The most exigent task in education today is the appraisal of the biological and consequent social capacity of the individual so that his proper niche—if any—can be found and he can be stuffed into it." Harvard University's anthropologist, Dr. Ernest M. Hooton, presents his own blueprint for Utopia.—(ACP)

I WOULD have those with the most immediate responsibility force our institutions of higher education to cease to strive for self-aggrandizement and to become in spirit and in very truth places "of light, liberty and of learning".—University of Michigan's Pres. A. G. Ruthven asks that institutions of higher learning cease their battle among themselves for glory and fame. (A.C.P.)

AND so, comes fall, we move to Balboa Park. Today we "preview" the campus. From rags to riches, you might say. Yes, the move into the new building will carry with it some nostalgic regret. We, for one (or is "we" two?) will rather hate to leave our present city-wide campus for the comparatively cramped quarters of Balboa Park.

There'll be a lot of things we'll miss this fall. For instance, we'll miss:

1. Being able to blame lateness on the d—— street car company. (Though that alibi hasn't been working so well these days, anyway).
2. Sneering haughtily at the children at Girls High as we entered and exited without fear of those tough traffic girls. (We should have had armbands or something, though, to save the indignity of being asked for a pass.)
3. Riding up and down the PGE Building elevators with the operator trained to let us off at the seventh floor.
4. Using Union Square park as a campus, with the pigeons and municipal band to amuse our waking moments.
5. Using the downtown stores as auxiliary campuses. (Don't forget those hours traveling gaily up and vice versa on the escalators at a certain department store.)
6. That drinking fountain at 58 Sutter. (It's really cold.)
7. The many movies which lured us on to cut and cut and cut (we mean the 15-cent ones, of course).

Then, on the other hand, we'll miss these things, too—with less regret:

1. Drooling for a long drink of water after a gym class at Galileo and getting a weak trickle of what tastes like the-stuff-they-boil-the-crabs-in-down-at-Fishermen's Wharf from those knee-high drinking fountains.
2. Stumbling over those packing boxes or whatever they are outside President Cloud's and Dean Browne's offices. (Don't any of the instructors ever call for their mail?)
3. Fighting with the conductors on the F car line. (They're the most obliging, most polite gentlemen in the city, and yes, that is sarcasm.)

What memories to beguile the long winter with! It's going to be a long one, they say.—(This column was written by Eve Burkey.)

Chad Hanna—Circus Life Before Barnum And Ringling Came

DURING the administration of Andrew Jackson, America was new and rugged, and life was lusty. In a tiny canal village in New York State lived Chad Hanna, an orphan boy of about 19, a lad of the class that the new era of Jacksonian Democracy was striving to help.

At the same time, the days of circus glory were in their full sway, traveling from one town to the next, making sometimes one-night stands, sometimes, when fortune was favorable, more than that. They were days of easy living underwritten with Yankee competition, and from such Walter Edmonds has woven the story of his latest novel, Chad Hanna.

Chad Hanna is full of suspense, action, and comedy. Chad himself is the errand boy for the Yellow Bud, a broken-down hotel by the canal. Forced to flee from the sleepy village of Canastota because he aided in the escape of a runaway negro, Chad joins a dilapidated circus to get out of town. The circus life grows on Chad and becomes a part of him.

An old, sick lion and a few decrepit performers constitute the personnel of Huguenine's One and Only Great International Circus. The decline of Oscar, the lion; the loss of Lady Lillian, loveliest and best performer in the troupe; a fight with a larger and competing circus; Chad's marriage; the trials of the worn-out circus; the struggle with the insane dog-boy on a fleeing horse and carriage; Chad's affiliations with the competitor of Huguenine—all hold the reader's breathless attention. By the time the last page is reached one is sorry he has to leave these pleasant days of circus life in New York State.

One phase of the ability of Walter Edmonds, previously shown in his Drums Along the Mohawk, is again demonstrated in his characterizations. From Chad right down to the lion his portrayals are excellent. Although Chad is an ignorant ne'er-do-well, we instinctively like him, and even envy his lazy life of careless ease. The burly circus toughs bring forth loud and long laughter throughout the novel. All of the characters in Chad Hanna are human and real, with the weaknesses and strength of man.

Circus life and circus people are usually a mystery to the layman, but Walter Edmonds unmasks the clown and reveals the qualities in the performers that we find in our closest friends. For that matter, by the time one has finished Chad Hanna he feels that these persons in the book, ghosts from a by-gone day, are his friends, for Mr. Edmonds manages to breathe life into his creations. Chad Hanna is an altogether enjoyable noval for anyone's relaxation.

Flanders Field—The Christ Of Nations

BATTLE in Flanders—where for untold and uncounted generations the gods of war have disported themselves on this, their favored field of play. Where, through the long ages that are civilization the blood of man has watered a verdant soil become yet more fertile with the decomposition of his bones.

"We are the dead—short days ago we lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow—and now we lie in Flanders fields."

WHEN the invaders of old, other barbarians of another barbaric age, swept across the eastern plains, it was in Flanders that they gave battle, gave a battle that was to be but the first of the many, that was to consecrate those fields, on the altar of death and in the blood of the people, to the everlasting service of war.

When the glowing star of Charlemagne began to rise in the skies of history, it was on the riven fields of Flanders that his victorious legions served midwife to the tortured birth of the Holy Roman Empire.

When a mighty but decadent Spain, glutted with the wealth of a new and virgin hemisphere, turned eyes northward to break the fast growing strength of a possible rival, it was in Flanders that her armies met those of England to avenge the disaster of the Armada. Receptive, the Flemish earth—it took its toll of blood that day.

Then France's King Louis looked eastward that his frontier might be the Rhine. "After me, the deluge," was his boast, but Flanders knew better—not after him but in his armies' wake there flowed the sanguinary flood.

When the little Corsican strayed far from his native shores, he carried the shadow of the angel of war with him, spreading it wholesale over a hapless world. From Spain to Egypt, from Italy to Sweden his eagles rode victorious, but when the sunrise of the last of the fatal Hundred Days began to glow in the east, its rays spread softly, prophetically across the little Flemish town of Waterloo, and the long shadow of nearby Mount Saint Jean lay across the fields of Flanders as the shadow of war had so often done before.

Down the long slope of Mount Saint Jean thundered the Cuirassiers of the Old Guard, wavered for an instant on the fateful brink of the unseen sunken road, fell in inglorious confusion. The trench-like road filled with the screaming bodies of man and horse, until the rear-guard squadrons could cross it on a bridge of dying flesh and flowing blood that took its place with that of countless others who "short days ago felt dawn, saw sunset glow . . . now . . . lie in Flanders fields."

Then the world at war, as an archduke's blood flowed at Sarajevo—blood that presaged a greater flow of blood than mankind had yet seen. Far the distance from Sarajevo to Flanders, but short the time until conflict and strife, war and destruction once again hovered over the Flemish soil.

The lights went out over Europe, and darkness cast its shadow on long and silent ranks of young manhood, a darkness that was to lift momentarily years later, to reveal again the long and silent ranks. This time of "crosses row on row . . . where poppies grow, in Flanders fields."

THE years pass—years of pregnant peace while mankind gathers at Geneva, builds Peace Palaces at The Hague and cruisers in the shipyards.

"Peace in our time at Munich gives way to war in our time as Germany "lets slip the dogs of war" to run wild across the face of Europe.

For a few breathless moments there is strained peace in Belgium, then a sudden blow and the armies leap to their old stamping ground.

The cockpit of Europe rings with clash of steel, and Flanders again lies prostrate beneath the tearing forces of combat.

Flanders — crucified on the cross of war, pierced with the nails of strife, generation after generation its soil bleeding in a mute cry for peace unheard amidst the turmoil of conflict.

Flanders — the Christ of nations.

Serial-ous, We Advocate Rhymes For Dog And Cat

(This column was written by Harry Frister.)

FLO ZIEGFELD glorified the American Girl; Hollywood is knee deep in its attempt to do the same with the American family and its normal offspring, the American Home. Let's revue the Flicker Town's bickerings. First came the Jones Family (and since them all other serials have been trying to keep up with the Joneses, and only one has been Hardy enough to do it). But enough is too much. On with the serious stuff.

After the Jones, came the Rabble-ution, with every producer from Zukor to Zanuck trying to get the great American public to eat serial with its breakfast. Success or failure depends on how long John Q. can digest brocaded staircases, Pall Malls (pronounced Pall Mall), and gas-station attendants using two cloths to wipe off the Great American Windshield as the criterion of the Greater American Home.

Now to more imp't things: Mickey Rooney has changed the entire outlook of the usual adolescent; American boys between the ages of 18 used to be satisfied with just a 12-cylinder Packard; now it's a super-souped Chevvy with Initials (The Great American Type) on the hood and environs. Youth is to be further glorified in "Andy Hardy Finds Love and Etc."; "Andy Hardy Meets His Match In Superman"; and the one Margaret Sullavan condescended to star in: "Death Comes To The No. 1 Hardy."

Families, and as a consequence, family films, are becoming extremely prolific in Our Town. Combining Bachelor Mother and Unexpected Father we get a Little Accident. (Ummm, what won't they think of next?) Wonder what would happen if the Forty Little Mothers got together?

But it's really getting serial-ous. The Lone Stranger rides the plains to the strains of the William Tell overture; Zurro struts on his little burro; and even Dr. X comes back to haunt us as Double XX.

We are a firm advocate of a K-9 day and a C-A-T day. Think of what it would mean to the distressed merchants of this country to be able to advertise: Better Pooches Through The Medium Of A Dog Day, or More Felines To Chase Less Rats. Really invigorating stuff, that! It would enable the harassed advertising men of this great nation of ours to cull their brains for words to rhyme with dog and cat. It is safe to say that the airwaves would soon become sick with the saccharine-coated voice of a silver-throated announcer, saying:

"Man's best friend will have his day tomorrow. Now is your chance to repay the years of devotion that this faithful animal has rendered you, by giving him a silver-plated goldbrick with which to shoo neighboring pests from your property. Think of the added self-respect that your dog would command. You cannot honestly deny your faithful friend the right to lose his inferiority complex."

That's thirty for today — thank heaven!

Phantom Trip Left Reporter In Cold; 'Junior' Misleading

● A ROSE BY ANY OTHER NAME
Editor, The Guardsman:

Sometime ago, along about the close of last semester, I believe, there appeared in The Guardsman an article describing a proposal to change the name of the college to San Francisco City College. What has happened to this proposal? I for one, would be happy to see the name "Junior College" relegated to oblivion.

So many people, many too many in fact, dwell on the term "Junior" in a manner that is far from complimentary. It is my feeling that the whole morale of the student body would be strengthened if we could be known as the City's College. The fact that our entrance requirements are more flexible than the University's doesn't warrant the term "Junior" in our name. What are we junior to anyway? By any definition a college is not necessarily a four year institution. If there is any feeling of inferiority attached to our type of institution it stems directly from the name.

Just as James Thurber argued that a police dog with an inferiority complex should be given a badge, I say that we ought to have a "badge" that will give us a new lease on life in our new life at Balboa Park.

● SOPH "BOAT RIDE" AGAIN
Editor, The Guardsman:

As reporter who covered the high soph boat ride which had been set for May 1 and then was cancelled, we would like to add our comments to those of Al King, whose letter appeared in the Ram's Horn last Friday.

We, too, are on the list of the disgruntled. Not only were we robbed of the jubilation that should have been ours when the editor so generously gave us a by-line, but we found it slightly embarassing to have our name over what should have been a "big story" and—wasn't. It's small consolation to know the plans for the cruise were withdrawn too late to have been reported in The Guardsman and that therefore it was not the fault of the staff that notice was not published therein.

However, it is our direct opinion that the blame for this "failure" should not be put entirely on the high soph committee. Rather, the cause seems to lie in the lack of unified interest among the different groups in the college.

Since there appears to be so much complaint concerning various activities, perhaps it is a cue for next semester's social committee to work out some means of effecting cooperation from all groups in the college in all social functions. Or don't we have a social committee . . . ?

THE GUARDSMAN SPORTS

Tennis
Singles, Doubles Championships At Modesto Today

Determined to redeem themselves because of the loss of the conference title, Tom Wilson's Ram tennisers will journey to Modesto today to compete in the Northern California Junior College individual singles and doubles championships.

Two-Day Contest

A two-day affair, the championships attract entrants from all 10 junior colleges in the conference, thereby making possible a field of approximately 50 contestants in the singles event, and 25 combinations in the doubles.

To "Chuck" O'Neil of San Mateo went the honor of being seeded first in the singles, followed by Gerald Hansen of Salinas, Bill Madamba of San Francisco, and Andy Roberts of Menlo, in that order.

Madamba Tops Rivals

Interesting, however, is the fact that Madamba has, in conference competition, beaten both Hansen and O'Neil, while Roberts, seeded fourth, has subdued Madamba.

Disregarding the seedings and listening to the dictates of experience, one finds that Madamba will probably emerge the eventual singles winner, conquering Roberts in the finals.

An interesting situation cropped up in the doubles seedings when Madamba and Ray Berns, local duo, were given first rating. Berns, however, has been declared ineligible, and, as a result, Jackie Hare took his place. Now, Hare is ineligible, and Chet Mead is finally teamed with Madamba.

Menlo Doubles Picked

Madamba and Mead, paradoxically enough, as in the singles, have bowed before the second and third seeded combines from Menlo and San Mateo, Andy Roberts and Ben Olsen, and "Chuck" O'Neill and Johnny Garton.

The winner of the doubles looks, without a doubt, to be the Menlo tandem, Roberts and Olsen, who have been playing together in bay-region tournament tennis for the past four or five years.

Hard Luck Tale

Ram rooters were confident for a time that the local net squad would breeze to a strangle-hold on the conference tennis crown. However, following the ousting of Ray Berns, No. 3 singles player, and a part of the Madamba-Berns doubles combination, Chet Mead pulled up with a lame back, and several members of the squad ran into scholastic difficulties. Coach Tom Wilson can only hope for a luckier season next spring.

Before The Glide

Brawny college ski-birds made this institution's name well-known in Pacific Coast skiing circles during the winter and early spring months.

Smiling members of the college Ski Club, standing left to right before a mountain lodge at Norden, are Bill O'Neill, Stan Pitman, Alden Smith (club adviser), Falk Falkenberg, and Bob Ogg.

For the third consecutive time since Smith and he founded the organization in the fall of '39, Ogg was re-elected to the club presidency. Voted into office as secretary was Lu Antonicelli, while Bill Windeler was re-elected treasurer.

The executive committee, which is composed of the above club officers and four members of the club-at-large, will consist of Eleanor Buffman, Falk Falkenberg, Foster Jessup, and Jack Smythe.

Before the MAC at the present writing is a motion towards establishing the Ski Club as an official minor college sport.

Bowling Season Bows Out Of College Sport Program; Termed Successful

Bowling will not be included in the college athletic calendar next year because the new college is too far removed from the bowling alleys, Joe Amori, bowling coach, announced at the end of the present season, termed highly successful by participants.

"These bowling classes," Amori said, "which were inaugurated by Dean Browne and me in 1938, have been most inspirational to me for the reason that college students are somewhat reluctant in enrolling in the customary gym classes, but the interest shown in the bowling activities during the two year period by the students proves that one must offer them an activity which affords competition, interest, and must be individually challenging from the beginning of the semester to the conclusion.

"I'm sorry to see the sport cut from the physical education program. I feel sure that the students who learned to bowl in the various classes will use the sport in the years to come, for it has very lasting 'carry-over' values."

Several of the more important matches played this semester included the bowling team, consisting of Jack Schmale, Robert Riordan, Bill Snooks, George Stockwell, and Norman Guinasso, pitted against the San Francisco Junior College Alumni, in which the college team won by 200 pins; a win over San Mateo Junior College by 150 pins; and a return match with San Mateo, in which they won by 100 pins.

WAA To Picnic, Play At Balboa Park June 8

Physical education majors, new and old officers of the Women's Athletic Association, and Bertha Keller, adviser of the WAA, have scheduled a picnic at Balboa Park on June 8, Thursa Scott, president of the association, announced.

Miss Keller will guide the women through the new buildings and demonstrate the equipment to be used there, Miss Scott said, and further stated that several other activities are planned for the afternoon which will include a baseball game.

Box lunches will be sold for 25 cents, and money will be collected by Betty Teter, Miss Scott revealed.

"The WAA council is planning to include in its budget for next semester, appropriations for equipment to be used on the new campus," Miss Scott explained, "and the present officers feel that an excellent program of sports is being planned for the women who are to participate in WAA during the following semester."

Up - - But Not Over

Bob Raine, of the college track squad which recently terminated its season, was publicized more as a high hurdler than a high jump artist, but it must be admitted that the gentleman is versatile.

Shown above, Raine appears to be clearing the bar set at six feet, but legs which are quite lengthy caused failure in the attempt. However, Raine was a Ram cinder mainstay in the timbers, and contributed to the success of a "fair-to-middlin'" season.

Decathalon Contest Today To End Spring Football

Final scrimmage of the spring football squad now is history, and the college gridmen look forward to the decathlon contest of passing and punting to be held this afternoon at Balboa Park as a part of the program, Coach Lee Eisan announced.

Meanwhile, from the office of Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, came an unofficial schedule for the fall of 1940. The schedule is as follows:

September 20, Placer JC at Seals Stadium; September 27, San Francisco State at Roberts Stadium; October 5, California Frosh at Edwards Stadium, as a preliminary to the Cal-St. Mary's game; October 11, Los Angeles City College at Los Angeles; October 18, Sacramento JC at Sacramento; October 25, USF Frosh at Seals Stadium; November 1, San Mateo at Seals Stadium; November 8, Pasadena at Seals Stadium; November 15, Modesto at Seals Stadium.

There is still a debate on change in the date of the Sacramento encounter to the 19th, and the possibility of securing Kezar for the Pasadena encounter, in which case the date will be November 11, Jack Schmale, publicity representative, announced.

College Foursome Out To Win Today In Modesto Round

Hoping for success in the conference Golf Championships to be held Friday, May 17, and Saturday, May 18, at Modesto, Louis "Dutch" Conlan, Ram golf coach, announced that he has entered Bill McLaughlin, Bill Hoffman John Kamper, and Bill Cohen.

Conlan Optimistic

"We should have a good chance of winning the championship this season, that is, at least one of the boys should come out with a good score," Conlan remarked.

"We are playing on one nine-hole course at Modesto," he explained "and it is a fairly good course. The first time that we played there we didn't do so well, but we are hoping for better luck this time."

The best four scores and the best eight players will qualify for the individual championship at Modesto, Conlan said.

Kemper, McLaughlin Return

Considering the team as a whole, Conlan believes that the team will be in good shape next semester, and will be helped greatly by the return of Kamper and McLaughlin.

The college golf team has had a successful semester. One of the biggest wins was the 18 to 9 victory over the San Francisco State College Gator team. Nevertheless, in a return match with the Rams, the Gators garnered a 3 to 2 victory over the college.

Buccaneers Best Rams

On Saturday, April 27, the Rams lost two straight matches to Modesto. The divoteers were nosed out 11½ to 9½ by a superior Buccaneer squad. Barney Rice, leading Ram golfer, carded a 76, for low score honors, but one man was not enough to win the match.

Other matches this season included San Mateo, and two rounds with Menlo. The return match with Menlo was played on Friday, May 10, at Ingleside.

WAA Season Over; Success Noted

With the Tourney Week banquet over, and the election returns announced, the Women's Athletic Association has completed another semester of extra-curricular activities.

WAA Spring Officers

Under the supervision of Thursa Scott, president; Alma Koopman, vice-president; Dorothy Nelson, secretary; Dorothy Behrman, treasurer; and Bertha Keller, adviser, the spring sport schedule was carried out with enthusiasm, with the largest number of participants that the WAA has ever registered.

The spring sports program, one of the most extensive the association has ever known, started out with the Splash-Spread party to initiate new members into the WAA, and continued with playdays at Santa Rosa, San Mateo, and Marin Junior Colleges. The number of horseshows this semester was outstanding, with a total of three shows, two in San Francisco, and one at San Mateo.

Ski Members Added

An important addition to the curriculum was made when the WAA took under its supervision the women who were members of the ski club.

Following tradition, Tourney Week, from May 2-9, terminated the spring sports program, with a banquet on May 9 climaxing the week of athletic contests.

WAA Election Returns

Election returns for association officers for next semester were released at the banquet and are: Barbara Smith, president; Blanche Noyes, vice-president; Jeanne Arnold, secretary; and Betty Van Emon, treasurer.

Also presented at the banquet were two white blazers, the college's highest athletic award, to Barbara Smith and Betty Teter; and the first team awards, consisting of a white chenille with red motifs of the sports in which the women made the teams.

Northern California junior college postal matches in archery were inaugurated this semester, and the college was used as a clearing-house to file reports of all the matches. Next year, most of the colleges in California, as well as several high schools, will participate in these postal matches.

Sacramento Out !

The Ram baseball season officially drew to a close Tuesday afternoon when the locals trekked to Salinas for a postponed double-header with the lettuce-pickers.

Attempting to out-speed the ball to first base is a Sacramento batter pictured above. The Ram first baseman, however, has his big toe on the sack, and the "apple" virtually in his mitt. Standing by to assist if necessary is the local shortstop.

RAMblings By Ray Berns

SCREWBALLS BACK AGAIN

With the aid of those two inimitable characters, the Yogi and Ivan Tanglefoot, RAMblings brings to you (you lucky devils, you), once again, an innovation in sports coverage.

As you may have guessed, the event in question (yes, it's the AMS fights) has already taken place, but, this column was concocted, put together, or written, as you will, before the fights took place (if we're not careful, we're going to lose our place and we're supposed to be writing this figment of the imagination).

YOGI SEES ALL

Re-introducing the Yogi who will, without fear or prejudice, enter into this left-handed agreement, gaze into his crystal ball, and predict the winners of the bouts.

"Taking everything (and when you come right down to it, that's a lot of territory) into consideration, I find that the winner of the Bob Raine-Bill Edwards fracas for the 169 pound championship will be Raine, inasmuch as that 'E' in Edwards' name is 'old English' and will undoubtedly hamper him seriously even to the point of losing," said the Yogi.

ROBINSON FAVORED, HMM

Warming up to his subject, the Yogi continued, "And you can bet your sweet life that Jim Robinson will win by virtue of a walkover (columnist's note: that's Canadian for default, and if you don't know what a default is, it's the same thing as a forfeit, and if you don't know what a forfeit is, kindly get out of this column—you're ignorant) in the eighteenth round over Skip Casey, who will be unable to continue because it will be getting late and he has another engagement."

"In the Tak Momii vs. (To be announced) battle, I'll have to take Momii, although I will admit (To be announced) is rather a rugged lad," sputtered the Yogi, who by this time was getting mentally fatigued, "and," he went on, "as for the other bouts, you guess." So there!

TANGLEFOOT ERRS (AGAIN?)

The following news-story by Ivan Tanglefoot, containing some pertinent statistical information on the fights, appeared the other morning (why and where we don't know and care less):

"Coliseum Bowl, Wednesday Night, May 15.—Before an enthusiastic crowd of some 16 spectators, 3,000 San Francisco Junior College boxers fought in eight bouts for the college championships in this arena tonight."

That must have been an amazing sight, not to mention, fight.

We don't like to say anything, Ivan, but isn't it possible that you may have got your figures mixed up. It has been known to happen, you know. Even the best of us do it. Ah, well.

NO MORE BOWLING

Into each moment of jubilation falls the proverbial drop of rain, and the drop that hits the college's long-awaited occupation of its own campus is the cancellation of bowling as a part of the athletic program. For five years there have been groans about traveling to some 20 locations for various activities. Now that traveling to San Francisco's bowling alleys from the Balboa campus would be something of a long journey, bowling is out. No more traveling. No more bowling. No more groaning?

CAB Tips-Off Basketball Tournament

In regular gym games, and during the CAB basketball tourney, competition runs high among the casaba-minded men of the college.

Registering expectation, anxiety, and strain upon their faces, five basketballers were snapped in the Galileo Gym vieing for the ball which has been tossed into the air by Coach Russ Sweet. On his toes at far left is Bob Schlesinger. Beyond him, spectating with interest, is Will Blackfield, former Ram basketball star.

Minus sweat-shirt, and leaping high to snag the elusive ball, is Dan Baker. Evidently knowing just where the casaba is headed, Al Spieller, college pigskin player, blocks off his opponent at the far right.

The Club Advisory Board Tournament ended last week with the Ski Club and Phi Alpha Omega quintets in first place. Teams participating in the contests included the above named, the Newman Club, Block Society, and Dolman's Dudes.

Mel Chicazola, tourney head, declared the event to be "an unqualified success."

Season's End
Ram Nine Splits Double-Header With Salinas

Salinas and the Ram diamond nines fought to a draw Tuesday afternoon on the southern lot by splitting a double-header, the lettuce-pickers taking the first, 4 to 3, and the college squeezing through with a 7 to 6 victory in the twilight battle.

Rams Place Fourth

A contest postponed from last March, Salinas was the last opposing team on the local schedule. With eleven wins against seven losses, Coach Jack Gaddy's squad finished in fourth place in the conference title race. Santa Rosa, Sacramento, and Modesto clinched the top positions.

Because Gaddy trekked into enemy territory with only nine team members, Bob Hvidt, local hurling ace, shouldered the burden of responsibility and pitched 15 innings, an unusual feat of endurance and control.

Hvidt Loses Control

However, the stellar tosser was bothered by a recent arm injury and lost control of his fast ball in the eighth inning of the first contest, walking two Salinas men and hitting a third.

With three bags loaded, a Salinas batter drove a high ball over shortstop for a two-bagger which brought in the winning run. However, Hvidt received inadequate infield support during the last three frames, and cannot be held entirely accountable for the loss of the game.

Aleo Starts, Replaced

Harry Aleo took over the Ram mound duties at the start of the second game, but was batted out of the box at the beginning of the third stanza. Replaced by Hvidt, Aleo warmed the bench while the Rams went on to win in the eighth through a homer socked by Leo Mezzetti, college catcher.

Coach Gaddy released today the names of the team members who will receive blocks this season. They are Harry Aleo, pitcher, second base; Bob Hvidt, pitcher; Bob Nishi, center field; Ross Wolcott, second, third base; Frank Mullins, short-stop; Bob Webber, left field; Walter Hjort, first base; Russ Brabant, right field; Martin Zernicke, pitcher; George Moreira, catcher; George Donovan, outfield; Charles Gratiot, infield; and Leo Mezzetti, catcher.

White Sweaters Out

Gaddy further revealed that the Ram squad will not receive white sweaters for its efforts this season, because such emblems of victory are awarded only if the team wins the conference championship.

Opening with a winning streak during the initial games, the college players trounced Marin twice, split with Santa Rosa, and defeated Yuba twice.

Sacramento proved tougher and ended in a split-double-header. Menlo followed, and was vanquished. The turning point came when the Modesto Bucaneers smothered the locals with a barrage of hits.

College Loses

Placer, having lost most of its previous contests, played one game and forfeited the finale. Sacramento paddled down the river and swamped the Rams, and the college continued to lose, bowing to a superior San Mateo contingent on the peninsula diamond. The Salinas fracas Tuesday rang down the Ram baseball curtain until next spring.

Aeronautics

Student Pilots Cram For CAA License Exams

Date set for the Civil Aeronautics Authority Examination, a test whereby students are granted pilot licenses, is Wednesday, May 28, according to Captain Richards, college director, civil aeronautics.

"Only those students who have soloed, will be eligible to take the examination, which will constitute the final in the aeronautics class," Captain Richards said.

According to Richards, all except one student in the class have soloed.

In order to receive their pilot licenses, students must pass satisfactorily the CAA examination, which will cover questions on meteorology, air navigation and civil air rules. When they have accomplished this, a second test in the air will be given to those students who have a 35-hour solo record and eight hours of dual instruction.

"The flight test will be given a short while after college closes," Captain Richards added.

Kids Hoffman, Blackfield Twarted; Demand Justice

By BORRIE HYMAN

Though they're just a couple of kids at heart; Hal Hoffman and Willard Blackfield, suave men-about-college, made a different impression on Exposition employees when they toddled into 200 Bush Street Tuesday to be "mugged" for the $3.75 non-transferrable season tickets to the Fair.

"Too old," chirped a loyal employee who was also, according to reliable reports, blonde and . . . .

Mr. Blackfield, gently stroking an incipient beard, and Mr. Hoffman, towering mightily over the young lady, protested as well as they might.

She was adamant; with a toss of her tresses, and a polite but firm hand, she took into custody the scrip books and refunded the money.

All this in spite of the agreement between J. Graham Sullivan, college coordinator of education, and Ted Rosequist, Fair sales director, to the effect that junior college students, though most of them were over 18, would be able to buy the $3.75 scrip books reserved for those between the ages of 13 and 18.

Sorely tried, our heroes trudged into the palatial administrative suite at Galileo to pour out their tale of woe, of which Mr. Hoffman made a formal declaration in the Executive Council earlier in the day.

Dean Edwin C. Browne, with a hearty nod of sympathy, referred them to Sullivan, who promptly chided Rosequist, reminding him of their previous agreement.

Half an hour later Rosequist consented Sullivan to say that Messrs. Hoffman and Blackfield could return to 200 Bush Street and the young lady and get their scrip books back, adding that there would be no future trouble with junior college students as long as the virility of youth was stamped on their brows.

winning contestants, Ogg commented.

A cover charge to the St. Francis and the Mark Hopkins, and various prizes to be contributed by wholesale houses, may be awarded, Ogg hinted.

There will also be 26 complimentary passes to the Alexandria Theater awarded, as well as prizes from Squibbs Co. and Johnson and Johnson.

The following schedule of the activities for the day was released by Ogg:

11:45—Classes officially dismissed; car parade to start at the Powell Street building.

12:15—Parade to leave Galileo with the police escort.

1:00—Box lunches to be issued to the first 400 students who present student association cards.

1:30 to 4:30—Athletic contests and other events.

Not in the air now, but calmly posing with some members of the college aeronautics class is Dean Edwin C. Browne, tagged "Lyon's Flying Jackass" on the occasion of a recent flight. Beating today's picnickers by several days, the dean, with Captain George Richards, director of civil pilot training, took a spin, not long ago to preview the new campus from above and, incidentally, to find out what the little birds see when they gaze on what will henceforth be the San Francisco Junior College.

Window Display Course To Be Discontinued Soon

Owing to the lack of space in the new building, the window display course will be discontinued for the present, announced Teall Messer, college display instructor.

Word was received from President Archibald J. Cloud to the effect that conditions at the new campus were such that no available space could be found.

The search for space was carried to the basement and roof, but it was felt the course could not be properly conducted under these conditions, Messer said.

Students who are now enrolled in the course have drawn up a petition so that the course may be completed. As it is now, it will be discontinued while at the half way mark.

There is a possibility, however, that the course may be introduced in the future.

On Tuesday, May 14, Ralph Demey, display manager of Roos Brothers, spoke to the class on problems in display, Messer said.

According to Messer, a new field is opening up to display. The executives of Lord and Thomas, one of the greatest advertising firms in the country, have acknowledged their need for employees with this training.

At this time, 90 per cent of the students in the course have been placed for summer positions. Last Christmas, employment was 100 per cent.

Spacious Library Rooms Installed At Balboa

Home of the college library next semester will be more spacious than at present, and located in the southern section of the Balboa Park building on the top floor, Francis J. Colligan, librarian, disclosed last week.

Accommodations at the new campus include space for about 17,000 books, Colligan added. The library at present has more than 11,000, it was reported earlier.

The new quarters will accommodate as many as 192 students, who will have a separate room in which to work, Colligan said. Books will be kept in a room for the purpose instead of being set out in shelves, according to present plans, and will be issued to students as they desire them. Other rooms will accommodate periodicals, reference books, and reserved books.

Classes which meet at 8:10 or 8:30 will have their examinations with the 8 o'clock schedules. This policy will be followed for all such classes throughout the respective hours.

Work On Campus Hastened For Completion By August

Progress on the new Balboa campus is being hastened, according to J. Paul Mohr, registrar.

"On June 1 the laboratory equipment will begin to be delivered," he said, "and that is the last part of the equipment to be installed with the exception of the laying of linoleum." Connections and plumbing facilities have been practically completed, Mohr declared.

"From all evidences, the campus will be more than ready for occupation by next semester's registration dates," he added.

NYA Workers To See Redford

"All students on the NYA who are unable to work the required number of hours during the remainder of the month of May, should notify me at their earliest convenience," announced Edward H. Redford, college NYA director, "so as to allow time for substitutions to be made."

In 1893, W. W. Pudge Heffelfinger, Yale's one time one-man football team, coached the California Varsity.

Junior Collegian Art Display Closes Monday

Last opportunity for students to view the Fifth Annual Northern California Junior College Art Exhibition now being held at the Palace of the Legion of Honor will be Monday, May 20, announced Richard Allman, college art instructor.

"The college exhibit is the most successful in our history," Allman said. "In the past, art critics have remarked that the college entries were quite professional in quality, and I believe the work this year is even better."

Four junior colleges in this area are participating. They are Marin, San Mateo, Salinas, and San Francisco.

The exhibit fills two complete galleries, Allman said, and the major portion of the work is from the college.

Students who have work on display in the water color class are Hazel Bray, Vivian Hamilton, Kent Jorgensen, Tedda Kosch, Robert Kovacic, Marian MacKillop, Romer Roberts, Lucille Scammon, and George Switzin.

Those exhibiting in the commercial art group are Robert Furrer, Frank Hammersley, Robert Kovacic, Sakaye Kawashiri, Marian MacKillop, Earl Thollander, and Eli Wong.

"The exhibition is the culmination of a year's preparation," he said, "and all work done by students during the period has been with this in mind."

Because of the ever increasing popularity of photography, Allman believes that next year a definite space will be allotted to this field.

Hotel Division To Give Luncheon Monday

As a tribute to four years of work at Galileo, the college Hotel Division will give a luncheon in the faculty dining room at 12:15, May 20, speakers for the division announced today.

Members of the Board of Education and the Educational Advisory Committee, the advisory committee made up of a group of California hotel men who work together with the Board of Education in operating the hotel course) were invited to the luncheon by Coordinator Wendell.

President A. J. Cloud and George Smith, president of the Educational Advisory Committee and manager of the Mark Hopkins and Fairmont hotels, will speak, the division announced.

The luncheon, prepared and served by students of the division, will summarize the work done by the division from the standpoint of both the college and the industry.

Enduring Maxim Speaks Out From Science Building

When men build great stone edifices which they expect to endure through time everlasting, they usually enscribe over the magnificent houses mottoes, which will in some small way convey the reason the building was constructed.

"The Truth Shall Make You Free" will be the axiom which will guard the portals into the Science Building, pictured above, at the Balbos Park Campus. Science, above all else, is the one accomplishment of mankind which will open your eyes and enable you to ascertain the "raison d'etre" of the genus homo sapiens. The ghosts of Koch, Pasteur, and Ehrlich will keep silent vigil over those who study, so that they can be sure that the scientific neophytes shall learn the maxims which have been the essence of scientific thought since Archimedes took his immortal bath.

August will find the first students entering the halls of learning in quest of the truths that the illustrious "microbe hunters" have laid down.

Williams To Introduce Officers At Commencement

Associated Student president, Allen Y. Williams, will introduce the class officers of both graduating classes at this June's commencement, according to Margaret Dougherty, high sophomore adviser.

Final selection of two high sophomore women to speak at commencement has not been made yet, Miss Dougherty said. The women selected will be coached by college debate instructor Lloyd D. Luckmann.

Graduation rehearsal will be held the morning of June 7 at the Opera House. Students planning to graduate in caps and gowns should attend this rehearsal without fail, high soph advisers pointed out. Measurements for caps and gowns were taken at Galileo the 14th, 15th, and 16th of this week.

COLLEGE

LAST Monday's rather hectic constitution assembly brought forth some rather interesting points.

One of them was that the majority of the students attending the meeting actually seemed to have the best interests of the college at heart (red hots and amateur hecklers excepted).

In view of the many times the college has seemed to lack spirit, this attitude is very heartening. Perhaps it is but a prelude of better things to come.

Adding a humorous note to the assembly were the antics of a somewhat short, chubby student, who occasionally roared with indignation at some supposed irregularity.

It seems he thought President Al Williams was trying to put something over on the college when he was explaining the technicalities concerning parliamentary procedure.

Our chubby friend is to be commended for his interest, but we suggest he quit hunting for something to shout about unless there is really cause for such procedure.

Williams has been greatly criticized this semester, but it is utterly ridiculous to presume that he deliberately tried to put over a "fast one" on the college. Perhaps his policies have not appealed to everyone, but his sincerity is unquestioned.

MEMORIES of a campus picnic—The five students doing a ring around the rosy to the tune of a military march played by the Balboa band—The screams of the unorganized mass of students playing volley ball—The glee with which several students engaged in the highly undignified but swell fun of sack racing (any relation to participants is purely coincidental).

They always told us that college students were too, too sophisticated and blase.

SUGGESTED sub-title for Balboa Park—With The Wind and The Dust In Your Hair.

COLLEGE dancers should have one swell time Friday night at the Soph Formal.

The California Country Club is considered by many to be the most beautiful spot in the bay area for dancing (and we enthusiastically second the motion). Not only is the club in a beautiful setting but the interior is large enough so that there will be plenty of space to dance.

Incidentally, Noel Thomas' is considered one of the better bands in this region.

IN CASE you're wondering why there has been no deluge of electioneering material this semester, the principal candidates got together and agreed that such a procedure would not be used by those running for office.

Sounds sort of like a non-aggression pact. It certainly proves however, the constentiousmindedness and intelligence of the candidates. This is the first time we can recall any candidates having sense enough to come to an agreement on this matter.

INTERNATIONAL

WRITTEN in 1936 was a book named How To Run A War, by Bruce Winton Knight, . . .

Now in 1940, that book is even more interesting. Mr. Knight was evidently psychic, for the titles of some of his chapters make appropriate reading today. For example:

How To Get Into War — How To Lie For Your Country — How To Kill People — How To Round Up The Victims — How To Get The Killing Tools — How To Organize The Killing Business — How To Make The Enemy Pay For It — How To Make Your Allies Pay For It — And How To Make The Poor Pay For It.

In the chapter on How To Kill People, there are three subdivisions, The General Principles Of Killing — How To Kill Soldiers — How To Kill Civilians.

It is not the purpose of this column to devote space to book reviews, but as can no doubt be seen, How To Run A War is quite an impressive bit of literature.

The author is quite a realist and does not mince words, especially when describing scenes of the effects of shells and bullets on the human body. This fact, combined with the ever present satirical manner, should certainly tend to leave the impression of the horrors of war in the minds of everyone reading the book.

Incidentally, the book can be obtained in the college library and is most certainly worth the time it would take to read. With Europe in its present state, How To Run A War certainly is food for thought.

Vote Friday

Final Elections May 24 To Decide Student Leaders

Final elections for next semester's Associated Student offices will be held Friday, May 24, at both Powell Street and Galileo from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Hal Hoffman, election committee chairman, said this week.

Owing to the over-lapping of The Guardsman publication date and yesterday's primary election, the Associated Students candidates to run in this Friday's elections could not be named in today's issue.

Primary Narrows Field

The primaries of yesterday narrowed the number of candidates for each office down to two at the most. Several offices were unopposed.

Names of the final aspirants to office will appear in the Friday issue of The Guardsman.

Student Card Required

As in yesterday's primaries, an Associated Students card is the voting requirement.

Upon balloting, students will be given paper tags to wear on their lapels with the wording, I Voted, Did You? It is hoped that these tags will remind those who have not voted to exercise their constitutional prerogative.

College Choir Will Sing At Exposition Saturday

First day visitors to the Golden Gate International Exposition on May 25 will hear the college A Cappella Choir, which will sing in the Temple of Religion at 3 p.m., announced Flossita Badger, college music instructor.

The selections are not definite at this time, Miss Badger said, but the choir will sing one group.

A second appearance on Treasure Island will be made on Saturday, June 8, Miss Badger revealed. The choir will present an entire program in the California Building at 5 p.m.

Charles Piper, baritone, will sing several selections, she said.

Election of next semester's officers was held last Thursday. Succeeding Bob Dudley as manager is Jack Meyers; Betty Patterson will assume the duties of Marie Soloman as assistant manager, and Bill Cobran will succeed Barbara Smith as secretary.

Plans for choir pins and a semi-formal banquet were approved last week as well.

Chairman of the pin committee, Muriel Gaggetti, said the pins are now being made and will be ready before finals.

Meyers, serving as dinner committee chairman, made arrangements for the banquet to be held at Venteo's on Wednesday, May 22. Guests will be Dean and Mrs. Edwin C. Browne, and Ubaldo Maggetti, college instructor.

Marie Soloman, in charge of entertainment, said solos will be sung by Miss Badger, Ruth Berreyesa, and Meyers. Piano solos will be played by Miss Soloman and Leon Terry.

"Be prepared for a big surprise," Miss Soloman hinted.

Others who served on the committee were Patricia Riley, Diane Hudson, and Dudley.

Business Classes Make Tour Of Insurance Firm

A tour of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company was made last Thursday by students of several business classes.

About 100 students were dismissed from their morning classes to go on the trip. Divided into four groups, the students were guided by representatives of the company.

Students visited the various departments, and the functions of each were explained by the guides. Some of the important divisions included the cashiers, auditing, purchasing, industrial and supplies, mailing and filing divisions.

The company maintains its own Post Office and handles approximately 1,000 pounds of mail a day, both incoming and outgoing.

Allman Appointed To Serve On Exposition Art Board

Appointed to the Art Board of the Golden Gate International Exposition by President Marshall Dill, was college art instructor Richard Allman, he revealed recently.

At a meeting of the board held last week on Treasure Island to outline the plans of this year's exhibit, Allman had nothing but praise to offer in regard to the program.

"It is a little early to reveal in just what capacity I will serve," he said, "but concerning the exhibit—it looks marvelous."

"In addition to the old masters, there will be a pageant of photography, depicting its rise from the earliest daguerreotypes. Several of these will be on display. There will be miniature rooms, an architectural exhibit, a printing show, sculpture, and educational displays in various fields," he said.

Allman is a prominent bay region artist. Several of his water colors have been shown throughout the country in traveling exhibitions, and last year a group was displayed in conjunction with another local artist at the Palace of the Legion of Honor.

He is also on the art board of a museum in San Francisco.

Psychology Exams Being Scored By Leuenberger

Harold W. Leuenberger, head of the college psychology department, announced that he is correcting the psychological examination papers being taken by students who plan to enter the college at the beginning of the Fall semester.

The tests are being corrected on the International Test Scoring machine. As to the way the tests are corrected on the machine, Leuenberger said, "Objective tests to be scored by the machine are administered in the usual manner, except that all answers are recorded on seperate answer sheets rather than on the test booklet.

The student makes the same kind of mark (a short heavy line) for each question that he answers; the position of that mark indicates which of the possible answers he considers correct. That is, for each possible answer to a question, there is one and only one corresponding space, a pair of dotted lines, on the answer sheet. The machine scores the separate answer sheet, not the test booklet. When the answer sheet is placed in the machine, each answer space comes in contact with a corresponding sensing unit, and if there is a pencil mark in that space, a controlled amount of current flows through the mark. It is obviously essential that the answer spaces on the sheet be very accurately-placed with reference to the edges of the sheet, in order that each period mark will come in contact with a sensing unit when the sheet is placed in the machine."

Leuenberger revealed that so far figures have shown that next semester there will be as many women as men in the college.

Radio Students To Enact 'Span Of Gold' Episode

Participating in "Span of Gold", program slated by the Golden Forties Fiesta Committee for this Thursday at the War Memorial Opera House, students in the college radio broadcasting class will take one of four episodes in the drama as well as the complete duties of narrator, Marie Weller, instructor in the course, announced.

Three high schools will present one part each of the Exposition opening celebration, in addition to the college's contribution. Mission High School will give the story of John Fremont, George Washington will enact the story of Theodore Judah, and Galileo will conclude with the modern story of the Golden Gate bridge architect, Joseph Strauss. It will be the job of announcer Len Gross to tie the four episodes together.

There will be two performances of the Fiesta program, one at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and one at 8 o'clock in the evening, with a possibility of another set for 10 o'clock that same evening. The third presentation depends upon the demand for tickets. Tickets are being handled by the Golden Forties Fiesta Committee and are given out free of charge.

At the 2 o'clock show San Francisco's elementary and secondary schools will attend and will enter the Opera House in colorful marching order.

College students from the radio broadcasting class chosen for roles include Tom Redmond, Tony Manov, Blas Narro, Earl Pereira, Marcus Merrymont, Malcolm Kelly, Bill Michelson, Hal Hoffman, Jessie McCary, Ray Berna, Bob Holmes, Everett Hayes, and Bentley Schoenfeld.

All of the high school and college performers will be attired in typical western costume.

First Issue Of Hotel Magazine Out Yesterday

Latest college publication to date is the Hotel-O-Gram, published by the Hotel and Restaurant Division, according to Thomas Caswell, Hotel Division student.

Caswell announced that the publication, which will contain 35 mimeographed pages of humorous, informative and educational features, is scheduled to make its initial bow to the hotel students this week.

Purpose of the Hotel-O-Gram, he said, is to maintain contact between the hotel division and its alumni as well as with the hotel industry.

The magazine will be published entirely by students of the hotel division, Caswell said, adding that Tom Duffey will manage it with the assistance of Dick Conty and Al Floyd.

Published twice a semester, the publication will be free to the alumni of the division.

The magazine will also contain, he pointed out, a list of all the alumni and the positions they are now holding.

CAB Elections On Today; Three Seek Presidency

Scheduled to be held today at 1 o'clock in the lecture hall, the Club Advisory Board election will draw interest chiefly in the choice of a president, many of that group opined.

Candidates for that office are Robert Ogg, Ski Club president and chairman of "Meet-Your-Campus" activities; Robert Schlesinger, editor of the club board's new publication, CABBY; and Burton Wines, this semester's secretary-treasurer.

Importance of the CAB presidency lies in the fact that whoever is elected head of the group will automatically assume membership in the Executive Council next semester, and will represent in that governing body of the college, approximately 900 students belonging to the 30 organizations now in the club board.

Candidates for the other two offices in the CAB are vice-president, Ruby Klistoff, Lyba Mackie (in office this semester), Marion Schrick; secretary-treasurer, Gus Waegemann, Theodora Wong.

Since the CAB constitution stipulates that "A majority of votes cast shall be necessary to constitute an election," a primary will be held at the beginning of the meeting on May 21, Alden Thorogood, incumbent president, announced. Since also only official representatives of clubs in good standing may run for office or vote, he asked that new members obtain a written identification of their capacity from the president of their respective organizations.

Election will be by secret ballot, in accord with the club board's constitution.

Activities of club councils 1, 2, and 3 of the CAB have not been decided as yet, Thorogood said, although discussion among the leaders of the first group indicate that a series of lectures or forums may be in the offing. Each council has available to it a sum of $60 with which to finance any plans it may make, subject to approval of the CAB officers or of the club board as a whole. Councils 4 and 5 have already dispersed with the sums allotted to them, having sponsored, respectively, a Greyhound tour down the peninsula, and a tea dance at the California Club.

Funds for all CAB activities were provided by the Executive Council, under which the group functions.

Betty Erickson Placed With City Telephone Co.

A full-time job placement was made last week to Betty Erickson, a business student, at the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company, announced F. Grant Marsh, of the college Business Department.

Concerning future job placements by the college, Marsh said, "Any students who are interested in summer work should communicate that information to me so that I can have their telephone numbers, in order to call them if I find placement opportunities during the summer."

He pointed out that many temporary positions will be available this summer during vacation periods.

Block Men, High Sophs Hold Spotlight In May 23 Rally

Featuring the distribution of Block SF letters, and the presentation of a program by the high sophomore class, a college rally will be held Thursday, May 23, in the Galileo Auditorium at 2:30 p.m., announced yell leader Ray Berns, chief coordinator of the program.

Students will be officially excused to attend the rally, if they report first to their 2:30 classes, Registrar Paul Mohr announced.

According to Art Pomares, sophomore class president, Marry Bartholomew, Alpha Phi Omega, who is the winner of the Sophomore Sweetheart contest will appear on the program and will be presented a complimentary bid to the High Soph Formal, which is to be held May 24, at the California Country Club.

Thomas' Orchestra May Play

Also tentatively being considered by Pomares and Hal Hoffman, chairman of the high sophomore committee, is the appearance of a portion of Noel Thomas' orchestra, which has also been signed to play for the High Soph Formal.

Anita Welt, high freshman student, will sing several selections.

Pomares also revealed that negotiations are also under way to insure the appearance, if possible, of a representative from the Goldeu Gate International Exposition.

Block Letters To Be Awarded

Second major portion of the program will be devoted to the distribution of the Block SF letters in baseball, lightweight basketball, varsity basketball, tennis, track, golf, and rifle. Dan Baker, Block Society president, who is in charge of arrangements for this portion of the rally has expressed the wish that a large number of students attend the rally, to express enthusiasm for the college athletes who have earned their block letters.

Flight Test, Written Quiz Basis Of CAA Pilot Exams

Whether or not college aeronautics students will receive pilot licenses, depends upon the outcome of the Civil Aeronautics Authority Examination, composed of a written test which is to be given May 28, and a flight test which is scheduled to be given shortly after college closes, Captain Richards, director of civil aeronautics training said.

Before being eligible to take the written half of the CAA examination, which deals with questions on meterology, civil air rules and air navigation, students must have soloed. According to Captain Richards, every student has soloed except one, and it is expected that he will do so soon, Manov said.

To qualify for the final half of the examination, students must not only have passed the first written test satisfactorily, but they must have a solo record of 35 hours, as well as have received 8 hours of dual instruction.

When the aeronautics students take to the air in the final test they must execute with facility figure eights, spirals, turns, and landings.

"A difficult part of the test," Captain Richards commented, "will be the handing of the plane within a limited distance on the field."

Soph Formal Friday At California Club

By THEODORA WONG

Promising to be this semester's top social event, the high sopb formal which climaxes Sophomore Week will be held at the California Country Club this Friday night, with Noel Thomas and his orchestra setting the musical mood, Art Pomares, class president, announced.

Bids at $1.25 per couple are still on sale at the Galileo bank, he added.

Handmade programs for the dance have been completed, Pomares revealed, and according to him are in one of the most beautiful designs created for college dances.

Patrons and patronesses at this dance, said Pomares, will be President and Mrs. A. J. Cloud, Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Moltr, Dean and Mrs. Edwin C. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sandys, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Ross, Margaret Dougherty, and the class advisers, Verrel Weber and Nelson A. Wells.

Tuxedos, all new, may be rented for the formal at the Rochester Clothing Company, Third and Mission Streets, for $2.25, Pomares remarked. "These models come in both single or double-breasted styles," he commented, "and students should get fitted as soon as possible."

Those desiring additional information are directed to Hal Hoffman, Edmund Wunsch, or Pomares.

Associated Students Cards To Be Made Foolproof

For the first time in the college's history, Associated Students cards will contain descriptions of their owners next semester, Tony Manov, chairman of the judicial committee, announced recently.

"This seems to be the only way that we will be able to prevent students from lending and borrowing cards," Manov said.

Descriptions will consist of the bearer's weight, height, age and coloring to facilitate the work of various indentification committees, Manov explained, adding that this semester's judicial committee has met with great difficulties in identification.

Former plans were to include pictures of the various students upon their cards, but these plans were abandoned because of impracticability, he declared.

"We are sorry that we have been compelled to take this step," Manov said.

History Wore A Rose When Florian Had His Day Of Glory

WHEN history still wore a rose, and politics had not yet outgrown the waltz, Austria was a gay country, the crowning glory of which was the breed of horses known as Lippizans. For four centuries had the Lippizans been the most prized animal in the Empire, but after the Four Horsemen rode, they became the unwanted step-children of a Republic which wanted to sever all ties with the Hapsburgs.

Florian is the story of the noblest of this most noble of animals—a film that moves leisurely during the time it deals with Franz Josef and dancing in the streets of Vienna, and that quickens pace as the scene shifts to the America of Harding and Coolidge; it is the history of the decline of an Empire told through the eyes of the oldest inhabitant of that land—the Lippizan.

Austria—1910—finds a black colt being pampered through his first year of existence by a loving stable-boy, Anton, and the Duchess Diana.

1911 finds the colt, now silver, witnessing drastic changes. Anton foregoes his love for the regal Diana when the Archduke Oliver is sent from Vienna because he must be cured of his infatuation for a ballerina.

Another year and the colt turned grey, another, and he was pure white. And like all his ancestors he shirked not when came the call to arms.

The fall of the Empire left in its wake a Duchess who had to flee her rightful heritage; and a horse which was sold to an American. And Anton started searching so that Florian might again taste the glory for which he was bred.

Florian is a film which is dominated by the six Lippizans—the only ones of their kind in America. In the scene at The Spanish Riding Academy they go through a routine which is the "piece de resistance" of the film. So graceful, so royal are they that they represent, even more than the aristocratic octogenarian watching them, the spirit of a by-gone age.

Satisfying performances are contributed by the principals: Robert Young, as Anton; Helen Gilbert, as Diana; Charles Coburn, as Hofer; and Reginald Owen, as Franz Josef, being outstanding in their roles.

Director Edward L. Marin has shown considerable ingenuity in handling the film. The montage, and especially the scene dealing with the assassination of Franz Ferdinand, make the film well worth the effort. Added to this the performances of the horses, and the dancing of Irina Baranova, round out the film, making it extremely entertaining throughout.

The main fault of Florian is that it centers too much attention on the horses at the expense of the humans concerned. Not that the horses are not the primary reason for the film's existence, but there is also supposedly the story of a man and a woman. This story is neglected at the cost of losing the continuity. But, as it is, this slight incongruity does not mar the flavor of the film enough to make any difference.

This Collegiate World . . .

THERE are more than 3,000 co-eds at Wisconsin.

In a typical year the average girl would have quite a round of activities to cover. She would have 210 quarts of "coke" to imbibe, and 20 pounds of candy to ruin her complexion with, not to mention 20 feet of gum to chew.

Seven and a half days would be squandered in the movies and 55 days devoted to studies to compensate for the 99 classes cut.

Preparing for her 80 days of dates, she would sleep 115 days for beauty, spend three days putting her hair up, and 16 combing it, bathe 90 hours, and zip 1,000 zippers.

She would also turn down 125 dates, receive five declarations of tender sentiments, and be the object of 500 kisses (these statistics included several 'steadies'), which transaction would speed the yearly consumption of six inches of lipstick.

Besides these pursuits, she would spend 13 days clinging to a telephone. In the chase for the opposite sex she would annihilate 550 pairs of stockings, absorb two pounds of cold cream, and buy a quart of "My Sin" or "Moonlight Madness" perfume.

THIRTY-SIX Princeton University seniors are exempt from attendance at all classes under the no-course plan, but they're finding more work to do and more classes to attend than the average senior.

All became eligible for the special plan of study by virtue of their high scholastic averages in the last two years. Now they're devoting long hours to completion of senior theses on broader and more difficult topics than usually undertaken.

Nearly every man is attending lectures and preceptorials in at least four undergraduate or graduate courses.

A TWO-YEAR graduate course leading to the degree of master of public administration has been recently provided at the University of Buffalo.

The fact it is administered by the university's school of social work is believed unique, because such a curriculum is usually an off-shoot of the department of government or of business administration, and in only a few cases does it exist as a separate school.

IF YOU say "I asked her could I have a date" you label yourself as a Louisianian. If you hail from another part of the country, you would say "I asked her if I could have a date."

Dr. Claude M. Wise, head of the department of speech at Louisiana State University and authority on Louisiana dialects, can tell, moreover, from what section of Louisiana a student comes, just by his speech.

Use of the superfluous "r" on the end of the word, where it doesn't belong, as "idear" or "Louisianar" classifies you in Dr. Wies's card-index mind as a resident of South Louisiana, most likely New Orleans.

The "careless" speech of the south that will identify its speaker wherever he goes is best illustrated in the pronunciation of words spelled with "en" as "in".

For the last five years Dr. Wise has been compiling a dialect atlas of Louisiana.

McMeekin Wins Decathlon Contest At Balboa Park

Jack McMeekin won first place in the football decathalon contest held at Balboa Park as part of the "Meet Your Campus" day festivities last Friday.

He scored a total of 204 points, for average punts of 48 yards, longest of 66 yards, and picked up 98 out of a possible 100 in the coffin corner event. Lazar, Ross and Latz finished behind McMeekin in that order.

Season Summary Places Ram Nine In Fourth Place

Baseball is over for the Ram nine this season. They have finished in fourth place, higher than ever before, says Jack Gaddy, Ram coach.

"We might have won this season if we had not blown up at the end," Gaddy remarked. "We should have an added advantage next year, since all of our tough contests will be played at home."

Bob Hvidt, pitching mainstay of this year's nine will return next semester, as well as Ross Wolcott, leading hitter; Frank Mullins, shortstop, and others. Gaddy thinks that he should have a good team next year if he gets one good pitcher.

Hitting Improved

The team as a whole improved in hitting during the last three weeks of the league campaign. George Moreira, catcher, Mullins, Hvidt, Wolcott, Bob Webber, Harry Aleo, and Mike DeStefano finished the season with a batting average of .300 or better.

Complete averages, as released by Gaddy this week, follow:

Player	G	AB	H	Avg
Wolcott	17	66	23	.349
Webber	14	35	12	.343
DeStefano	5	9	3	.333
Moreira	11	37	12	.324
Micheli*	12	46	14	.318
Aleo	16	58	18	.310
Hvidt	11	33	10	.303
Mullins	17	62	19	.300
Mezzetti	14	61	16	.262
Zernicke	5	4	1	.250
Nishi	16	65	16	.246
Brabant	6	14	3	.214

Hvidt, Wolcott Star

Hvidt and Wolcott were the outstanding players on the 1940 Ram varsity according to Gaddy. Hvidt hurled 15 innings at Salinas, and was effective all season. Of the three games lost by Hvidt this season, two of them were by one run margins, and the third was lost by a two run margin.

Wolcott has led his teammates throughout the season, and has been very handy with his bat, especially in the tight spots. Wolcott has gotten more hits and walks than any other player.

Gaddy's candidate for all-conference centerfielder is Bob Nishi. Though Nishi hasn't the batting average of the others, he is by far the best ball hawk on the team, and never misses a fly hit into right or left-center field. Nishi made a catch in the San Mateo contest after running at least 100 yards for it, then rifled a throw to the catcher to cut off a run at the plate.

Mullins, "Bucksy" to his teammates, has finished a good season at short for the Rams. He has initiated many a double play, and very seldom misses a ground ball hit in his direction.

Gaddy hopes for, but won't guarantee, a championship in 1941. All he needs is a good pitcher, good weather, and a little luck.

College Mermen May Train In Jefferson High Pool

Because of the rising interest in swimming in the college, negotiations have been going on to obtain the Jefferson Union High School pool for the college swimming team for next semester, Coach Russell J. Sweet revealed.

An official sanction from the Board of Education must be received by the college and approved by the college Athletic Council before the pool can be obtained. Prospects for getting the use of the pool, so far, look good, Sweet said.

Jefferson Union High School, according to Sweet, is off Plymouth avenue in Daly City, just over the hill from the college. Appropriations for the use of the high school pool had to be considered since the new college has not received enough finances for a pool of its own, and one will not be built until at least two years, it was rumored.

Meanwhile, Coach Sweet is looking toward a successful swimming team, as well as one of water polo and possibly diving. Incoming students from high schools have already attracted his eye, Sweet indicated.

Advance Guard's Noble 600 Finds Campus Day Festive

By KEI HORI

Led by the blaring siren of an official police escort, some 60 decorated automobiles tooted their way to Balboa Park and the new college grounds last Friday on "Meet Your Campus Day."

Many parents went to their offices on the street cars that day, for from embellished family buses, street cars and jalopies poured some 600 students of the college, without a thought or care of the looming final exams. And meet the campus they did. Contests, games and general hell-raising had begun well before the time of the excused afternoon classes.

Swarming over the grade and down the incline that leads to the athletic field, the 600 quickly formed a line to fight for a chance at the 400 box lunches. First in line was blonde Sylvia Davis, and Lyba Mackie was lucky last. The remaining 200 were given ice cream and candy with sympathies from Dean Browne.

Photographers Joe Kurpieski and Bill Quandt had a field day, shooting away at the merry faces of merrier students. While the throngs consumed the food, they were serenaded by the Balboa High band. Congrats to Bob Schlesinger and Co. for their fine work and efficient handling of the hungry mob!

With hardly time to digest their food, the students had the volleyball game going on in full swing, while the Blockmen, under Coach Russ Sweet's supervision, picked up the empty coke bottles. Among the towering crowd of "Slim" Thorogood, Stan Pitman, Hugh Smith and about 25 other players, Lucille Jacke, and the Oriental Brenda and Cobina combination of Yori Shimasaki and Chiye Nao struggled vainly for a chance to bat the ball, to no avail. Across the way, the band struck up a jam session and "Zib" Harrison and a few more began to swing.

In every corner of the field, some activity was going on, Jean Kelly was pitching a blanket ball game while Lee Scarlett, while chasing a fly, almost fell over a mob playing "Farmer in the Dell" in centerfield.

On the north side of the field, Hilda Harris had Frank and Alleen chasing a ball in a fast game of keep-away. More than once they bumped into the football decathalon going on the north end of the field.

Then began the games. Only Zeus and Lucifer know how the real results came out. It is doubtful whether Flo Hansen (bless her) and Chairman Bob Ogg know, and it's a cinch Hal Hoffman doesn't. Thursa Rose was running around here and there getting nowhere, while Potato Sack, Wheelbarrow, Spoon and Tater, and Three-legged-two-men races were going on. Most novel were the "Egg-catch-for-distance" and the "Soda-drinking" contests. Jean Grenelle (Muriel the Younger) nipped Mary Jane Haloran by mere inches to win the women's sack race.

Right at the stroke of 4:30 festivities ended. To those 1900 "duds" who did not go the 600 can tell in no uncertain terms what was missed.

. . . Campus Personalities

By KEI HORI

As it is with most students, Florence Josephine Hansen's present problem is to get out of school to go the University of California.

Born in Washington D. C., Flo, as the members of the ExCouncil call her, is 19 years old, born in the cold month of December. She claims she is attending school for lack of anything better to do, and she is 5 feet 10 and one-half inches tall with heels (on shoes—no reference to people).

Flo's feminine appeal has lured many a thick broiled steak into the entrance of her proud alimentary canal, and many a french fried potatoe has accompanied the same. She is extremely nearsighted and it bothers her when she swims, and she also rides horses.

Someone will certainly be lucky, because "Flo-Jo" can cook, sew, and will even clean house when the situation demands that she must. She has gone to George Washington and graduated from Lowell High School in December of 1938. Florence is the elder of the two Hansen children, her younger brother being 16 years old.

The Sea Cliff district selfishly claims Florence as its own, for this fun-loving lass is considered an ideal dancing instructor. She came to California when she was 9. Kay Kyser has another follower of his type of music in Florence, for she listens to him consistently. One can see by this that she is no jitterbug.

Enjoying company is her favorite pastime, so Florence is rarely, if ever, seen alone. "People," she says "is an education in itself." She would like to travel around the country meeting other people, and wishes she were a boy so that she could hitch-hike the country—for to see the people. We, the people salute you! She also claims that variety is the spice of life, so she goes out with many different types of peop . . . . persons.

Picking on her fingernails (an awful habit, she says), Florence's ideal man has to be tall and sincere, and must have an interesting face.

(Author's note: Put on the map of Europe and you have something there, Flo.)

And he must not be conceited, nor must he "indulge."

Many times, she claims, she has acted without thinking, and has suffered the consequences. She likes to do things for other people (here's that word again). During this interview she was eager to get more presents for the "Meet Your Campus" contest winners, which only goes to show.

The Associated Students' secretary claims "you can't beat fun," and also said she doesn't like to eat soft slippery things, such as raw aigs or ersters.

Any similarity to persons living or dead is purely coincidental.

Varied Events Feature WAA Post-Season Calendar

Post-season activities for the members of the Women's Athletic Association have been announced and released by Alma Koopman, vice-president of the association and are as follows:

WAA life saving classes practiced holds, carries, and canoe tactics on May 15 at the Crystal Palace swimming pool, under the supervision of Laurine Bergin, life saving instructor. The pool contains salt water and was better to swim in, according to the swimmers.

Life Saving Tests Planned

"Senior life saving examinations will be given to all members of the 1:30 o'clock, Monday and Wednesday classes in the near future, probably at the end of this week," Mrs. Bergin said.

Golf enthusiasts were invited to participate in a golf match at Marin Junior College on Saturday, May 18, but because the golf team was playing at Modesto, only Virginia Bulmore and Barbara Clements were able to attend.

Tennis Tournament Off

Because of lack of interest and since several teams were unable to play in the tournament for The Guardsman Tennis Trophy, the tournament was cancelled by Bertha Keller, WAA adviser and Tom Wilson, tennis coach.

The last WAA Council meeting was held yesterday afternoon, May 20 to finish all old business for the semester, Miss Koopman said.

Archery and Rifle members have been invited to Marin Junior College on Friday, June 7, Miss Koopman revealed and further stated that regardless of commencement, those who were interested should attend. Those women who wish to go are requested to see their respective managers, Barbara Smith and Rita McDonald.

Photographers Named

Dolores Dixon and Bob Bourne are to help Beverly Pasqualetti, college instructor, take pictures in the riding class on June 10, Mrs. Bergin disclosed.

Miss Dixon and Bourne were the outstanding riders in the competitive horseshow held in the Gymkhana at San Mateo recently, taking the majority of prizes in the six-way college horseshow.

All officers of the WAA for next semester were installed into their respective offices at the Tourney Week banquet, held on May 9. Managers of each sport will be elected at the beginning of next semester and will be installed at the initial event of the season, the semi-annual Splash-Spread party, Miss Koopman said.

Members To Receive Certificates

Certificates of membership will be issued to all present members of Omicron Phi Pi, college Economics Honor Society, who turned in their names to Violet Burgess, president of the Society, before last Friday, according to Miss Burgess.

Madamba, Mead Defeated In Net Championships

Handed a raw deal by the change of an already drawn schedule, Bill Madamba, college tennis ace, dropped his match to Chuck O'Neil of San Mateo in a hard fought 6-3, 1-6, 7-5 tussle. Andy Roberts of Menlo later came to down O'Neil to win the NCJC championship.

Postponement of one of the matches scheduled for Thursday to Friday forced Madamba to play four matches instead of three scheduled that day, leaving him in no condition for the semi-finals slated the next day.

Doubles Wears Pair

After defeating Spence Kerns of Salinas 4-6, 6-2, 6-2 and taking Ben Olsen of Menlo 6-4, 2-6, 6-3, Madamba, paired with Chet Mead of the college, played two doubles matches. Although they managed to take Sacramento, both players developed stomach and leg cramps that rendered them helpless for their final doubles with Modesto.

Despite Coach Tom Wilson's plea to default, the pair went on with the spirit to go down fighting, even though they knew the game was hopeless. The Pirates took every advantage of their condition and in short order, both Rams limped off the field.

Mead Loses To Hansen

Mead had just dropped a singles to Hansen of Salinas in the quarter finals. For over an hour the game raged, with Hansen the final victor, taking the first set 11-9, and slammed the diminutive Mead in the second set, 6-0, thus dropping him for a crack at the crown.

Tony Calagos and Moe Waxman lost their doubles to Olsen and Roberts of Menlo in straight sets. Calagos won his first singles but lost the second to Brown of Stockton. Waxman, in the meantime, had been dropped far in the first round by Hansen of Salinas in straight sets.

Golf Team Fails To Place In Conference Matches

Coach Louis G. Conlan's Ram golfers wound up their 1940 season last Saturday at Modesto, without placing in the Northern California Junior College Golf Championships.

The championships were won by Modesto, and San Mateo took second place honors. George Kikes, of San Mateo, defeated Eugene Thomas, Modesto, 1 up in the final round to take the individual championship. He toured the 18 holes in a three over par 73.

This season's Ram team had a successful practice season, defeating every team it met (except Modesto) at least once. Conlan remarked that he had the best team in San Francisco history this season, but even this team wasn't good enough to win.

Letters will be given to the Ram regulars who competed in the required amount of matches, Conlan added. Barny Rice, Bill McLaughlan, John Kamper, Bill Hoffman, and Bill Cohen are scheduled to receive golf letters at the rally on Thursday.

Block Society Schedules Initiation Tomorrow

Official initiation of the new members of the Block and Circle SF society will be held tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 12 M. and from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m., Daniel Baker, president of the society, announced.

The initiation will be followed by a banquet at the Rex Restaurant, 401 Broadway, at 7:30 p.m., he said.

New members of the society have been receiving pamphlets giving instructions as to gear and equipment. All new Block and Circle men were requested by Baker to get a pamphlet from him or other officers.

COLLEGE

IF THE reports of the judicial committee are any indication, next semester's Associated Student cards should be the final word in efficiency.

It is planned to have them contain a description of the owner's weight, height, age, and color of eyes to facilitate identification at any college function.

Such a move is an excellent and necessary step forward. Next semester, when the registration reaches 3000 (we hope), it will be important to have an efficient system to check student cards. There will be no room for outsiders at our functions for if the past is any indication, there is sufficient room only for the college.

CONGRATULATIONS to Al Williams, Associated Student president, for doing a hard job very well.

It is impossible to realize the amount of work that has to be spent by one who is sincerely desiring to help the college. Williams put in countless hours on committee meetings, the welfare council survey, and other activities. It is a surprise to find him still in one piece.

As with all of those who govern, Williams met with opposition, for the right to oppose is a fundamental example of American democracy.

Sometimes his opposition was sincere, other times it was but a petty attempt to disorganize student government within the college.

All in all, we believe that Williams was a good example of what a president should be. He was sincere, a hard worker, and earnestly believed he was doing the best thing for the students.

Not many of the students can appreciate Williams' attitude. Let us hope that the better and more intelligent ones do.

Transit Buses May Take Students To New Campus

That there are definite possibilities of buses to the Balboa campus being provided college students next semester, was announced by Archibald J. Cloud, college president, this week.

"We have already discussed the matter with members of the Public Utilities Commission," Cloud said, "and a final announcement concerning transportation facilities to the new campus will probably be made in the near future."

Last Minute Campus News

GENERAL ELECTION TODAY

Commencement

Pitman Addresses Graduates June 7 At Opera House

Constance Wong and Ernest Goodman will be the principal speakers at the commencement exercises to be held Friday, June 7, at the War Memorial Opera House, it was announced today by Margaret Dougherty, AWS adviser.

Miss Wong will give the salutatory while Goodman will deliver the valedictory.

Allen V. Williams, Associated Students president, will introduce next semester's officers.

Educators Speak

Among the notables of city and state to lend dignity to this occasion will be Honorable C. Harold Caulfield, President of the Board of Education; Major Joseph P. Nourse, Superintendent of Schools; Paul M. Pitman, Dean of Men at San Jose State College and formerly Co-ordinator of Educational Management here at San Francisco Junior College; and Archibald J. Cloud, president of this college.

From 9 to 12 all next week, prospective graduates may obtain bids at Powell Street from Thomas O'Neill, faculty member, Miss Dougherty announced, adding that from 2 to 4:30 o'clock bids may be obtained at Galileo from her.

Measurements Incomplete

Verrel A. Weber, women's physical education instructor, in charge of cap and gown measurements, disclosed that 45 of the January graduates and 59 of the June graduates have not been measured yet.

While measurements were taken last week at Galileo, Miss Weber announced that students who were not measured but who desire to graduate in the traditional style may be measured at any time by contacting her.

As there is no charge this year for caps and gowns and the measurement routine is extremely simple, it was noted that pre-commencement procedure has been simplified. Each student's height and head circumference is measured, the measurements reduced to the approximate cap and gown size, and recorded. Students are given memo cards of their size which are to be presented commencement night. Women graduates are given their option of light or dark shoes.

Choir, Soloists Participate

The A Capella choir under the direction of Flossita Badger will sing three numbers on the commencement program according to Miss Dougherty. Charles Piper, baritone, accompanied by Marie Solomon will be soloist for the evening, she added.

Rehearsal will be held the morning of June 7 at the Opera House.

The Showdown Today

One of these men will be the Associated Students' president for the Fall, 1940 semester. Lyle Shultz, at left, opposes Alden Thorogood, right, for the highest office in today's final elections.

College Choir To Sing At Fair Opening; Scrip-Books Available

Climaxing one of the most successful seasons in the history of the college, the A Capella Choir will appear in three more performances, Flossita Badger, college music instructor announced.

First appearance will be at the Golden Gate International Exposition on opening day, Saturday, May 25. One group will be sung in the Temple of Religion at 3 p.m. The songs will most likely include Emitte Spiritum Tuum, by Schutsky; Ballad of the Trees and Master, Matthew; Jeannie, by Foster; and The De'il's A'wa, by deLamarter, Miss Badger revealed.

Second of the final performances is for commencement, June 7. The program will most likely be the same but, in addition, the choir will sing the Alma Mater. Those attending the ceremonies will hear the special third verse of the college hymn, sung only at graduation in honor of the outgoing students, she said.

Last appearance of the semester will again be on Treasure Island for a special educational program to be held in the California Building on Saturday, June 8, at 5 p.m. According to Miss Badger, a full program will be sung, which will include Jesu Priceless Treasure, Bach; Emitte Spiritum Tuum, Schutsky; and Ballad of the Trees and Master, by Matthew.

Soloists Dorothy Mills, soprano, and Charles Piper, baritone, will sing several selections.

The last group will include The De'il's A'wa, deLamarter; I Dream of Jeannie, Foster; and Turkey in the Straw, arranged by Schaeffer, Miss Badger said.

Special rate Scrip Tickets to the Golden Gate International Exposition may be purchased by students of the college for the last time today, according to an announcement released by J. Graham Sullivan, Coordinator of Educational Activities.

"As has been customary," Sullivan said, "these bargain tickets are available at the college bank at Galileo."

The Galileo bank, under the direction of Carl W. Stough, has acted as college distributing agency for Fair tickets since the beginning of their sale.

Exposition officials revealed, this week, that the scrip books of the season ticket variety are saleable only to students under 21 years of age. Under this decree, which is retroactive, season books already sold to persons who have attained their majority, are invalid, and not good for admission.

The scrip-books are of two types. The season tickets, selling at $3.75, are non-transferable and may be sold only to persons under 21. Other type is the book containing five general admissions to the Fair, and five admissions to the top shows of the Exposition. These are transferable, and have no age requirements appended.

Tomorrow, May 25, the Exposition opens in what is promised to be a blaze of glory. Fireworks will shower the Island, and 1,440,000,000 candle-power will spread a vast canopy of light over the grounds.

Constance Wong Awarded Women's State Scholarship

Constance Wong was named the winner of the Women's State Award, receiving the first prize of $50 in cash, because of the high grade average which she maintained throughout her period of enrollment here, announced Alice C. Cooper, Alpha Gamma Sigma adviser.

"The award was limited to the state of California alone, but Miss Wong had a great deal of competition," Miss Cooper said, "and I feel that the student is to be congratulated for her fine achievement."

According to Miss Cooper, Miss Wong is vice-president of the Chinese Student's Club, a member of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, the scholarship society of the college, and was selected the salutatorian of the graduating class by six judges.

Social service work holds Miss Wong's interest now, and the commencement salutatorian hopes to enter California in the fall and major in subjects which will further the conception of the vast field social service involves.

Publication of an article written by Miss Wong in the Forum Magazine aroused the question as to whether the student intends to rely on writing as a livelihood in later years, but the answer was that it was only a hobby.

CMA Sponsors Essay Contest; Offers 8 Prizes

Sponsors of an essay contest open to all students enrolled in high schools and junior colleges, the California Medical Association will award a main prize of $100 to the winner of the contest, who submits the best entry on the subject, The Role of the Doctor of Medicine in the Life and Health of the American Citizen, according to a report received from the association.

All essays must be wholly original, but references may be used. Entries must not exceed 3000 words in length, and must be written on one side of the paper only.

"Typewritten essays should be double-spaced and ample margins should be left on both sides of the paper, but manuscripts written neatly in ink will be accepted," announced the sponsors of the contest, "as legibility is a desired requisite."

Second prize will consist of $50 cash, the third prize of $25 cash, and five additional prizes of $5 cash, will comprise the last award.

The contest closes November 1, 1940, and authors are urged to submit their entry as soon as possible to avoid the last minute rush which usually results in a competition of this nature.

Entries should be mailed to the office of the California Medical Association, 450 Sutter Street, San Francisco, California, and the words, Essay Contest, must be plainly marked on the envelope.

Students Toast New Campus

Students of the college attending the "Meet your campus" day celebration gather on the playing field at Balboa Park to get their refreshments. An estimated crowd of nearly fifteen hundred attended the celebration.

Shultz, Thorogood Win In Primary Presidential Vote

Whether Lyle Shultz or Alden Thorogood is to become the next Associated Students president depends upon the outcome of the final election being held today by means of balloting at Galileo and Powell Street.

Results of last Monday's primary election gave the three presidential aspirants the following rating: Melvin Chicazola, 63 votes, Lyle Schultz, 190 votes, Alden Thorogood 248 votes. Since Thorogood lacked three votes of gaining a plurality of the 501 votes cast for president, it was necessary to call a final election in order to decide the issue, with only the two highest candidates being voted upon.

Lyle Shultz in a statement to The Guardsman revealed that the main purpose of his platform was "to strive for greater unity, which is another name for greater school spirit, by urging more student participation in school activities."

Main theme of Thorogood's platform is the coordination into the main student body, of the now isolated students from the outlying sections of the college, such as the business department, aeronautics and Hotel-Restaurant Management divisions.

"Students from outlying sections of the college have complained that they are out of things and do not know what is going on in the college. Next fall when we move into the new building, these departments will be incorporated under the same roof. My policy will be to work for fair and impartial treatment for students from every section of the college."

Other Results Decisive

Since there were no more than two students opposing each other for each of the five remaining student body offices, the primary election was decisive.

Elected to the office of vice-president was Jean Arnold, with a vote of 348; her opponent, Marian MacKillop received 143 votes.

Ted W. Theodus was elected AMS president, receiving 212 votes, just double the number received by his opponent Joseph Velarde.

New AMS vice-president is Robert Dolman, who triumphed over his opponent, Henry Suerstedt, by a vote of 203 to 115.

Robert Bush, with 154 votes, captured the office of AMS secretary, from his opponent Tom Reilly, who received 151, by a bare margin of three votes.

AWS Landslide

Virginia Hubbert, with 106 votes, received exactly twice as many votes as her opponent, Betty Rost, and will become the next AWS president.

Revealing that last Monday's primary election saw only a total of 511 votes cast, Hal Hoffman, election committee chairman, urged all student body card holders to vote in today's final election, so as to reach if possible, last semester's record voting turnout of 700 students.

All Student Bills Must Be Paid By June 3 At Galileo

Students are to be reminded, according to Ward Nichols, comptroller, that all bills of the student association are to be paid no later than June 3 at Galileo.

Sponsors of activities are requested to ascertain the receiving of all past bills. Business may be transacted at the bank located opposite Room 260 instead of the comptroller's office it was announced.

Bills chargeable to Spring semester budgets must be paid as soon as possible, Nichols said.

California Country Club

Formal Tonight Climaxes High Sophomore Activities

Tradition bows in again tonight when the high sophs will hold their formal at the California Country Club, where the music of Noel Thomas and his orchestra will set the mood for dancing.

Art Pomares, class president, announced that bids at $1.25 per couple are still on sale at the Galileo bank, and may be obtained tonight at the door. "Handmade programs in a beautiful design will be given out tonight," he added.

Those unfamiliar with the route to the country club have been directed to drive straight out 19th Avenue to Junipero Serra Boulevard, continuing to Highway 101. The club is located about two miles down 101 on a right side at a right turn.

Patrons and patronesses at this dance, said Pomares, will be President and Mrs. A. J. Cloud, Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Mohr, Dean and Mrs. Edwin C. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sandys, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Ross, Margaret Dougherty, and the class advisers, Verrel Weber and Nelson A. Wells.

Guests will include Mary Bartholomew, voted the title of Sophomore Sweetheart last week, and parents of the high soph officers and committee members.

This affair, the last social function of the college this semester, climaxes Sophomore Week, which has been set aside to honor the high sophs of the college.

New tuxedos in both single and double-breasted styles may be rented for the formal at the Rochester Clothing Company, Third and Mission Streets, for $2.25, Pomares remarked. Those desiring additional information are directed to Hal Hoffman, Edmund Wunsch, or Pomares.

Ogg, Schrick, Wong Voted To Club Board Offices

Defeating Robert Schlesinger by two votes in both the primary and general elections of the Club Advisory Board last Tuesday, Robert Ogg, head of the Ski Club and chairman of "Meet-Your-Campus" activities, was elected to the presidency of the group for next semester.

Voted to the post of vice-president at this election was Marion Schrick, head of the Home Economics Association, and to that of secretary-treasurer, Theodora Wong, representative for the Chinese Students' Club.

Election of Ogg to the CAB presidency automatically constitutes for him membership on the Executive Council of the fall semester, where he will represent approximately 900 students belonging to the 30 organizations expected to re-enter the club board next fall.

Questioned as to his plans for next semester, Ogg revealed that he will attempt to hold a meeting to which members of all clubs in the CAB will be invited, for the purpose of furthering interest in and acquaintance with the functions of this group. He will also try to stage a super-rally at which club leaders could be introduced and club talents presented, he added.

Summing up activities of the past few months, Alden Thorogood, incumbent president, observed that social affairs sponsored by the club groups with funds allocated this semester for the first time by the Executive Council had aided in furthering CAB coordination. With the announcement of a tea dance scheduled yesterday at the California Club for Council 3, and a picnic to be held at Sigmund Stern Thursday, May 30, for Council 2, there remains but one group, Council 1, which has not yet used its funds, Thorogood said. In this case, he added, the sum of $60 allotted to it may revert to the general fund of the Associated Students.

Issued at the election meeting of the CAB was this group's bulletin, CABBY, inaugurated this semester by Robert Schlesinger, editor.

Last Day To Sign Registration Blanks

Today will be the last day for students who plan to return to the college next semester to obtain application blanks at the various college offices, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, announced.

Blanks, which will hold places until the regular registration dates for returning students, will be distributed in the offices at Galileo, Powell Street, Girls' High, 58 Sutter, and the American Institute of Banking, he declared.

"The fact that next semester's enrollment will be limited to 3,000 makes it advisable for those who wish to return to make an application now," he said. "I want to emphasize, however, that such a blank will not reserve places after the regular dates for registration."

Returning students have always been given preference over new students in acceptance of applications, he explained, and new students are accepted in the order of application for admission.

Students who want to have their grade cards mailed to them should leave stamped, self-addressed envelopes at the Galileo or Powell Street offices, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, said today.

"Those who intend to have their grades mailed are asked to leave legal-sized envelopes, large enough to contain 4 by 6 cards," Miss Learnard declared. "Otherwise it will be impossible to mail the cards to the students."

Grade cards may also be called for at the Galileo office after June 21, Miss Learnard announced.

She added that graduates who do not receive their diplomas at the commencement exercises on June 7 may obtain them in the Galileo office.

Transactions At College Bank End Wednesday

Wednesday, May 29, will be the last day the bank will remain open at Galileo for students of the college, according to Carl F. Stough, head of the banking department.

"Car tickets and business transactions of all types must be made no later than Wednesday," Stough said.

Located next to Room 260, the bank has been open to students throughout the semester between the hours of 2:30 and 4:30 daily. The closure of the bank on Wednesday will mark the last day for college transactions there, for next semester the college will have its own banking section at the Balboa site.

Travers Opens Drama Try-Outs To College

Open to college students interested in dramatics will be try-outs for scholarships to the Reginald Travers Studio in the Fairmont Hotel at 3:30 this afternoon, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

"Final eliminations will be made next week," Miss Learnard said. "At that time scholarships for classes to begin next Fall will be awarded to one man and one woman."

She added that the classes are to be so arranged that students attending college will be able to work them in with college courses in regard to hours, if it should be necessary.

A COLLEGE I STORY—1935 TO 1940

February 1936 - Site Selected

Shown above is a picture taken in 1936 of the proposed site for the new campus. Taken before any work was done, the picture amply illustrates the amount of space the college occupies. The photo was taken from where the college now stands. Note the rolling hills.

Five Years Of Hope, Then Triumph

By LEONARD GROSS

Since 1935, when the college was born, students and faculty have been waiting and working for their own building, a permanent home for future students of San Francisco Junior College.

Some of the stages of that battle and the gradual construction

College President

Archibald J. Cloud

of the new campus are depicted on these pages. It is impossible however to give a complete picture of the trials, delays, setbacks, and obstructions that unfortunately came into being.

Gradually, however, order came out of the chaos, and the college proper began to take definite shape.

College Registrar

J. Paul Mohr

Readers of The Guardsman first saw the location at Balboa Park on September 16, 1936. Then came the historic day on April 25, 1937, when Mayor Angelo Rossi turned the first shovelful of earth, and the construction actually began.

In January of 1938, tractors were set to work clearing the grounds for the new campus.

September of 1938 saw the high light of the campaign for additional building. That month at a special election, Proposition Number 4, was placed on the ballot. No. 4 was a bond issue to secure federal financial aid for the construction of the junior college gymnasiums and several elementary and high school buildings.

Rallies were held, letters sent to voters throughout the city, appeals were made to the city newspapers, stickers were pasted on cars, leaflets distributed through the streets. As a final touch, student voluntеers patrolled the voting polls, handed literature to the citizens as they walked toward the place of voting. A special edition of The Guardsman was distributed throughout San Francisco.

Out of all the bond issues before the public on that day, only No. 4, the school bonds, passed.

Looking back on the last few years and especially the last few semesters, it seems almost incredible that at long last the building is completed and the college almost ready to move in.

The past is behind us now. A beautiful future lies ahead.

Ground Breaking

Mayor Angelo Rossi and President Archibald J. Cloud participate in the ground breaking ceremony at Balboa Park.

Interspersed with dates of construction have been milestones indicative of expansion of the college in itself. They are numerous, too numerous to include here, yet pace developments in construction as though timed so that August, 1940 would bring together the internal and external aspects of the college in full complement to each other.

Aug. 1938 - Foundation

Although somewhat foreboding in appearance, the foundation of the college pictured above marked the second step in the construction of the building.

September 1939 - Construction In Progress

Pictured above are shots of actual construction on the building. The left picture shows President Cloud, Superintendent of Schools Nourse, Dean Browne, and Bill Frantz, last semester's Guardsman editor, standing on the steps of the main entrance. The other photo is a shot of the workmen working on the second floor.

February 1940 - Near Completion

Nearing completion, the science unit is shown above with the scaffolding still on the main entrance. This picture was taken in February of 1940 to illustrate the progress being made on the campus. Now, even the scaffolding has been removed and the outside completed.

Tenth President

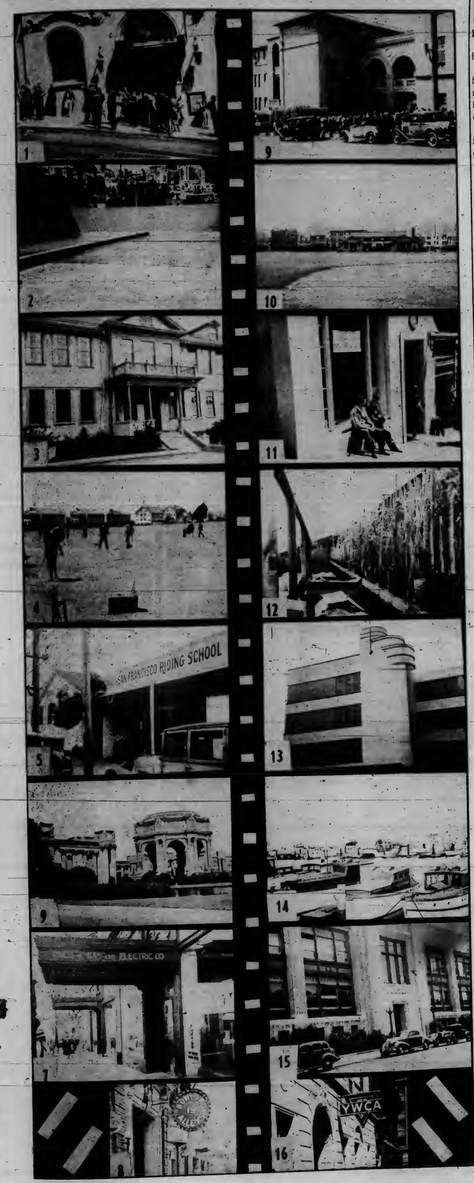
Allen V. Williams

Pictured above is this semester's Associated Student President Allen V. Williams. To Williams goes the honor of being the last student body president to govern the old San Francisco Junior College.

Williams is the tenth Associated Student president in the college's history. Perhaps he can be considered as the last of the pioneer group.

The leaders of future semesters, while not having the handicap of scattered locations to combat, will have the important and difficult job of welding the various groups in the college into one unit.

May 1940 - Completion



Here we have the most recent picture of the entrance to the new college. The scaffolding has been removed and the legend over the entrance has been put in place.

Step-by step for five years, the citizens of San Francisco and the students and faculty of the college have gradually built this great edifice. The people contributed their money and support, the students and faculty had the harder task of building from within so that when the campus was ready, the college would also be ready.

The building is ready. The college is ready. Only the consolidation of the two remains.

CAMPUS IN REVIEW—NOW IT'S OVER

Pillar To Post For An Education

Pictured above are 16 different locations in San Francisco that have housed the wandering students of the college for the past five years.

1. Easily recognized by all is the University of California Extension building at 540 Powell, commonly referred to as "Powell". 2. The north beach pool at Columbus and Lombard where the college mermen practice. 3. Hotel division students learn the art of meat cutting at 825 Brannan St. 4. Campus archers imitate Robin Hood at Fort Mason. 5. Riding classes convene at the San Francisco Riding School, on Stanyan Street. 6. The Palace of Fine Arts for tennis enthusiasts. 7. The PG and E building which houses half the library and a tiny study hall. 8. Golden Gate Bowling Alleys on Jones Street where campus keglers scatter the pins. 9. Good old Galileo High School where most of the afternoon classes are held. 10. Funston playground, another branch of the physical education department. 11. The Powell street student book store, the women's lounge and some more of the library. 12. Floriculture classes convene at the greenhouse at 23rd Avenue and Quintara. 13. Samuel Gompers Trades School where the radio engineers work. 14. The marina yacht harbor where the now defunct crew once practised. 15. Girls High School, where most of the business classes are held. 16. The college women use the YWCA pool for swimming classes.

Traveling Over City Fades Into History After This Semester

BY BORRIE HYMAN

According to the illustrious tent-maker, ". . . the Hunter of the East has caught The Sultan's turret in a Noose of Light."

Yes, it is morning. Wiping reviving ice-water from his crumpled face, Horatio J. College tumbles from his dream of peace to face a new day, the same old college. With a splash, a gulp, and a swish, in the order named, Horatio washes, breakfasts, and catches his car for Powell Street.

His face purple, Horatio climbs the Powell Street hill, ascends four flights of stairs. For his exertions he receives a professional glare, timed at exactly one minute past eight.

The day has begun for Horatio.

In the course of the morning he speeds in a break-neck dash to Funston Field. The college demands healthy students. To meet an 11o'clock class, he flies back to Powell Street.

Twelve o'clock finds Horatio rummaging under the check-room coat racks, for his lunch. No, someone hasn't boat him to it this time. Swinging his medly of bread, baloney, tuna, and fruit, he saunters down to Union Square to share his sustenance with the pigeons. As he brushes away the crumbs from his coat, he looks skyward to see that "time's a wasting."

Melting ice cream and instructors wait for no man: Horatio is no exception, and he runs to jump a passing "F" car. Standing on the observation platform, he inhales cosmopolitan San Francisco as he is bounced along Stockton Street and Columbus Avenue.

With innate dianity he shoves his way, oblivious to his victims lying in the aisle, out of the car. He bounds into Galileo, leaps up only three flights of stairs his time.

Two classes drag by, then Horatio realizes he has a home to go to. He races down the stairs to catch a homeward bound tram. No longer a student, Horatio is relegated to the position of a two-legged sardine. He didn't imagine he could ever occupy so small a space.

This then is the life of Horatio J. College. This too, is the life of his friends—an existence of leaps and bounds and travail, an existence jarred by partial habitation of moving vehicles.

A sad life indeed. But within a short time the peregrinating junior collegian will go down in history, a body forgotten. Horatio will find peace and relaxation next semester.

The Fall semester will encounter Horatio and his perambulating friends in a common habitat. They may loll on the rolling greensward on Balboa Park; they may gaze enraptured at Tim Pflueger's architectural masterpiece—the science building.

For the present Horatio will study in an up-to-the-minute educational plant. When asked at what college, Horatio need not hang his head and begin reeling off a list of locations and expatiating on the college's future hopes. Horatio may tilt his chin with pride, directing his questioners to Balboa Park, home of one of the finest junior colleges in the country.

All may be proud now, for truly there is ONE OUT OF MANY.

Edwin C. Browne

Want to know anything about anything in the college? Just ask the Dean; for if he can't help you, chances are no one can.

Dean Edwin C. Browne is a concentrated mass of activity. He's always on the go, dispensing that familiar ready wit with gusto. He runs competition to Jim Farley when it comes to remembering names and faces.

Like many another college official, the Dean has played not a little part in hastening the day when the new campus was to be ready for occupancy.

Paul M. Pitman

Now Dean of Men at San Jose State College, Paul Pitman, two semesters ago, was an integral part of the college mechanism. Acting as assistant to President Cloud, he was extremely active during the formative years of the college. Much of his time was spent in running back and forth from the Board of Education and the college, holding a brief for the new campus.

Many will remember Pitman for his genial personality and demonstrated ability to hold an audience.

J. Graham Sullivan

Under the imposing title, Coordinator of Educational Management, young, handsome J. Graham Sullivan leads a busy life at the college. Sullivan took over Paul Pitman's position two semesters ago, having formerly been coordinator of the hotel division.

Sullivan, among a great many other things, is President Cloud's right-hand man. Like the two men above, he too has done more than his part in arranging the necessary details preparatory to entering the new campus.

The Powell Branch

Emulating mountain goats as they perch on the side of approaching-to-perpendicular Powell Street, these students while away time between and during classes, watching cable cars, innocent passers-by, and co-eds whisk themselves up and down the hill. Snickering as they observe a car feebly struggling to attain the first level of Powell Street is another favorite pastime of the Extension Building Cowboys.

Here, what looks to be an inpenetratable mass of students, books and whatnot, is actually an inpenetratable mass of the aforementioned articles.

How do you pass by? You don't; that is, it's a sort of osmotic process. If you wait and shove long enough, the mob will gradually assimilate you.

Should you be very lucky, you might slip, slide or slink through the "540 Line" and continue the hectic tenor of your way.

The Galileo Branch

It may appear different from this angle, it may seem like the break-up of a Browder-Dies tussle, but it really isn't. It's just "good old," immaculate, reserved, Galileo High School, looking down Francisco Street, around 2:30 in the afternoon.

About this time the ingress of junior college students, and the egress of the Galileo High students merge into one clamoring mass. Students have left the morning classes of Powell Street to trudge, with varied and sundry belongings and acquaintances, over to the outskirts of North Beach.

Housed under the pictured roofs, is the registrar's office—Service is their motto—the executive offices, including Dean Browne's general lounging room, President Cloud's reception room where the populace and students flit in and out in a continual stream, and Miss Dougherty's office—a study in placidity.

Registration In Gym

Bending their backs and minds to figuring out their forthcoming workout schedules are these engrossed students at a recent registration period at Galileo High School.

Heedless of the white lines and black lines and blue lines that play havoc with their eyes as they glance floorward, and disdainful of the treacherous volleyball nets ever ready to ensnare the unwary, these men and women carry on.

If little matters now that there weren't enough chairs to go 'round during registration; if little matters that there wasn't room to place a chair, if you had one, as a table, for these are situations of the past.

Next semester registration time, near the latter part of August, will find the college's hardy talent enrolling in the sun-conditioned, air-conditioned, and student-conditioned Balboa Park campus.

Last Class Day On City-Wide Campus Inspires Gratitude To Leaders

SOME of us today think only that this is the last day of classes. They are but partially correct.

Five years ago, when the college was first born, the students of that time looked forward to the day when the college would have its own location and buildings. Now five years later, that dream is about to be realized.

Almost unbelievable to those who have been here for more than six months, is the realization that at last, the confusion, discomfort, and difficulties we have labored under for ten semesters are over.

No longer will students of the college have to trek from home to Funston, then to Powell Street for their morning classes.

No longer will collegians jolt along Stockton Street, packed like sardines, on the "F" car. Nor will they need to walk down to 58 Sutter, or hurry to Girls High.

Searching through the scattered library for a book will no longer be necessary, and studying in the cramped quarters of the P. G. and E. study hall is also over.

The baby that was born five years ago has successfully passed through its adolescent period. The college has found itself and in the future will settle down to the task of becoming mature and self sufficient.

At this time it is appropriate to pay tribute to the scores of persons who have helped make this day possible. To the citizens of San Francisco and to the Board of Education we extend our gratitude for their efforts on our behalf.

To President Cloud, Registrar Mohr, Paul M. Pitman, former assistant to the president, Dean Browne, and in fact every member of the faculty who have worked hard and earnestly for our building, we extend our thanks and appreciation.

It is heartening to realize that there are men and women such as these to train and educate the youth of America. It explains in part the reason for the backbone and spirit of the American people.

Credit is also due all the student leaders of the past five years for zealously working for a new building and for holding the college together during this hectic period.

Expressions of gratitude and appreciation are little enough to extend to these people who have done so much for the college, but their real reward will come when, years hence, San Francisco Junior College, ever increasing, growing ever stronger, will reach the pinnacle of educational achievement.

Goal Of Unity And College Spirit Demands Student Officers Strong Enough To Accomplish Task

TODAY is our last chance to get some good student officers for the hectic semester to come.

When striving for unity and college spirit, it becomes essential to have leaders who are conscious of how best to accomplish this task.

Last Monday, the primaries helped clear the way by eliminating the weak. Today, the general election should elect the strong.

From next semester on, the college ceases to be a pioneer organization, and goes into the stage of an established institution with its own grounds.

"Elect efficient leaders" has always been the cry of every democratic organization. Under more than ordinary circumstances, the necessity of capable officers is doubly important.

Last semester, a record vote was cast. Today, this record could easily be doubled. Now's the time when every member of the Associated Students is needed to help select a capable staff of officers.

The polls will be open from nine in the morning until four this afternoon. Voting by machine takes but a few minutes, and those of us who are sincerely interested in the college, will find the results well worth the time.

Book Exchange To Be Open At Powell Street, Galileo

Stating that the Women's Service Society will again operate a book exchange for the college next semester, Annette Schunick, president of the group, announced that students may turn in their used books during the final exam period at the Powell Street ticket office in the morning and at the Galileo bank in the afternoon.

TYPING out the last column of our so-called 'career', we've been told not to get sticky with sentiment so what to do when we're in that certain mood, but think of something new to say. (No remarks.)

DO YOU REMEMBER . . .

a few years back when Jack Schmale, college publicity man and playwright of no mean sorts, produced "Joe's J.C." with Al Williams, head of the fabulous "ideal college."

when all the students and instructors got out and worked like bees to have the citizens of the beautiful city vote yes on proposition No. 4, just so we could have a home to call our own.

when Ken Pasqualetti was known as the most bashful man around, and some say he still is.

Dusty Rhode and his legendary dating bureau that was supposed to contain some very good names.

Fashion Fanny and Charming Charlie who used to run around town and read the latest fashion articles, so that the members of the smart set might keep up-to-date with the ever-changing modes of fashion.

Dick Simpers and his playmate Tracy Slattery and other members of a certain society around town who were once pretty chummy with a certain gentleman—gosh, we've forgotten his name, have you?

that beautiful blonde who was kidded all one semester by a certain fraternity who said she brought her "daddy" to the dances.

the hay that was strewn all over the floor at the famous Belmont Barn dance the AMS sponsored one year—remember all the big shots that night?

those awful beards that were tendered and nursed along for the AMS wheat-derby contest.

the loss of the college banner on one of the football trips.

That year when Stan Tobiason started the now famous Sophomore Sweetheart contest, and what a toss up that was. Just to remind you, Dixie McCormick reigned over the sophomores that year, remember her southern voice.

Jane Mitchell's pink sweater.

that terrific spill Hal Hoffman took out in front of Galileo.

Yes, we could go on and on, and perhaps if you're old enough you could too. But all in all, each semester's columnist has tried his best to help you remember some of the more outstanding incidents which have happened around and about.

Waterloo Bridge Sees Life And Love Through The Eyes Of War

TO ROY CRONIN, Waterloo Bridge meant Myra. To Colonel Roy Cronin, it meant war—one to stop the Butcher of Potsdam, and another to stop an Austrian house-painter.

It was during the first conflict that Roy met Myra on Waterloo Bridge. Fate seemed to have fooled with their destiny for she had them fall in love: a captain of the Fusilliers and a lovely ballet dancer. They were to be married, but war, being a respecter of the rights of no man, saw to it that Roy was called to the front. Love kept Myra going until she saw the Casualty List one day. But people must live though their heart is dead, so Myra became a Girl of the Streets. Yet Roy wasn't dead and he again wants to keep his vows. But Myra is too honorable so she keeps a tryst with Charon on Waterloo Bridge.

Twenty-five years later, the bridge finds Colonel Roy Cronin wondering at the futility of existence.

Waterloo Bridge is superior cinema. It is an old theme that the director has revamped so that it appears fresh and new. Mervyn LeRoy has shown extremely good judgment in combining the excellent photography of Joseph Ruttenburg, the magnificent music of Herbert Stothert, and his own direction to build to a climax that, when it comes, is the perfect ending to a sentimental film.

Myra is portrayed by Vivien Leigh. In this film, she shows that her choice as Scarlett O'Hara was no accident. Her Myra is capricious, winsome, piquant, but withal, reserved; a girl with many facets to her character. Miss Leigh makes the girl live by virtue of her sincere presentation of this difficult characterization.

Better than he has been in the past year, Robert Taylor makes Roy Cronin a bit too juvenile to be entirely convincing. His performance assures one that war is a great big game and should be taken with a grain of salt. Yet Taylor has become a better actor in these last few months, and with a little polish, he might even become good.

Distinguished by a plethora of minor performances, Waterloo Bridge boasts principally of Virginia Field, Maria Ouspenskaya, Lucille Watson, and C. Aubrey Smith; each of whom contributes an outstanding bit to the picture.

On the whole, the movie sentimentalizes war too much. It pays too much attention to the undying love that seems to exist only because the war is going on. Apocryphal horror is not the only reason for love. Yet the film would have you believe that love—and war— start and end on Waterloo Bridge.

Counter-Point

Jutland Anniversary; Conquerors Find Sea A Futile Road To Glory

(Today's Counter-Point is written by Louis Goldstone.)

IT IS not only in the windy plains and lush river valleys of Europe that the conquering hordes have found, at last, the insurmountable barrier to their expanding domain. Flanders mud and Alsace meadows have never been, nor will ever be sole repositories for the invaders' bones.

There is another and vaster road to glory—the sea. It is warm and fitful in the Mediterranean, it is bitter and misty and killing in the North Sea and in the Skagerrak. It is a road and a barrier, sown deeply with the forgotten hulks of victor and vanquished.

The Napoleons, the Wilhelms, the Phillips have been many, who have challenged the road only to see their proud warships, crumpled on the barrier, slide into the depths, carrying in the plunge dreams of empire.

Kublai Khan's junks foundered in angry waves when the emperor would invest Japan; Xerxes found a strange Waterloo at Salamis; the Armada perished in the throes of Drake's fire ships and the storm-lashed northern coasts.

The road of the sea presents a dual barrier. The sea itself, dark, mysterious, unpenetrable. At times the sea springs from its chains, mockingly. It raves in its unpent fury—triumph as it sharpens tragedy. It foils the acomplishments of impertinent men, and magnifies their errors.

MID-MAY of 1916 saw embattled Germany, slowly starving by the British blockade, seeking a way out of the labyrinth. The German High Seas Fleet, Kaiser Wilhelm's cherished "good left arm," plotted to bring its hated assailant to grips. "Divide and Conquer" was the order of the day. Cruiser squadrons put out on scouting assignments. The enemy—the British Grand Fleet—must, decided Admiral Scheer, be split up and destroyed a piece at a time.

On May 31, 1916—twenty-four years ago next Friday—five sleek German battle cruisers steamed within sight of the Norwegian coast. Behind them rumbled the High Seas Fleet in force. Sixteen dreadnaughts of the first line composed that grim array. A score of light cruisers and swarms of destroyers littered the waters.

At the same moment—improbably by coincidence—British forces were converging off Jutland Bank from Scapa Flow, Rosyth and Invergordon. Six battle cruisers under Vice-Admiral Beatty led the van of 28 dreadnaughts and concentrated light forces as the Grand Fleet was concluding one of its periodic sweeps of the North Sea.

If the Skagerrak is undisturbed today, it leaped and writhed then, as the battle cruiser squadrons clashed head-on. Leading the British back toward the German fleet, Vice-Admiral Hipper's ships poured an unremitting rain of shell on their enemies. Flame danced along the gunwales of the British battle cruiser Indefatigable and its magazine exploded with a roar; 1500 men drowned and struggled in the ice water.

Twenty minutes later the battle cruiser Queen Mary was hit with 15 inch shells from the Derfflinger, and blew up in a pillar of smoke and fire that stood two miles in the air. Red hot metal fragments showered the sea for miles around.

The German battle cruiser Lutzow limped and took a heavy list, crippled by direct hits, and as the main bodies of the opposing forces drew within range, fleet destroyers engaged between the battle lines, spraying each other with shellfire.

Face to face, the full respective naval mights of Britain and Germany hammered and roared. Thousands of heavy shells whistled in either direction and converted the sea into a boiling green hell.

Faster, more numerous, more powerful than their foe, the British dreadnaughts "crossed the T," spilling a tremendous volume of fire on Germany's leading ships in line. Even as Scheer ordered the famous about turn of his fleet, Britain's battle cruiser Invincible swallowed a 15 inch broadside, flared briefly, broke in half and vanished. Six men of 1500 were saved.

SMOKE screens hid the retreating Germans as night came on. Destroyer attacks born in desperation delayed the British pursuit. In the grim darkness the German fleet, steaming southeast with lights out, saw three vague shapes emerge from the mists nearby.

The intruders flashed code signals. British signals! Gunfire blazed in the night, and three British armored cruisers exploded. Flaming fuel oil blanketed the waves, roasting the survivors as they struggled in the water.

A torpedo boomed as it struck in the vitals of the German dreadnaught Pommern, sending it to the bottom with all hands.

The battle of Jutland—indecisive—yet all important. Britain retained control of the seas. The High Seas Fleet never again left port.

On November 9, 1918, the Kaiser knew his dream had been foiled. "Now I have no navy," he said, as he boarded the train for Holland.

The sea had increased its grisly collection by more than eight thousand trophies.

COLLEGE

THINGS to remember about registration week in the new building: The wide open mouths of the returning students as they compare Balboa Park to Powell Street; The worried looks on the faces of the new students as they slave over their entrance exams; The broad grins from the faculty as they look around their new home.

As a matter of record it is also to be noted that approximately 98 per cent of the persons entering the college have stopped to stare with wondering and curious eyes at the ultra modern broadcasting studio on the first floor.

This isn't an attempt at criticism. As a matter of fact we're so happy about the whole thing, someone could probably touch us for a loan and get away with it.

WE noticed several of the old standbys of the college wandering around last week. Perhaps someone remembers Treacy Slattery and Dick Simpers? (They had a longing look in their eyes as they gazed at the new plant)

Hal (Hossface) Hoffman was also striding about.

LAST semester The Guardsman had two associate editors, Dan Rosenblat, and Lou Goldstone. In a recent conversation Daniel (as he prefers to be called) insisted that he be mentioned in the first issue of the paper for old times sake, therefore:

Obituary—Hired, Spring 1938, Retired Spring 1940 — Daniel Garson Rosenblat, trusted reporter, ass't managing editor, associate editor, and general headache. (besides that, he's a cute little runt).

In case anyone took us serious, Rosenblat is still alive and kicking (especially the latter).

THE recent bill passed by Congress authorizing the President to call out the national guard for a year's active service is going to make a dent in the population of the college.

No doubt the bull sessions will miss many of the boys who will soon be polishing buttons at Camp Ord. We can't imagine what this place will be like without the corny hats and unique pipes of Dusty Rhodes.

Discontinuance of the military science course will be quite a loss to some of the military minded members of the college but enrollment in the Coast Artillery is a part of the course and you can't very well enlist in an organization that is no longer here

(See story, page four)

POLITICS

NOT that it matters particularly, but how come Willkie buttons are flooding the city and Roosevelt buttons are in hiding somewhere" It isn't like the Democrats unless they have an ace up their sleeves or a lack of funds.

THE laugh of each political campaign is the oh so positive statement issued by each side that "There will be no mudslinging during this campaign."

No sooner is this communique issued than both sides begin verbally blasting their opponents. Who do they think they are fooling? The American public after all these years is pretty well accustomed to mudslinging, so what's the point in going to such pains to make promises everyone knows will not be kept?

SIGN outside the Embassy theater on Market Street: "We Do Not Show War News. Read Your Paper Or Listen To The Radio For War Developments. We Believe A Theater Is A Place For Relaxation And Enjoyment And Has No Place For The Grimness And Horrors Of Battle."

They've got something there. We wish a few more places of amusement would adopt the same program.

NATIONAL

AS a somewhat lighter vein in the current news flooding the nation comes the information that Pan American Airways broke another world record when the strato-clipper Rainbow completed a round trip flight from Miami, Florida to the Panama Canal in 12 hours and 12 minutes.

Which illustrates again that the United States is the only nation left where we are still constructing for peace instead of for war. Let's hope we stay that way.

Budget Gets Imprimatur From Council

Approval was stamped on a $13,283.66 budget for the 1940 fall semester by the Executive Council last week, Alden Thorogood, finance committee chairman, revealed.

This final budget figure, slightly below last semester's amount, was arrived at after considerable paring of individual requests that totaled almost twenty thousand dollars.

The greatest single allotment was awarded to the football squad with The Guardsman second.

No More Letters of Credit

To further cut expenses this semester, a ruling was made by the finance committee that letters of credit to the book store, backed by the college, would no longer be issued, and the position of an external publicity agent for the college, formerly held by Jack Schmale, was dissolved.

Commenting on the last step, Thorogood said "We felt that the publicity agent post had undue financial stress on the college We further feel that any necessary publicity work can be quite capably handled through The Guardsman."

May Obtain Banner

Though definite funds are not yet available, efforts will be made by the Executive Council to obtain a college banner and a public address system, according to Lyle Shultz, Associated Students' president Little future was seen, however, for the campus carnival, proposed last semester.

One reason for the lack of money this semester, Thorogood explained, was the absence of a sizeable surplus fund from last The semester previous to that, he added, a $4,000 surplus awaited the finance committee

Following is an itemized list of budget grant for the fall semester:

Alpha Gamma Sigma	$ 14.00

Orientation Week

Full Program Planned For New, Old Students

To accustom new students to college traditions and help them in getting acquainted with other students, Orientation Week activities will begin on September 10 and conclude on September 13, Lyle Schultz, Associated Student's president, announced today.

Opening the affairs for the week will be the semi-annual Collegiate

Student Prexy

Lyle Schultz

Mixer tea dance sponsored by the Associated Men Students and the Associated Women Students, Shultz revealed. The dance is to be informal and will be held in the Women's Gymnasium, according to present plans, at about 3:30 o'clock.

The traditional AMS men's smoker and AWS tea honoring new students are scheduled for September 12 in the cafeteria, Shultz continued. The tea will take place at 3:30 in the afternoon and the smoker at 8 o'clock in the evening.

"We are planning on having a rally to explain college traditions to new students," Shultz declared. "This rally will take place at 2:30 on September 13, and it will be followed by elections of officers of the various classes in rooms to be announced later."

Completing the activities for the week will be the semi-annual Low Freshman dance in the Women's Gymnasium at 9 o'clock in the evening, Shultz said Plans for the affair are being made by Jean Arnold, student vice-president, who has announced that admission is to be by one student body card per couple.

"We hope that this week will be as successful as previous Orientation Weeks," Shultz said, "and we should like to urge all students to take part in the activities offered them."

WSS Continues Exchange Of Books In Room 103

To help old students disposing of their books and new students in purchasing books, the Women's Service Society will conduct its Book Exchange in room 103 for the next two weeks, Mildred Bartosiewski, WSS president, announced today.

"I should like to request those who have texts to sell to bring them in immediately, for the demand for books is at its height now," Miss Bartosiewski declared.

Women will be in room 103 from 8 o'clock to 4 o'clock daily, she said, adding that any students who want to buy books are free to come in and look over the selection at any time.

"I should like to emphasize that the WSS does not operate the exchange at any profit," she continued. "Thus the students selling and buying are not hampered by a middle-man."

Employment Applications Taken In Dean's Office

"Although part time jobs outside the college other than NYA work are rare and hard to find, students who need such work and are interested should file applications in my office, room 123, as soon as possible," Dean Edwin C. Browne last week announced.

"There are some students who find that NYA work is not enough to keep them in college and must turn to other means. Although I can promise nothing, my office is continually trying to place students," Browne said.

The Truth Shall Make You Free

President Cloud Stresses Advantages of America

By A. J. Cloud, President

Greetings to newer and older students alike as we enter our permanent buildings, on one of which appears the inscription:

The Truth Shall Make You Free!

These words are taken from a passage in Holy Writ, which reads in full: "You shall know the truth; and the truth shall make you free."

It is thought that this inscription is expressive of the intent and purpose lying behind the creation and support of an institution such as ours which is public in character and responsive to the ideals and practices of a democratic order of society. At a time when history is being made on an unprecedented scale, it is well to remember constantly, continuously, and persistently the fact that American opportunities, as evidenced in education, are not a birthright to be accepted as a mere matter of course. Those opportunities have been achieved at the cost of blood and treasure, travail and sacrifice. They are not a gift to be thrown aside lightly. Sad indeed is the situation confronting youth of many other lands today — for in America, but in Ameriea alone, may youth yet assemble with a full adherence to the eoneept that "The Truth Shall Make You Free." If the principles of freedom are safe in your keeping as I believe they are, the national structure will remain solid.

Franklin D. Roosevelt:

"Continuance of Education More Important Than Enlistment"

In a message to the heads of all colleges and universities in the country, President Franklin D. Roosevelt last week requested that students should remain in college and get the best possible education instead of enlisting in the armed forces of the nation or leaving school to work in shipyards.

In the letter received by President A. J. Cloud, President Roosevelt said:

"Reports have reached me that some young people who had planned to enter college this fall, as well as a number of those who attended college last year, are intending to interrupt their education at this time because they feel it is more patriotic to work in a shipyard, or to enlist in the army or navy, than it is to attend college. Such a decision would be unfortunate."

"We must have well educated and intelligent citizens who have sound judgement in dealing with the difficult problems of today. We must also have scientists, engineers, economists, and other people with specialized knowledge, to plan and build for national defense as well as for social and economic progress. Young people should be advised that it is their patriotic duty to continue the normal course of their education, unless they are called, so that they will be well prepared for greatest usefulness to their country. They will be promptly notified if they are needed for other patriotic services."

Class Election Date Set; "Choose By Merit!" Plea

Nomination and election of class officers will take place on Friday, September 6, Mary Frances Malone, chairman of the election committee, announced today.

Guardsman.

"We urge students to consider carefully the merits of those students whom they wish to nominate, since Friday's elections will be of great importance in moulding school policy," Miss Malone said.

Both nominations and elections will be conducted at one meeting so that the students will know for whom they are voting, she explained, adding that this system has been recommended by the student officers.

The rest of the committee as appointed by Lyle Schultz, Associated Students' president, includes Jean Arnold, Alden Thorogood, Barbara Brown, Edith Callaghan, Bob Ogg, George Meyers, Virginia Hubbert, and three members whose appointmenst will be announced in Friday's Guardsman.

NYA Sign-ups Taken In 148 By Redford This Week

All students desirous of securing National Youth Administration employment while in college are requested to apply to Edward H. Redford, in room 148 any time this week.

"There are a few jobs open for students because of the vacancies created when others on NYA graduate. We have only a limited supply of funds however, so the sooner applications are made out, the better the chance of getting a job," Redford said.

"Associated Student Cards Invaluable"—Schultz

Possession of an Associated Student card is an invaluable advantage was the opinion expressed by President Lyle Schultz this week.

"Each semester we have from six to eight dances. To each of these, card holders are admitted free. That is, one Associated Student card admits a couple," Schultz said.

"There is a very active Junior College Athletic Conference schedule of basketball, football, tennis, track, and baseball. Cards entitle one to free admission.

Guardsman To Card Holders Only

"The Guardsman, published twice weekly, is rated as one of the best college papers in the nation and is given only to those students who are members of the Association.

"Associated Women Students and Associated Men Students activities are gratis to those possessing cards," Schultz announced.

Beware Of Lending Cards

Schultz cautioned students against lending their cards to outsiders. "When you buy your card, you sign an agreement to not lend it to anyone and this agreement must be kept if we are to have our activities free from outsiders. There is no objection to outsiders, but when they attend our functions, they make it impossible for students of the college to have a good time because the floors and rooms are too crowded. The college has a very active and efficient judicial committee that maintains an identification committee at the door of all college affairs. Students who lend cards to other persons will have their cards collected at the door and confiscated."

New Record

3000 Students Register; No More Allowed Entrance

Setting an all time high, college enrollment records this week reached a total of 3000 students, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar announced.

The 300 mark is the limit which the Board of Education recently set for the college. According to Miss Learnard, the limit was placed upon the college not to keep anyone from attending the institution but because there is only room for 3000 students and no more.

Approximately 4200 students, both new and old made out entrance applications at the end of last semester and during the summer registration. "This does not mean, however, that 1200 students will not be able to enter the college, for a great percentage of those who signified their intentions of registering, have not showed up to register," Miss Learnard said.

The possibilty that the Board of Education will lift the 3000 limit imposed upon the college is exceedingly small, since even if the limit were raised, there would be no accomodations available for the increase in enrollment.

The present registration figures mark a new high in the enrollment figures of the college. Last semester, the number of students enrolled totaled approximately 2600.

When the college was first organized in 1935, the registration figure was well below the 2000mark.

Four Man Cabinet Named By Shultz To Study Student Welfare Problems

Associated Student President Lyle Shultz today announced the formation of a presidential cabinet to discuss problems of student welfare throughout the semester.

This marks the first time in the history of the college that such a cabinet has been formed. The idea came from last semester's student president Al Williams and was incorporated into the by-laws of the Associated Student Constitution at the end of the semester.

The cabinet members are Alden Thorogood, chairman of the finance committee; Len Gross, Guardsman editor; George Meyers, Block SF member; and Hugh Waite, ex-college yell leader.

In commenting upon the newly formed board, Shultz said: "I feel that this cabinet can be of great help to the administration, especially this semester when we must find order out of chaos. The men selected to serve as cabinet members have shown themselves to be outstanding in student affairs and able to think clearly on the issues that are even now confronting us."

Student Cards Necessary For Copies Of Guardsman

Beginning with the Friday issue, copies of The Guardsman will be given only to those students holding Associated Student cards, Len Gross, Guardsman editor, announced today.

"Students who desire a copy of the paper must have their card with them on Tuesday and Friday, the days of publication," Gross said.

The measure was adopted by the college publication upon advisement by the Executive Council and follows similar rules set up by other colleges and universities throughout the country.

"In the past, the paper has been free to everyone. We feel, however, that it is not fair to the students who buy cards to have others get the paper at no cost. If a student is really interested in the welfare of the college he will have a student card," Gross concluded.

Fountain Lunch Service On As Cafeteria Opens Today

Opening today, the college cafeteria will feature a fountain service from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and a luncheon served in three periods, 11 a.m., 12 M. and 1 a.m., Hilda Watson of the Hotel and Restaurant division announced.

The fountain service will include coffee, cake, and the regular service found at any fountain.

Lunch will be served in three periods so as to avoid any confusion or overcrowding. The plate lunch will cost 25 cents and will consist of a salad, entrée, dessert and drink.

Gross Named Editor Again

Len Gross, Guardsman editor last semester, has been reappointed to serve in the editorial post again this semester, Joan Nourse, editorial adviser of the publication announced last week.

Gross, has worked on the paper since entering the college and was selected to guide the publication again on the basis of his past record.

This is the second time in the history of The Guardsman that an editor has been selected to serve for an entire year. William Rawson, editor in 1936 was also selected to continue at his post.

Gross, known also as the writer of the column "While Thinking" will continue with his column.

Appointed to assist Gross in editing The Guardsman are Borrie Hyman, former News Editor, elevated to Managing Editor, and Mary Frances Malone, who will assume the duties of News Editor.

Edmund Wunsch will continue in the capacity of Advertising Manager, a post he has held for the past three semesters.

A feature editor, sports editor, and business manager will be appointed within the next few weeks, Gross announced.

Trood, Hoffman Named On First Student Plaque

Dorothy Trood and Harold Hoffman were honored at the Commencement exercises held last June by being named as the most outstanding students of the past year.

They are the first students to have their names inscribed on the new twenty year "Outstanding Students" plaque, known as the President's Award.

Prominent Student Leader

Miss Trood has taken a prominent part in student activities since coming to the college. She has held office as president of the AWS, and vice-president of the Associated Students, and has served on various other committees.

Hoffman has held the office of president of the CAB twice, being reelected to serve another semester, has acted as chairman of the internal publicity committee and has also served on various other committees.

The scholastic ability of the two students is rated as above average.

Students To Leave College

Both students when questioned expressed their appreciation at having received the award and said they were sorry they were not returning to the college.

The recipients of the President's Award are decided by a committee composed of faculty members who consider scholarship, college activities, service, and ability of the students under consideration.

The two students selected, one man and one woman are announced at graduation and their names inscribed on the plaque.

"Capacity Expected In New Music Course"—Badger

To accommodate students who feel that A Cappella Choir work is too advanced for them, Flossita Badger, music instructor, announced a new vocal course numbered as Music 11.

Miss Badger said the amount of students desiring such a course made it practically requisite this semester.

The course will be offered at 12 o'clock on Monday and Wednesday.

Qualified students who would be interested in solo or accompanying piano work were asked to see Miss Badger.

Halls, Rooms of New Campus Must Be Kept Clean, Neat

CUSTOM says that at the beginning of each college semester, the student editor writes an editorial welcoming the new and old students back to the college.

In this instance the editorial should perhaps be one of joy and thankfulness rather than welcome, alhough that of course is included.

It is impossible for anyone who has not been with the college when it was located at 22 locations throughout the city, to fully realize the feeling that at long last we're home. The appreciation and thankfulness that fills the hearts of the old students is something that cannot be adequately described.

The dream or perhaps it should be called nightmare of traveling all over San Francisco for an education is now over. The college has emerged from the embryonic stage and is about to step forth as an adolescent, with tremendous potentialities.

It is the important task of every member of the college to aid in the real construction of the college. The next year or two will be the important ones in the career of the college for it has yet to emerge from an inconspicuous object in the minds of San Francisco to the outstanding educational unit of the public schools system.

Balboa Park is exceptional as far as being the most modern and streamlined educational plant on the coast is concerned. One thing that should be remembered above all others is that we have a beautiful building that should be kept as we now find it.

It seems a habit of adolescent students with the minds of two year olds to attempt to ruin and deface anything new. It would be criminal if such were to happen to any of the halls or rooms of the building.

There are some 3000 young men and women in this college and perhaps because we are young men and women, there is no necessity to mention this matter of keeping the building neat and clean. Let us hope so. Perhaps if we remember that this is our home, and a swell one at that, there will be less likelihood of anyone forgetting his manners.

Failure To Buy Associated Student Card Only Hurts Individual And College

IT IS unfortunate that someone is forced at the beginning of every semester to remind the men and women of the college that they are a part of this institution and as such should willingly subscribe to a policy of general cooperation.

Platitudinous as it is to speak of the whole dependent upon its components for support, such is the case in the college.

One of the most tangible ways to express your willingness to cooperate in this business is to purchase an Associated Students' card and really become a member of the college, not just a bystander.

A member of the Associated Students enjoys many privileges. He is admitted to college games and social events, he gains the right to vote and hold office, he receives a copy of The Guardsman twice weekly, and so on down the line.

But perhaps more than the just-mentioned advantages, however, is the feeling of community among the individuals, of being a part of the college, that such membership brings.

Those who are not in the swing of things are hurting not only themselves but the whole of the college. For it is with the money derived from the sale of Associated Students' cards that the college budget is largely financed. Money for the football team, publications, student organizations, and numerous other activities is realized, for the most part, through the Associated Students' dues paid each semester.

Four dollars a semester seems little enough to pay considering the multi-fold advantages gained from the investment.

Guardsman Scores Another First; Will Publish Four Page Paper Twice A Week

LAST semester, The Guardsman editorial staff much to the surprise of the general student body announced that for the first time since the beginning of the college, the paper would be issued twice weekly.

Because of cramped conditions, lack of typewriters, and the general disorganization of the college at that time, a single sheet was published on Tuesdays and the usual double sheet published on Fridays.

This semester by careful economizing and budgeting, The Guardsman will publish two, four page papers a week. The publication dates will remain the same.

A year ago, The Guardsman was honored in a nation wide survey conducted by Associated Collegiate Press, college press association by receiving the All-American award. This award is reserved exclusively for superior publications.

The Guardsman was one of six throughout the United States in the junior college weekly class that received this rating.

At the present we are awaiting word from ACP headquarters concerning our rating for last semester's publication.

The editorial policy of The Guardsman has always been to present all the news within the college as often as possible. It is the opinion of the editorial staff that it has for the most part accomplished this end. The Guardsman through the years has maintained a high standard in collegiate journalism. We shall continue to maintain that standard.

Something Needs To Be Done About Adequate Parking Facilities At College

READILY apparent in this first week of the college's opening is the inadequacy of parking facilities for students and faculty. Even the first days of the registration period, when attendance was divided, found Phelan Avenue jammed with cars.

As the situation stands now, either Phelan Avenue must be widened to permit diagonal parking or campus grounds must be utilized for parking. Both of these plans were considered last semester by college officials. Whether or not action has been taken or contemplated by the proper persons, will be ascertained by The Guardsman as soon as possible.

We cannot, of course, expect immediate resolution of the parking problem; the college has just started, and in this case, as in other matters, we must not expect a complete college unit nor an absolutely smooth-flowing organization, though assiduous endeavor by faculty members has achieved remarkable order out of the chaos that is usually characteristic of the registration period.

But even though conscientious efforts are made to alleviate the crowded condition, until some definite measures are adopted, Phelan Avenue will continue to hold serried cars that create a thoroughfare inadequate for extensive two-way traffic.

Quotable Quotes

THE youth of America comes to the doors of our colleges with hope and vision. Their spirit is the spirit of adventure. Their urge is the urge of growth. Their principle qualification for admission is curiosity. Their most valued recommendation is the desire for better things. Their finest equipment is courage and determination to succeed in a world of opportunity. They are endowed with the talents of normal human beings and are burdened with the frailities common to all men. This is the material with which the college works and no finer task may be found in all time than to create from this material a product that can be recognized as a gentleman and a scholar.—Rutgers University's Dr. Fraser Metzger aptly describes the "raw material" of higher education.

I hope you never belong to youth with a capital 'Y'. You ought not to be marked off as a special pressure group because of your age, just as women shouldn't be marked off because of their sex. You are not a special class, but citizens.—Mrs. Robert Taft, wife of the G.O.P. presidential hopeful, told University of Minnesota collegians the place they ought to assume in national affairs.

Some years ago sororities were criticized for being undemocratic. They were not governed and disciplined as they are now. They now all work together to improve the situation on all campuses.—Helen Froelich of National Park College commends the present trend of Greek group cooperation.

So long as the state pays the expense of junior college education at the state university or the state teachers college, there is every reason why it should also participate in the expense of local public junior colleges which operate on the same level.—Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, thumps for state support of junior colleges.

Frister
The Spectator . .

ROLLING into port at the height of the becalmed movie season, The Sea Hawk is timely if only that it is among the best of a none too good crop of pictures.

A tale of pirates bold in days of old, The Sea Hawk combines all the lavish thrills and costly sets which go toward making everyone realize that Hollywood is trying its darndest to court the favor of the fickle John Q.

Francis Thorpe, the cinematic counterpart of Sir Francis Drake, was as nefarious a buccaneer as ever sailed the seven seas for "perfidious Albion." Blighty's good Queen Elizabeth would wink at her sea dogs as long as they would capture the gold-laden Spanish merchantmen. The monetary gains of the piracy would fill the coffers of England's rapidly depleting treasury. Still did the mighty Armada of her former brother-in-law, Phillip II of Spain, grow bigger daily. Then came the day when the prowler of the Escurial saw fit to challenge the might of England.

July 27, 1588, one of the great battles of all time—off the rocky coast of Dover the mighty fleets met. Bad weather and a plucky English command drove the Spanish from John Bull's shores. Forever safe from the ravages of a foreign power was the Virgin Queen's domain . . . Britannia ruled the waves.

AS the primary sea-dog, Errol Flynn is capital in the swashbuckling Francis Thorpe, who rose from galley slave to master of England's destiny. These costume roles of England seem to fit Flynn far more than does the sweaty mufti of an officer in the American Army.

In her third role, Brenda Marshall shows evidence of becoming one of the best of Hollywood's current glamour girls. Dona Maria, the daughter of the Spanish Ambassador to the Court of St. James, offers Miss Marshall little to do, however. Yet, hidden under the voluminous robes of 16th century Spain, one is able to detect latent histronic ability.

CLAUDE RAINS and Alan Hale are top-notch in support. The former, as Phillip's emissary, injects sufficient suavity into his part so that the unthinking might mistake his part for that of the villain. (Those who wish to hiss are warned that this is a two-million dollar production.) The blustery Hale, as Flynn's aide-de-camp, carries on his shoulders the comedy without which the film would seem draggy.

Queen Elizabeth is portrayed for the second time by the extremely capable Flora Robson. If all the rulers of great nations were as capable as the actors who are called on to emulate them, the nations of the world might find this whirling sphere a better place on which to dwell.

Warners' master of stupendous productions, Michael Curtiz, has spared nothing in making this one of the more elaborate of the new season's crop. Everything that is necessary for superb entertainment is present, reassuring everyone that The Sea Hawk will be no "turkey."

Other current and choice—if you aren't too particular—bits from cinema land that opened too late to be reviewed for this issue could stand brief mention, in a prognosticating sort of way.

South of Pago Pago promises to be filled with South Sea breezes, waving coconut palms, a sarong or two, and all the other accessories that go to make up life in the islands. The fact that Frances Farmer is in the picture might raise it from being another hundred-men-and-a-girl-on-an-island picture. Miss Farmer has always appeared favorably in our eyes; let's hope she won't be disappointing.

He Stayed for Breakfast was seen by this reviewer, but too late for a complete review. The film follows in the best traditions set by similar zany films like My Favorite Wife, I Love You Again, and so forth. Loretta Young is her usual vivacious self, playing her part with wit and verve. Melvyn Douglas, as the ardent Communist, is a riot. The plot is—well, does the plot really matter in these pictures?

Crosby is back again. It's Rhythm On the River this time. Like all Crosby pictures it has its tunes—some good and some downright rank. It really doesn't matter though, B. C. always manages to make the worst of them sound pretty good. That stage and brilliant pianist of Information Please, Oscar Levant, is also listed in the roster. Several years ago Levant was just another good pianist doing odd jobs as composer, accompanist, solo piano artist, etc. Then Information Please got hold of him. Ever since he's become a national figure.

Registrar's Headache
By Marion MacKillop

Malone
On The Feminine Side

THE new Balboa Park campus represents more than a superior institution of learning to the women who rushed madly about town in quest of education last semester; it signifies freedom from the constant dread of meeting your Saturday night date along Powell or Sutter Streets with your hair on the wind-blown side and your saddle shoes looking like fugitives from a bottle of shoe cleaner.

Certainly, if "the truth shall make you free", the campus will give you freedom in choosing your college clothes.

The college is definitely windy and cool. It's fairly easy to go on from there. Knee high stockings are smart, new, and—clap hands—warm! Even if you don't think they do things for your legs, try them anyway with a short flannel skirt and a brightly colored sweater. The results will either horrify or delight you, but it's worth the attempt.

As usual, coming up quickly on the inside rail are not Bimelech and Malicious, but Scotch plaids and heavy English herringbones—plaids and herringbones in suits, dresses, skirts, and the new jumpers. Incidently, a good looking jumper produces a knock-out effect when coupled with one of those lush long-sleeved jersey shirts the stores are featuring. If you dare to be different, why don't you try a brilliant corduroy jumper for color and excitement in your wardrobe?

Women are no longer subtle about stealing their fashion ideas from men's clothing, as a quick glance at this year's styles will show. Long, impeccably tailored camel's hair jackets almost identical to those worn by the men are being sported by college women over wool dresses and skirts. Those boxy, short tweed coats actually flaunt their masculinity in both detail and material, even when topped by a sporty pork pie felt or a colorful calot with a foot-long quill shooting skyward.

Also looming importantly on the campus scene are fly fronts in covert cloth coats and suits, and especially in the ubiquitous reversible coat. Last semester's fly front dresses are assuming a new place in campus styles, as are the long sleeved jersey shirt-maker classics.

Those new dresses made to be worn with or without a slip-on sweater seem to have been designed in answer to the prayers of the Balboa Park college women. Exactly tailored in light weight gabardine or beavier flannels, they can serve double duty for jelly dates or campus wear. Even the thermometer loses its terror for the woman who can simply pull on a warm sweater and figuratively turn up her nose at the weather.

Of course, all the old faithful stand-bys are still going strong. Saddle oxfords, matching ankle socks and bows, thick-soled pigskin shoes, classic twin sweater sets, flared or trim flannel and tweed skirts, perfectly made natural camel's hair coats with vent backs—they're all "in" and probably will be when your children's children are carving their way through the fog to reach the Administration building.

Well, here is your campus—fresh, unused, and more than ready for all the clever ideas that your own-style sense and individuality can give it. You have a college—don't be afraid to dress for it!

Student Asks Extension Of Bus Line

● TENTH AVENUE BUS WORRIER
Editor, The Guardsman:

Last semester when we were back in the old Cal Extension building I understood that transportation to the new building this semester was to be good.

I have to take the Tenth Avenue municipal bus to get to the college. I don't mind this of course, but it does seem rather annoying to have to walk five blocks from the end of the bus line to get to the building.

I'm young and healthy and don't mind walking but when the rainy season begins it will be a different story.

Is it possible to get the city to extend the bus line to nearer the college? After all a great many students take the bus and deserve as much service as any other patrons.

A worried student

Editor's note: At this time we cannot tell what the possibilities are of extending the bus line, but we'll take it up with the Executive Council and see what can be done.

● WHAT, NO BAND OR ORCHESTRA?
Editor, The Guardsman:

Upon glancing over the catalog, I discovered with some surprise that the college has no band or orchestra.

Being used to a band and orchestra in high school I was somewhat amazed to discover that a large institution such as this has no musical organization. Would you please explain why such is the case?

Does the college ever use the band of some other school or do they just get along without one?

Sincerely yours,
Robert Persiflage

Editor's note:

In the past five years of the college it has been almost impossible to efficiently organize a band or an orchestra because of the scattered and unsettled conditions of the campus. Another important point to be mentioned is that we had no equipment for such a venture and who ever heard of a band without instruments? It has been the plan of the administration to wait until we entered the new building before installing a music course of that type.

Although the college has occasionally used the bands from several high schools, as a general rule we do not have a band at any athletic functions.

WE aren't writing this column for keeps (Happy Day). In fact we doubt if it would keep. In fact—this column will deal with facts—we would cry out that this stuff was written under duress if the editor weren't a miserable beast with a penchant for vengeance.

However, since, like the butterfly, we shall soon be on our ephemeral way, we feel free to express the stark, unexpurgated, unadulterated truth about a multitude of a few subjects.

You've perhaps heard about The Baker's Wife; you know, it's that foreign picture that's been hanging out at a certain theatre on Clay Street. (Proper names are not mentioned for obvious reasons.) Well, we seem to be the individualist or radical, whatever you will, who did not blubber with ecstasy at Raimu, or at the left-over from the silent films that portrayed his wife; or at the simplicity of the film that was reduced far beyond reasonable lowest terms. Of course, the picture has been running for about 10 weeks straight, and everybody from Alexander Woollcott to Walter Winchell (fame and double letters seem to have a mutual attraction) has employed his most hackneyed panegyrics in its behalf. Even Harry Frister—you remember, he reviewed the movies last semester—thinks it's a good picture. Harry didn't see it, but after all, seeing isn't everything. We know a man who——The editor heard about this one; the most he would print of it was five words.

YOU'VE all heard about Hedy Lamarr. There's absolutely no reason why we should tell you about her—none at all. But we're going to do it. We're going to tell you about this sleek thing that causes bank presidents to sob in their bicarbonate, that caused Joan Bennett to dye her hair—competition you know. People don't know enough about this dark-eyed Diana who is able to motivate the palpitation of a million hearts as she flexes her svelte form to securely plant her chewing gum on the bottom of her chair.

We said you would get the facts in this column. So now you think we are going to expose, figuratively, this exotic passion flower who appears to be a fugitive from some Nirvana; you think we're goingto be individualistic again. Students, your logic is faultless, but you did not reckon with that strange variable—human emotion. Were we to debunk Miss Lamarr and tell her to go back to the ecstacy from whence she came, we would apostatize the pin that lies so tenderly tucked in our shoe last, the pin that shows us to be a member in good standing of the H. L. Fan Club, Branch 21, District 7.

THERE is a movement under foot to bring sanity back to art. This project all sounds very well on the surface, for what one of us would not like to bring sanity to A Nude Descending a Staircase or Abstraction in a Vermiculated Totem-Pole. Underneath, however, is a cruel purpose which seeks to prevent abstractions from patronizing vermiculated totem-poles, which seeks to halt bereted Botticelli's from recording their swirling, angular thoughts as their minds inadvertently trip off this mortal coil to explore, in the abstract, the concreteness of the nether world. We who deal in facts cry out at this persecution. The Constitution allows man to live, to laugh, to love as society chooses. Surely we cannot allow a movement for sanity to defile our modern artistic traditions of lack of line, form, beauty, and meaning and, in addition, disrupt democracy. Observe carefully the man who speaks out in favor of sanity in art; he is almost certain to belong to a column.

Although the college is, at present constructed to take in 3000 students some 4500 have registered. Plans are being made to be considered by the Board of Education so that the 1500 students may enroll.

THE GUARDSMAN SPORTS

RAMblings
By Kei Hori

Once more king of sports, football, in all its glory, boomed its way over the United States. But from the realm of the feminine grape vine of the college comes news that the Women's Athletic Association boasts a bran' new coach—from the University of California, no less. Take a bow, Miss Aileen Kinkel. We hope you like it here.

Miss Kinkel looks more like a student, and we almost started a conversation full of ways to cut gym. Luckily, our secrets are still within our own little grapevine.

When we were introduced to Miss Kinkel, we learned that she is an expert at swimming, tennis, badminton, dancing, and excells at shooting the army rifle. We wonder, how, under that diminutive frame, such an abundance of ability can be stored.

The new rifle gallery is a honey. It is just under the steps of the main entrance of the main building (as if there were any other main buildings that had a main entrance) and is of standard size.

• • •

Field hockey for women is expected to have one of the largest turnouts if not the largest, in the whole WAA program. The coaches boast of new equipment, and newer women. . . . ?

No news from Placer. That's sad. This may mean the Mountaineers have shifted their system from former years, which makes predictions impossible. The last two contests were decisive victories for the Rams—of 19to 6 and 20 to 0 respectively. But. .

We have heard comments on the small number of students who attend college games. This year, however, what with all the new school, new practice grounds, new uniforms and such, the attendance at games ought to be plenty high.

The football team this year hasn't a man in the line-up who can be called a demon on cleats. The closest to this is last year's spark, Al Naumann, and possibly Dave Cunningham and Leo Leggett. All others are unsung or unpolished, which is a good sign, because Coach Eisan has no outstanding lumps to mould around. Lee has been working his men since Monday, August 24, every day except Sunday. No foolin' — they even worked on Labor Day. Wait'il the union of football ex's hears about this!

Campus Sports Personalities
By KEI HORI

HELLO to the fall of '40. And the college is proud to present to the students, a brief personality rampage of Miss Helen Crlenkovich, National 10-foot indoor springboard champion.

It took us two weeks to gather enough courage to ask her for an interview, and we have been cursing for two weeks for wasting the first two weeks. One would never know Helen to be a National Champion by the way she spoke to us during the interview. Her conversation was easy and smooth; smiles flashed not infrequently and made your interviewer quite at ease. Her manner is casual, her voice soft and melodious, yet, her carriage is erect, and she looks every inch a champion.

Helen was born in Akron, Ohio in 1921. Her early life was mostly that of traveling, for her father was an engineer, being on from one project to another. She had covered most of the eastern states, and in 1934, she moved to San Francisco, now her permanent home.

Helen's daily routine consists of attending the college, an hour and a half of practice, spending some time in the dark room (she is an accomplished photographer), working as a secretary in the Fairmont Hotel in the evenings, and practically every week-end, she is out of town for diving exhibitions.

Believe it or not, Helen has only been diving for five years, but every day of these five years, she has practiced for an hour. She credits her ability to Phil Patterson, her instructor, and to determination and hard work. "One can do anything if one sets his mind to it," she said, and the greatest example of that, we think, is herself.

Among her prized possessions is a bracelet given to her when she won her first national championship here in San Francisco. "My other awards I prize too, and I won't part with them for anything," she said.

Mrs. Helen Center, head of the recreation department of the city can be given the credit for "finding" Helen. Helen got her tan when she was in Florida and South America.

Helen's ultimate ambition is the same as is all amateur athletes—to compete in the Olympic games. Her favorite form of dress is fancy street clothes. She likes Henry King's orchestra, and loves to tango and rhumba. Her favorite sport is swimming and diving, (what a silly question we asked!) and she whispered that she likes to read the funnies, 'specially "The Phantom"—then she wrinkled her nose and smiled.

Last month, she defended her title against the country's best. She bowed to 18 year old Marjorie Gestring, former Olympic champion. Although she gave up her National Outdoor title to Miss Gestring, Helen still has her National Indoor title.

Helen's favorite dish is strawberry shortcake with whipped cream!

Aileen Kinkel WAA Coach

An extensive and interesting program is promised to students who join the Women's Athletic Association, this semester by Bertha May Keller, faculty adviser to the organization.

The association also introduces this year a new instructor, Aileen Kinkel, formerly of the University of California. Considered an expert in practically every sport, Miss Kinkel will have charge of swimming, tennis, rifle, dancing and ice skating, in each of which she excells. Miss Kinkel replaces Vera Spencer Olsen, who at present is in Sweden.

Barbara Smith, president of WAA, issued a greeting to all new and old students. "If you like stimulating competition, good fun and comradeship, join us in coeducational athletics, intercollegiate sports days, and our other club activities," she said, "and members of WAA who have won their highest award, the "blazer" will gladly show new students the fundamentals of WAA."

Friday afternoons from 2 to 4 p.m. have been reserved for recreation in the Women's Gym. Tournaments, contests, co-recreation and playdays have been charted for this day. These afternoons will also be spent challenging the men students to such sports as badminton, tennis, table tennis and others, Miss Keller indicated.

Newly revived in the athletic realm is the fast growing sport of field hockey. This game is considered the equivalent of men's football, and is being played extensively up and down the Pacific Coast. New equipment has already been obtained for this sport, and is expected to be one of the more popular ones in the college.

Tradition will be broken this year when the semi-annual splash party will be substituted by a Sports Spread, a barbecue picnic to be held at Sigmund Stern Grove. Like the splash party, the picnic is open to all women of the college. At this time, members will be introduced to the officers of the WAA and to the instructors.

The WAA has issued a program sheet obtainable from athletic instructors or in the gymnasium. All women of the college are urged to sign for some sort of athletics by next week, Miss Keller said.

IN SYMPATHY

It is with a feeling of sadness and condolence that we extend our sincerest sympathy to Head Coach George Malley of the University of San Francisco upon the loss of his wife last week.

Coach Malley, although not personally known to us, has long had an enviable reputation as an excellent coach and sportsman and we are sure that all those who read this join with us in extending sympathy.

Football Coming Up

It won't be long now until the scenes snapped last semester in this picture will be reenacted before crowds of cheering, stamping college rooters. Coach Lee Eisan is up to ears in work, trying to whip up a hard-hitting team. Coach Eisan doesn't want to say too much about the team's prospects yet; there have been some bad breaks and some good breaks already.

The coach does promise a team that will give those packed in the grandstands something to get up on their seats and yell about.

Ice Skating Class Begins Sept. 20 At Winterland

As the Winterland Ice Rink will not be opened until September 14, college ice skating classes will be deferred until that date, Joseph Williams, faculty adviser announced.

Skating periods of the WAA, the college Skating Club and the women's physical education class will be run concurrently Friday afternoons from 2 to 5 p.m. The Ice Skating Club boasts a membership of some 40 students, Williams continued. Special rates for the college skaters will be announced soon.

Among their many tentative activities, the skaters plan their semi-annual Ice Carnival to be held some time in January, Williams concluded.

Goof Football Abandoned; No Support, Facilities

"There will be no junior varsity football team this semester," announced assistant football coach Jack Gaddy last week. Though no definite reason was given for the abandonment of junior varsity competition, it was believed that there are not enough facilities in the new gym to accommodate another football team.

By their past performances, the Lambs have shown great promise as a football team. Leo Leggett, star quarterback of the Ram eleven last fall, originally played with the Lambs. Because of his stellar performance, Coach Lee Eisan quickly transferred him to the varsity team.

Last season the Lambs started off with a rush by downing Polytechnic and Commerce High Schools in a rush. A week later Eisan announced that the team was being abandoned because of lack of facilities and support.

Football Prospects
College Football Prospects Look Good As Practice Begins

By KEN REA

Despite the loss by ineligibility of two of last year's lettermen, football practice will start with the beginning of instruction, said Lee Eisan, college football coach.

Leo "Legs" Leggett and Aguinaldo Vernon, two of last year's lettermen, have failed to maintain a scholastic standing that would enable them to participate in athletics, Eisan revealed.

Prospects for the coming season are not as dark as the plight of Vernon and Leggett, indicated the coach. From the returning students he numbered 26 footballmen, with expectations for more by the close of registration.

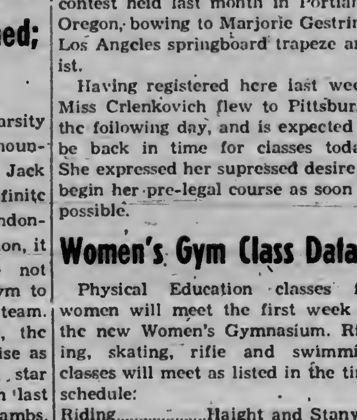
Cunningham, Meyers Back

Foremost among the 26 he named Dave Cunningham, Clark Johnson, Laurence Lowell, Kenneth Hagen, E. Albert Larrecou, George Meyers, Herbert Taylor, Tom Reilly Richard Wilson, and Bill Windler.

Already enrolled and yearning for action are Elwood Bernstein, David Cunningham, Clark Johnson, Merle McFarlane, Elsmere Crase, Parshel Hayes, Laurence Lowell, Jack Medrano, Robert Hufnagel, Kenneth Hagen, Bill Juzix, E. Albert Larrecou, George Meyers, Herbert Taylor, Richard Clayton, Stanley Young, Jim Paulsen, Tom Reilly, Richard Wood, Richard Wilson, Walter Prugh, Bill Windler, Gene Takei, Henry Suerstadt, Warner Nelson, and Manager Johnny Bareis.

No Lineup Yet

Eisan refused to release a tentative line-up for the Placer game on September 20. He pleaded that he needed more time to see if any of his returning men had improved and to get a line on the entering aspirants to gridiron glory.



H. Crlenkovich Flies Eastward

Helen Crlenkovich, the college's own diving star, flew to Kennywood Park in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, last week-end for an exhibition in diving for the Croation National Convention held in that city.

Two exhibitions, on August 31 and September 2, were given by the former holder of the National Outdoor championship and present holder of the National Indoor title. Miss Crlenkovich took second in the Outdoor contest held last month in Portland, Oregon, bowing to Marjorie Gestring, Los Angeles springboard trapeze artist.

Having registered here last week, Miss Crlenkovich flew to Pittsburgh the following day, and is expected to be back in time for classes today. She expressed her supressed desire to begin her pre-legal course as soon as possible.

Grid Season Opens Sept. 20

By KEI HORI

Football season is but a few days old, but within a short time, the college will play host to the Mountaineers from Placer way, when an invasion is planned the eve of September 20 under the canned sunlight of Seals Stadium.

Because unofficial announcements say that there has been a change in the coaching staff at Placer, predictions are almost impossible. If there has been such change, the system would likely be changed also; hence, comparison to last year's games would be without a spine.

Last Year—20-0

Last year's Ram victory, the tune a high ringing 20 to 0, was no push-over, although two of the three touchdowns were made in the first eight minutes of play. From that time, the Rams were pushed and pulled with equal vigor, and many times the rugged mountain boys had the Rams kicking to cover.

Coach Leland G. Eisan, Ram porkhide mentor, has been working his men since the beginning of registration. Summer lumps have been removed by light workouts as students have run in the halls to register. Spring practice showed considerable weak spots which Coach Eisan hopes to fill through shifting positions and new students.

No News From Placer

Still, without definite news from Placer, the first game is in the hands of Fate. The Ram team itself has not yet been solidified, and probably will not be until mid-season. To be remembered is that Placer has always given the Rams a fight. This time will be no exception.

Rifle Team Optimistic; McFarland Urges Sign-ups

To shoot the college to glory is the aim of the college rifle team of the fall of 1940, Captain Fred McFarland, faculty adviser for the team, announced to students during registration.

In their spacious gallery directly under the steps of the Science Building, the sharpshooters will hold their bi-weekly classes. Elementary and advanced classes for men will be held at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday respectively.

As yet, future plans and contests have not been definitely charted, McFarland announced, but will be released soon in the two classes.

"As rifle is listed as a minor sport in the college," McFarland said, "students who are interested in receiving their Circle awards for sports should be advised to see Charles North, acting captain of the college team, or me."

Political Strategy

Propaganda Made All-Year Project

(From Associated Collegiate Press)

Chief difference between the organization of propaganda in American and British political parties is that the British make it practically a year-round job, while Americans wait until the presidential year before there is a determination of party strategy and before an effort is made to coordinate and implement the work of a headquarters publicity bureau.

That was the point made by Ralph D. Casey, chairman of the department of journalism at the University of Minnesota, at a meeting of the Minnesota Association for Applied Physchology.

Increase

In Business Enrollment Is Expected

Enrollment in the college business courses this fall will undoubtedly show an increase over that of last semester, corresponding to the larger number of students registering last week, F. Grant Marsh, coordinator of the business division, declared.

Concerning the importance of thorough training as a means of securing a position, Mr. Marsh emphasized, "There are places in the business world for students who are properly trained and qualified. As in the business world there are a large number of applicants for each position that becomes available, therefore employers are able to raise their standards for employment, and we in business education must necessarily meet the standards set by them."

Pointing to the thus far justified statement of the business department, "To date all properly qualified students have been placed in full-time positions in business offices"—Mr. Marsh added that a larger number of students had been given permanent employment right along the past semester, and that similar placements will be made in the next few months.

Changes in the spelling and vocabulary building course and in retail merchandising were noted by Mr. Marsh. The first has been expanded to a two semester course, but as in the past, only one semester's work is required of business majors. Classes in merchandising will meet daily this semester instead of twice daily.

Call To Colors

23 From Military Classes Leave For Camp Ord Soon

Military Science classes within the college have been discontinued for the next 12 months, James S. Hughes, class instructor announced last week.

This move was found necessary after the passage of a bill authorizing the President to call out the National Guard. Enlistment in the 250th Coast Artillery is compulsory for students taking the military science course. The 250th Coast Artillery is expected to be called for one year's active service on or about September 15.

The course conducted at the college is designed to teach students the principles of modern warfare insofar as the coast artillery is concerned. Completion of the two year course with recommendation from the instructor qualifies the student for a reserve officers commission as a second lieutenant.

"The college course has proved very popular with many students and we are sorry that it must be discontinued," Hughes said.

Among the activities of the course were occasional field trips to army posts for the inspection of equipment. Several such field trips were undertaken last semester.

Students of the college scheduled to leave for Camp Ord, near Monterey, with the 250th Coast Artillery this month are: Jack Medrano, Harold Unterberger, Harold Steele, George Donavan, Russell Monroe, Fred Onich, Stan Doughty, Edward Terzian, John Rahmann, Eugene Senter, John Proctor, Samuel Ware, Richard Miller, Edward Nylund, John Lezar, William Cuter, Bob Sykes, Thomas Sullivan, Howard Knapp, Phil Burroughs, Ned Perand, Lawrence Power, and Ernest Rhodes.

Bill Frantz, Guardsman editor in Fall 1939, will also be called for service.

They Respond to President's Call

Pictured above are several members of last year's military science class in the plotting room of the national guard armory at 14th and Mission St. Students of the college drilled and learned the principles of coast artillery firing with the 250th coast artillery every Wednesday night. On September 15th, the regiment will leave for Camp Ord for one year's service, taking the men pictured above with them.

Entrance Exams Given To New Students To Suggest Future Vocations; Neophytes Tested For Ability

To aid students in selecting their respective vocations, the psychology department, at the beginning of each semester marshalls its forces and puts new students through a series of five tests: The Subject A examination, the Strong Vocational Interest Test, a psychology examination, High School achievement Test and a reading test.

From these examinations the psychology department, according to Harold Luenberger, psychology instructor, endeavors to gather enough knowledge about the abilities of a student to make it possible for the faculty adviser to use this information and to guide the student into a vocation which will personally suit him.

The most important test is the Subject A Examination. If this course is failed, the student must enroll in a course of English which is entitled English A or Subject A. One out of three students passes this examination, it is claimed.

An additional test in reading is also given. The student is given a paragraph to read and, in a certain amount of time, he must answer questions on the material read.

Club Advisory Board

Club Interest Is Checked By Bob Ogg

Students who wished to join a club this semester were given an opportunity to express their preference at the time of registration through blanks provided by the Club Advisory Board.

Names of students who show their interest will be sent to the clubs which they check, according to Bob Ogg, CAB president, so that they may be notified of future meetings.

Activities of the club board, as tentatively anticipated by Ogg, will probably include the publication of "Cabby", a CAB rally, and possibly some social function, he revealed. A $115 budget, approved last week by the Executive Council, will also allow for the printing of membership cards.

Orientation Activities

Smoker, Tea, Two Dances Scheduled For Next Week

Plans for Orientation Week from September 10 through September 13 are now completed, according to Lyle Shultz, Associated Students' president.

"Our program includes class elections, a general rally, the Associated Men Students and Associated Women Students Collegiate Mixer, separate affairs, and the Low Freshman Dance," Shultz said.

All Student Rally Tuesday

A rally for all students will be held on the steps of the administration building at 11 o'clock on September 10, he declared. This rally is to be followed by various class nominations and election assemblies in rooms assigned by the election committee.

Under the leadership of Virginia Hubbert and Ted Theodiss, the AWS and AMS will present the semi-annual Collegiate Mixer informal tea dance in the Women's Gymnasium from 3 o'clock to 5 o'clock of September 11, Shultz announced. The dance is meant to introduce men and women of the college.

Tea, Smoker Scheduled

The AWS tea honoring freshman women will take place at 4 o'clock in the cafeteria on September 12, and the AMS smoker for all men students is scheduled for 9 o'clock September 10, in Room 100, he said.

The AMS is going to sponsor a series of athletic contests in the field at 3 o'clock on Friday, September 13, according to Shultz. Contests will be between men of the freshman and sophomore classes, and they will include a tug of war, sack races, and jump the elephant, according to present plans.

Closing activities for the week will be the semi-annual Low Freshman dance in the Women's Gymnasium from 8 o'clock to 12 under the direction of Jean Arnold, Associated Students vice-president.

Dance To Be Informal

"Although this affair is traditionally semi-formal, this semester we are adopting a 'Ramshackle' theme for the dance," Miss Arnold said. "In other words the dance is to be very informal and sports clothes will be quite appropriate."

As is customary, admission to the dance will be by one student body card per couple, she added.

Registration Books May Be Filed Early

The importance of handing in registration books or official study lists at the time was emphasized this week by Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

"To avoid standing in the usual lengthy line, students may file their registration books—signed by their faculty adviser—previous to the date stamped on the cover of their book," Miss Learnard said.

Books may be filed in the library, Room 314, on September 10 and 11.

Those planning to be graduated at the end of this semester should file their petitions for graduation at the earliest possible time, Miss Learnard requested. She explained that immediate filing is necessary so that any possible program changes may be easily made.

Graduation petitions should be delivered to the registrar's office.

MONDAY HOLIDAY

Monday, September 9, Admission Day, will be observed as a college holiday, according to word received from the registrar's office. As a result no Guardsman will be published the following day. The next issue will be Friday, September 13.

AWS To Hold Tea Thursday

To welcome all new women students to the college, the Associated Women Students will sponsor a tea in the cafeteria at 3:30 o'clock on September 12, Virginia Hubbert, AWS president, announced today.

"All women are cordially invited to attend this affair," Miss Hubbert declared. We are hoping for an unusually large attendance this semester."

Asked to serve as hostess for the event were Mary Frances Malone, Loretta Egan, Marion McKillop, Jean Arnold, Barbara Brown, Mercedes Dahleen, Betty McKinnon, Anita Welt, Barbara Smith, June Holmes, Edith Callaghan, Aspasia Vasilatos, Dorothy Trood, Mary Bartholomew, Margaret Hager, Sue Richardson, Helen Wilson, Betty Fox, Mildred Bartosiewski, Gladys Young, and Dorothy Obermeser.

"I should like to ask those women whose names appear above to meet me at the cafeteria at least a half hour before the time at which the tea is scheduled to be served," Miss Hubbert said.

The tea is a semi-annual affair, planned chiefly to help orient new women students to college activities.

"Our tentative plans call for representatives of the Home Economics Association, Women's Athletic Association, The Guardsman, and the A Cappella Choir to give brief talks on their respective activities," Miss Hubbert declared. "However, at this time we do not have the names of the speakers for publication."

In addition to the representatives of the various organizations, Miss Hubbert said that she would also introduce several faculty members, among them Margaret Dougherty, dean of women, and Flossita Badger, music instructor at the college.

"We have not a complete list of faculty guests to give out at this time," she added, "but it is customary to have all women instructors who are interested in AWS activities."

Judicial Committee Will Enforce Card Ruling

A new ruling that all officers in any student organizations and all participants in athletics or other activities sponsored by the Associated Students must be members of the Associated Students was revealed this week by Edward Hardies, newly appointed chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Hardies also announced the names of those serving on his committee as follows: Jean Arnold, Barbara Brown, Henry Suerstedt, and Stanley Ward. This committee is expected to meet today to discuss future policies, especially in regard to the misuse of Associated Student cards.

"Cards illegally used will be confiscated," Hardies warned, "and the owners will be asked to attend a hearing before the Judiciary Committee."

The Judiciary Committee has jurisdiction, granted by the constitution, over cases of student misconduct in the campus or classroom. It is directly responsible to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

Dedication Of Building Set For Oct. 6

Although the plans for the program of the dedication of the college building are tentative, the date has definitely been set for Sunday, October 6, at 1 o'clock, announced Lloyd D. Luckmann, president of the Faculty Association.

American Legion To Assist

"A portion of the program," Luckmann said, "will be presented by students of the college in cooperation with the West of Twin Peaks Post of the American Legion."

For the most part, the dedication will take place outside the building, highlighted by the presentation of colors by the American Legion.

"There is a possibility that Mayor Angelo J. Rossi will officiate at the ceremonies in which President Archibald J. Cloud will accept the building for the members of the Board of Education and other civic dignitaries will also be present to witness the event.

Dinner To Honor Cloud

In honor of President Cloud, a dinner will be given for faculty members on Saturday evening, October 3, in the cafeteria.

This dinner is being given in connection with the dedication ceremonies on Sunday, Luckmann remarked.

CAB To Meet September 17; Members Urged To Attend

First meeting of the Club Advisory Board this semester has been set for Tuesday, September 17, at 2 o'clock by Bob Ogg, president of the group, who urged that all clubs in the college send a representative to the student body office, Room 169, at that time.

Petitions for renewal of charters are now available to those clubs which were in good standing in the CAB last semester, he announced, and may be obtained in Room 169 up to September 10, after which date they will be placed in the faculty advisers' boxes. Other clubs desiring affiliation with the club board are advised to make the necessary arrangements through a representative at the meeting scheduled.

"I have been advised that all members on the Club Advisory Board should also hold membership in the student body," Ogg declared. "This provision is reasonable, since the CAB functions under the Associated Students and receives its funds from that source."

He asked also that clubs hand in the names of their officers both for publication in "Cabby," which may possibly be issued this month, and also for convenience in contacting the various organizations.

Names of students compiled from blanks filled in during registration by them have been sent to the clubs in which they show interest, Ogg revealed. Clubs are encouraged to use these lists.

College Bank Open Today From 10 A.M. To 2 P.M.

To handle effectively an unusual volume of student business, the college bank, located in Room 188, will be open today from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. instead of from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. as usual, Michael Zarchin, assistant controller to the bank, announced.

Next week the bank will go back on its usual schedule.

At the present time students may purchase Associated Student cards, Municipal car tickets, and gym lockers at the bank, Zarchin said. Market Street cards must be obtained from the railway company direct.

The large lines observed before the bank this week were largely owing to lack of personnel and the requirement that purchasers of car tickets sign a form when buying them. This procedure, inaugurated this semester by the Municipal Railway Company, is meant to lessen abuse of the tickets by persons not privileged to use them rather than college students.

Tickets for social events and athletic contests will also be handled through the bank.

The bank is managed by Ward Nichols, officially titled college comptroller.

Student Politics

Class Elections To Be Held Next Tuesday Morning

Class nominations and elections will take place immediately after the general student's rally next Tuesday morning, September 10, Mary Frances Malone, chairman of the class election committee declared today.

"Low freshmen are scheduled to meet in the cafeteria, high freshmen in Room 100, low sophomores in Room 136, and high sophomores in Room 204," Miss Malone announced.

According to present plans, the various class nominations and elections will be held immediately after their class meetings promptly after the rally by members of the election committee, Miss Malone said, requesting that full cooperation be given to them.

"We can't overemphasize the importance of these elections, and we would like to ask students to go to their class meetings promptly after the rally to speed up the general proceedings," she added.

Recently appointed to the committee were Pete Aydelotte, Loretta Egan, and Len Gross, Miss Malone disclosed.

Because of this semester's heavy registration, a record vote is expected by student leaders.

Library Housed In 314; Open From 8 A.M. To 5 P.M.

Open and ready for business is the college library, temporarily housed in Room 314.

An invitation to make the fullest use of the library was cordially extended to all by the new college librarian, Marcus Skarstedt. The library will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. A book-drop, adjoining the library entrance, has been provided for those wishing to leave books before or after closing hours.

"Students will facilitate library work if they turn their books into the desk when the library is open rather than use the book-drop," Skarstedt said. Should there be enough demand, Skarstedt added, the library hours might be extended.

All books will be on open stacks, that is, contrary to previous practices at Powell Street, students may select and remove books directly from the shelves.

Fines for overdue books will be "very reluctantly" imposed, Skarstedt remarked.

Skarstedt, who replaces Frances Colligan this semester, has been active as a librarian in coast institutions for the past 20 years. He holds, among other degrees, a doctorate of philosophy from the University of California. His most recent posts as librarian have been at the California Polytechnic School and the Whittier Junior College.

Redford To Take NYA Applications This Week

Students wishing to secure employment with the National Youth Administration while in college are requested to apply to Edward H. Redford, in Room 148, any time this week.

"Funds and positions are limited so the quicker the student makes out his application, the better the chances of getting a job," Redford said.

College Press Bureau Formed

Formation of a college publicity bureau to be handled by students of the college was disclosed last week by Lyle Shultz, Associated Student president.

Len Gross, Guardsman editor, was appointed as head of the bureau of external publicity and Hugh Waite, as chairman of internal publicity; Louis Goldstone, Guardsman associate editor has been appointed as chairman of the external publicity division.

Bureaus Have Proved Success

In commenting upon the announcement Shultz said, "Many colleges throughout the country have their own press bureau and have found such an organization very successful."

In previous years, college external publicity has been handled by a paid publicity man. Since there is a lack of funds this semester, the Executive Council did not deem it practical to hire a publicity agent this semester. The salary for a paid publicity man would come to approximately $300 and the Associated Students do not have the necessary funds for that purpose at this time.

Internal and External Bureaus Set Up

The bureau is to be divided into two sections, internal and external. The internal division will handle all publicity relating to college affairs within the college, such as putting up posters and signs advertising college dances and games. The external publicity section will handle the writing of press releases concerning the college to the metropolitan newspapers and to other colleges in the Bay Area.

Persons interested in working on either committee are requested to apply to Gross at the publications office, Room 134, anytime this week.

Aeronautics Course Still Open To College Sophs

"More students of sophomore standing in the college are urged to sign up for courses in Civil Aeronautics training," Captain George Richards, director Civilian Pilot Training, announced today.

According to Richards, even though those enrolled in ground courses are not selected for flying within a month or so, they must continue the course in which they have enrolled.

As a part of the college's C.A.A. summer program of training, 30 students from the University of California, Stanford, and the college were given instruction by Captain Richards at the San Francisco Municipal Airport.

Since only a few of the freshmen students enrolled in Aviation 11, are likely to be accepted for the more advanced course in flying, the need for the enrollment of students of sophomore standing is great, explained Richards. Name of the course for which sophomores should enroll is Aviation 2A.

Purpose of the C.A.A. training is to provide pilots for the nation. Some student pilots of the college will be eligible to receive their pilot licenses the latter part of this semester. Main requirement for the license is 35 hours of solo flying which can only be done by the student when he has completed eight hours of dual instruction in flying, Richards said.

Men Desirous Of Room, Board, Should See Browne

Men students desirous of obtaining rooms or room and board near the campus are requested to see Edwin C. Browne, dean of men in the college, in Room 123.

"Housing accommodations are conveniently located near the college in private homes," Browne said.

Women students wishing similar housing arrangements should apply to Margaret Dougherty, dean of women in the college, in Room 125.

Tryouts

Assistant Yell Leaders To Be Picked Today

Tryouts for assistant yell leaders will be held today at 3 p.m. in Room 100, Pete Adylotte, college head yell leader announced last week.

Two Yell Leaders Chosen

There will be two assistant yell leaders chosen, Adylotte revealed.

"For the tryouts, it will be perfectly all right for applicants to use one of their high school yells to demonstrate their ability," Adylotte said. "After the two assistants are chosen we will teach them the college yells," he continued.

It is the job of the head yell leader and his assistants to preside over the athletic rallies and create spirit at the athletic contests of the college.

Adylotte announced that Frosh buttons will be given to all freshmen students when they file their registration books.

Frosh Buttons Traditional

Frosh buttons are a tradition originated several semesters ago. All new students are given red and white buttons with "Frosh" stamped on them and are requested to wear these buttons during Orientation Week. There is no form of hazing connected with the buttons.

Erlenkovich Home; To Give Exhibition Sept. 14

Having returned early this week from an exhibition at the Croation National Convention in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, Helen Crlenkovich, college diving star, is now preparing for an exhibition at the Patterson High School on September 14, she said today.

"The exhibition in Pittsburgh was not out of the ordinary," she declared, confessing that she had flown so much this summer that the novelty has worn off for her.

The Patterson High School has asked her to give an exhibition in an attempt to stimulate interest in competitive swimming, especially among girls, Miss Crlenkovich added.

The National Indoor diving champion also said that she is practicing for an exhibition at Del Monte on September 18 and another at the Women's City Club on October 14.

No Lockers Available This Semester Says Mohr

Because of limited facilities, no lockers will be available to the regular students this semester, announced J. Paul Mohr, registrar, this week.

There are a few lockers available, however, for those extreme cases in which they are needed. Students in dire need of a locker are advised to see either Dean Margaret Dougherty or Dean Edwin C. Browne for applications, Mohr said.

If the deans approve the locker request, the student is then asked to see Edward H. Redford, building manager, for the combination. There is no charge for the locker, Mohr added.

Students Needed for Student Committees

All persons interested in working on Associated Student committees are requested to see Lyle Shultz, Associated Student president, some time this week in the student body office, Room 169, Shultz announced today. Positions are open on the Welfare Committee, Social Committee, and Judiciary Committee.

Band And Orchestra May Be Organized

With a view to organizing instrumental courses in the college, Flossita Badger, music instructor, asked any students who might be interested in either band or orchestral work to see her on Room 200 at their earliest convenience.

New Welfare Committee Appointed By Shultz

Names of the newly appointed Welfare Committee were released this week by Lyle Shultz, Associated Student president, as follows: Dan McHugh, chairman, Mary Bartholomew, Muriel Grenelle, Henry Suerstedt, and Dorothy Trood. The committee is now working on plans for a college year book. Anyone having previous experience with year books is requested to see Shultz.

Rivera Mural Becomes Target Of Club Women

MEMBERS of the City and County Federation of Women's Clubs recently announced that they are opposed to the Diego Rivera mural destined someday to adorn the walls of the college library.

The organization expressed its intention of seeing that the mural is kept out of the college because it might be a subversive influence on the students of the college.

It seems that the members object to the portion of the mural which depicts a pair of dictators.

Perhaps it would be well to explain fully the theme of the mural as now planned.

The whole idea is that of showing the relationship between the cultures of North America and the cultures of South America with the thought that these two are inter-related and should be drawn closer together. In the central part of the mural is a figure, half of which is an ancient Mexican God, and the other half a modern American machine to show how the two continents are linked together.

The mural also shows the part women playing in modern life, as doctors, lawyers, engineers, and other professional occupations.

The only part that refers to the dictators is one small corner of the mural where the dictators and swastikas are pictured. THE POINT IS, THE DICTATORS ARE USED MERELY TO ILLUSTRATE THE POWERS OF FORCE, HATE, AND VIOLENCE THAT THEY REPRESENT. This is the only section of the mural where any discrimination against anybody or anything is shown and this is done in connection with dictatorship and totalitarianism, violence and brute force.

The club members oppose the mural on patriotic grounds, claiming it would have "a subversive influence on highly impressionable youth seeking an education." There is no doubt that it would create an impression. The impression would be far from subversive, however; it would be an impression of disgust and horror, linked with a determination to keep the sort of things dictators stand for out of the United States.

That portion of the mural should be there to serve as a reminder to every free person that dictatorship and violence go hand in hand. Banishing the mural from the college walls won't keep the students from reading and hearing about dictators. This is an institution of learning. One of the things we should learn is that hate, force, and violence have no place in America. In years to come, when we hope the world will be at peace again, that portion of the mural will serve as a warning signal in the minds of all who see it, a warning never to accept the creeds of a dictator because of what follows in his wake.

There is also another objection from the Women's Club. It claims that an American artist should have been asked to do the mural. It seems to have forgotten that art knows no nationalities or religions. Does it matter what race claims the man who is an artist if his works are great and given to all the world to enjoy?

Diego Rivera has been acknowledged as one of the greatest living artists, yet the clubwomen feel he shouldn't be doing the mural. That argument is hardly valid. Rivera is a Mexican. Rivera is also a great artist. It will be one of the greatest things for the college in years to come to say that the famous Rivera did the mural on the library wall. One of the best artists in the world is doing something that will live forever and yet there is objection because he happened to be born south of the Texas border.

Where is this sense of tolerance, of freedom, of equality that we hear so much about in books and churches? Are these but empty words spoken to fill the ears of innocent Sunday school children, or do they really mean something?

Isn't there enough intolerance, hate, racial discrimination, and discord in the world today without adding to it here in America, the last and only stronghold of free speech, and freedom of religious worship?

The time is fast approaching when we will have to decide whether the ideals we have upheld for 200 years are merely so many empty words or really count for something. This controversy over Diego Rivera is but a prelude of these things which we hope will never come.

Student Card Lenders Subject To Penalty

DURING Orientation Week, as in weeks to follow, several social events have been planned which will require an Associated Student card for admittance. To guarantee to those owning Associated Student cards that their membership in the Associated Students is worthwhile, an identification committee will be on hand at all of these functions to see that only those rightfully possessing cards enter.

Inevitably, someone not possessing a student card finds a "friend" from whom he can borrow one. Inevitably, also, the identification committee apprehends the wrongdoer, and confiscates the misused student card.

Out of this situation the illegal user of the card finds himself on hardly agreeable terms with his "friend"; and the owner of the card, or the "fall guy"—for that's what he really is, —is requested to appear before the student judicial committee to explain his act.

A simple moral is easily derived now: Do not, on any account, lend your Associated Student card to anyone!

If a person is really your friend, he will not ask to borrow your student card.

Remember, the brief personnel description on your Associated Student card should bring 100 per cent efficiency to the identification committee this semester.

Lastly, READ OVER THE PLEDGE ON THE BACK OF YOUR CARD; YOU SIGNED YOUR NAME TO IT.

Class Elections Called For Student Cooperation

EACH semester's class elections have always had a strong influence upon student activities at the college, but there have never been elections more important in potentiality than those which are to take place next Tuesday.

In the past, officers have been hindered primarily by a disorganized student group. Consequently, this semester's officers will face the resultant problem of fusing various student groups into a unified entity, a task which will obviously require above the average ability and diligence.

It is therefore urgent for students to stop now to think clearly about candidates and their suitability for office holding before casting ballots indiscriminately. The molding of college policy will be in the hands of those men and women who will be elected Tuesday; and, unfortunately, a high "glamor" rating does not always insure one's ability to be an officer.

Start thinking now about those whom you wish to elect—then analyze your reasons for wanting them in office. If you find that you are valuing appearance and old friendships over capability, look around for another candidate.

The college needs intelligent leaders. It's up to you to elect them!

Meet The Students

By THE EDITOR

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of columns devoted to the ordinary college student. Each week, a student will be picked at random from the halls and interviewed. Maybe next week it will be you or one of your friends.

Since the college is starting this semester in a big way with a brand new building, it is only right that this column should start in a big way also. This week, therefore, instead of interviewing one person, as is customary, three were singled out for questioning.

Three freshmen women on their first day of classes. First on the list is blonde Betty De Lu. Betty has an attractive smile and blue eyes that seem to snap with vitality. She comes from George Washington High School and is 17.

When asked the question "What do you think of the new building?" Betty answered quickly, "Bewildering, but swell." As a post script she added "I think George Washington is more ornate, however."

Miss De Lu is majoring in journalism and English of all things. An attempt was made to persuade her to change her major to something a little more peaceful and less hectic, like home economics for example, but it did no good.

Sports interest Betty a great deal and she considers them her favorite hobby.

As to her opinion of the men of the college: "I think they dress nicely and look very rugged."

Next in line is Virginia Summerville, another freshman co-ed from George Washington. Virginia is also 17, has blue eyes and brown hair.

The Spectator

SPECTATOR presents a noteworthy first by panning "South of Pago Pago" and booming "Boom Town" in the same column.

Taking the sweet before the bitter, one must admit that M.G.M. had great courage to take four of its most expensive stars and place them in a $2,000,000 production, especially with movie markets crumbling abroad and home grosses gradually diminishing.

Metro's gamble in the field of high-budget entertainment succeeds with a definite bang, "Boom Town" is first rate, and it deserves bouquets in all respects. Director Jack Conway has taken a vivid, fast moving story of the oil industry and turned out a thrilling, frequently moving picture that exhibits nary a dull spot. This cavalcade of the oil-fields is seen through the eyes of Spencer Tracy and Clark Gable, a couple of rough, fist-swinging pals who carry on in the manner of Quirt and Flagg. Bums one day, they find themselves millionaires the next, as they stake their rolls on the chance of an incoming gusher.

Their loves, fights, and tribulations form the panoramic background to the spectacle of men combing the earth for "black gold." Clandette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr are the women leads and contribute nicely subdued portrayals. Acting, however, doesn't give "Boom Town" its excellent rating. Rather it is the swift-moving, dramatic story that sweeps it along to a satisfactory climax.

Swinging immediately from the sublime to the ridiculous, Spectator taes a brief glance at "South of Pago Pago," the newest attempt on the part of Hollywood to probe into the what-whats of South Sea life.

"South of Pago Pago" suffers by what has gone before. There have been so many of these sarong dramas in recent months (remember Dorothy Lamour) that another film of that type must present a plot with some radical difference or suffer the label of triteness.

"South of Pago Pago" is trite. It's been done before in various ways so that every plot maneuver is easily foreseen by the audience. It's all about a peaceful South Sea island with a handsome native hero (Jon Hall) and his island sweetheart (Olympe Bradna) wafting away in an idyllic existence. Villains in the guise of pearl-hunters enter the scene, trick the naive natives (a cute term) and horribly defraud the poor creatures. It is all straightened out in a bloody conflict.

Sounds familiar, doesn't it? Frances Farmer as the white girl with the gang of thieves does some nice emoting. The rest of the cast plays stereotyped roles. Still, however, the film does take your mind off that European fracas for an hour or so—perhaps our opinions are savored a little too harshly.

"Boom Town" and "South of Pago Pago" serve to illustrate a fact that has long been dormant in many producers' brains—the story is the thing. A picture can have great acting, magnificent production, big sweeping sets, etc., but if the plot isn't basically sound, it is starting behind the eight ball. Both films are examples of care and workmanship, but "Boom Town" has the strength in its story and there the similarity ceases.

ACP Quotable Quotes

YOU cannot save democracy by military victories. A democratic government depends upon the disposition of the masses of the people. If the masses have the will and the opportunity to rule themselves then you will have democracy. This is the real school of Hitlerism is teaching German liberals to be more realistic, less sentimental, more aware of their power and privileges. They see now, since the alliance with Soviet Russia, that anti-semitism was a fraud to deceive the German people who do not bear the Jews ill-will.—Dr. Arthur Rosenberg, exiled from the University of Berlin, predicts internal strife will eventually end Nazi oppression.

American college students are different from all other people on this planet; they are the only people who try to get as little as possible for their money. They will spend the most valuable years of their lives, thousands of dollars of their parents' money and some of their own if they can get any, in trying to derive as little as possible out of their college courses, provided only that they will receive their coveted diploma at the end of four years of such efforts.—Edwin F. Malone On The Feminine Side

ACCORDING to Carl Sandburg, fog "creeps in on little cat feet." As bitterly disillusioned women, students of this college can contest his statement without authority.

San Francisco fog does not creep in, Mr. Sandburg. It rolls, flows, gushes or even blankets, but it most assuredly does not concern itself with anything as subtle as creeping.

Inspiration for all this came from staring out of the Publications window at the new common-place sight of women battling their way up what certain of our more flippant conferees have christened "Pseudomonis Mountain." They're quite a spectacle with madly billowing skirts, as they try to carry books and pin down short skirts, while the fog gleefully pulls out the last traces of curl from their hair.

From this almost daily struggle with the elements, there has come a desperate resolution to do something—anything—about the hair problem. Several schools of thought on the matter are now extant, but as yet no completely satisfactory answer has been found.

There are, of course, the Peasant Scarf groups who nonchalantly tie their hair "up" beneath a brightly colored bandana and literally breeze up the hill. Once at the campus, they contend, all that remains to be done is to remove "pins, curlers, and assorted articles from one's hair, and to comb it all out. Simple? Yes, but the members of the Scarf Movement forget that scarves are most unbecoming to most women, among them your reporter who looks like the slum gleaner in the steerage of a very inferior refugee ship whenever she rashly attempts one. No, the scarf isn't the answer by a long shot.

A variation on the same theme is formed by the Turban groups who firmly believe that they have the formula for glamor and practicability at one fell swoop. Say what they will, there's still something incongruous about a tweed suit topped by a Lamarr-ish turban. And there is something definitely startling about even a pretty face which seems to belong to a bald-headed woman.

Ignoring the matter completely is the hope that natural beauty is the best way, after all, are the girls who do nothing about the problems. They flout happily about the campus, apparently unaware of the fact that their hair straggles in wispy bits and that their look is if their mothers were frightened by a very bad picture of Garbo. But maybe they'll set a new and decidedly different style at least until spring, sunshine, and warm, balmy days invade Balboa Park (say we crossing our fingers, toes, and eyes —no mean stunt).

Meanwhile the women of the college are confronted by a dilemma. Does anyone know the price of a "Butch"?

● We Blush With Delight

Editor, The Guardsman:

Reading my first issue of The Guardsman, I found somewhat to my surprise that your publication is on a par if not better than those of many college publications.

I especially enjoyed reading Miss Malone's column and Shots at Ramdom, written by Borrie Hyman.

The fact that a paper was published the first day of classes is a point upon which your staff is to be commended. Although I myself am not connected with journalism I can understand the hours of work it must take to publish The Guardsman. I hope you continue the rest of the semester in the same excellent vein of the first issue.

Sincerely yours,

J. B.

Editors note: Thanks for the bouquets. We'll try to live up to your expectations.

● Imagination Happens Here

Editor, The Guardsman:

Like many others, our sentiments in the way of a President for these United States are inclined more and more toward the likeable Wendell Willkie, so the following is not to be construed as opposition to the Republican candidate. It is merely a passing thought (without form or substance, we hope) that struck us the other day, and may be indicative to some of slight irregularities in our thought processes.

This child of our imagination (imagination is—phoney?) was inspired by the general prediction that should President Roosevelt be elected to a third term, he will make himself dictator of this Nation—possibly in the manner portrayed in Sinclair Lewis' "It Can't Happen Here"—and in supposition runs like this:

A President—our imagination has not identified him—puts himself up for a third term in office. Leaders of the party opposing him immediately call him a politician with a lust for power, and warn, on the basis of his former authoritative acts, that he will turn dictator if not curbed. They thereupon produce their own candidate—also unidentified by our, etc.—whom they declare to be not a politician but an able business man who will conduct the affairs of the Nation in a businesslike and democratic manner. Thousands of public sentiment sweeps the new candidate into office, and he assumes the authority of Chief Executive of the United States.

The new President, however, while not a politician in the sense of experience, is ambitious, "catches on" quickly, and sincerely believes, like the inspired Adolf Hitler, that only a concentration of power in the hands of one man will save his country from ruin and elevate it to a position of indisputable leadership among the nations of the world.

He works toward this aim, therefore, and through methods which the people had feared the former President would use, finally makes

Shots At RAMdom . . .

UNFORTUNATELY, we weren't so ephemeral after all. The editor said, "Write it again." So, in deference to popular demand and the threats of the editor, we begin.

Rumor has it—rumor has so many things that we thought it wouldn't mind our snatching one little topic —anyway, rumor has it that Herbert George Wells, known to the masses as H. G. Wells, plans a lecture tour in this country some time before the end of the year. If you think this acme of prognosticators will lower himself to plebian cloud-hopping to arrive here, you just don't know the real Herbert George Wells. (But does anyone really know the real Mr. Wells.) No less than a submarine is being considered to bring Mr. Wells safely across the ocean. On his arrival in California, Mr. Wells is expected to go into a transcendant huddle with that bearded bundle of precocious intellect, Orson Welles. They say—they asked that their names be withheld—that Wells and Welles contemplate doing a script for a morning radio serial to be sponsored by Herbert Baby Food. Herbert's, we also hear, is dickering with Baby Sandy for the lead.

Just to inject a note of congruency into this stuff, we had our Picadilly and Hollywood correspondents flash us the latest development in the hectic lives of these preeminent men.

From across the water, Angus MacBloomberg cables the following:

"H. G. Wells broke a three-month silence yesterday regarding the reason for his disinclination to bomb shelters. Sententiously explained Mr. Wells, 'There is no future in them'."

By smoke signals from the city where all are not diamonds that glitter but usually unreasonable facsimiles, Jonathan S. Wiggbotham puffs this interesting sidelight on genius:

"Orson Welles, half man, half Martian, is now stroking his left cheek instead of his elongated stubble these days. It seems an overly suspicious waitress misunderstood Mr. Welles when he absent-mindedly signed his check, 'I remain, obediently yours'."

In this case our sympathies are with the working girl. In fact, we ran into one the other day—bruising her slightly only. She works behind the greasy screen of Tony's Grotto. (Special Pink Plate Lunch 22¢ on Tuesdays.) She's responsible for that slimy feeling on the cutlery.

"You know," said Miss Plotts—we shall call her Miss Plotts—as she daintily shoved a half piece of chewing gum into her mouth with five gayly colored imitations of a mandarin's long nails—we kept the other half—"I'm sick and tired of washing of dishes for a living. I wanta get somewheres."

Those are simple words aren't they? But, America, they express the driving ambition of this country. We managed to investigate Miss Plotts' her aspiration. In a poorly modulated voice, she modestly rasped, "I'm waiting for an opening in the perfume counter of Nacky's Bargain Basement."

Yes, America, in the words of this doughty if slightly dumpy young thing do we find a symbol on which to base our hopes for the future.

While on the subject of spirit, we have it on good authority that the following yell is actually used by an English college.

King's College, King's College, rah, rah, rah!
How's your father?
Can we play cricket?
Rather, rather.
King's, King's, King's!

Who said the English are lacking in brig?

RAMblings

By Kei Hori

Biggest eye-opener of the week came from Marin Junior College in Kentfield where the coaching staff of '40 is enough to make a Sunday evening quarter-back hold his tongue for breath.

Head football coach for the Marjners happens to be Vic Bottari, the all-Aremican half from U. C., line coaching. Blockers are under the guidance of Dave Anderson, another all-American from U. C., as well as Perry Schwartz, also of the same class as Anderson and Bottari assisting the latter. Dutch Clymer, who is coaching the backfield, was formerly of U. C. and is also a member of the advising faculty. Sam Chapman, another all-American, is expected shortly—after his willow swinging career for this season is over.

Even though Marin is not in our league, and is not listed as one of our opponents, what with all those U. of Cal. all-Americans, they should be among the tops in the B league, and a possibility of them moving up to the A's is not all together improbable. Is it?

Head manager Johnny Baries is all muddled. He is the waterboy, quartermaster, and Coach Lee Eisan's right hand, man. His assistants are like the executive editor is to the editor. No use. What with all the new equipment, his vigilant eyes are all but crossed in trying to keep them together.

Women swimmers are sprouting faster than devil-grass on our front lawn. Before their classes in the morning, feminine aquaducks go to the Y.W. on Sutter, and under Aileen Kinkel's direction, splash in all their glory. We hear tell the Aquacade of Rose's has influence, and women are pulling an Esther Williams together—swimming in formation, we mean.

Would-be Bess Erhardt's and Shipstad's are already oiling their skate runners and sharpening them, waiting for the rink at Winterland's to open. Remember the sensation it caused last year? If you got a chance to look at the ice while skating, you were considered lucky. Honest, it was almost impossible to fall down —there were that many people.

We asked nearly every freshman we saw what he thought of the new gymnasiums. Only one person thought 'twasn't so hot, and we later found he hadn't even seen the thing. Later, he claimed he'd ruther stay in the gym than at home. Those glass bricks are keen—and how, seeze. Miss Bertha M. Keller thanks de lawd she has an office where she can hang her hat.

Add co-educational class of riding: The back-breaking sport continues its jolting way as merrily. The Stanyan Street Stables, it has been rumored, has got hold of a few more cayuses. Which should interest the more hoss-minded students of the college.

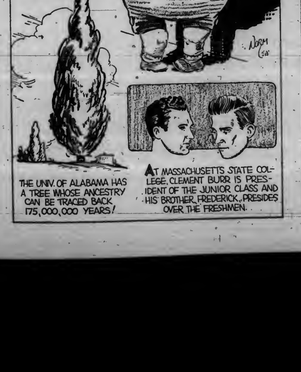
Open letter to Barbara Smith, WAA prexy:

What's this the WAA is doing? We hear they are having a song contest. We thought the WAA was an athletic club, Smitty. Can this be more of the versatile A. K.'s doings? Signed, K. H. sp. ed.



P. S. How's the Sandwich Spread coming? You can bring me back a sannrich or two. We won't bring lunch on Thursday, the 26th.

We have three out-of-town games this fall. The only trouble is that they are on three consecutive weeks. The Cal frosh game at Berkeley, followed by the long trek down south for the LACC'ans, and then the Sacramento encounter.

AMS Plans Semi-Annual Frosh Stag Party Tuesday At 8 P.M.

For the first time since the history of the college, the semi-annual AMS Smoker will be limited to freshmen. The function will be held in the North Lecture Hall, Room 100, at 8 p.m. Although the college cafeteria was originally obtained for the affair, last minute complications forced the abandonment of the hall, Ted Theodus, AMS prexy released today.

Under the advice of Tom Wilson, newly appointed AMS adviser, Theodus and his secretary, Bob Thollander, have planned the program as follows:

Introductions of attending faculty members, pep talks of different sports by their respective coaches, moving pictures and possibly the attendance of prominent athletic greats.

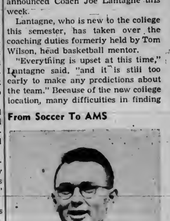
At this time, the college men students will get a formal introduction to the new coach, Joe Lantagne, substituting for Joe Amori. A Stanford man, Lantagne will handle soccer, boxing and instruct men's hygiene.

Among the athletic greats will be Walter "The Great" Mails, press agent for the San Francisco Seals, and Manager Frank "Lefty" O'Doul. Possibility of Ernie Smith, NBC sport broadcaster's attendance was also rumored.

Franklin P. Sewell, amiably hailed as "Doc" by his student friends, will deliver one of his famous "silly-loquies" as well as some of the Sewell System philosophy.

Highlighted will be a dancer acquired from the theatrical agency by Theodus, and a two-reeler sports short in sound, "Play Ball, America" released through the Chronicle.

Refreshments will be served, as well as a plentiful supply of smokes, Theodus said.



Soccer Signups Set For Tuesday

Tentative signup for this season's soccer team is scheduled for next Tuesday afternoon, September 10, announced Coach Joe Lantagne this week.

Lantagne, who is new to the college this semester, has taken over the coaching duties formerly held by Tom Wilson, head basketball mentor.

"Everything is upset at this time," Lantagne said, "and it is still too early to make any predictions about the team." Because of the new college location, many difficulties in finding practice facilities have to be ironed out, Lantagne said.

Next Tuesday's signup date is only tentative, Lantagne added, since lockers are being assigned this week, and he has to see how many players can be accommodated on the team.

The Jim Skinkiekers are members of two leagues, California Inter-collegiate Soccer League, and the northern California Junior College Conference. Among the colleges represented in these two leagues are California, Stanford, San Jose State, University of San Francisco, San Francisco State, Menlo, San Mateo, and Modesto Junior Colleges.

Despite last season's dismal fifth, Latagne hopes to show definite improvement. Part of his hopes include returning veterans Danny "Shadow-Mouse" McHugh, Ted Theodus, Dan Sweeney, Jimmy "Pirate" Moyes, John Lazar, Henry Kruetzmann, and one recruit, Truckman Bert Korn.

Moyes is ineligible for the conference games but will be in the Intercollegiate league games.

Lantagne has issued a call to all aspirants to soccer glory to report for duty before practice begins next Tuesday. Practice will be from 3 to 5 each afternoon.

Neophytes' Inspiration

Neophytes as well as old timers will try to immitate the above pictured former flying Ramette, Patty Robinson, in their respective swimming classes at the Y.W.C.A. pool. She is executing the most graceful, yet considered the most difficult of all dives, the swan.

Convenient for some students, the pool is on their way to the campus, and classes are being held in the morning. Swimming has been one of the more popular sports for the last few years, and is expected to grow under Aileen Kinkel's guidance.

Football Roster Lists 52 Prospective Gridsters

Fifty-two men are at present listed on the college football roster from which will be chosen the starting lineup for the Placer game, scheduled for Friday night, September 20, at Seals Stadium.

Tentative lineup for the Placer game will be released soon, announced head football coach Lee Eisan.

Although the college grid squad will suffer to some extent because of the loss of Leo "Legs" Leggett and Agulnado Vernon, two of last year's veterans, the grid team promises much in the way of competition to the other colleges, Eisan commented.

Following is a roster of the men who have signed up for the football squad at present:

Jefferson Pool To Be Used For College Swim Classes

Plans are being completed to obtain the Jefferson High School tank in Daly City for college swimmers, Louis G. "Dutch" Conlan said today.

Although an agreement has been signed by the college, it lacks only the signature of the high school officials. Also, an official o.k. must be obtained for use of funds to pay for use of the tank, Conlan said.

"Everything is still a little hazy on this matter," Conlan said. "But the outlook is favorable, and we hope to have everything straightened out so that news can be released by the next publication."

Intramural Sports Program Delayed Pending Survey

Pending a survey of physical equipment, the program for intramural sports has been delayed, announced Fred C. MacFarland, faculty adviser for intramural sports.

"When we know what we have to work with," MacFarland said, "the schedule will be planned to the maximum."

Before any intramural schedule can be started, staff organizations must be perfected, MacFarland also said.

Regulations Outlined As Women's Gymnasium Has Large Registration

Opened with a capacity registration of more than one thousand students, the women's gymnasium was surrounded this week with regulations designed to put the building and equipment to their fullest usage and satisfy to the utmost the interests of the women of the college.

Students meeting classes for the first time this week heard announcements concerning health examinations, attendance, times for classes, use of lockers, costume regulations, and general rules applicable to the building itself.

Health examinations, times for which were assigned during the registration process, are at present being given in Room 101 in the gymnasium under the direction of Dr. Alice Potter.

Students were warned that they are expected to attend each regular meeting of a class to complete the course satisfactorily. Participation in and knowledge of the activity, and improvement in skills are considered as a basis for grading physical education, Bertha Mae Keller, physical education instructor explained.

Class Times Adjusted

Length of the physical education classes was adjusted to allow students sufficient time to meet classes scheduled immediately following gymnasium activities in the main college building.

Lockers, assigned by instructors, may have locks which are available for the college bank or the book store, Miss Keller said.

Costumes, which for the class activities may be purchased at the college book store, also meet regulations concerning use of the showers, thereby obviating difficulties encountered in southern sections of the state. "No gang showers in San Francisco," Miss Keller emphasized.

Sports Costumes Individual

Golf, archery, riding, swimming, rifle and skating demand costumes according to the individual preference of the several accepted modes.

Notices of department business, conferences, and health examinations will be posted in the south lobby of offices. Particular interest was aroused in the request for cooperation in safeguarding the building.

Students were reminded that the women's gymnasium, as well as the men's gymnasium, grew out of the bond election of two years ago, when San Francisco turned out to vote its support of the college campus. Expression of the sentiment on the part of the college for this support was voiced by Miss Keller when she said:

"After five years of rambling it is nice to have a place to hang one's hat."

WAA Substitutes Spread For Usual Splash Party

Substituting for the traditional splash party, the Women's Athletic Association plans a Spread September 25 at Sigmund Stern Grove from 4:30 to 10 p.m., WAA leaders said this week.

Urged to attend are the newer students, for the purpose of the spread is to acquaint them with the WAA members, its officers and the sports that are being offered, Betty Teter, general chairman of the affair announced.

"Non-members as well as members, Freshmen and Sophomores, in fact all students are invited to attend. Further information may be obtained from any officer of WAA or the physical education instructors. Games and entertainments are being planned for the interest of everyone," Miss Teter said.

To be under discussion during the spread are the different sports, among which, field hockey has loomed the most prominent. Instructed by Aileen Kinkel, considered an expert at the sport, the game is believed to be the feminine equivalent to football: It includes all of the running and passing of football as well as the willow swinging of baseball and the shin-slugging of soccer. The more athletic type of women will find this sport to their taste, Bertha Mae Keller, WAA president said.

Also released by the Physical Education Department were plans for co-educational riding classes. The classes meet every Thursday afternoon at the San Francisco Riding Academy on Stanyan and Haight Streets, from 1:30 to 5 p.m. The fee is between $11 and $15 a semester.

"Many women students do not realize that they can swim free of charge at the Y.W.C.A. pool on Sutter Street on their way to the college," Bertha M. Keller, WAA adviser, said. "Classes meet at 9 and 9:30. WAA will meet at the latter time instead of the previously announced 10 a.m. Miss Kinkel has charge of Aquatics for women. Requests for water games and splash hours are already being made."

Northwestern Outlines Code For Spectators

EVANSTON, ILL.—(ACP)—Good sportsmanship is what players and spectators make it—and the Northwestern University Daily Northwestern has a code of its own for the sepctators.

Here is the program as recently promulgated for those who attended Wildcat basketball games:

1. Opposing players deserve the same treatment as our own players.
2. Officials may make mistakes, but they certainly deserve fair and courteous treatment.
3. Heckling of opposing players about to attempt free throws simply must not occur.
4. Good sportsmanship is as necessary in the stands as it is on the playing floor.

Frosh, Soph Women Vie In WAA Song Contest

Plans are being made for a song contest between the Freshmen and the Sophomores who are members of the Women's Athletic Association, according to Barbara Smith, president of WAA.

Each class is considered a team. Three songs are to be made up, and judged by popularity. The class submitting the best song wins. These songs are to be used for future WAA events, Miss Smith said.

Also announced was the sale of WAA sweat-shirts at the Student Body Store. "It is advisable for all women to secure one," WAA leaders warned. They are priced at $1.95 each.

Beginning Ice-Skaters To Practice In Gym

Until further notice, beginners in women's skating will meet every Friday in the women's gymnasium from 2 to 3:30 o'clock, and may practice after class until the ice-rink closes, Bertha Mae Keller, WAA adviser announced this week.

"This instruction is given to help beginners become familiar with the single rods on ice and to qualify for the Skating Club," Miss Keller said.

Winterland officials released the date for the opening to be on Saturday, September 14, hence all skating classes will have actual practice the following Friday, September 20. Men's skating as well as the coeducational class will also convene on that date.

Membership in the ice skating club is open to those in the classes. Tentative plans for the club is the annual Ice Carnival and other activities to be discussed in future meetings.

"The American University is an athletic association in which certain opportunities for study are provided for the feeble-minded," Salvadore Madariaga.

Physical Examination Schedule Released

Dr. R. Duffley Friedlander, Board of Health Physician, announced that examinations for entering men students will be given from 9 to 12 on Monday and Thursday mornings, and at 1:30 to 4:30 on Tuesday and Friday afternoons. Examinations for men will also be given from 1:30 to 4:30 on alternate Wednesday afternoons. Locations will be announced later.

The Examinations for entering women students will be given on Tuesday and Friday mornings from 9 to 12 and on Monday and Thursday afternoons from 1 to 4, and from 1 to 4 on alternate Wednesdays. Examinations for women will be held in Room 102, Women's Gym.

Physical Education Club Meets September 13

First meeting of the Physical Education and Recreation Majors Club will be held Friday, September 13, at 3 o'clock in the Lounge Room of the Women's Gymnasium. All majors in that department are eligible for membership and are invited by club leaders to attend the organizational meeting.

Hotel Students Taxed As Crowd Invades Cafe

Students of the college Hotel and Restaurant Management Division who manage the cafeteria were swamped yesterday with an over capacity crowd of hungry students clamoring for lunch, announced Paul Wendell, division coordinator.

The entire division was employed to handle the flow of students and even a few graduates of the division who had returned were pressed into service, Wendell said.

"The division feels that the equipment in the cafeteria and kitchen will be quite adequate as soon as operation begins functioning at best form," Wendell commented.

Students of the college are asked by the hotel group to cooperate in the cafeteria by leaving the cafeteria when they have finished their lunch. "We have a seating capacity of only 320, so it is necessary to have a rapid turnover during lunch hours," Wendell disclosed.

The cafeteria is directed by Hilda Watson, instructor in restaurant management, and Ernst Hjorth, instructor in chef training.

Revised Federal Building Features Big CAA Exhibit

Revised, redesigned and filled with new United States Government displays, the Federal Building on Treasure Island is one of the outstanding attractions at the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition.

Under the direction of Federal Commissioner George Creel, over two dozen entirely new features have been installed, a few of last year's major exhibits also have been retained, but even these are being improved or enlarged, according to Commissioner Creel.

Block Society, Chinese Club Begin Activities

Two college clubs have begun their activities this semester. Other clubs planning activities should communicate with The Guardsman in Room 134.

Block SF Society—Will hold first meeting of the semester today at one p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

Chinese Students Club—Open rally on Friday, September 13. All Chinese students are invited to attend. Time and place of the rally will be announced later.

WE CORDIALLY INVITE THE STUDENTS OF THE New Junior College to visit the JAY CEE FOUNTAIN 1418 OCEAN AVENUE

The Past In Plastics

Nightmare animals of prehistoric America are seen in their native haunts in the University of California paleontological exhibit in the Hall of Science at the Golden Gate International Exposition. This is only one of the features of a remarkable display which covers all the biological and physical sciences and presents a visualized course in the development of civilization from antediluvian times. This is a visualization of the famous La Brea asphalt pits in Los Angeles, with sabre-toothed tigers attacking a huge mammoth and her young who have become entangled in the pits.

Scenes, Animals Eons Older Than Man Portrayed At Fair

Queer lying things from the dim vistas of the prehistoric past are brought to life in the University of California exhibit at the Golden Gate International Exposition. Mammoths, sabre-toothed tigers, camels, and other inhabitants of western America appear in their natural environment in a series of dioramas.

Past Recreated

The Texas of 200 million years ago, Arizona's painted desert of 150 million years past, and the death trap of the La Brea tar pits in Southern California of a mere 500,000 years back are the settings for a vivid succession of scenes of wild life.

The migrations of the human race are shown on a glass map with illuminated panels; there are pictorial explanations of the growth of plant life and colored photographs portray the varied flora of California. Living microscopic animals are projected on screens, there is an undersea gallery and relief models of the California coast line.

The advance of medicine, the influence of heredity, and the march of life from the cradle to the grave are shown in dramatic presentation of illuminated panels and in full natural colors.

Science Simply Explained

Exhibits of the physical sciences offer simple explanations of mathematical applications and the wonders of the astronomy and chemistry, while rare volumes from the Bantroft collection and the University library commemorate the 500th anniversary of the invention of printing from movable types.

Book Exchange May Operate Another Week

Books may be turned into the book exchange of the Women's Service Society in Room 104 for at least another week, Mildred Bartosiewski, WSS president, commented this week.

"The Exchange is open from 8 o'clock to 4 o'clock every day," Miss Bartosiewski said. "Special attention will be tendered by the book exchange attendants to entering freshmen," she added.

"Book exchange business is booming these first weeks;" Miss Bartosiewski noted, "the girls working there have their hands full."

The number of books handled by the book exchange this semester equals easily the volume carried last semester.

"Comments on the book exchange have always been favorable in the past," Miss Bartosiewski said, "we hope that we can continue to satisfy the students."

In addition to its work at the beginning of each semester on the book exchange, the WSS aids new students during registration periods and furnishes hostesses at college gatherings.

Membership in this society is invitational each semester. Its central aim is to render general service to the college.

Verrell A. Weber, athletic instructor, acts as adviser to the organization.

• Student Card Controversy

Editor, The Guardsman:

It has been brought to my mind that the policy of the college paper has been altered for students with student-body cards.

All well and good — but how about the students who cannot afford to purchase same card?

Would it be out of the question to reconsider the matter? The paper, as you know, is for all of the students and not solely for the student body card owners.

Thanking you, I am yours sincerely,

James McGreevey, Jr.

Editor's note: Allow us to point out that The Guardsman is supported and paid for by every student who holds an Associated Student card.

As to the paper being for all the students, please note the line in the upper left hand corner of page two which reads "Published Twice Weekly By The Associated Students Of San Francisco Junior College."

We wish the paper could be given to everyone, but as you must have noticed if you read the list of money budgeted in last Tuesday's edition, The Guardsman costs quite a considerable sum.

The only way every student could receive a paper would be to raise the student body dues to take care of the cost of extra copies. This would be the same as putting an additional tax on the members of the association, which is unfair and of course out of the question.

College Opinion Rejects Aid, Jobs From Government

NEW YORK CITY—(ACP)—U.S. college and university students do not favor the government as a source of financial aid or as a job haven after graduation.

This is the assertion of Columbia University's journalism dean, Carl W. Ackerman; and he cites figures gained from a special survey of 15 campuses by Prof. Elmo Roper to prove his point.

"The real significance, I think, of present student opinion toward the financing of education is the opposition to government aid," Dean Ackerman said. "Students do not favor a spending-lending policy to help them make their way in the world. Only 7.4 per cent of the students interviewed considered aid by the federal or state governments as desirable. This, I think, may be interpreted as a vote of confidence in the continuation of the student-aid policies of educational institutions such as Columbia University.

"Those who have been charging that some of the leading universities in the United States have become centers of socialistic and communistic theories of government and economics should study these statistics. University students today are not applying the prevailing debt theory of political economy in their own lives, nor are they looking to the government to provide them with jobs."

Of the students under survey, 42.5 per cent preferred part-time employment; 32.3 per cent favored scholarships, and 14.5 per cent favored university or private loans. Those receptive to government aid were in the smallest group.

Replies to a negative question, asking whether there were any sources from which students should not receive aid, showed direct opposition to government generosity.

"As capable and needy students prefer part-time work to loans or scholarships," the dean said, "it may be desirable and necessary, in order to attract this type of student, for educational institutions to adjust their curricula and assist students to obtain part-time employment."

Prof. Roper's investigation of students' attitudes toward careers, Dean Ackerman continued, points further in the direction of student independence of government. Only 18.4 per cent of the men interviewed, and 9.1 per cent of the women, believed that government service offered the best opportunities. The rest expected to make their living in industry and the professions.

Meet The Students

Virginia is majoring in science and like Betty is interested in sports. Another of her hobbies is dramatics, so perhaps in a few years we can say we knew her when.

She thinks the building is "swell", and her favorite part of the structure is the big dome on the fourth floor where astronomy students gather to study the stars.

Virginia thinks Associated Student cards are well worth buying because they give one "so much for their money. I think everyone should buy one, because they are really worthwhile and show that the students have some spirit," Virginia said.

She doesn't approve of sororities because she feels that they are too "cliquy" and confine a person to one small group.

Virginia likes to dance to sweet music and her favorite band is Artie Shaw's.

Last but not least on the list of Meet the Students is little brown-eyed, brown-haired, Viola Miles. She is also 17 and a George Washington graduate (there must be millions of them).

Viola is also majoring in science. She finds the women's gym her favorite part of the campus.

She is glad to see the radio receiving sets in all classrooms because Washington has the same set up and she thinks it is "swell."

Viola, unlike her chum Virginia, is in favor of sororities because they acquaint girls with each other and make their college life fuller.

Miss Miles loves to dance to sweet music (she also favors Artie Shaw), and thinks that jitterbugging is very crude and undignified.

Bing Crosby gets her vote as her favorite singer.

There we are, three of the college's newest coeds (phone numbers furnished on request.) Next week, we'll talk to some of the fellows, darn it.

ONE of the smartest and wisest political moves ever made by this country was the transferring of 50 old age destroyers to Canada in exchange for 99 year leases on English possessions in American waters.

Adolph Hitler's blitzkrieg methods have shown the people of the United States that the two oceans on each side of the country do not make us impregnable as was once believed.

A defensive ring of air and naval bases around the United States is just what this country will need for her future protection.

Now if America and Americans will continue to stay awake instead of returning to slumber, we never need worry about the roar of bombing planes overhead being anything but a flight of United States ships on flying maneuvers.

THOSE dizzy Mexicans sure go in for politics in a big way. It isn't enough to elect one Congress to run the country, Mexico has to elect two. (Maybe it is a good idea but it sounds kind of crazy).

Several people have been killed and wounded in street fighting between the two factions but the Mexican police say everything is quiet and under control. Perhaps that is quiet for Mexico.

It's a good thing the United States doesn't fool around with two Congresses for it would probably take us about five years to pass the conscription bill by which time Hitler would be putting his feet on the President's desk in the White House.

COLLEGE

PHELAN AVENUE is fast becoming an Indianapolis speedway to members of the college who have the good fortune to own automobiles.

Last week there were two collisions between speeding vehicles right in front of the college. Luckily enough, these accidents were not serious and no one was hurt. With a little less luck however, some students might even now be lying in a hospital bed.

There is no reason why automobiles should speed along Phelan Avenue as if they were going to a fire. The space for passage is none too large with cars parked along both curbs.

We are not concerned about the people who get their cars battered through their own negligence, but it is important to realize that if the attempt to convert Phelan Avenue into another Bayshore Boulevard continues, some student is likely to be seriously injured.

Surely the students who have racing blood in their veins can find some other road that is not a busy thoroughfare to give vent to their passion for speed.

ADVANCE reports seem to indicate that the college judicial committee is well organized and oft to an excellent start.

The judicial committee is usually the least liked of any student committee because it has the unpleasant task of trying to keep the students in some semblance of order. When any headache concerning student cards or admission at games or dances arises, it is usually referred to the judicial committee.

Thankless job though it may be, the committee's work is important, and it is a pleasure to see them off to a good start. Let's hope they continue in this manner.

NOTE to the welfare committee: It's all right to go ahead and investigate the possibilities of a college year book for such a publication is needed, but we suggest you complete your unfinished business of last semester first.

We seem to recall that a student questionaire was given to 1300 students on the relative values of extra-curricular activities. Although the results are now completely tabulated they have never been announced to the college. After all the trouble it took to give and tabulate the questionaire, you might as well publish the results.

THE U. S. Army has gone in for streamlined recruiting methods. Currently on exhibition on Treasure Island is a mobile recruiting station consisting of a very nicely furnished 1940 trailer.

Inside the trailer are comfortable seats, typewriters, and recruiting information.

Evidently the army feels that it is easier to convince someone of the merits of the army, if the sales talk is given in a comfortable streamlined trailer.

THE Congress of the United States certainly takes the prize for the biggest collection of deadheads ever assembled under one roof.

It is of course understandable that there is bound to be a difference of opinion on such a controversial subject as conscription, but what makes the situation deplorable is that the Congressmen insist upon playing politics at a time when every part of the nation should be working together.

After all there is a time and place for everything, and this is most definitely the time for adequate preparations for the future defense of the nation.

To hear some of the members of Congress talk, conscription means the end of democracy. This is utterly ridiculous. Naturally such a bill will not be completely democratic and the people will for the time being lose a slight amount of freedom. If however, the draft method is not used to strengthen the defenses of the nation, we are liable to find ourselves in a much more precarious position, one in which we would have no democracy at all.

A year ago we would have been called a rabble rouser and an alarmist for voicing such views. The last year has shown us all that the greatest mistake in the world is unpreparedness.

Unfortunately our Congress isn't thinking right now in the best interests of the country but merely for the best interests of their own personal skins. Of course it is idealistic, but we can't help wishing we had some statesmen who were really willing to help the country instead of plunging it deeper into the mire of stupidity and petty politics.

Progress

Building Will Be Completed In Two Weeks

"The college building proper, according to promises of the building commission, will be finished within two weeks from now," Registrar J. Paul Mohr said today.

All blackboards and other fixtures will be completely installed by them and workmen will vacate the building, he added.

Parking Problem Considered

A plan, to be submitted by Commissioner Richard E. Doyle, chairman of the physical properties of the Board of Education, whereby Phelan Avenue would be widened in order to permit diagonal parking and two lanes of traffic, was also mentioned by Mohr.

Another plan for parking facilities in the possible acquisition from the city of the level ground north of the building.

Beautification of the grounds about the building will be speeded up because bids for shrubs are to be received within a few days, Mohr said.

Present plans call for the planting of lawns on both sides of the sidewalk which surrounds the college building. Wild grass will be planted on the hill, sloping down to the gymnasiums.

Gym Lights Soon

Work is also being rushed toward the early completion of paths, and roads, as well as for the early installation of lighting facilities both within the gymnasiums, and without.

At the close of the Golden Gate International Exposition, music will be received by the college for the interior beautification of the building. The mosaic is now being executed by WPA artist Herman Volz, at the Fair in the Art in Action section in the Palace of Fine Arts.

Also, Hjorth said, sometime in the future, the two blank wall spaces at the entrance of the building will be adorned with egg tempera paintings

Luckless Friday Fails To Scare

Ducking under two ladders, D. D. Dripless Zoop ambled down the hallway of the main building (no other) this a.m. with a "Hyar, my fran'!"

He looked over his right shoulder at the mess (this college has every modern facility, from ladders to moons) and squeaked, "What nonsense, eh?" Arching his scalp as he took a match from his wig to light three Coli Caddies With A Lift, Deedeedee added, "Utter nonsense!"

"Phutzis?" we quizzed, trying to dodge the smoke screen.

Whilfred he, "This ancient belief in bad luck omens, har-rumph—such as Friday the 13th jinx, I'm not superstitious, you know?"

With wary eyes, we watched a black cat zither across the hall.

"N-n-n-neith-ther are we," declared we boldly, as we turned back to D. D. D. But he was gone.

Far down the hall we heard a distant, "Help! Murder! There's a black cat in the-building!"

AWS Plans Future Events To Hold To Tradition

With Orientation Week activities concluded by yesterday's tea for new women students at the college, the Associated Women Students organization is looking forward to several future activities at dates to be decided later, Virginia Hubbert, AWS president, declared today.

"Our plans are still quite indefinite," Miss Hubbert said. "However, we are considering some sort of affair for parents of the college women similar to last semester's Sunday afternoon tea."

Among the affairs traditionally sponsored by the AWS are the tea held in honor of seniors at the various high schools in the city and the last women's activity for the semester as either a tea or a rally, she said.

Time Between Classes Too Short; Needs Adjusting

SINCE the beginning of classes, the matter of five minutes between periods and 55 minute classes has grown from a matter of small moment to one of some importance.

The inadvisability of such a system becomes more evident as the days pass.

Complaints have come from both students and faculty alike on this subject, so it is in order that it be discussed here.

There is little or no reason why this college should differ from all others in the bay and peninsula area by having 55 minute class periods instead of the customary 50 minute period. The University of California, Stanford, San Jose State, San Francisco State, and San Mateo Junior College all have class periods of 50 minute duration. Why should there be a different schedule here?

It is not so much the point of 55 minute classes that is objectionable, but rather the five minutes between periods which are all too short.

For five years the college had the regular 10 minute intermission used in other colleges and it sufficed very well. The need for changing the status quo is not at all apparent.

It can hardly be said that now, because we have our own building, the 10 minute intermission is unnecessary, for if that be true, such a regulation should have been put into effect at Powell Street and Galileo, for there too we were in but one building at a time.

Nor can it be said that the extra five minutes in class gives the student that much more education. The extra five minutes will hardly teach a person anythinx more than he learned the preceding 50 minutes.

If there were any necessity for such a procedure, or if any good were derived from such a system, perhaps it would be understandable. But there is not. In fact quite the contrary exists.

The general consensus among the students is that to go from one room to another any where in the main building (from the cafeteria to the library excepted) takes fully five minutes when walking very quickly—but who can walk quickly through our overcrowded halls? This does not take into consideration the fact that a student may want to consult the instructor about something in the lecture or a homework assignment. IF A STUDENT DOES THIS, HE MAKES BOTH HIMSELF AND THE INSTRUCTOR LATE FOR THE NEXT CLASS. Then too, while walking to class, a student may meet a friend and want to chat for a moment or two, or perhaps the friend may want to know the class assignment. This would make both parties late for their next class.

Surely it is not the purpose of this institution to keep students from having an occasional chat about some every day topic while on the way to class.

Moreover by not giving a student time enough to speak to the instructor after class upon some matter pertaining to the education of the student, the whole purpose of the college is being defeated.

There is the faculty point of view also. No instructor likes to have to grab his papers hurriedly, ignore the questions of his pupils and rush to his next class. If the instructor stops to answer the questions, he is late for his next lecture. This puts him in the rather embarrassing position of having to walk into class late, through no fault of his own, thus setting a poor example for his pupils to follow.

Even after class has settled down and the instructor has begun his lecture, some students who chanced upon an acquaintance in the hall come filtering in, breaking the trend of thought of both the instructor and the class.

What is the object of this curtailment of student and faculty freedom? What is it seeking to accomplish? Why must it continue when it is opposed by both students and faculty?

The Guardsman, as the official organ of the Associated Students of the college, feels that it is only right that these questions be asked and that the administration take action to rescind the present schedule.

Panel Discussion On National Defense Monday

Student self-government part in national defense will be the theme of the panel discussion which starts Monday, September 16, at 12 o'clock in Room 254.

President Archibald Cloud and Mr. Alden Smith, instructors are on the panel discussion group. Lyle Shultz, Jean Arnold, Alden Thorogood, and Mary Frances Malone make up the committee which is headed by chairman Ed Hardies.

Each member will give a five minute talk and then turn the discussion over to the group at large. The panel discussion is not open to all students but will be limited to those who hold college offices, Smith disclosed.

Addresses by the students will be followed by corrective advice by President Cloud, according to tentative plans.

The panel discussion is a part of the Political Science 2A course.

Students Go To Work As NYA Funds Arrive

Funds for NYA employment arrived last Wednesday and many NYA students were put to work, Edward H. Redford, college NYA director announced today.

Also pointed out by Redford was the fact that the time-keeping process for NYA students is "drastically different" from last year.

Main point of difference lies in the fact that all time schedules must be turned in the day after the payroll period ends, he said. Since this payroll ends October 6, all time schedules must be turned in by October 7.

"If this is not done, the students will be dropped from the NYA payroll," he added.

Another new regulation is that, students can not work more than four hours in any one college day, nor more than seven hours in any non-college day, according to Redford.

Each day, also, when the supervisor of each NYA student records the time the student has worked, the supervisor must initial the recorded time.

New Officers

Thorogood Wins Sophomore Class Presidency

Freshmen of the college took the lead in the class elections last Tuesday morning with a total of more than 200 votes for the office of president, and nearly that number for the other offices, while the lowest number of votes was recorded for the high sophomore class.

Chosen for class leaders at these elections are the following:

High sophomore — Alden Thorogood, president; Mercedes Dahleen, vice-president; secretary not elected.

Low sophomore — Bill Williams, president; Ogden Wheeler, vice-president; Anita Weil, secretary.

High freshman — John Mowbray, president; Leona Smith, vice-president; Lila Stafford, secretary.

Low freshman — Jim Honnert, president; Dorothy Daft, vice-president; Pat Niemeyer, secretary.

"There was a fairly good representation at the class meetings," Mary Frances Malone, election chairman, commented. "It is interesting to note that nearly every semester, it is the low freshman class that votes in the largest numbers. This semester's incoming frosh were no exception, and it is hoped they will keep up their class interest."

Class nominations and elections were held after the 11 o'clock rally last Tuesday.

Biggest College Chiseler Found

By NORA BAKER

Biggest chiseler about the whole college is the man who works to the east of the building on a huge piece of Indiana limestone.

His name is Stanislaus Bona, but as he works away at the huge hunk of limestone he is only paving the way for the artist who will finish the job, Fred Homster, W.P.A. project artist.

The figure upon which Bona works will someday take on the brilliant features of Thomas A. Edison, the wizard of Menlo Park.

Also to share the limelight with "Bona" will be the limestone figure of Leonardo Da Vinci. Leonardo has already come to life under the skillful hands of artist Homster, but he still reposes over on Treasure Island.

What a feud there will be when he arrives on the scene, for the beaming features of Thomas A. Edison stand for modern science, while Leonardo Da Vinci can only put in his two cents worth for ancient science.

Noon Employment Open To Men Students

Opportunities for noon employment with compensation and meals for men students of the college was announced by Dean Edwin C. Browne, today.

All those desiring such employment are requested to file their applications in the dean's office, Room 123, as soon as possible.

In a commentary upon the actions of the members of the student body, Dean Browne expressed the opinion: "Students have adjusted themselves remarkably well to their new rooms and conditions in our new quarters."

In the future when landscaping and lawns have been completed, the dean said he was anxious that all students feel a personal pride in them.

Also pointed out by the dean was the warning that students who misuse their student body cards will be classed as serious offenders.

"Strict regulation of the use of student body cards is especially necessary at colleges dances because of the crowded conditions," Dean Browne said.

College dances will not be held in the women's gymnasium until lighting facilities are installed, he said. It was originally intended to use the gymnasium for all Associated Student dances other than the Sophomore formal.

Social Activities

Low Frosh Semi-Formal Dance At Palace Tonight

Sponsored by the Low Fresman class, the first dance of the new semester will be paced by the music of Bob Saunders' orchestra at the Palace Hotel's Gold Room tonight, from 9 p.m. until the Stroke of 12.

A semi-formal affair, the dance represents the first social activity on behalf of their class by the newly installed Low Frosh officers, Jim Honnert, president; Dorothy Daft, vice-president; and Pat Niemeyer, secretary.

Faculty To Attend

Announcing particulars of the event, Jean Arnold, chairman of the social committee, revealed that Dr. and Mrs. Archibald J. Cloud, Dean and Mrs. Edwin C. Browne, Mr. and Mrs. J. Graham Sullivan and Dean of Women Margaret Dougherty will be in attendance.

"We are also sure," Miss Arnold said, "that many other prominent faculty members will be present."

Warning On Cards Issued

Emphasizing the fact that admission will be by Associated Student cards only, with one card serving to pass a couple, Miss Arnold announced that an identification committee will be stationed at the doors for the purpose of checking on the cards.

"Several warnings have been issued already against the lending of student cards to unauthorized persons," Miss Arnold asserted, "and so any cards found in the possession of anyone save their owners will be promptly confiscated."

Urging students to attend tonight's dance, Miss Arnold viewed it as the beginning of a new college social life amid new surroundings.

"We hope everyone will make the first dance of the first semester at the new campus a spirited start toward making that semester a memorable one in college history," she said.

Petitions To Graduate Should Be Filed Soon

"All students who are expecting to graduate in January are requested to file their petitions for graduation in the registrar's office, as soon as possible," Mary Jane Leonard, assistant registrar, announced today.

Of equal importance, according to Miss Leonard, is the fact that all incompletes incurred by students during the 1940 spring term, must be removed by Friday, September 27.

Yesterday, all students who had not procured their blue, stamped certificate of registration, cards, were excluded from classes by their instructors. All students who were excluded from class yesterday, will not be able to present their cards.

"Therefore," Miss Leonard said, admitted again until they are able to "students should have their blue registration cards in their possession at all times, so that they may present them when requested to do so by their instructors."

Civil Service Exam Data To Be Posted

All college students who are interested in taking a United States Civil Service examination should watch the bulletin board across from the college bank in regard to examination particulars, Lloyd Luckmann, instructor, said today.

Requirements for taking the exams, and the time for filing of applications are posted on the board.

The tests are open competitive examinations required for city, state, and government positions, which include various fields, Luckmann added.

Hotel Division Solves Cafeteria Rush Problem

Satisfactory adjustment to a rush of business are being made by members of the Hotel and Restaurant Division in the college cafeteria, Paul Wendell, coordinator of the division, revealed today.

"Our intake is equivalent to a commercial restaurant's intake of $500 a day," Wendell declared. "Of course, we are a non-profit organization, so one can see what crowds we are handling."

It is estimated, Wendell said, that from 2,500 to 3,000 persons use cafeteria facilities daily.

The college offers the only two year training course in restaurant and hotel management in the country, he added.

AMS Bonfire September 19

Lack of facilities have forced a definite cancellation of the semi-annual Associated Men Students' smoker, announced Ted Theodus, AMS president. In place of the smoker, Theodus has tentative plans for a bon-fire on September 19, the night before the football game with Placer Junior College.

Bon-Fire Open To All

"While the smoker was restricted to men students, the bon-fire will be open to all students of the college," Theodus said. Refreshments that were to be furnished for the smoker will be on hand to assure a quantity of food, according to the AMS president.

The program is more or less of a pep rally, Theodus indicated. He promised to have on hand Ernie Smith, and at least one outside football coach, probably George Malley of the University of San Francisco. Also part of the program will consist of introducing the college coaching staff with a few words from each.

If present plans are successful, Theodus expected a large turnout for the affair. "In the past the smoker was always well attended and this will be bigger and better than the smoker and is not all stag," he remarked.

The bon-fire is to be held at night in between the two gymnasiums, Theodus said.

Student Card Admission

Theodus commented that one student body card entitles every person attending to refreshments. Malley, the college coaches, some of the college football players, Ernie Smith and other will probably be present. He claimed that it will be well attended if present indications can be taken as a criterion.

Faculty Association To Honor President Cloud

To honor President Archibald J. Cloud, members of the Faculty Association will meet in the college cafeteria at dinner October 3, at 6 o'clock, according to Lloyd Luckmann, president of the group.

Honored guests will include Dr. Monroe Deutch, Provost of the University of California, who will give the address of the evening, and Timothy Pflueger, college architect, and Paul Mohr, registrar, will also speak, Luckmann said.

All faculty members and their wives are invited to attend the dinner, following which there will be a tour of the building.

Dinner will be prepared and served by students in the college Hotel and Restaurant Management division, under direction of Paul Wendell, coordinator of the division, and Mrs. Hilda Watson, in charge of the dining room.

This will be the first affair of its kind to be held in the new building, Luckmann pointed out, and heralds the many activities planned by the Faculty Association. It follows a tea held last Wednesday in honor of the faculties of the Denman Junior High School and Balboa High School.

Future plans of the association include meetings of the various teacher organizations, Luckmann said, and requested that members of the faculty interested in the organizations act on a reception committee.

President Cloud's Address Marks Keynote Of College

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following address was given by President Archibald J. Cloud last Tuesday at the Associated Students' rally. The text of President Cloud's address is reprinted here because of the excellent content material contained therein.

IT IS a source of much satisfaction to me to have an opportunity of addressing you at this family gathering today. We of the faculty are happy to extend the warm hand of fellowship to President Lyle Shultz and the entire membership of the student body.

I am deeply conscious of the fact that this occasion is historic. It is our first assemblage on our own campus, marking another milestone in our forward march. . . .

We should indeed be grateful to our generous fellow-citizens who have made it possible for us to meet in these magnificent surroundings and under circumstances so fully conducive to growth and development as these conditions are. Numbered among these citizens are men and women whom you see every day in the home, the store, or on the street. Numbered among them are your parents, your friends, your neighbors; but many, many thousands of them can be no more than dim shadowy figures whom you know not by name or in person, and who, on their side, know you not, either, by name or in person.

Yet they have given freely of their money, have often drawn upon very slender financial resources, to supply the funds in the form of public taxation, through which this site has been secured and these buildings erected and equipped. These outlays have now reached an appreciable sum. Speaking of the buildings, without reference to the grounds, an investment of approximately $2,000,000 is represented at this stage, while an equal expenditure will be required to bring the educational plant to completion.

In these respects, as well as in making adequate provision for instruction on a free tuition basis, your fellow-citizens have manifested a decisive interest in your welfare. Why this interest? Why this concern?

The answer is not far to seek. They know full well that the human resources of a nation constitute its primary wealth. They are aware that you form an important part of these human resources and that you are soon to enter into your inheritance of complete citizenship, rights and duties under the banner of the Republic. They cherish the belief that education is the most effective means yet devised through which you can have made ready to undertake those rights and duties.

Our forefathers had the courage and vision to create a system of free, universal, popular education, without precedent in any other land. By setting up this plan, in accord with the ideals of a new social order, they gave America her chief contribution to civilization. They foresaw a people living happily and usefully because the individuals constituting the society had learned through educational processes to conduct their personal and community affairs with the highest degree of intelligence and morality.

It will soon be—yea, even now is—your responsibility to prove in your own persons the values of education in relation to these underlying tenets and principles of the democratic way of life. It will be your part to demonstrate in your daily lives that, as a direct outcome of education, men and women can be free and yet can learn to work together for the common good under wise direction; that they can obey intelligently such rules as are necessary to promote good government, can live on a plane of goodwill, tolerance, and decency, and can control their economic affairs without injury to the well-being of their neighbors.

I am firmly encouraged to hold confidence in your ability to meet this challenge. I am convinced that, in due season, you will make full restitution to your fellow-citizens for the benefits they have conferred on you—restitution not in dollars and cents, gold or silver, or any other material thing, but in the fruits of good citizenship.

You are even now citizens of San Francisco Junior College. It is a city in itself, in the conduct of which you have immediate possibilities of participation as evidenced in the activities of the very Association whose members I am now addressing. Capitalize on your opportunity! Take advantage of the facilities and services provided by the College which are open to you to use to the full extent of your capacity to learn, and your willingness to profit from the educational offerings. Use these facilities and services, but refrain, as good citizens of San Francisco Junior College, from abusing them! Guard and cherish these buildings and grounds.

But—above all—ever carry in mind and heart sentiments such as these:

How much America has done for me!

What may I do to repay my debt to my good homeland? . . .

Bus Service For College Poor, Needs Improvement

WHEN the rainy season begins in earnest this year, everyone forced to travel on the 10th Avenue Municipal bus to and from college is not going to have much regard for city transportation facilities. Bus service, as it now stands, requires about a four-block walk from the nearest bus stop to the college. As the bus changes its course on the return route, two more blocks are added to the distance when leaving the college.

This situation would have perhaps minor significance if the Balboa Park district were free from rain. The walk would not hurt anyone. But a five to seven minute walk in a downpour is hardly palatable. In addition, the distance from Judson Avenue, along Phelan Avenue, to the college can only be traversed by one of two dubious ways: one may either walk along the dirt pathway where a sidewalk isn't or the street gutter. Of course many are now taking a short cut through the campus grounds, but a good rain should void that route.

So the one of the first issues of The Guardsman a student wrote to the publication complaining of this transportation difficulty. The first rain should bring a deluge of similar letters.

A patent solution to the problem is to effect a rerouting of the bus line. Such an action is not as drastic as it may seem, and the amount of people that would materially benefit from it would appear to furnish ample justification.

Starting the machinery for this change, however is another matter. The administrative officials of the college are in the best position to negotiate with the Municipal Railway Company. A reasonably swift solution to the question would undoubtedly be appreciated by a sizeable portion of the college.

Meet The Students

By Eve Burkey

THIS week, readers of this column are in for a treat. Rarely does an opportunity to go behind the scenes and breathe down an interviewer's neck present itself so early in life. But, inasmuch as nothing is too good for Meet the Students patrons, just such a golden moment is given herein . . .

Closing one eye and plucking at random through the hall . . .

"Miss Wong," politely, "may I have the honor of an interview?"

"No! she snarled, showing the benefits of a massage with Ipana, and strode off mouthing dire warnings as to the foolhardiness of following her.

Icy terror chilling our heart but unfaltering in our duty we crept warily behind the Cub, seized her gently by the hair and dragged her to a vacant lecture room.

When she came to, Miss Wong was in a far more agreeable mood.

"I'll talk," she breathed grimly. . . .

An hour or so later, as she unsuspectedly stopped for breath, Miss Wong was stumped by "Name?" "Theo or even Teddy to my friends and bill collectors. You may call me Theodora."

She slapped viciously at a fly who had perched nearby and was listening wide-eyed to the conversation.

"How tall are you?"

"Don't get personal," said Miss Wong with righteous indignation. The fly giggled hoarsely (any simil. to a pun l. or d. is p. c.) and she smacked him. Breathing somewhat audibly from her exertion, Miss Wong sobbed piteously. "I'm five foot two but nobody will believe me . . ." The fly patted her shoulder tenderly and she smiled wistfully at him.

Then came the question of the hour. "How do you like the new building?"

"I like it fine. I like attending classes in a single building much better than rambling around to a dozen places. Who doesn't?"

"Are you athletic? Do you dance or jitterbug?"

Horace nudged her and Miss Wong woke with a start. She confessed to a passion for basketball but denied the more heinous charge. "I jitterbug," said she, "only when I have to." "Icky," buzzed Horace and dodged.

The Spectator

TEAMING Ronald Colman and Ginger Rogers together in a photoplay would seem slightly incongruous at first glance. The dignified, stately Mr. Colman, remembered chiefly for his magnificent pretending in such suce. as Lost Horizon, Prisoner of Zenda, Light That Failed, etc., would seem hardly suitable to co-star with the light, sparkling, vivacious Miss Rogers, undeniably one of the screen's top comediennes. The combination of Colman and Rogers clicks, however, with great gusto in Lucky Partners which just goes to show what an expert director, with the assistance of a good story, can produce even with stars of differing personality traits.

Lucky Partners is a slightly naughty comedy adapted from a French farce by the well-known Sacha Guitry. Sacha's plays are certainly blazing challenges to the dictatorial cutting of Censor Will Hayes. That the censoring and curbing of its rather ribald theme has not weakened the film is a tribute to scenarist, director, and the acting talents of the stars. Lucky Partners emerges as a grand piece of entertainment with dialogue that sparkles, and laughs that are sustained from fade-in to fade-out.

The plot traces the adventures of a painter (Colman) who encounters a charming book-shop owner (Rogers). They spot their cash to purchase a sweepstake ticket, Colman goes through with his end of the transaction only to find one of the girl that she will go on a trip with him before she marries her sweetheart (Jack Carson). She accepts the proposition, because she believes in a superstitious manner that Colman will bring her luck. So the ensuing honeymoon trip is taken. Poor Mr. Carson tags along wondering what it's all about. Complications pile up until Ronald and Ginger find they are in love, and Carson is forced to retreat.

Able support is furnished by Spring Byington, Hugh O'Connell, Cecilia Loftus, and Harry Davenport. The aforementioned Jack Carson, who is gradually developing into a first-rate comedian, comes close to stealing the film. The principals, themselves, excel with brisk, human portrayals.

Lucky Partners is unreservedly recommended. It has verve, sparkle, content and two grand leads to pursue the tangled skeins of a laugh-provoking plot.

Lucky Partners is the first of the new Fall crop of motion pictures. The Spectator will endeavor in its next column to forecast some of the cinematic highlights in this new season.

Schnacke What's Your I.Q.?

TO those gentle readers who like to believe they know a great deal about everything—this column is dedicated. It is designed to make them realize that there are still a few bits of knowledge they have yet absorbed—in one way or another.

1. How many times does the word 'America' appear in the song "America"?

2. After what does the United States Navy name its cruisers, battleships, and submarines?

3. What are the first seven words to the Constitution of the United States?

4. What surmounts the dome of the capitol building in Washington, D.C.?

5. Which president first occupied the White House?

6. Which was the first state admitted to the Union after the original thirteen?

7. Which was the last state admitted to the Union and in what year?

8. Would the following people be eligible for the presidency of the United States? If not, why not?
a. Ella Fitzgerald
b. Senator from New York, Robert F. Wagner
c. Archibald J. Cloud

9. How many vice-presidents of the United States have become presidents?

10. Who was the first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court?

11. How many vice-presidents of the United States have been?

12. What four presidents heads are being carved in stone in the Black Hills of South Dakota?

Suggestions regarding types of questions preferred by the readers will be greatly appreciated.

Let's Go Tonight — By Sullivan

Malone On The Feminine Side

WITH the Low Frosh semi-formal at the Palace Hotel's Gold Ballroom coming up tonight, there is a constant undercurrent of puzzled feminine voices all over the campus. Two questions are being heard everywhere women gather. "What are you going to wear?" "What on earth shall I wear?"

Since to our minds the saddest words of all are not "It might have been" but instead "Oh, why did I wear this dress," we've been hounding college women, trying to discover what they're planning to wear tonight. Maybe some frosh will be helped to decide on her own outfit by knowing what others are wearing.

Jean Arnold, Associated Students vice-president, is going to wear a navy and white polka dot taffeta formal. It's edged in white ribbon about the hemline and its only adornment is found in two snowy white bows at the neckline.

Dorothy Trood, former AS vice-president, has been won over to the street length dress contingent. She will be sporting a crepe dress in this season's sensational brown. With short sleeves, full skirt, and a close fitting bodice, her dress will be topped by a small brown toque.

Another of the devotees of the street length dancing dress will be Edith Callaghan, secretary of the Associated Students. "Gina" will wear a violet blue crepe with matching glass elephants in a necklace and bracelet set. From all accounts, it should be very amusing and very smart. Oh yes, she'll have a tiny black sailor to complete her costume.

Very different is the semi-formal which Marian MacKillop, president of Alpha Phi Omega sorority, will wear. Made of silvery lame and embroidered with varicolored flowers, the dress has a wide, flaring skirt and tight bodice. A novel touch will be found in her matching slippers and bag.

Anita Welt, last semester's high frosh vice-president, will be clad in a simply made black taffeta semi-formal. Her princesse style frock will be adorned only by a strand of pink beads, and she will probably match her necklace with a pink velvet bow in her hair.

A street length black jersey will be chosen by Mercedes Dahleen, high sophomore vice-president. Very ultra it sounds, too, with its sleeves than new side saddle draped effect and its smart pearl necklace and bracelet.

Associated Women Students President Virginia Hubbert will also wear a short date dress. She is probably going to wear a simple beige jersey dresb, banded in grosgrain and featuring a drawstring waistline. A huge natural topiorn trimmed in brown will complete the ensemble.

Of course, all this is very tentative, feminine nature being what it is. Anyhow, we hope that you'll be helped a little and, above all, that you'll have a super time!

Balancing the accounts almost half in favor of semi-formals and half in favor of street length dresses is Barbara Brown, Phi Beta Rho president, who is a member of the former division. Barbara is planning to wear a red, low waisted formal with one of those huge, billowing skirts so popular this season. Since she is known primarily for her impeccably tailored clothes and excellent taste, it is doubtful that she will wear any jewelry of any sort.

Win With Willkie? While Thinking Gets Advice

Willkie For President

Editor, The Guardsman:

Like many others, I am a supporter of Wendell Willkie and would like to see a "Willkie for President" club formed in S.F.J.C.

Let's hear from some more of you Willkie boosters regarding the club.

Yours for Willkie,
—J. W.

Editor's Note: It is doubtful if you will be able to accomplish much in the way of promoting Mr. Willkie in a college where a majority of the students are under 21. You are welcome to try however, although it might be better to join a Willkie club outside the college and plug for the Republican candidate where it would do some good.

To The Ivory Tower!

Editor, The Guardsman:

In reading Ram's Horn in the September 6 issue of The Guardsman, I find you well complimented on your fine work in publishing such a super-periodical. So just to break the monotony I'm going to add a dash of cold water in the form of constructive criticism.

In your column While Thinking in September third's edition of this paper, you quoted a sign outside of the Embassy Theatre on Market Street. I think this sign, slightly reworded, should pertain to this publication:

"We do not print campaign, war, or political news. Read your daily newspaper or listen to the radio for foreign developments. We believe a school paper is for the entertainment and enjoyment of the school and has no use for political or foreign propaganda."

Any day we can pick up a newspaper and read of Hitler's vandalism or of America's supposed vulnerability. . . .

A school periodical is published basically for entertainment and information concerning that school, its student body, and its relative interests.

What do you say we keep it that way?

Sincerely yours,
Jack A. Cederlund

Editor's Note

You evidently read rather hastily. As a matter of fact no one claimed we were a "super" periodical. That does so happen however that we are rated by our press as-

Shots At RAMdom . . .

IT will be the policy of this column always to bring to you the latest reports on the latest productions of momentous events at the latest possible time. In keeping with this policy, we heartily endorse the titillative, tuneful revue, Meet the People. Unfortunately the show closes tomorrow night, but you still have time to see it—if any seats are left.

Most novel bit in the production depicts a graveyard scene wherein five, gentlemen,—you'll know them if you follow popular music—namely: Chopin, Beethoven, Tschaikowsky, Dubussy, and Ravel, are picketing. Offenbach in the best traditions of Labor. No bricks or bottles were thrown, however. The Big Five chant that Jacques (Henceforth we shall use first names to demonstrate our knowledge of music) is unfair to defunct dispensers of classics because modern decomposers had not yet seen fit to introduce him into the Big Ten. All is resolved, however, when a young man wanders onto the scene and sets Orpheus to somnolent dance music.

A scene like the latter causes a man to reflect on the injustices of the world. How different would have been the lot of these men and their heirs if the ASCAP had had its beginnings in Ludwig's time. Present day descendants of Peter Iljitch would reap untold dividends from Moon Love, Our Love, The Isle of Man, or Offering of Claude. Achille and Maurice could do likewise with My Reverie and The Lamp is Low. The Breeze and I, Parmalee, and such like sort of thing could go on indefinitely, in the same indefinite sort of way. Anyway, students, be on the alert the next time you hear any popular music with even the faintest spark of real melody. Some such thing as My Dreamy Danube Dalliance might be taken flat for flat from some such thing as Antonson's Fugue, in F Minor for strings. Who knows, next week you might even be swaying to Richard Strauss' Thus Spake Zarathustra at the St. Francis on the Palace.

While on the subject of the classics, could some well-versed person advise us of the title of a recent composition in all about somebody losing something somewhere. We think it was written in B Flat.

A CRITICAL role is not always a pleasant one, but sometimes it is very necessary for the general well-being of—well, for one thing, the critic; he has to vent his spleen once in a while. We are always the last ones to be critical; but when any system strikes, even in the most subtle way, at American foreign policy, we must cry out. It is with sadness that we must poke at crooked finger at the college cafeteria. Perhaps its defection is innocent. We hope so.

There is a tacit agreement, though at times it bobs up rather ostentatiously, in this country that Britain is a bit of all right. Anything English should be welcomed with open arms—even Gertrude Lawrence. With the exceptions of Noel Coward, General Ironsides, C. Aubrey Smith, and ten, the most typical British institution is crumpets. Snubbing crumpets is tantamount to snapping your fingers in the pudgy countenance of Winston Churchill. Serious, what? Well, students and oolong-dotting faculty members, we do not like to term the cafeteria anti-British, but it does not serve crumpets! True, it serves coffee in accordance with the "good neighbor" policy, but that does not compensate for its slight to the British and its undermining of our foreign policy.

TO further the work begun last week by Congress' coruscation of legislative brilliance, we feel that the following suggestions—we're in a suggestive mood today—will be of no inestimable value to recruiting stations should conscription be delayed: 1. Place Kate Smith on every other street corner to sing God Bless America (wonder what ever happened to the Star-Spangled Banner?). 2. (a) Attire all the little Miss Poughkeepsies etc. in two-piece bathing suits. (b). With a placard reading, "Broaden your education in the army," stand them before the door of every recruiting office.

RAMblings

By Kei Hori

As any San Franciscan who lives in San Francisco long enough and has been living in San Francisco during the duration of the Fair would do, we went into the Palace of Fine Arts, bringing our collegiate minds and thoughts with us. Wandering aimlessly about (as any non-art appreciative character would do), we suddenly found ourselves before the massive mural—the one which is to be a part of our library—and Diego Rivera. So what has Diego got to do with sports? Well, whilst we were looking at the massive mess, a few things caught our eye—there were two figures, clad in white bathing suits, both executing flawless dives. If they aren't dead ringers for our Helen Crlenkovich and formerly our Pat Robinson—. Of course, neither figures had the Fairmont emblem on their suits, but . . .

There Was An Athelete

Also at the Fine Arts Building was Douglas Fairbanks Sr.'s "Three Musketeers." There was an athlete, by golly. His cavorting was at its best during the year when "Musketeers" was being made. Tumbling was his best assest, which made us wonder why we don't have a tumbling team. The college has some new mats, why not use them? (Or have we been seeing too many moom pitchers?)

Call Of The Lucre

News from reliable sources gives us the inside dope on why the two skate stars of the college, the Galbraith boys, Murray and Sheldon, have not registered this semester. It seems that the "call of the filthy lucre" was greater than the lust to learn. At any rate, when you chance upon the Ice Follies again, look in the program for the two Galbraiths. According to the grapevine, they are getting enough between them to buy a new car '41 model in two months.

The Barbecue To Draw Crowd

From the inside come claims that "The Barbecue" is to expect a capacity crowd. Sigmund Stern Grove, incidentally is not too far from the college. Games, entertainment, songs—practically everything but men is promised for the women who attend. (Apologies, Barbara Smith).

Explanations

A letter to Mr. Dick Friendlich columnist, The Chronicle:

Dear Mr. Friendlich: The difference between an external and an internal publicity department is that the external publicity dept. takes care of all publicity outside the college. Therefore, Mr. Friendlich, you will never, if ever, hear from our internal publicity dept. Because if you do, Mr. Friendlich, it will be external publicity.

Songs From WAA

The song contest going on sponsored by the WAA claims some songs already. Incidetally, publicity chairman Jeanne Arnold, who gives us an example of the type of songs, says short and snappy ones are the best—like "Pop goes the Weezil"—well, that's the way she spelled it.

Conscription Hits The Basket

Seen around the college was Al Opalinski and his side-kick Cholly Martin, both star basketball players of the college of yore. Cholly won a scholarship to the University of Nevada in Reno. Only he didn't go. Conscription difficulties.

The inside dope on the athletic contest this afternoon is a little on the interesting side we think. The affair was supposed to be a rough and tumble encounter, but somewhere along the line, an objection arose. No Bodily Contact. So the students thought up a few games—tiddly-winx, tic-tac-toe and a few other "games" that didn't contact bodily. As it has been said, twon't be so bad now. Tug-o-war, with a stream of water as center-line has always been good for a laugh. Come one, come all.

Large Response Expected For WAA Extra-Curricular Activities

Sign-ups for extra-curricular sports in the Women's Athletic Association are being taken in the women's gymnasium until late this afternoon, Bertha Mae Keller, president of the WAA Association adviser, announced early this week. Although lists of sports recruits were not complete at this writing, there was indication that the number of these will exceed that of previous semesters, when classes were held in scattered places, Miss Keller said.

Most new sign-ups were expected after the women's rally last Tuesday, when Barbara Smith, WAA president appeared to explain the aims and purposes of recreation for women as sponsored by the WAA and to invite the younger women to plan at least two or more recreational hours in addition to their physical education classes.

"We can't say at this time which activity has the largest or most enthusiastic response because of incomplete sign-ups, but we are very pleased with the large number, and it is interesting to note that the students seem to be very anxious to take the recreational sports that they can do when they get out of college," Miss Keller commented.

Both members and non-members of the WAA are urged to attend the sport spread—the first social event on the organization's schedule—which will be held at Sigmund Stern Grove on September 25, from 4:30 to 10 p.m., Miss Smith said. Tickets are now on sale at 35 cents, and may be bought from sport leaders or department instructors.

At this barbecue will be featured songs and songsters which the current WAA contest is expected to uncover. Different sports as offered to the women of the college will be discussed also, according to Miss Smith.

Officially, women's sports begin today, Friday the thirteenth notwithstanding. Skating, however, will not commence until September 23, when the skating rink at Winterland does not open until tomorrow.

A change of schedule has been made in swimming, Miss Keller announced, and starting last week women students enrolled for that sport meet at the YWCA on Saturdays instead of Tuesdays and Thursday, 10 o'clock for elementary water splashers and 11 o'clock for intermediates. Suits and towels are provided, but each girl should bring her own bathing cap, and should see Aileen Kinlet regarding change of program," Miss Keller said. "We appreciate very much the privilege of using the pool on Saturday. Many girls who found difficulty in making the other days will find this change more convenient; they will have more time to do their hair!"

Women who enroll in the various sports each semester work toward a definite aim, according to Miss Keller. "For instance, those participating in riding are beginning now to work toward a horseshow, lee-skaters will soon be learning the fundamentals so that they may someday participate in a carnival—perhaps."

Hockey, as the big team sport of the semester, is receiving large attention. Women who have signed up for this sport will meet on the football practice field today, where, with completely new equipment, they will "initiate the turf."

"Team sports have not lost interest," Miss Keller declared, "although individual and duo sports—archery, badminton, swimming, golf, tennis, riding—all seem to have a very enthusiastic response from the students."

Golf Moves In To Supplant Classics At Purdue

LAFAYETTE, IND.—(ACP)—English 30, ancient history, algebra and kindred courses in higher education probably will have to take a back seat at Purdue University next month when the teaching staff of the Professional Golfers' Association of America moves in to take over the task of teaching the Boilermaker student body —how to play golf.

April 10 and 11 are the days that have been set aside for a general pow-wow on how to swing a golf club correctly, the occasion being a golf clinic—first thing of its kind ever held in this country and possibly the forerunner of similar mass seminars to be held elsewhere on college campuses under P.G.A. auspices.

The clinic, part of a broad educational program that is being launched by the P.G.A. this year, is expected to play a large part in the scheme of the pros to stimulate interest in the game among college students and thus add to the constantly-growing number of followers of the ancient and honorable pastime.

Bowling Omitted From College Curriculum

Bowling has been indefinitely banished from the college curriculum, it was announced Joe Lantagne, boxing and soccer coach.

"Bowling, which was a very popular sport in the past, has been dropped this year because of the difficulty in fitting alleys which would be conveniently located," Lantagne said.

Since Joe Amori, colorful bowling coach of past semesters, is on leave, Lantagne has taken over his coaching duties, but has found that bowling is not to be offered this semester.

Pigskin Forecasts From Mephisto's Realm

By LOUIS GOLDSTONE

Whether you like it or not, I intend to publicize the exploits of one Schuyler Goop, a logistic epicure who has weighed what we are pleased to call "science" in the balance and, finding it wanting, relegated it to a select ash-heap.

Before formally inroducing Goop, who by the way has lifted a conglomeration of doctorates from various underprivileged institutions dedicated to the advancement of goblins, ghouls, djinni, werewolves, etc., etc., etc., I want to tell you something of the man's attainments.

If you want to get technical, I won't insist on calling Goop a man. There has been considerable doubt expressed as to the precise genus of his antecedents. Some of the local men about the general store claim to have been informed, from sources close to the Witch's Sabbath, that Goop is a mandrake—and, as nobody has ever succeeded in flashing a mirror before him in order to determine his nature for once and for all, it may well be a fact.

But, in the final analysis, this is colossally unimportant. Suffice it to say that Schuyler Goop looks like a man and lives at the "Y"; you can accept these facts for what they may be worth. What we will concern ourselves with is Goop, he he fish, flesh or fowl, vegetable or mineral, hot or cold.

As you have likely already surmised, Goop is a Consulting Magician. I don't mean the kind of magician who yanks bunnies out of toppers; I mean a real honest-to-Lucifer magician, all wheels and a yard wide.

Goop is experienced in things that would make your eyebrows wither if I described them. He is not a bad egg, you understand, and for a consideration he will do you a favor. Then man (to stretch a point) is the friend of everybody except a certain brand of hairy leprecaun that inhabits the empty vats of a local brewery; these happy little monsters, Schuyler Goop asserts with vehemence, are embroiled in unholy alliance with the snakes, pink elephants and little green men with white whiskers whom you have undoubtedly seen on more than one occasion.

Goop is unremitting hell on these nauseous little creatures, but otherwise he is a remarkably mild guy.

Foremost among Goop's many outstanding attainments in sorcery and allied magical fields is his excellent mastery of the elements of theory which regulate his trade just as fluidly as do the fallacious "principles of physics" control inflexibly our merry human peregrinations on and about this cosmic clod of ours.

Unless you are insufferably ignorant, you will know that all the theory of magic—be it black, white or Aryan—is evolved from two fundamental laws, namely: the law of contagion, and the law of sympathy.

Contagion is what Joe Witchdoc of the Congo uses when he profoundly expectorates and then expects rain. If he is an able practitioner, he will get rain, and if he drools he will probably receipt for a light mist.

If Joe gets his nimble digits on a few of your fingernail parings and a postage stamp that you have licked, watch out. Anything you have contact with retains part of your identity, and Joe can go to work on the stuff and work his devious and diabolical plots on you by remote control. Ever heard of people being hated to death? Okay.

No Schuyler Goop is the maestro-magician of our time. He knows all of this and enough in addition to fill all the pages of this yellow sheet out to column eight.

What I have told you is nothing. Limitations of space preclude the possibility of going further into Schuyler Goop's attainments. I will add that he is a football fan, and that by special permission of the copyright owner, to give the Devil his due, we are able to present Dr. Goop next Friday in an anlysis of our first pigskin encounter of the year.

You don't know what a genuine prediction is until you see Dr. Goop putting the laws of magic to work on Saturdays, hours 9 to 11. See Bertha Keller.

Rams All Set For Placer

Preparedness wins half the battle. So it is with the Ram football team of the Fall of '40. Lee Eisan, his men and his fighting spirit prepares itself for its initial, yet crucial encounter with Placer, the Mountaineers of the North, next Friday.

From the North comes no news. This makes predictions almost impossible. Types of defense, as well as that of offense to be used against the Placer lads are purely tentative. However, Eisan will probably, as he has been against Placer in former games, be mostly on the offensive side.

Last year's squad have yet to be chosen. However, Cunningham, Naumann and Honnert, ex-Lowell all-city will probably start. Since there is still a week of practice, Eisan is more than likely to have a complete roster for release the day before the game.

Foremost of returning veterans are Naumann and Cunningham, Herb Taylor, George Meyers, Luke Lowell, Ken Hagen, Clark Johnson, Bill Windler, Dick Wilson and Tom Rielly. Many new students from high school and transfers will also be tried out for the ability in this initial game, Eisan remarked.

Coach Lantagne Cagey In Spite Of Promising Soccer Turnout

Twenty-six prospective soccer stars turned out for the soccer signup held last Tuesday afternoon in the office of Joe Lantagne, head soccer coach, the mentor said.

Lantagne was pleased at the number of prospective shin-kickers, but declined to comment on the possibilities of a championship team until practice has really started.

A preliminary workout was held all of this week, and Lantagne will start picking a starting team some time in the near future. The league schedule has not been released at the present time, but it was believed that it would be released some time next week.

The Rams are competing in two soccer leagues this season, against both college and junior college competition.

Shinkickers who signed Tuesday are as follows: Lewis Davy, Frank Dea, Nicky Dezdevich, Win Fairfield, Edgar Eley.

Andrew Javrutsky, Bert Korn, Ken Kingsbury, Gene Kocherga, Henry Kreusmann, Ben Krunsky, John Lezar, Bill McCarthy, Dan McHugh, Ed McNamara, Jim Mahoney, Al Maisler, W. M. Meniery, Frank Michel.

Frank Schneider, Don Sing, Gene Siricel, David Sweeney, Ted Theodus, and Clarence Waddington.

Smoker Cancelled For Lack Of Space

Because of lack of adequate space, the traditional AMS smoker for new men students scheduled for last Tuesday was postponed indefinitely, Ted Theodus, AMS president announced.

It was originally intended to hold the semi-annual affair in the college cafeteria but this plan was discarded because of the difficulty in moving the tables and chairs out of the way.

"Then we decided to hold the smoker in Room 100, one of the large lecture halls at the end of the building. This idea was also discarded as impractical because the hall will only hold 200 students and approximately 500 students were expected to attend the smoker," Theodus said.

This is the first time the traditional event has been cancelled. There is a possibility that the event will be held later in the semester if suitable facilities can be arranged, Theodus concluded.

College Boxers May Learn Self Expression

Prospective boxers, currently enrolled in Joe Lantagne's boxing classes, will receive an opportunity for self expression later this semester, if plans for the Intramural Boxing Tournament materialize, Coach Lantagne announced this week.

The tournament, scheduled to take place some time during December or next January, will feature bouts between boxers of all weight divisions.

Boxers not enrolled in this semester's class, may enter the competition, Lantagne disclosed, but those not in classes will have to meet "rigid requirements."

Lantagne did not say where or when the bouts would be staged, since present plans are very indefinite. He did announce, however, that almost 50 students are enrolled in the boxing class, and should provide many interesting bouts in the near future.

Rifle Team Plans Delayed; Action Promised

Customary confusion in class schedules and registration has necessitated a delay in the planning of a program for the college rifle team, Captain Fred C. MacFarland announced today.

"The rifle team will of course be active this semester, as usual," he said, "but as yet no definite plans have been made for any matches."

Regarding the social side of the rifle team's activities, the Rifle and Pistol club is contemplating numerous picnics and dances, with plans as yet tentative, MacFarland also noted.

"Conversation is largely the art of 'playing up' to the other person's favorite subject." — Donald Ogden Stewart.

Swashbuckling Activities Set For Traditional Event

In the athletic field south of the Men's Gymnasium, students of the college will witness the traditional Soph-Frosh brawl this afternoon, reaching the peak of Orientation Week's activities, Mel Chicazola, chairman of the affair said.

Carried through from former semesters, the brawl this semester will be "no bodily contact" to prevent possibilities of injuries. The last brawl was held a year ago on the muddy field known as the Galileo Stadium, when the sophomores managed a slushing victory over a muddy mass of freshmen.

This year, through some difficulty, the Administrative office appeared hesitant to sanction a "brawl," but through the efforts of Chicazola, athletic manager of this institution, the college will continue its tradition.

Scheduled for the program are sack races, jousting, buck the bear, and tug-o-war. The events will be competitive with the point system used.

Balboa Park has seen more than this one contest. During the last weeks of school during learning at the Powell-Street institution; the college, in order to inaugurate the opening of the campus at Balboa Park, had a "meet your campus" picnic. Races, games of all kinds were enjoyed, and novel games under the auspices of Florence Hansen, chairman of that affair. (Sports ed. note; see issue 24, of last semester's Guardsman.

Unlike the brawls of other colleges, the affair will be "good clean fun" and not a sham battle of rotten fruits, stuni and unpleasantness, Chicazola promised.

The only slush will be in the tug-o-war, when a stream of water will be played as a center-line, and the participants will be doused as they pass through the stream. It's gonna be good," Chicazola said. "We're gonna have fun and forget all about studies, and be in condition for the dance at the Palace tonight. This thing is a warm-up."

Pre-Game Rally Promised Sept. 19; Fun And Food

Replacing the traditional Men's Smoker that was scheduled for last Monday, the college students are promised a pre-game rally in the dirt field between the men's and women's gymnasiums Thursday, September 19, according to Ted Theodus, AMS president.

Announcement of the cancellation of the smoker came too late to stop publication in The Guardsman, hence the story was run. Limited facilities and lack of space was the reason given by Theodus for the cancellation of the traditional affair.

Songs, yells, and arousing of spirit ala skits and such, are promised by Theodus for those who attend the night affair. A large crowd is expected for the pre-game rally of the first encounter listed for the college Rams.

Ernie Smith, NBC sportcaster, and other luminaries of the sport world will be introduced to the Associated Students who attend. Refreshments are to be served, so that the affair will be more "picnic-ish", the chairman of the affair said.

WAA Sponsors Song Contest

Open to all women in the college is the WAA song contest which begins this week and closes September 25, according to Jeanne Arnold, chairman of the contest.

Songs which are being sought fall into three classes, (1) those for the WAA, (2) those for specific sports, (3) and those for introducing persons (example: "He's a Jolly Good Fellow). The only rules are that they be "simple, short and snappy," and that they be composed of original words which may be sung to a folk or original tune.

At the close of the contest the songs will be presented at the WAA banbecue at Sigmund Stern Grove on September 25, and any woman student who is interested in singing in duets or quartets on this occassion is advised to see Miss Arnold.

"The song contest is to be in the way of a competition between the freshmen and the sophomores," Miss Arnold said. "They will be judged by popularity, and after being selected will be used for future WAA events."

Further information may be obtained at the WAA headquarters on the second floor of the women's gymnasium.

Veterans Return As Ski Team Gets Under Way

Announcing that two members of the college ski team are back this semester, Alden Smith, adviser to the team disclosed that ski activity for this semester will begin next week.

Falk Falkenberg, Norwegian ski expert is one of the returning members, and Bob Ogg, Club Advisory Board president, is the other.

Falkenberg is to assist Smith in coaching members of the ski club and team. "Falkenberg is an excellent skier who knows all the fundamentals and principles of skiing and in addition can teach these things to newcomers. He has skied all his life and learned the finer points in the sport while in Norway," Smith said.

Ogg was reelected as club president for the semester.

First meeting of the ski club is to be held next Wednesday afternoon at 2 p.m. in Room 252. A team captain will be named at that time, Smith disclosed.

Chemist Delivers First Lecture To Paint Students

First of a series of lectures delivered to students of the college paint course, was that given last Friday by Hal R. Harlan, of Harlan, Associates, consulting chemists for Bay Area paint plants.

Harlan, a prominent figure in his field, talked on the history and manufacture of white lead paints.

It is planned, according to Walter D. Forbes, co-ordinator of the college paint department, to include in the course several lectures by paint experts in leading bay area concerns.

"In addition," Forbes announced, "the paint classes will make supplementary visits to some of these plants during the semester."

Discussing the full extent of the paint curriculum, Forbes revealed that officials of local paint plants have met several times in the past year with him, and have collaborated in outlining the present college course.

"Our course as outlined," Forbes asserted, "is unequaled anywhere else in the United States."

The paint courses, extending over a two year period, are said by Forbes to provide experience and training which should be sufficient to assure prompt employment in the paint industry for those completing the subject.

It is understood that a quantity of fine equipment for the course is either already here or en route from the manufacturers.

Flossita Badger Sings At Fair

Flossita Badger in conjunction with East-Bay pianist Doris Osborn will present the last of a series of concerts which have been held at the San Francisco Exposition in the Hostess House, it was announced today.

The concert is to be held Saturday, September 14, at 3:30 in the afternoon, and will be open to the general public.

Miss Badger, music instructor in the college, is a member of Mu Phi Epsilon, National Music Honor Society, which has sponsored the group of concerts given this year.

Accompanying Miss Badger will be Gladys Steele and the songs to be sung are:

Group I
1. My Lovely Celia
2. Mary of Allandale
3. Alleluia

Group II
1. Wie Melodien Ziehtes by Brahms
2. Meine Liebe ist Grun by Brahms
3. Habanera by Ravel
4. The Maids of Cadiz by Delibes

Group III
1. Do Not Go My Love by Hageman
2. The Daisies by Samuel Barbour
3. Let My Song Fill Your Heart by Charles

Honor Society Eligibles To Sign Up In Library

Students eligible for Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college honor society, are requested by Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser to the society, to sign up in the library this week any day between one and four.

"Thirty grade points on the last final grades are necessary," she said, "for those returning students."

New students who have just graduated from high schools and who have gold seals on their diplomas are also eligible for membership.

"We are anxious to get on with our plans for the semester," Miss Cooper added, "and as soon as the registration for new members is completed the society will begin its activities.

Down Comes The Curtain

Miss California (Connie O'Connor) pulls down the curtain on Pacifica, theme statue of the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition which concludes its second year on September 29.

Closing of the Exposition will mark the end of one of the most successful world's fairs ever held. It is expected that the fair will finish in good financial condition.

Test Your Intelligence

	Yes	No
1. Do you put your feet on the chairs in the cafeteria?	☐	☐
2. Do you throw debris on the floor of the cafeteria?	☐	☐
3. Do you do all of your relaxing in front of our new building?	☐	☐
4. Do you insist upon wearing your hat in the halls?	☐	☐
5. Do you like to visit with your friends in the main lobby?	☐	☐

If you answer all the above questions in the negative, you are interested in the welfare of the college.

If there is but one answer in the affirmative, it would be well for you to check your habits of courtesy and politeness.

Lipsitz, Levick Speakers At First Forum Discussion

All students are invited to attend the first meeting of the Forum Club on September 20 at the home of Dorothy Mercer at 2251 Jackson Street, Apartment 4, at 7:30 o'clock. The speakers of the evening will be Sol Lipsitz and Paul Levick who will discourse on the subject "What conscription will mean to America."

This club will be of interest to those interested in discussion and writing, as it holds all types of discussions including those on art, literature, and politics, and in the spring term its members edit the college literary magazine, "The Forum."

No definite meeting date is set for the forums, but they are generally held every three weeks on Friday evenings. Anyone interested is urged to attend the first meeting and to participate in the election of officers that is to take place at that time.

The sponsors of the club are Miss Mercer and Frederick Bracher.

150 Pre-Med Students Hear Obstetrician At Meeting

One hundred and fifty invitations were sent out to medical students to attend the first pre-med meeting of the semester which was held last night, Glenn Noble, faculty adviser, announced today.

Guest speaker of the evening was Dr. Karl Schaupp, well known obstetrician.

This club constitutes the largest group in the college, and has been since its existence which dates back to the first semester of the college.

The club is more unified this semester because of the new building, Noble said. Its membership is not open to only those who want to become doctors, but to students of dentistry, nursing, and embalming as well.

Opening Session Of CAB Set For Next Tuesday

Bob Ogg, president of the Club Advisory Board, today urged that every club send a representative to the first meeting of that group next Tuesday in Room 167 at 2 o'clock.

Clubs which have been in good standing or which were suspended the previous semester only, may file petitions for renewal of charters at the time, while new organizations or those which had been declared inactive may arrange for membership in the CAB, Ogg added.

"Affiliation with the Club Advisory Board offers not only a wider interest in college affairs, but may also result in other benefits," Ogg said.

First issue of the club board's bulletin, CABBY, will appear next week, according to CAB officers, and may possibly be ready for distribution at the group meeting.

Publicity Committee Will Handle Bulletin Boards

Last Wednesday, the college Executive Council aproved a recommendation submitted by the internal publicity committee to act as a central clearing house for all organizations wishing to post notices on college bulletin boards.

Commenting upon this move, Hugh Waite, chairman of the committee said, "We feel that by instituting this new method of coordinating we can facilitate the handling of all college notices."

It will be the task of the committee to approve all requests for poster space on the bulletin boards.

Any organization desirous of putting up such posters must first secure the approval of the committee.

If any notices are placed on the bulletin boards without official approval, they will be taken down, Waite conclded.

Construction Jubilee

Four Day Fair Fete Planned

Looming as the outstanding highlight of the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition, Construction Industries Jubilee, September 12 to 15, inclusive, is rapidly taking form, with every branch of the industry participating.

The four days will be marked by the most spectacular programs ever presented at a world's fair. There will be thrilling balloon ascensions with parachute jumps each day. A replica of a huge battleship will be bombed and blown up. Rock drilling and log sawing contest, a tug of war between the workers on the Shasta and Friant Dams, a synthetic electrical storm, and scores of other features will make the four days memorable ones.

A unique feature of the four-day celebration will be a contest to choose "Mr. Construction Industries," with a jury of beauties from the Folies Bergere and Aquacade making the choice. A jitterbug contest and a monster Labor ball also are planned to round out the occasion.

College Library Receives Many New Books

Numerous books ordered at the close of last semester are here now to enlarge the library and give the students better library facilities than have ever been offered them before, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, said today. Because of the large circulation the library hours will soon be extended from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to from 7:45 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. If warranted the library may be kept open later in the evening, Skarstedt declared.

"I have heard several of the students say that they thought the library should be larger," commented Skarstedt, "but, I think students should be satisfied and pleased with their library considering the facilities that have been available in the past."

Over 200 books are on reserve and students have free access to the other books, but are urged to remember to check them out through the desk, he added.

Radio Broadcasting

Up-To-Minute Equipment Utilized In Radio Classes

With a brand new transmitter, two brand new receivers and an opportunity to operate standard studio equipment of the same type broadcast stations use, The Radio Engineering students, under the direction of Mr. Lowell M. Hollingsworth, are anticipating a very successful new semester. All members of the class are anxiously awaiting final completion of the laboratory so that they can use the new equipment, according to Hollingsworth.

Two Antennas Erected

Installed on the roof are two antennas: one, on the steel towers is for use with the transmitter; the other, a multiplex antenna is used for all radio receivers in the building.

A Hallicrafters HT-9 transmitter and a National 100-X receiver are provided for the instructor and those students who hold amateur operators' licenses.

The studio and control room on the main floor are used to operate the speakers mounted in all of the rooms. Microphones in the president's office, the music room, and the lecture rooms permit a varied choice of local program material. A special radio receiver provides a choice of radio programs for use throughout the building.

Practical Experience Obtained

The speech and dramatic classes expect to use the studio and control equipment to get practical experience in the production of radio programs. Recording equipment makes it possible for students to watch their improvement and to keep a permanent record of progress.

sociation as one of the seven best junior college publications in the nation.

As to the reason a "school periodical" is published is strictly a matter of opinion. By the time students reach college they are supposed to be able to think clearly and judge to the best of their ability, the affairs of the world. Since it is an estblished fact that many college students do not have the time to read the daily papers, the college newspaper should to a certain degree serve as a substitute.

Yours and anyone else's constructive criticism is greatly appreciated and we hope such constructive efforts will continue. The Guardsman however, is not a "school periodical" but a college newspaper and as such will continue to present such information that alert young men and women should be concerned about.

Prize Posters On Display

Twelve prize-winning posters, representing Americanism as conceived by commercial art students of the Academy of Advertising Art in San Francisco, will be exhibited for a week in Room 160, according to Evans M. Ecke, art instructor. Tentative date for the arrival of these posters is September 16.

The art work is the result of a year's efforts by the academy students, culminating in the contest which ended last week. Winner of the second prize was Fred Hammersley, a former student at this college. "Hammersley was one of the best commercial art students we had," Ecke commented.

Book Exchange To Return Cash Or Books Next Week

Books or cash will be returned to those students who left used texts at the Women's Service Society Book Exchange between 11 and 1 o'clock in the bank next week, Mildred Bartosiewski, WSS president, announced today.

"We should like to ask students to call for their cash or returned textbooks as soon as possible," Miss Bartosiewski said.

First meeting of the semester for the WSS will take place on Monday, September 16, at Barbara Smith's home.

College Art Work Will Be Exhibited October 3-6

During open house, which is to be held in the college from October 3 to October 6, the art class will exhibit student work, announced Richard M. Allman, art instructor.

"The pictures to be exhibited will be chosen from work done this semester and last," he said.

At this time visitors to the college building will also be able to see other examples of student work from other departments, Allman pointed out.

COLLEGE

THURSDAY, the college broadcasting system will begin a series of weekly programs devoted to the entertainment and enjoyment of the students.

This writer, and another student of the radio class will present a program of popular music, interviews, and news, deigned to please the students in the cafeteria while eating lunch.

As with all new ideas, this one will probably need a lot of ironing out. It is hoped that the students who hear the program will cooperate and give us any constructive criticism they deem advisable.

The scope of radio broadcasting is very wide and it is possible that if this first venture meets with success, others may follow.

In answer to several queries—actual air programs will not be broadcast from the college this semester. Any such work will come from station KSFO.

Just in case anyone is wondering, the weekly broadcast will not concern itself in any way with foreign news. It would be rather difficult to digest food while listening to the latest death toll and air raid story.

WE notice the Forum Club has announced September 20 as the date of their first meeting.

That also happens to be the date of the opening football game with Placer Junior College.

It would seem that the members of the Forum could have picked some other date not conflicting with the opening of the football season.

Although perhaps some members of the club are not interested in supporting the efforts of the football squad, others may be.

The handful of club members that fail to support the team on Friday night will not seriously affect the total attendance at the game but the lack of spirit and cooperation shown by the group services to illustrate that the college is still not united.

NATIONAL

AN interesting incident brought to light in the munitions factory explosion last week was that members of the Nazi-American Bund were employed at the factory.

This does not necessarily mean that the bund is responsible for the explosion.

It does seem, however, that it is rather tempting fate to employ members of an organization that is admittedly working for the cause of Nazism in a plant where products vital to American defense are being manufactured.

FOREIGN

THOSE Italians are sometimes the most amusing people on earth. Last week an Italian newspaper came forth with the surprising statement that Paul Revere whom we had long considered an American patriot was really Paolo Riveri, an Italian.

According to the Italians, Paolo practically won the revolution single handed and chased the British back to London.

Isn't this whole theory rather silly? The Paul we read about was born in Massachusetts but of course he could have had an Italian twin.

Virginio Gayda, editor of the Mussolini organ, also spends considerable time explaining in great detail what the axis is going to do to the bad little Americans. He's full of hot air too. Maybe if the Italians would do less talking and more fighting they might get some where.

Judicial Body Promises Check-Up On Student Cards

"This semester, as in the past, care will be taken to see that students present their own Associated Students' membership card at all functions where a cost to the student body is involved," Edward Hardies, chairman of the judicial committee announced after a preliminary meeting of the group this month.

"Illegal use of student cards is one of the greatest problems in our college activities," he added.

To prevent such use of cards, Jean Arnold, Associated Students' vice-president, was appointed to carry out the necessary arrangements for proper identification of students at dances, while Hardies himself will be in charge of the checking system at athletic events, he revealed.

"From now on we must also request that cards be filled out in ink," Hardies said, "and students should be warned on that point."

Weekly Broadcast

Student Radio Program Slated For Lunch Hour

A weekly radio program piped only to the college cafeteria will be presented beginning Thursday afternoon from 12:15 to 12:50 p.m., Marie Weller, college broadcasting instructor today announced.

Planned as a weekly feature for the entertainment of students during lunch time, the program will regularly be heard on Wednesday mornings, but as there is a college holiday tomorrow the program will make its debut Thursday instead.

The program will consist of interviews with several students, recordings of the popular dance tunes of the day, and a summary of last minute college news, sports reviews and administration bulletins.

The idea was conceived by two radio broadcasting students, Bentley Schoenfeld, and Len Gross, Schoenfeld and Gross will write and broadcast the program.

"A program of somewhat the same type has been broadcast at San Mateo Junior College and has met with approval from faculty and students," Schoenfeld said.

Gross, Guardsman editor, commented that, "The program is being presented for the noon-time enjoyment of the students in the cafeteria, and any suggestions or criticisms will be greatly appreciated."

Such communications should be left in the Publications Office, Room 134.

Palace Hotel Announces Junior College Night

At prices specially reduced for students of the college, the Palace Hotel will honor the college at a Junior College Night in the newly redecorated Rose Room Bowl of that hotel on Friday night, September 27, Mary Frances Malone, campus representative, announced recently.

"Despite the fact that prices at the hotel have been raised for Artie Shaw and his orchestra, the hotel is offering those students who make their reservations with campus representatives a flat rate of $2.07 for two cover charges and one coca cola per person," Miss Malone said. "Students who check those prices against those regularly charged will be quick to realize their saving."

Singing Contest Sponsored

In connection with the Junior College Night, which will follow the football game against San Francisco State College, a singing contest similar to that staged last semester, will be held. Men and women interested in participating in the contest for the opportunity of singing at the affair are requested to submit their names to Miss Malone, Len Gross, and Lyle Shultz. In addition to singing, the man and woman chosen will receive complimentary cover charges for the evening, Miss Malone added.

"While we have not completed plans for the singing contest, it will probably take place during the afternoon on one day next week, possibly in one of the lecture halls, provided that Registrar Mohr's approval is given," she revealed.

Hotel Cooperation Offered

The affair will coincide with the State football game, and the success of similar college nights in the past after athletic events was taken as a criterion in planning this, she said.

Eagerness to cooperate with the college students for the success of the affair was expressed by Lyle L. Guslander of the Palace Hotel promotion department.

"If the college will arrange to send down the music for the college song, we will be pleased to play it in honor of the college students," Guslander announced. "We want the students to have a good time, above all else."

Early Reservation Urged

Necessity for putting in reservations through the campus representatives soon was emphasized by Miss Malone.

"Because of the large number of students who attend affairs of this sort, it is more than advisable for those desiring good tables to make their reservations very soon," she said. "We don't want to be compelled to disappoint persons who might come down and find no accommodations for them and their party."

Complete information concerning the affair can be received from any of the representatives, she declared.

Friday's Brawl

Sophs Eke Out Victory Against Frosh In Grim Fought Battles

Fighting with true Sophomoric heroism—and the help of the football team—the Sophs barely managed a victory against the invading Frosh in Friday's mythical brawl. Speaking with due reverence, it was definitely not a brawl. Call it an afternoon of friendly rivalry if you have to.

Though the spirit of the frosh team was, in the words of Coach Tom Wilson and Ted Theodus, AMS prexy, "Exceptional, the best that ever came to this college," it was outweighed particularly in the tug of war by the pigskin fanciers on the other end of the rope (rope by courtesy Eaton and Smith).

Spectators, of which there were, in the sponsors' opinion, a good number, perched precariously on the rocks above the athletic field and maintained a grim or else dazed silence while the sophs won the second and third sack races, the hog-tying, the jousting, and so ad infinitum, leaving the first sack race by mistake to the frosh.

In the tug of war, the expected stream of water which had been promised bloodthirsty spectators was very much absent. Theodus explained its absence by the ungraciousness of the fire department which refused to lend a hose. He pointed out the impossibility of using the only faucet on the field, a thin pipe of perhaps two inches in height. "Besides, the frosh drank all the water in that," he charged.

In case the various events aren't familiar to all students of the college —if they are you can stop now—a brief description of each follows:

1. Sack race—it seems there are sacks in the middle of the field and everybody grabs them and runs somewhere, last one home is a ——(fill in your own version).

2. Jousting—takes two to make one of these. One gets on the other's back and sophs shove frosh and vice versa off their mounts. What the better half does is immaterial so long as the rider doesn't use spurs. Team with last rider up wins.

3. Hog-tying—no offense meant by the title or is there? Everyone snaffles a rope and tries to tie the feet of their opponents. When an opponent is done up in a neat package, he is carried or dragged over the enemies line. Side with most provisions stored on its side wins.

Guardsman Desires First Issues Of Paper

Anyone having any or all the issues of The Guardsman of Volume One and desirous of giving them to the paper for its files should bring them to Room 134, Len Gross, editor of The Guardsman, requested today.

"We would appreciate it greatly if any person can comply with this request," he said.

Issues from this volume would help to complete the files, Gross explained. If enough copies can be collected to complete the files, they will be turned over to the library for a record of college history.

Women's Day At Fair Brings Holiday Tomorrow

No classes will meet tomorrow throughout the San Francisco school department according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. The holiday was declared by action of the San Francisco Board of Education because that day has been set aside by Fair authorities as Women's Day at the Exposition. The college will resume schedule as usual Thursday, with no further holidays during the week until Monday, November 11.

Employment Applications Accepted In Room 148

Applications for NYA employment are still being accepted in Room 148 Edward H. Redford, college NYA director, announced. They will be accepted until recently arrived funds have been exhausted, so students desiring employment should apply immediately, Redford said.

Workers now employed on NYA are advised to remember that definite changes have been instituted in the handling of the time schedules and that failure to abide by the newly established regulations will result in their being dropped from the NYA.

"Time slips must now be turned in the day after the payroll period ends, October 7, and must be kept by the supervisor and not by the worker. Supervisors failing to follow directions will lose the use of further NYA help," Redford added.

Such stringetn rules have been set up because the "time slips" are now sent directly to the government where they are checked for errors, and incorrect slips would result in a slowing up of NYA continuity.

Redford also observed that changes have been made, for the better, in connection with NYA typists who will now have regular working schedules. "Previously," Redford stated, "typists were not sure whether or not they would be able to get all of their hours in, but, with the inception of our new policy, workers who do typing need not worry."

According to Redford a department has been established from which typists are sent and in which their schedules are arranged so as to provide for completed time programs.

"As yet student typists are not always available to all departments of the college, but we expect to relieve this situation presently," Redford concluded.

Perry, Nelson Selected To Advise Low Freshmen

To advise members of the freshman class, Mary Perry, assistant in the registrar's office, and Nelson Wells, science instructor, were appointed officially last week to act in that capacity by the administration. Miss Perry can be located in Room 121 and Dr. Wells in Room 327 for consultation.

To Start The Season

First Football Rally This Thursday; Eisan Featured

"To get the football off to its best year in the history of our college will be the purpose of Thursday's rally at 11 o'clock," was the statement issued recently by Pete Aydelotte, head yell leader. "Because of the holiday tomorrow, it is necessary for us to postpone the rally until that time in the center court."

Besides the customary yells which are a part of every rally there will be guest speakers, introductions of athletics, and also several new ideas in the way of rally entertainment, he said.

Guest speaker will be Varsity Coach Lee Eisan, who will comment on the game with Placer Friday night. Several members of the team will be introduced to the student body to better acquaint the members of the school with the men on the team, Aydelotte declared.

The rally will take place in the center court, scene of last week's rally and will continue for a half hour, according to tentative plans he repeated, urging a wide attendance.

Specific word has been received from the dean's office that all students report to class immediately at completion of the rally. Aydelotte requested that all students comply to this request as it is through this agreement with the dean's office that permission was received for the rally.

Aydelotte will be assisted in this rally by his two new assistant yell leaders, Bill Menary and Merrill Steele. These two men were chosen from a group of 12 who contested for the honor of assisting Aydelotte in getting up student interest in the current athletic campaign.

Menary has been an assistant yell leader of the college for the past two semesters, and this will be his third semester in that capacity. In his high school days, he was head yell leader at Balboa High School.

Steele is a sophmore and his yell leading experience consists of a semester spent at Oakland High School as yell leader.

"The competition for these positions was very keen," said Aydelotte, "and I had a tough time making my choice."

"I am very proud of the men I did choose," Aydelotte continued, "and I am sure that with their help we shall have bigger and better rallies than ever before. We also want to see many of the students and faculty out at the football game at Seals Stadium Friday night."

Aydelotte and members of the rally committee have been active during Orientation Week in giving out frosh buttons to freshmen students and assisting during registration.

100 Football Posters Set For Store Distribution

One hundred season football posters have been arranged for purchase by the publicity committee for display in various stores, Hugh Waite, publicity committee chairman, announced.

No posters on the bulletin board or walls of the college are allowed without the OK of the publicity committee. This resolution was recently passed by the Executive Council. Any club or organization desiring to display posters must present those posters to the committee the day before they are to appear, Waite stressed.

For the benefit of the new students the official bulletin board of the Associated Students is located in front of the student body office, Waite directed.

Committee appointments by Waite include Marion MacKillop, Barbara Brown, Sylvester McAtee, and Barbara Randall.

Anyone interested in serving on the publicity committee, Waite said, should get in touch with him early this week at the student body office.

AMS

Bonfire Date Set Forward

Having secured President A. J. Cloud's approval of the proposed Associated Men Students' bon-fire which is to take place of the cancelled smoker, Ted Theodus, AMS president, announced that plans for the affair are being rushed.

The bonfire is scheduled to be held the night of September 26, which will be the eve of the college football game with San Francisco State College. According to Theodus, a portable public address system will probably be installed. "All freshmen should come to this affair," he said, "as we will introduce prominent faculty members, some of the football squad, and several outside notables."

Reminding women students that the bonfire is for men only, Theodus promised that it would more than make up for the smoker. He said it would be held on the hill near the gyms at 7:45 p.m. Admission is by Associated Student card which entitles the holder to refreshments. Enough refreshments for 1000 students will be supplied he added.

The complete program for the bonfire will be released in the near future.

In addition to working on bonfire plans, Theodus and his committee are already deep in plans for the forthcoming traditional barn dance. The dance will be held either on Friday night, October 25, or on Friday, November 1, Theodus said. He pointed out that the Fridays considered are those just before and just after Halloween.

Expecting to hold the dance in the women's gym, Theodus promised to obtain a well-known college band for the occasion. Theodus also hinted a prize costume contest.

Sophs To Rectify Lack Of Tradition

By EVE BURKEY

Theyre' growing grass, planting trees, installing lights, parking facilities, and blackboards, but with all that the college is still lacking in one essential—where, is its tradition?

No walk, reserved for the sacred tread of sophomores winds down the mountain, no bench upon which luckless frosh dare not rest adorns the grounds. Because of this tragic lack the college is in danger of being considered noveau rich, or so say knowing observers.

All is not yet lost though. Guided by President Alden Thorogood the high sophs have pledged themselves to remedy this omission and have promised to set to work immediately on the installation of maybe a soph walk or at least, a bench.

"We have a committee working on setting up tradition," Thorogood announced. "We expect our biggest and best soph week since we are now in the new building." He advised men students to elect the sophomore sweetheart as soon as possible.

The case for tradition looks good from here.

Last Minute Campus News

• Trood Appointed to Head Year-Book

Dorothy Trood, former vice-president of the Associated Students, has been appointed temporary chairman of the college year-book.

Miss Trood said the assistance of anyone with previous year-book experiance would be appreciated.

Plans for the book are now nearing completion and have met with the approval of the administration.

• Special Train for Sacramento Game

Negotiations have been completed for a special train to carry students to the Sacramento game on October 18. The train will leave here at 3 p.m., and the trip will cost $1.75.

According to present plans, a car for dancing and an observation will be available for the sole use of college students.

Further details will be published in next Friday's Guardsman.

Student Courtesy Bans Disruption Of Lectures

MANY students of the college seem to be unaware of the fact that certain things tolerated in high school are not in the best of taste here.

One of those things is the matter of disrupting a class by walking into the room and asking the instructor a question.

To say that such a procedure is rude is putting it rather mildly. No one likes to be interrupted in the midst of some discussion and college instructors are no different.

Interrupting a lecture not only breaks the train of thought of the class but is disconcerting to the instructor as well.

There is really nothing so important that it cannot wait until the end of the class period.

Instructors at the University of California and other colleges in the bay area do not have this trouble, for the students seem to understand that they should see the instructor before or after class and not bother him in between.

The college has a great many friendly and understanding instructors, something a great many other institutions cannot boast. It is only right that we extend to them the common courtesies we expect from others.

Collegiate Mixer Gets Approval, Criticism

SOME glowing reports have been received about the collegiate mixer dance held last Wednesday.

The joint AWS-AMS committee that handled the affair came in for the largest share of praise, being described as the most efficient and active committees ever to function within the college.

Student cooperation at the first gym dance of the semester was very good, and its continuance will speak very highly for the attitude of the majority of the student body.

There were a few adverse criticisms given.

Although the committee as a whole functioned very well, the dance as a mixer, designed to acquaint the new students with the old, did not quite carry out its purpose. Although there were some of the new students dancing and seemingly enjoying themselves, the great majority were standing on the sidelines as spectators.

There is little that committees and organizations can do to assuage this situation without the sincere cooperation of the incoming students themselves. Dances, with their air of friendliness and informality, should prove the perfect agent to bring out this feeling of kinship between students. Still, however, the newcomers remain in the background.

Students coming to the college from high school are naturally somewhat at a loss for the first few weeks for they have begun work in an institution that is run on an entirely different basis than high school.

It is because of this that the student officers and older students should do their utmost to make the strangers feel at home. Perhaps at the next mixer dance, this point will be stressed.

Shoving chewing gum underneath the chairs and marking the walls with fingerprints were two other criticisms.

These errors in courtesy probably were not deliberate but merely examples of the occasional carelessness that exists among students wherever they are.

These faults are not particularly glaring, yet they could be avoided.

If we are to keep the campus in good condition, things like that should not occur. Perhaps if we stop and think for a moment these incidents won't occur again.

Imperturbable British Inspire Unique Stories

NO ONE country but England could have given birth to the story that United Press dispatched from bomb-wracked Britain last week. It told of the King's request that tea be served to him and the Queen directly following their confinement in a shelter during a severe air raid. The story is not momentus in itself, but it serves to illustrate, like the action of an aged woman several weeks ago who refused to enter a air raid shelter that she might see a bombing raid in progress, the imperturbable calm of the British who refuse to be intimidated by a modern scourge.

Everywhere, everyday, similar incidents displaying traditional English sangfroid occur in England. This quality in the English has often been the butt of many jokes. Perhaps, this time, it will enable them morally and physically to resist the attack on their country.

The daily heroism of the noble and common people gives tangible substance to the grim, stern, but hopeful words of the Right Honorable Winston Churchill. In speaking of Hitler, Churchill said, "Little did he know the spirit of the British Nation." It is this spirit that the invader will have to reckon with, a spirit that is strongly national.

Rupert Brooke, one of England's great warpoets, expressed beautifully this vehement British love of country when he said:

If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is forever England. There shall be

In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware. . .

Constitution Day Now Symbol With Added Force

CONSTITUTION Day, celebrated throughout the land today, has always been a heart-warming symbol of all that we Americans hold dear to us. Each year the realization of our most precious possession is brought closer to us with world-wide events thundering about us. Bloody conflicts, nations enslaving one-another, crushing one another—all this adds stark realism to our observance of that most valued object in the United States of America, the Constitution. With might prevalent throughout the world, we can well look to our Constitution with thankful hearts, and solemnly vow to protect it with our lives and keep it at the head of our American heritage.

Meet The Students

By DOROTHY PIERCE

FEELING like a spring onion, strong enough for anything, your interviewer set forth seeking a prospective interviewee.

Walking down the hall at the psychological moment came blonde, blue-eyed (what again?) Marcella Mahoney. After a few preliminary bouts—introductions, weather, classes—we came to Marcella herself. Miss Mahoney disclosed she was registered for her third semester of college, the first two having been spent at San Francisco State.

This fact naturally lead into the time worn question of how she likes her new home. "Junior college is wonderful," Miss Mahoney gushed. "Everyone is so friendly, even the instructors. Why at State, the teachers hardly ever gave a sign of recognition even after you've been in their classes for a whole term." More power to our instructors!

As usual the man question popped up. Marcella agrees that our men are very handsome indeed. (pals, your chests, men) and, she adds, "there's so many of them." Miss Mahoney said that at State the women outnumber the men about four or five to one. (Not thinking of transferring, are you men?)

"I'm an English major, and my ambition is to become a teacher," Miss Mahoney volunteered. "I have no particular hobby. I like to dance, sing, read, and bicycle."

Marcella is working for her junior college degree (aren't we all?) After that she intends to further her education at some higher institution of learning.

Her favorite color is blue; her favorite class is dramatics; her favorite reading matter, The Guardsman. (Mr. Gross, take your bow.)

Her pet peeves are long lanky hair (ahem!) loud voices; candid camera shots; and jitterbugging.

At home, Miss Mahoney confided, when she is not occupied doing homework or housework, she is "busily burning fudge." She invites any male student to drop in and sample some. (Marcella, ask him if he has a friend).

Miss Mahoney commented upon the college's wide and varied extra-curricular activities. She intends to join one of the clubs and is anxiously awaiting the first dance.

She is fascinated by the astronomy done, and would "just love to take the course" if she had the time.

Speaking of time—your reporter realized dead-line time was nearing, was, in fact here.

The Spectator

DEPARTING from the usual routine of reviewing a motion picture, Spectator, today, lifts the covers off the coming Fall motion picture season. To anticipate some of the highlights in the entertainment world. Judging from the announced product, the Fall Season should maintain an exceptional standard in entertainment values.

Charlie Chaplin's long-awaited production, The Great Dictator holds the main spotlight. Chaplin, as usual, has put millions of his own money into this along with all the creative genius he possesses. A typical Chaplin production, Charley has written the script, directed and produced the entirety, written the musical score to bring to life this satirical travesty on Adolph Hitler.

That perrenial master of the epic, Cecil B. DeMille will have an entry in the field, Northwest Mounted Police. Here in technicolor, with a fine cast headed by Gary Cooper, Madeline Carroll and Paulette Goddard, the sweeping saga of the guardians of the North should unfold with typical DeMille extravagance.

Another film in epic manner to anticipate is Zanuck's Brigham Young. With the title role portayed by the brilliant Broadway star, Dean Jagger, Brigham Young should raise itself to cinematic heights with its American saga of a great man's pilgrimage.

That master of the screen, Frank Capra, has another up his sleeve. Remember Lost Horizon? Well we say more. His latest contribution is Meet John Doe, co-starring Barbara Stanwyck and Gary Cooper. If Capra maintains his high average, his latest opus should be a Fall must-see.

Spring Parade starring Deanna Durbin should hit the screens shortly. The scintillating star of so many hits should be in her element here. Incidentally, this will be Miss Durbin's first period picture and will also exhibit her dancing talents for the first time.

To mention another epic, we need only point to Alexander Korda's long-delayed technicolor filming of The Thief of Bagdad. Here should be a great spectacle with lavish settings. The war has delayed the making of this adaption of the Arabian Night classic. The Entire company has been forced to switch production from England to Hollywood, but in spite of such sundry difficulties, The Thief of Bagdad should be a pageant of color.

Perhaps at this point, it would be proper to announce our choice of King of Coming Attractions. To all indications, this will be the Wall Disney-Leopold Stokowski collaboration, Fantasia. There will be blended the magic tones of great classical music with the sprightly, laughable Disney cartoon humor to bring a full-length feature to life. This innovation in theatrical entertainment will require special sound equipment in theaters to fully reproduce the musical tones in all their true fidelity. Fantasia may well be the forerunner to a new cycle of entertainment, Watch for Fantasia.

Film adaptions of best-sellers will continue to pour from Hollywood as they have in the past. Chad Hanna with the title role amply filled by Henry Fonda should be promising. How Green Was My Valley will also be filmed by Twentieth-Century-Fox. As yet, casting is incomplete.

Those rooting, tooting Westerns, a Hollywood tradition, won't be missing this Fall. There'll be the usual so-called "grind" output and the super hoss opry's. Rangers of Fortune, The Westerner, Western Union, Calamity Jane, and Santa Fe Trail. The latter will prove particularly interesting because of the presence of Raymond Massey in the cast. This fine actor will insure a memorable performance.

In numerating the highlights of the coming season, one should not omit the mention of Orson Welles and his movie debut. Welles has been in the southland about a year working on various plots for his first film. To all appearances, the "Boy Genius" who frightened America out of its wits with his Martian invasion, has finally started filming his premiere presentation. We are in no position to say whether Welles' offering will be auspicious or merely a sorry flop, but is should be interesting at least.

If plans previously announced go through, David O. Selznik, the man who gave the world Gone With The Wind, will commence work on his next feature, Joan of Arc. In these words, one can foresee a mighty screen decopment that may equal the success of Margaret Mitchell's long narative of the old south.

All movie fans eagerly await Pat O'Brien's interpretation of Knute Rockne in the film based on the famous Notre Dame coach.

CAMBRIDGE, ENGLAND—(ACP)—For the first time in Great Britain a university is subsidizing an investigator of psychic phenomena. The innovation is a scholarship worth $1,500 a year, open to both sexes, founded by Trinity College, Cambridge, from a bequest left to the college as a memorial to a former fellow of Trinity and founder of the Psychical Research Society.

The investigator must approach the task "with an open mind, willing and determined to cope with the peculiar problems involved in a scientific spirit."

PITTSBURGH, PA.—(ACP)—While thousands of students sit quietly in their classes in the University of Pittsburgh's Cathedral of Learning, lightning may be shivering the spine of the Cathedral, for it has been struck more than any other building in the university district, declares H. E. Dyche, professor and head of the department of electrical engineering.

A bolt of lightning which attained the crest magnitude of 21,000 amperes, enough electricity to supply four and a half Cathedrals at one time, hit the main University building.

Three direct contacts have been observed. The first occured early last spring, when 16,000 amperes shot through the Cathedral. A 3,000 volt distributor was shattered by a stroke. The second "sensational surge" was confirmed on June 10 and reached 21,000 amperes. The last recorded hit came sometime between October 21 and 25, 1939.

"What we need is not so much technological development but an increased development in the art of living. We've made great progress during the last 40 years in mechanical development, but there's been a tremendous lag in social development." Dr. Marion B. Smith, assistant professor of sociology at Louisiana State University, suggests a re-weighing of emphasis in America's educational institutions.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

• Mr. Moto, Please Take A Foto
Editor, The Guardsman:

Living as we do in an age of miracles, we sometimes find it hard to believe that something can be repeated until it loses its flavor. An old adage tells us that "familiarity breeds contempt." Perhaps we should then have that feeling for some of the cuts seen in The Guardsman. Unfortunately, to those unfamiliar with the workings of this institution, is the newspaper published here, but which uses cuts that were old when Roosevelt was inaugurated for whichever term you care to pick.

On page 1 of Vol. XI, The Guardsman, we observe the smiling faces of Lyle Shultz and Alden Thorogood peeking at us from cuts which have become old friends during past semesters. Being vaguely known to the aforesaid gentlemen, we know, although the college apparently doesn't, that they are capable of changing their expressions. Shh, don't let the Ex Council hear of this, or it might never permit a new photograph to be taken of the college's personalities. If it will help the Council, we will ask The Guardsman to economize on printing by "foto-ing" the subjects. What a "ghastly" idea.

Turning to page 4 of this toteless rag, we see the Military Science class plotting the same piece of ground they have been plotting since land values went up.

3000 students wearing the same face ad infinitum. Prisoned for semester after semester upon a 3 inch by 5 inch cut, forever destined to be recognized only when they might happen to wear their Guardsman expression.

What is the matter? Photography is a comparatively simple operation. You press a little button and out comes a face. Maybe somebody ought to press a button and release the purse-strings of "X" (we're saving on printing as our contribution toward better photography—in fact, any NEW photography. —

Press Agent of Life & Look

Editor's Note:

We realize as well as you the lack of cuts in The Guardsman. Unfortunately there is nothing we can do about the matter as we have no money for new pictures. All the money allotted The Guardsman by the Executive Council goes for the publishing of the paper. We are unable to issue two papers a week and have new cuts. Sorry.

• Again—Pictures
Editor, The Guardsman:

I am only one student of the college wondering where all the pictures for the sports page are. If I am not mistaken, in previous semesters the sports page of The Guardsman has been crowded with sports pictures, especially football pictures, as well as those of other types of sports. When the campus was all over the city, pictures could be taken and printed; now, when we have a home of our own we should be able to have twice as many pictures. As it is too soon for pictures of football games to appear, why can't pictures of scrimmage be taken, or of individuals who show great promise for the coming season?

A Lover of Pictures

Editor's note: The same applies to the sports page as the rest of the paper. Please read editor's note of above letter for explanation.

• There's A Place For Refuse
Editor, The Guardsman:

Our S.F.J.C. is a new college. It is modern and functional in design and provides the utmost in classroom convenience and facility. Its physical architecture, as well as its inner comfort, should arouse a feeling of personal pride in the heart of every student privileged to call it their "day-time home."

But obviously there are certain students in the school who are not only disinterested and unappreciative.

Shots At RAMdom . . .

LADIES beware! In our best Dorothy Dix demeanor we say, in resonant tones, to you college women, "Beware the avid gleam in your swain-of-the-moment's eyes." Take with a proton of cheap salt his clumsy attempts at adulation. Look askew, yea, even astant, when he offers to take you out and see his baby nephew. (This is a subtle attempt to introduce his potential paternal predilections.) When he squints into your eyes and claims they are comparable to limpid South Sea lagoons, you must discard your vanity and face the facts! For when your 20th century Casanova is blurbing this rot, 100,293½ to 1 his mind is far away and you enter his thoughts only as a means to an end. We perceive disdainful, even incredible visages upon our feminine readers. You mutter, "My Dickie isn't like That."

But ladies do you know that your Dickie's mind resembles a movie montage in these tender moments? He sees before him marching feet; hands, dramatically cleaning a gun; men, his own age, arising at unholy hours; more marching feet, marching in shoes that really fit the feet marching next to them. Yes, you have guessed it; he sees before him, in a word, conscription. And, through you, ladies, does he descry an escape mechanism. It's not pleasant, is it girls? We are not fain to assume the role of an iconoclast; but when our womanhood is menaced by ulterior motives, we must, in fairness to our conscience, (yes, a few men still have one) cry out in protest. We know several young ladies in the college who sport news from time to time of their flames. We trust these revelations have come to them in time.

MEN beware! Now is the time to decide whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous marriage or to take arms in conscription. Ay, gentlmen, there's the rub. What would you have, signing your lives away until your decree became final; or spending a year at a governmental resort? Or, in the sucient words of the Assyrian philosopher, and theosopher Otineb Giwselhics, "Ich, ipse nugae virginibus puerisque," you have that alternative. You may or may not concur in Giwselhics' views, personally, we fall in with his wisdom. But since Giwselhic would be the last one even to dully pursue a dilatory way—to deny you the right to your own fatuous thoughts, we shall do likewise. Go your own uneven way, but bear this in mind: "He who engineers a mesalliance usually ends up ——" (Three words censored here.) Credit for this last bit of counsel should properly go to Iahmae Giwselhic, brother of the aforementioned Giwselhic, also a profound student. The study of lycanthropy rather than marital bliss occupied most of Iahmal's sleeping hours, however.

Men's Gym Class Instructors Have Woes; WAA Turns Kiddish

COACH LEE EISAN has troubles. Not only has his gym class the biggest bunch of cutters, (of which we are a member—of the gym class, Oscar, not the cutters—or are we?) but he has 80 pachyderms which he has to cram football into. 'Tis a cinch he can't keep 80—he must cut it down to almost half the size, but he can't be cruel and drop that many guys. Jack Gaddy, his side kick is in it just as deep. We'd hate to be in their shoes.

WAA To Play Field Hockey

So that the men of the college will not monopolize the athletic field, the WAA plans to play field hockey on it. Open letter to Russ Sweet: Dear Russ—You will find many prospective athletes in those characters who sprint down the halls to the cafeteria during lunch hours. Also, tell Mr. Eisan that there are prospects in those mugs who weave in and out the crowd in front of the ASSFJC office. They block about three men at a time.

Intramural Program On Experimental Basis

Because of the strangeness of the new surroundings, and the usual commotion of being settled, the intramural sports program will more or less be put on an experimental basis this semester, reported Louis "Dutch" Conlan, sports adviser for men.

The three events planned are basketball, touch tackle football, and boxing. Any club or society is eligible to compete, and all men are encouraged to participate in as many sports as possible.

Every participant will be given a thorough physical examination before entering any activity. Finalists of the boxing tournament will meet at a men's smoker scheduled later in the semester, Conlan said.

The physical education department has been alloted $125 for intramural activities, and awards will be given to winning teams and contestants, Conlan also reported.

During the past years, intramural sports have been going on with increased popularity. First place last season was won by Alden Smith's ski team, who managed to wallop the highly touted blockmen of the college. Because of a unified club advisory system, this semester's games promise to be of a greater attraction.

No Swim Team Until Spring Says Hurley, New Coach

Although there won't be a swimming team representing the college this semester, more than 4 prospective swimming champs invaded the Jefferson High School pool at Daly City last Thursday, coached by John Hurley.

Hurley, who is new at the college this semester, remarked that he planned to have a team next spring. Uncertain as to the ability of his swimming prospects, Hurley decided not to attempt to form a swimming team for this fall.

Two Swim Classes

There are two swimming classes at the Jefferson pool this semester, and Hurley plans to test the mermen in order to find out what their ability is.

The college has leased the pool for the remainder of this year. Then, after a two month lapse, it will resume swimming next March.

Strokes, Dives Demonstrated

Hurley will stress the mastery of various strokes and dives this season and will undertake the task of building up a team next March.

Madamba, Hare, Meade Score In Tennis

Three of the college's former tennis stars came into the news recently, according to Tom Wilson, college tennis coach.

Bill Madamba, according to unconfirmed rumors, won a tennis tournament. Madamba was last semester's number one player on the local squad. Madamba has been seen around the college this semester, according to Wilson, but he has had two years of conference competition and is ineligible for further competition.

Hare Places Second

Another college tenniser, Jack Haré, entered an Oakland tournament and placed second. Wilson was unable to say who Hare's partner was, but he did know that Bill Canning, also a former Ram tennis player, was one member of the team that defeated Hare and his partner in the finals of the tourney.

Hare, according to Wilson, injured his side during the play, and continued to place second. Wilson is not positive whether Hare broke a rib or severly strained his side. He believes it to be the former.

Mead Goes To Stockton

Chet Mead, the third former college campaigner, entered a Stockton tournament. At present Wilson had no available information as to how Mead performed in the tournament.

As the college tennis situation, Wilson said that he was unable as yet to comment on the prospects. After about two weeks he hopes to be able to have a line on his players.

Song Contest Continues; Frosh Sadden Soph Hopes

Women composers of the college may hear their lyrics sung by a Women's Athletic Association chorus if they hurry to join the current song competition sponsored by the organization, Jeanne Arnold, chairman of the contest said today.

This suggestion she added, is a means of inducing women of the college to enter the song contest which is being held between the Freshman and Sophomore women of the college.

Purpose of the contest is to provide songs for WAA meetings, songs commemorating specific sports, as well as songs for introducing people at various WAA social activities, according to Miss Arnold.

Folk Tunes May Be Obtained

For the convenience of those who are unable to compose tunes for their words, a suitable list of old folk tunes may be obtained in the checkroom on the second floor of the gymnasium, she said.

According to Grace Neli, chairman of the freshman team, interest in song writing has already been shown by several women, but Miss Arnold reported that practically no sophomore interest has been forthcoming.

Contest Closes September 23

All those who intend submitting either the words to songs, or the lyrics and melody of an original song, are urged by Miss Arnold, to begin work as soon as possible, because the closing date of the contest is September 23.

Songs submitted will be judged, and their first presentation will be at WAA Bar-b-q, which will be held at Sigmund Stern Grove, on September 25.

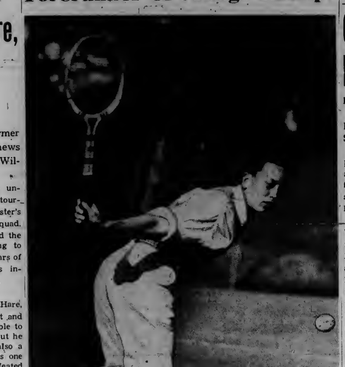
Lantagne Has Big Turnout; Schedule To Be Released

More than 30 athletes turned out for soccer practice last week, much to the expressed pleasure of Coach Joe Lantagne. The league schedule, still in a formulative state, will be announced Friday, according to Lantagne.

"The boys looked rather tired after last week's workouts," Lantagne announced. "We hope to get them in shape to start practice contests some time in the very near future."

It will be hard to make any predictions about the championship possibilities this early, Lantagne remarked, but he felt that the men would make a good showing after a few practice games had been played.

Several veteran shinkickers, as well as many newcomers, have turned out, Lantagne commented. Some of the boys starred on high school teams, and should prove themselves capable of winning in college competition.



Many Return To Sign For Fall Basketball

Considering the date as being too early yet to make any statements as to the outlook on fall basketball, Tom Widson, college basketball coach, refused to make any statements concerning the local quintet.

He did say that some of last semester's veterans had signed for the pre-season practice. Prominent among them, indicated Wilson, were last season's center and guard, Bob Staynor and Joe "Fox" Pfahnl.

Pfahnl was seized with appendicitis right after the last game of the schedule and was forced into the hospital. Pfahnl claims complete recovery from his illness and is yearning for action.

Forerunner Of College Champs

Members of the college racquet squad Bill Madamba, Jack Hare and Chet Meade made names for themselves during the summer months as did former Ramster Hal Wagner pictured above. Although Hare, during one of his matches, suffered an injury, he managed to play his game holding his own. He is expected to be completely recovered for the coming season to win more laurels for himself, his college and his coach, Tom Wilson. (See story adjoining.)

Track Veterans Return; Prospects Bright—Sweet

Prospects for next season's track team look brighter than they have for several semesters, announced Russ Sweet, college track mentor.

The field events especially are well in hand, he commented. Returning veterans include Keith Groswird, who vaulted 13 feet 6 inches for the Olympic Club, Larry Krochet, and a transfer from San Mateo Junior College, Bob Bowers.

McMeekin Returns

Among those coming back for duty in the running events is Jack McMeekin, member of last semester's relay team and quarter miler.

Sweet lists approximately 40 men registered for pre-season track, and as yet has been able to get held.

Another feature of the spread, will be the introduction of the new songs which are judged winners in the song contest now being promoted.

At a recent WAA council meeting, the plans for the spread were discussed, as well as plans for a "kid" party, which will be held sometime late in October or early in November, according to Bertha Mae Keller, physical education instructor.

Purpose of the "kid" party, according to Miss Keller, is to commemorate the six year anniversary of the WAA in this college. The "kid" party, which will feature "kid" games and contests, such as kiddy car races, will offer the women of the college an opportunity to dress in "everyday" garb. Stressing the point that all WAA activities are for all the women of the college, Miss Keller stated that this affair will be no exception.

"It is the responsibility of WAA to plan a coeducational program for all the women of the college," Miss Keller said.

Friday Afternoons Used

"That is why we have especially set aside every Friday afternoon, between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock, for special contests and playdays, as well as for mixing activities for the women of the college," she added.

Further information is available at the WAA headquarters on the second floor of the gym or from any of the following committee for the spread: Betty Teter, general chairman, June and Irene Schanick, entertainment; Dorothy Nelson, hostess, invitations; Bernice Strube, sports; Rita Welman, arrangements; Allene Watt, publicity; and Rita McDonald, rearrangements.

Opening Encounter

Grid Squad Meets Placer Friday At Seals Stadium

By KEI HORI

Three days of practice are left before the initial encounter with Placer, this Friday night in the half shell diamond field of Seals Stadium.

Probable starting line-ups for the Ram team was released for publication by Head Coach Lee Eisan. Back for his second year as pilot of the college team, Eisan, in his initial year, made a name for himself as a potential threat in the athletic coaching field.

Line-Up Finally Released

Back in the pivot location, Dick Watson, stubby meatball will be flanked by Al Larracou, formerly of Berkeley High, and Clark Johnson, another returning veteran. George Meyers, 6 ft. 1 in. tackle returns to his favorite spot as will his comrade of the other side, Bill "Windy" Windeler, bespectacled behemoth. Four prospects look forward to filling the flank positions. They are Herb Taylor and Ken Hagen, the only returning veterans for that spot, with Howie Council, all-city end from Lowell and Bill Ross, formerly of Mission.

Al Nauman, spark of the '39 team will hold his spot at quarter, with Dave Cunningham in at blocking half and Luke Lowell as the running half. Johnny Blokemore, 207 pound plunging full hails from Berkeley to fill his spot.

Alternating at the tail spot will be Jimmie Honnert, all-city half from Lowell High. A potential triple threat, Honnert has not been definitely set by Head Coach Eisan as to his permanent position.

Power To Meet Placer

For this Friday's encounter with Placer, it was unofficially rumored that Coach Eisan will use a wide open attack with full power over the weak side. As for passes, they will be used as few times as possible, depending mostly upon the ground gaining of the ball packers and the stubbornness of the line.

With the ineligibility of Leo Leggett, the college has lost one of the best open field runners. Closest to this is the shifty Jimmie Honnert and Al Nauman. However, the loss of Leggett will be sorely missed.

Eisan's Second Year

Head Coach Eisan, who played football for the University of California in the late '20s, is in his second year as master mentor for the college Rams. Defeated in only one conference game last year, Eisan claims to his credit a win over the college's greatest rival, the State team's Golden Gaters. With deliberation and coolness, he and his assistant, John Gaddy, managed to men over a massive State team, stripping the Gator of 19 points. Placer, the college's first rival, was also stung for that amount.

Practice will continue throughout the week, with a possible lay-off Friday, the day before the Ram's first game.

As yet, the type of game to be played by the Mountaineers is unknown, but may be released by the publicity department of that college by today or tomorrow.

Johnny Bates, Ram manager, released that the college has obtained new playing pants to be worn for this game. Made of gabardine, the pants are more slippery than the canvas type. "This should be good for our open field runners," Johnnie said.

College Ski Club Holds First Meeting Tomorrow

First meeting of the semester, for the college Ski Club will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in Room 252, Bob Ogg, president of this ice-scratching group, announced.

All members of the club last semester and those who wish to join this semester are urged to attend this meeting, Ogg said. Students who checked their interest in this sport group on the Club Advisory Board blanks will also be notified of the first general meeting, he added.

"Activities this fall will be concentrated on starting training and preparing for a meet within the club, and also for forming a ski team to compete with other colleges at the end of this semester in January," Ogg commented. "At our meetings we'll have talks by prominent skiers and movies on ski technique, so members will be very busy where skiing is concerned."

During the time of Edward II and Edward III of England men dressed half the body in one color, the other half in another; frequently both colors appeared in stripes on one leg.

WAA

Women Hold Swim Classes

By NORA BAKER

College swimming classes at the Y.W.C.A., which were formerly held on Tuesdays and Thursdays, are now being held from 9 to 11 a.m. on Saturdays, Bertha Mae Keller, physical education instructor announced.

"Most women seem to be pleased with the new arrangements, because now they will be able to go in swimming on Saturday morning, and have their hair 'set' in the afternoon at favorite beauty shops," she said.

Water Polo Planned

Future plans of the swimming classes, according to Miss Keller, are for more water games, such as water polo.

"Many women at the splash party last semester said that they would like to play water games during swimming classes, so the WAA will go in for aquatics this year, as well as for diving and swim meets?" Miss Keller added.

Another important sports activity class date, disclosed by Miss Keller, was that of the coeducational riding classes which are held every Thursday afternoon at the San Francisco Riding Academy on Stanyan and Haight Streets, from 1:30 to 5 p.m., with a cost of between $11 and $15 per semester.

In order to excite more feminine interest in the sport, Miss Keller said, "This semester, some of the most handsome men are out for riding. Since the sport is coeducational, there is a great opportunity for making acquaintances."

Hockey, which according to Miss Keller is one of the most well-liked sports by women, has seen a remarkable turnout this semester. Miss Keller revealed that for the first time in the history of the college there has been a signup of enough women in the college to make up two complete hockey teams.

Elections Being Held

According to Miss Keller, starting last Friday and continuing through this week, election of managers for the various sport clubs, such as hockey, tennis, swimming, badminton, riding, are being held.

Promised in the near future, Miss Keller said, is a hockey playday with the women of San Francisco State College.

Miss Keller also sent out a call for all members of the Women's Block society to plan to be present at the dedication of the gymnasium on October 3, so that they can assist in ushering. Members of the block society, of which there are about 20 in all, are those women who have received the highest award possible in WAA.

Lantagne To Train Men For Intramural Bouts

Still waiting for an opportunity to meet his boys, Joe Lantagne, Ram boxing instructor, is making plans for the Intramural Boxing Tournament to be held toward the end of the semester.

Rallies, registration, and innumerable other events, have kept Lantagne from seeing his boxing prospects. When he finally does get them together, he plans to teach them the fundamentals of the pugilistic art.

"I want it understood," Lantagne exclaimed, "that no boy will be allowed to fight until he has proved to me that he knows how to defend himself properly."

All men entering the intramural matches will have to undergo strenuous training, he remarked.

It is too early in the semester to predict future boxing events, but Lantagne mentioned that several matches might develop during the course of the semester.

College Military Science Students At Camp McQuade

Ten students, enrolled last semester in the department of Military Science, yesterday began a program of intensive military training with the National Guard at Camp McQuade, near Watsonville.

Members of the 250th Coast Artillery, they were among the first to be called out in California by the recent legislation of the President, and the first to be called from the Bay Area.

The regiment, armed with 155mm. guns, is the only mobile artillery unit in the Pacific Coast.

Edward Terzian and Eugene Center, members of B Battery, are awaiting their appointments as second lieutenants at Camp McQuade, according to James S. Hughes of the college Military Science Division.

Already designated for posts as second lieutenants with the Guard are John Benton and Howard Cloud, former students here, Hughes said.

James Huntsman, who continued his education at the University of California after his graduation here, has already received his commission, and has been assigned to the regular army for one year of active duty. He is now stationed at Fort Winfield Scott.

Two former editors of The Guardsman; John Julius and Bill Frantz, were among those at Camp McQuade. During Frantz' period of editorship, The Guardsman attained national recognition when it was rated among the firs six junior college publications in the country.

Others who began training yesterday were Stanley Doughty, Robert Hawse, Ezra Morgan, William Noble, John Proctor, Raymond Rhode, John Stahmann, and Samuel Ware.

Leave For Camp

Pictured above are several members of the college Military Science class who are on duty with the 250th coast artillery regiment of the California national guard.

The guard was recently called out for a year's service by President Roosevelt after a bill permitting such a procedure was passed by Congress. The military science course has been discontinued for the present.

Jobs

Grads Need Personality

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—(ACP)—A college graduate has the best chance of getting a job in the business world if he has a good personality, former experience and specialized training, according to a recent survey conducted on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California.

Good grades in college rated a poor fourth.

Most employers indicated a preference for college-trained men over high school, business school or trade school graduates. They emphasized, however, that college-trained men should be equipped with some practical experience before graduation.

Among the faults that business men found with college graduates were that they are somewhat over-confident, that they expect the world to give them a job because they are graduates, and that they err in thinking that a diploma may be an excuse for an untidy appearance, careless work and a lack of desire to learn the fundamentals of business.

Today's Newspaper Reporter College Trained

AUSTIN, TEXAS — (ACP) — Today's composite reporter is 75 per cent college-trained, knows a little less about any given subject but boasts a working knowledge on far more subjects than his predecessor.

This is the finding of P. J. Thompson, chairman of the University of Texas department of journalism.

The old-time editors were well-informed on a few subjects, he said, but today's college-trained journalist has been at least "exposed" to a variety of fields that weren't opened to the old-timers in their composing-room apprenticeship.

"Probably 90 per cent of those entering journalism in 1940 will have college training" Thompson declared, "and perhaps 75 per cent will be products of journalism departments and schools."

Library Open To Students For Reference, Study

With registration over, the library is again back to normal and open to students for reference and study. Several new students have been added to the staff of assistants and more NYA members are being assigned to library work to give better and faster service, according to Marcus Skarstedt, librarian.

Assistants in the cataloging department are processing new books for use. Most of these books are vblumes of editions already on file, but have been added because of the increase in library circulation over last semester. The object of the department at present is to get the books requested by instructors and students ready for use and on the shelves.

tive, but are utterly lacking in a sense of pride for their new college.

This spirit is manifested by the display of empty lunch bags, sandwich wrappings, empty cigarette packages, empty milk bottles, burning cigarette butts, old newspapers, and even pieces of uneaten sandwich crusts thrown indifferently around the rear entrance of the school. The sum-total of this individual carelessness and selfish disregard of the other fellow's feelings, is an ugly area resembly a refuse heap. Students sitting out of doors during rest periods on the rear steps are forced not only to face this spread of refuse, but are also annoyed by the black stinging flies that have been attracted to the spot by an unerring instinct in search of bits of decaying food.

Why is it that a certain small group of students here are so utterly lacking in a feeling of pride for their college?

If for no other reason, it would seem that it might be wise for them to recognize that their Junior College days provide an experience in social living that might well be taken advantage of. For the same code of behavior is demanded within the school walls of their college, as is expected and demanded in the outside world.

So why not begin today to develop a social behavior pattern worthy of a decent American citizen? The elementary rules are simple. A sense of cleanliness. A sense of respect for the other fellow's feelings. And above all, a sense of pride in one's personal surroundings, whether in the privacy of one's own home, or in any other place one may find himself—public or otherwise.

And as a general reminder. There are two large galvanized containers standing in the area so disgustingly cluttered with lunch refuse. They are conspicuously displayed. They are to be used for but one purpose, and that is for the disposal of REFUSE.

Peanuts Contain Energy Says Biology Professor

PITTSBURGH, PA. — (ACP) — Briefly, here's a story and a half in a peanut shell.

All the energy the average person uses in his thinking during one day could be obtained by eating one peanut, says Dr. E. Alfred Wolf, associate professor of biology at the University of Pittsburgh. The average college student, however, uses that much energy in one hour's sustained mental work.

The average college student takes from 1,200 to 2,400 calories a day for mere substatence. Anything he does—even eating—must be added to this basal metabolism figure.

The average football player, for instance, needs enough energy to raise six gallons of water from freezing to boiling point, Dr. Wolf added.

You could talk for two hours on the energy you need to eat your food every day. Maybe that's the origin of the saying, "She'd rather talk than eat."

Then, the student who plays Bach on the piano adds only 40 calories to his basal metabolism; if he plays one of Teddy Wilson's musical gyrations, his figure will be upped to 580 calories, which is the same number used when trotting down to the corner pool room.

Wrestling is by far the most strenuous sport says Dr. Wolf. It would take 125 hours of thinking to use up the same energy that you must have for one hour's wrestling.

A note for girls who wish to reduce. If you eat enough proteins, these proteins will carry away the excess calories which you have eaten. Excess calories, you know, are responsible for that excess weight.

Market Street Car Tickets At Bank Soon

Beginning Thursday, Market Street Railway car tickets will be sold to all junior college students at the bank in Room 188, Michael M. Zarchin, faculty treasurer, announced.

Starting this week the bank is ready to return all book exchange money to the students, Zarchin said.

Municipal Railway car tickets may not be purchased more than two at a time. Signature and serial number are now required as the car tickets are not transferable, Zarchin explained.

Zarchin again reminded students that the bank is open only from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Social Committee To Meet, Adjust Social Calendar

To adjust the college social calendar, the social committee will meet at the home of Jean Arnold, Associated Students' vice-president, some time this month at a date still undecided.

"We postponed a previously scheduled meeting because of uncertainty concerning some activities," Miss Arnold said.

The Associated Students' vice-president heads the committee, other members of which are Alden Thorogood, Bill Williams, John Mowbray, Jim Honnert (class presidents elected last Tuesday), Barbara Brown, Marian MacKillop, and Henry Suerstedt.

Business

Jobs Available But No One To Fill Them---Marsh

Jobs open—
But no one to fill them!!
That's the slightly bewildering plight of the college business department as revealed by F. Grant Marsh, business head.

"There are jobs available," he said, "but no students qualified to fill them."

Pointing out that "the business world, recognizing the fact that a large number of people are unemployed, is able to pick and choose very carefully from among applicants by raising their standards," Marsh declared the result to be a raising in turn of the college standards to meet employers' qualifications.

Through the insurance and other business classes, the college has been steadily increasing the number of student placements until now, demand is threatening to exceed supply. Already this semester, three students have been placed in full-time positions; namely, Margaret Sommerset, Pearl Insurance Company; Edward Porter, Fireman's Fund Insurance Company; and John Riordan, Pacific National Fire Insurance Company, according to Marsh.

"In the few weeks since college opened, I have had calls for male stenographers and I have no one to fill them," Marsh said. "It's gratifying to know, however, that the number of male students enrolled in the beginning classes is increasing even more than this semester than ever before," he added.

People do not know where to look for work, Marsh said, adding that his office is constantly receiving calls for competent students.

Any students interested in obtaining employment in the business world should file an application with him, Marsh advised, at his office, Room 222.

Flask Of Cow's Milk Sealed For Posterity

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — (ACP) — How would you like a glass of 500-year-old milk for breakfast? Several centuries from some lucky individual may have the opportunity of enjoying that very thing, and he may thank the ghost of Dr. C. W. Root, head of Syracuse University's bacteriology department.

It was nearly 11 years ago when Dr. Root placed in the cornerstone of Hendricks chapel a hermetically sealed flask of cow's milk, along with a flask of nutrient agar, both purified of all bacteria before sealing.

"Five hundred or a thousand years from now some one will be able to drink that milk, which will be as sweet as it was the day it was placed there," said Dr. Root in a recent lecture.

The purpose of Dr. Root's experiment is simply to demonstrate that, with the absence of bacteria, foodstuffs can indefinitely retain their nutrient value and edibility.

The only thing that can spoil the demonstration is the breaking of the flask by extreme temperature change, said Dr. Root.

The flasks of Dr. Root have as company in the cornerstone a copy of the Daily Orange, student newspaper, published in 1929, along with various other articles not on record. A few days preceding the laying of the cornerstone by Chancellor Charles W. Flint, June 9, 1929, Dr. Burgess Johnson, director of public relations, suggested that samples of boarding house food be placed into the small vault in order that future observers may inspect the quality of our present-day hot-dogs, milk shakes, and barbecue sandwiches.

Debate Team To Meet Other State Colleges

The debating class, under the direction of instructor Lloyd Luckmann, will compete this semester in debate with the University of San Francisco, San Francisco State College, and Santa Clara, Modesto, and Sacramento Junior Colleges. The topic for discussion will be National Preparedness and War.

Everyone in the debate class will participate in the discussions. This year's debating class is entirely new, but the speakers have had former experience in speech work.

Officer

AWS Appoints New Secretary

Appointment of Aspasia Vasilatos as secretary of the Associated Women Students was announced today by Margaret Dougherty, AWS adviser.

"Gladys Young, who was elected at the end of last semester has evidently not returned to the college this semester," Miss Dougherty said. "At least, she has not answered several messages which we have sent her, and she has not communicated with us in any way."

Miss Vasilatos, a sophomore student, has been active in women's activities and was on the orientation committee which helped new students.

Plans for AWS activities later in the semester are being considered now, Miss Dougherty added.

Affairs traditionally sponsored by the AWS are the tea held in honor of seniors at the various high schools in the city and an activity which usually is either a tea or a rally.

Virginia Hubbert, AWS president, disclosed tentative plans for a Sunday afternoon tea similar to that held last semester for college women and their parents. In the past this event has always been generally considered quite successful by sponsors and those attending alike.

Hygiene Tests Determine Student Background

Tests given to the personal hygiene classes at the beginning of the semester are to determine the students' background and not to classify them according to individual ability. These tests have been worked out by the departments heads in order to adapt the course to the individual needs of the student, according to Russ Sweet, athletic instructor.

Students who have been changed to different classes since taking the test have been moved because their test either proved that they had a great deal of background for the course or none at all, Sweet said.

Before this system was used, the hygiene classes were fundamentally suited to few of the students and those who had taken such courses in high school that would give them a background for the course found themselves far in advance of the other students. The new system has been used and revised several times and is nearing perfection.

Men's Athletic Council To Discuss Activities

With all plans completed for their first meeting of the year, today, the Men's Athletic Council, is looking forward to a very busy and successful season. A large scale intramural program is being planned consisting of a six man football, soccer, and many other sports.

The program will be under the charge of Coach Fred McFarland. All the men are earnestly requested to come out to the men's gymnasium, and sign up for some sport when sign ups start.

Tickets For Football Games Go To High Schools

Tickets for all college football games will be sold at reduced rates to students of the city high schools, Hugh Waite of the Internal Publicity Committee announced today.

The tickets, which would be sold at the gate for 25 cents to student body card holders will cost the student only 15 cents if bought at the schools.

Tickets for the first game will be on sale in the schools soon.

Four New Instructors Added To Business Dept.

Announcement of the addition of four new instructors to the college's business department staff was made recently by the department.

Edward Larsen, from San Mateo Junior College; Ruth Plimpton from Fullerton Junior College; Phoebe Ward, and Llewellyn Snyder form a group of "fedsh" instructors which is perhaps larger than that of any other of the college's departments.

The department also declared its intention to do all of the college's mimeographing in the college mimeographing classes. Mimeographing was formerly done through the registrar's office, according to business instructors.

Purchase of several new office machines, among them a multilith duplicator, an electric addressograph, a billing machine, and an International electric typewriter was disclosed.

COLLEGE

IT HAS just come to our attention that some of the students of the college really go to great lengths to gain an education.

The person we had in mind is a freshman student who lives in Benicia. He has to travel for three and a half hours every morning to get to the college, and of course just as long to get home.

This freshman has to get up at 5:20 in the morning to make a TEN o'clock class.

Next time some of us living in the city or even in the east bay begin moaning about the length of time it takes us to get to classes, we should think of this fellow from Benicia and then realize how well off we are.

Anyone who is that determined to get an education will probably make good use of it and someday amount to something.

IF plans for the AMS bonfire go through, the affair should be one of the best the college has ever had.

It is rumored that if the bonfire meets with the approval of the students it may become a semi-annual affair, either in addition to or replacing the usual men's smoker.

THE hotel division should certainly receive a few bouquets on the way it is handling the noon-time rush in the cafeteria.

The place is certainly a madhouse from 11 to 1. We waited in there recently and had to take cover from the mob of students hurrying back and forth.

The amazing part of the whole thing is that the hotel division students seem about handling things efficiently and quietly as if they were accustomed to living in a madhouse all the time. (Any similarity to hotel students living or dead is not intended.)

SOMETHING will really need to be done about this rally situation. The center quad, although a nice enough spot for a rally for a small school of college, is hardly the place to gather the number of students we have here.

Of course, this is one of the disadvantages the college must put up with for a while, but there is a possibility that something can be done to improve the situation.

Perhaps the Executive Council will take it under advisement.

A SIGN of progress: The actual beginning of plans for a college yearbook. Slowly but surely, the college is acquiring the unofficial but important things that go into the making of a complete college from administration to student activities.

WITH the opening of the national political campaign, the people of the United States at home listening to the radio, are beginning to realize that all is not a bed of roses.

Whether or not they favor Willkie or Roosevelt, they are finding that most of the time the family radio is turned on, the receiver gives out with either a political talk from some overstuffed politician, or the latest news bulletins from abroad.

It is of course vitally important that the nation be informed of the latest war developments and also hear both sides of the political question but too much of this is going to sour the American public.

AT THE rate Wendell Willkie is going, even if he wins the election he won't have any voice left to take the oath of office.

FOREIGN

SINCE the fall of France, that nation has more or less taken a back seat in the newspapers.

The Germans, however, do not seem to share the attitude of the rest of the world for they are transferring some one to two million French soldiers to prison camps in Germany.

Although the war with France is actually over, the temper of the French soldiers is such that the Nazis dare not release them.

Perhaps some of these poilus should have been the generals instead of the blind and hesitant men who lost the battle of France.

Extra-Curricular

New Intramural Athletic Program Planned By College

Plans and formation of an intramural athletic board have been released by faculty adviser, Fred C. McFarland. This is the first large scale attempt at organizing such a program for the college.

The program for this semester's intramural activities is presented below.

1. Athletic period

a. During the athletic period from 3 p.m. to 4:45 p.m., Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, there will be an intramural program consisting of eleven sports.

b. All college organizations are urged to appoint a member to handle sports for its organization. All are requested to enter teams in the round-robin sports and sponsor individuals for the other sports.

2. Organization of intramurals

a. Intramural director

b. Student intramural manager

c. Assistant student intramural manager

d. Sports managers

e. The student intramural manager (upon recommendation) will receive a block award, and the assistant manager (upon recommendation) will receive a circle award. Sports managers will be given first preference in consideration for promotion to assistant manager.

3. Sports 1st semester

a. Inter-college organizations: round-robin sports are basketball, softball, and volleyball. Other sport activities will be cross-country, tennis, swimming, horseshoes, rifle, boxing, golf and free throwing (basketball).

b. Playing areas and schedules will be announced in The Guardsman.

c. Officials will be appointed by the athletic office and announced at time of contest by the sports manager.

d. Basketball.

(1) Games will be played of four quarters of eight minutes each.

e. Volleyball.

(1) Teams will be composed of six men each.

(2) Teams will play two out of three 15 point games.

(3) A team may play with less than six members if it so desires.

f. Softball.

(1) Games will be seven innings but scores of games not finished by 4:20 p.m. will revert to last completed inning.

g. Cross-country run.

(1) Distance to be two and one-quarter miles.

h. Tennis.

(1) A singles tournament.

i. Swimming.

(1) 50 yd. back stroke.

(2) 50 yd. free style.

(3) 50 yd. breast stroke.

(4) 100 yd. free style.

(5) Diving, low board. Four optional dives and all to be graded with same degree of difficulty.

j. Horseshoes.

(1) One singles tournament.

k. Golf.

(1) One tournament; 20 shots off-hand.

l. Boxing.

(1) First and second place to be determined in all weights.

(2) All eliminations down to four in each weight to be determined by elimination contest in classes and other appointed times.

(3) Semi-finals and finals to be determined at a college boxing show.

m. Rifle.

(1) One tournament; 20 shots off-hand.

n. Free throwing (basketball)

(1) One tournament; each contestant to be allowed twenty throws. In case of ties in first three places, contestants will be allowed 10 more trials to break the tie.

4. Point system.

a. In round-robin sports the winning team to receive 100 points, 2nd 80, 3rd 60, 4th 40, and 5th 20 points.

b. In all other sports 10, 8, 6, 4, 2. For example a swimmer winning a second would get eight points for his organization.

c. When a contestant enters an activity, or a team enters, he will indicate for what organization (if any) he wishes to compete.

d. Points will be compiled and the organization having the greatest number will be awarded the intramural sports trophy.

5. Awards.

a. Suitable trophies to all individual winners and members of winning teams will be awarded.

6. Student intramural manager.

a. Is charged with the execution of the foregoing schedule of sports under the supervision of the intramural director.

7. Eligibility.

Intramural

Sports Ruled By Gym Dept.

Replacing the Club Advisory Board, the physical education department now wields final authority over intramural activities for this semester, Fred McFarland, intramural adviser, announced this week.

Pending a general survey within the next two weeks between McFarland and the physical educational department concerning the eligibility of competing teams and available equipment, intramural sports have thus far been a closed incident.

In past semesters, the intramural program has been held under the auspices of the CAB. No reason for the change has been released.

Activities scheduled by the program are basketball, touch-tackle football, and boxing. Every participant will be given a thorough physical examination before being allowed to compete. The physical education department has been alloted $125 for intramural activities, and awards to be distributed to winning teams and contestants.

Rustic Art Comes To Cafeteria

Students who want to enjoy art and the great outdoors of their choice will henceforth be directed to the college cafeteria, where a large figure of a ram, carved from the redwood of California's outdoor empire, will stand.

This symbol of herefore ramming Ramdom will be ready soon, according to Archibald J. Cloud, president of the college, although no definite date for its completion has been announced.

Plans of Dudley Carter, sculptor-on-the-job, include giving Mr. Ram the height of 7 feet. He, when a base 15 feet high is also being fashioned, possibly to guard against competition by local Gaultskis. Mr. Ram will not have the tax collectors know it, but he is valued at approximately $2500.

Not related to the ram, but also being sculptored by the same hand, is the Goddess of the Golden Gate International Expedition, where Carter spends his spare time (full day) demonstrating Art in Action.

Clubs Must Renew Charters Before October 15—Ogg

College organizations which fail to apply for renewal of charters to the Club Advisory Board by the date of the third meeting this semester will be put on a suspension list, Bob Ogg, CAB president, announced this Tuesday, when representatives from various organizations assembled for the first time this fall.

Applications thus far received will be examined by the CAB membership committee, and if found satisfactory will be presented at the next meeting, he added. These must now include the complete constitution and by-laws of the clubs, James S. Hughes, CAB adviser noted. Forms may be secured in Room 169 by those groups which have not already received them.

Regular meetings of the club board have been set for every other Tuesday at 2 o'clock in Room 142.

First issue of CABBY, Club Advisory Board bulletin, appeared at the first meeting, and will continue to be put out every other Tuesday thereafter, Ogg said, advising representatives to hand in any notice of their club activities that they wish published, not later than 2 o'clock on the Tuesday preceding each meeting.

Contest

Win Prize By Naming Year-Book

To secure a name for the college yearbook to be published next semester, a contest open to all students begins today.

Entries will be accepted until October 1, and announcement of the winning title will be made shortly after by the committee of judges.

A copy of the yearbook, with due recognition of the title it will bear, will be presented to the student who submits the chosen name.

Entries should be original and unique, and chosen with an eye toward permanency, for the title selected will become the official name of the publication.

The only previous attempt to publish a college annual was done by the class of June '37. It did not have the scope of the ideal yearbook, and was merely a record of the first two years of the college's existence. Through lack of student support it was not attempted the following year, and none has been published since that time.

This issue marks the inauguration of an annual which is to be a yearly publication of permanent standing. Only through full co-operation of the students can this be made possible.

Every student is asked to co-operate in determining the yearbook's name.

The committee of judges will be comprised of President Archibald J. Cloud, Dean Edwin Browne, Dorothy Trood, Dan McHugh, Len Gross, and Lyle Shultz.

Entries will be accepted by McHugh, or they may be submitted to the student body office, Room 169.

Welfare Council Handles Annual Plus Other Work

By working in two separate groups this semester, the Welfare Council will be able to take up college problems other than the planning and editing of a proposed year-book, Dan McHugh, chairman, announced.

The group now concerned with a yearly publication for the college is headed by Dorothy Trood, former Associated Students' vice-president who has been appointed temporary chairman. The assistance of anyone with previous yearbook experience will be appreciated, Miss Trood said. As soon as plans are completed, they will be submitted to the college Publications Board, she indicated.

McHugh, with Miss Trood and Associated Students' President Lyle Shultz, has been conferring with representatives of various printing and engraving companies.

Three Advisers Appointed

Francis Colligan, Richard Allman, and Beverly Pasqualetti, all instructors at the college, have been appointed by President Archibald J. Cloud as faculty advisers to the year-book at the request of the student committee. All three men have had valuable experience in their respective fields and possess knowledge which will be indispensable to our year-book," McHugh commented.

Last Monday McHugh, Miss Trood, and Shultz discussed with President Cloud the problems and details incident to the publication of the annual. President Cloud was favorably impressed with the plans, opining that "such a work will contribute to the enjoyment of the students of the college."

Survey Given Last Semester

Activity of the Welfare Council last semester was concentrated on a survey of student interest, in which men and women of the college were asked to rate the various clubs and athletics. These results have now been tabulated and will shortly be available for publication, McHugh revealed.

To find a name for the college yearbook, a contest open to all students is being contemplated, according to council members. Further announcements of this contest will appear later, they said.

The publication of a year-book, said McHugh, is not an easy task, and it will require a tremendous amount of effort.

He seconded Miss Trood's request for persons with experience on year-books. Artists, people with a reasonable typographical knowledge, students versed in picture make-up, people with originality—all these will be required for the production of a generally satisfactory year-book, McHugh pointed out.

Administration Appointment

Conlan Takes Over Coordinator Position As Sullivan Leaves

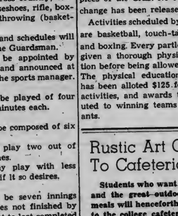
To San Diego

J. Graham Sullivan, for the past year Coordinator of Educational Management at the college, will vacate his post within the next few days to take up new duties as Director of Vocational Education in the San Diego school system.

During the last four and a half years Sullivan has served the college in various capacities, receiving the appointment to his present duties as assistant to President Archibald J. Cloud in 1939.

He became a member of the faculty in 1936, when the college was still in the throes of development, was an instructor in the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division, and within a comparatively short time was made coordinator of that division.

Sullivan Given Job in '39



In 1939 Sullivan was proffered the numerous duties of the Coordinator of Educational Management which he accepted.

As assistant to President Cloud he has had charge of all purchasing of equipment, has aided in the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division and has been responsible for the coordination of many new courses in the college curricular, in addition to maintaining coordination of the present educational program.

Leaving After Four and a Half Years

Now, after four and a half years of service, during which the San Francisco Junior College has acquired its own buildings and has firmly established itself in collegiate circles, Sullivan departs to still further advancement.

"It is regrettable," the coordinator said, "that after dreaming all these years of having our own campus and buildings, to have to leave when that dream has finally come true, but my new position offers advancement and cannot be refused."

J. Graham Sullivan

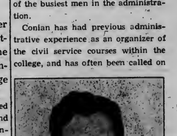
New Job Important

As Director of Vocational Education in San Diego, Sullivan will direct not only vocational activity for the regular school system, but will carry this experience into the continuation and trade school branches as well.

In his new work, vocational training in aeronautics probably will be stressed, he stated, because of the recent National Defense Measures, and the expansion of several large airplane companies in that area.

Sullivan's resignation has been sent to the Board of Education, and its acceptance is merely a matter of formality.



Successor

Louis G. Conlan, college basketball coach, has been named to succeed J. Graham Sullivan, former Coordinator of Educational Management, by an action of the Board of Education last Tuesday.

Conlan is to assume immediately the post Sullivan vacated this week to take advantage of a highly responsible position in the San Diego school system.

"In replacing Sullivan, Conlan will assume a position that requires exceptional resourcefulness and untiring work. The college coordinator is one of the busiest men in the administration.

Conlan has had previous administrative experience as an organizer of the civil service courses within the college, and has often been called on to give outside addresses on college civil service work.

Louis G. Conlan

He is also well-known in the sports world as one of the outstanding football officials on the Pacific Coast. Last year he was head referee at the Rose Bowl game.

St. Mary's claimed him as a star quarterback for three years.

Tonight's Game

Cheer Section For College

For tonight's game with Placer Junior College, a roped-off rooting section for the students of the college has been provided, announced Pete Aydelotte, college yell leader.

The local rooters will be expected to remain in or near the section and show some spirit, the yell leader continued. "In the past the games have not been too well attended but we expect to have a large crowd on hand now that we have our own campus," Aydelotte revealed.

Admission Free With Card

Admission to the game is free to all holders of student body cards from the college, he said.

Aydelotte also announced the names of the members of the rally committee. They are Bill Menary, Mel Steele, Hugh Waite, George Reiches, Dan McHugh, Lyle Shultz, Ted Theodus, Mel Chicazola, Bill Croter, Ed Ebbey, and himself as chairman.

Sacramento Excursion Planned

The new committee has already made plans for an excursion to Sacramento on October 18. The occasion, according to the chairman, is the football engagement with Sacramento Junior College.

If present plans are successful, the excursion will be by train; commented Aydelotte. The train will leave San Francisco at 3 p.m. and will arrive in Sacramento in early evening, allowing time to eat and look at the town, he announced.

Fare $1.75 Round Trip

The fare will be $1.75 for a round trip, according to the yell leader. "This will include a dancing car and an observation car on our own train," Aydelotte concluded.

"The Southern Pacific will give us the special train only if 200 students make reservations before October 14," announced the yell leader. This should be easy when the students realize the advantages of a train excursion, according to him.

Aydelotte pointed to the previous successful excursions of this type that have been fostered by the college. Students who went on these excursions have had nothing but praise for them, he said.

Part-Time Housework Jobs Open To College Women

Some part-time positions are open to women of the college, Margaret Dougherty, dean of women, announced. The positions open are in the nature of housework during after school hours.

Women interested in these opportunities are requested to file applications with Dean Dougherty in her office, Room 126, as soon as possible.

Panel Discussion Held Over For Additional Week

Scheduled to begin next Monday, the panel discussion prepared by several students of Political Science 2a has been postponed until the following week, Alden W. Smith, instructor in the course, announced.

The panel discussion group as named by Smith includes himself, President Archibald J. Cloud, Lyle Shultz, Jean Arnold, Alden Thorogood, Mary Frances Malone, and Edward Hardies, chairman.

A five minute talk will be given by each member of the panel followed by a discussion from the group at large, which is limited to those students who hold college offices, Smith said.

The theme of the discussion is expected to treat with the part student government should play in national defense.

Addresses by the students will be followed by corrective advice by President Cloud, according to present tentative plans.

Football Season Will Test College Spirit

TONIGHT the football season opens. This time, however, tonight means more than just the opening of another grid season.

For five years we have gone blithely along supporting the athletic department in a very half-hearted way and blaming the whole situation on the lack of our own centralized location.

We now have that central location, and tonight will in a measure determine whether we were justified in excusing ourselves on those grounds, or whether it was merely a blind to cover up our lack of spirit and morale.

It seems strange that there could possibly exist a college that does not support its teams, yet we have held that position for five years.

Now is the time to get out of the rut we have dug for ourselves. Now, there is no excuse for lack of attendance at games, and at rallies. Now, there is no excuse for the yell leaders getting no response to their exhortations to cheer on the team.

Reports seem to indicate that the Rams have a good football squad this year. To those students who only support a winning team (and unfortunately there are many persons like that) this should prove heartening. To the students who support their team, win or lose, it should be an added incentive to attend the games.

The least the students can do is to get out to the game and support them with cheers.

Off-Campus Location Feasible For Dance

LAST Friday's dance at the Palace has called up a lot of comment concerning the possibility of more off-campus dances.

Because of financial reasons and the facilities for social affairs at the college, the finance committee has recommended to the Executive Council that all dances be held on the campus. This point of view is more than understandable to the average thinking student who is aware of the college's increased expenditures this semester. Cutting out rental charges for various social affairs seems the first logical thing to do.

However, most of the students will agree that affairs held off the college grounds possess more attraction than those taking place in the college gymnasium, for example.

Thus, there has arisen a question in the minds of many students as to whether it would be possible to have not all college dances but at least one more dance away from the campus. And, by popular opinion, it seems that the affair under discussion is the semi-annual Associated Men Students' barn dance.

In answer to the anticipated argument that to hold the dance in a barn or country club as the AMS has in the past, is expensive, it can be said that rental of the Alvarado Barn, for example, is certainly a negligible expense as persons checking on last semester's AMS expenses can verify. Moreover, no reasonable student can deny the fact that such an informal affair is a lot more fun in a suitable location.

Another point in favor of having the Barn Dance in a barn or club is found in the fact that such informal affairs are undoubtedly hard on the place where they are held. The thought of students clumping about the new men's or women's gymnasiums in heavy boots and scratching and roughening the surface of the new floors in a Paul Jones is hardly sensible or reasonable from a financial viewpoint.

In the final analysis, it will be student opinion which will probably decide the issue. Those who want the barn dance off the campus, should make themselves known to the AMS officers. Perhaps something can be done about the matter.

At any rate, why not try?

Future Gifts From Fair Will Beautify Campus

IF ALL works out as planned, the presence of the Golden Gate International Exposition will have proved highly profitable to the college.

Probably the most valuable benefit accruing from the Fair will be the gigantic mural—22 feet 1½ inches by 73 feet 9 inches to be exact—created for the future college library building by one of the greatest of living muralists, Diego Rivera. Though some time will elapse before the erection of the library building, there is the satisfaction that the mural will be there, waiting.

Herman Volz, who is responsible for those two vivid splashes of color on the Federal Building at the Fair, is executing, on the opposite wall from Rivera of the Art in Action section of the arts building, a sizable mosaic that is to adorn the college science building.

Two tempera paintings, also of good size, have been promised for the college. Neither their nature nor the artists are known as yet.

For the more immediate future is the possibility of acquiring Exposition shrubbery for the landscaping of the college. The scope of the grounds makes this undertaking one of real importance and the acquisition of trees and plants most desirable.

Also under the heading of art is the granite head of Leonardo Da Vinci and the limestone head of Thomas Edison. The first is now resting, completed, at the Exposition; the other, nearing completion, patiently rests at the rear of the college.

All together, an imposing array of gifts is soon to be laid before the college, and real cause for appreciation and thanks exists.

Ram's Horn Is Place To Air Opinions

MANY of the students who read The Guardsman have at one time or another wanted to express an opinion and have that opinion printed in the paper.

The Guardsman runs a feature on page two of every issue which is devoted exclusively to airing the feelings of the students of the college. It is the only column in the paper set aside for the use of students at large.

The college is not perfect, student government is not perfect, and The Guardsman is not perfect. Surely there are some students who have constructive criticism, helpful hints or new ideas that could benefit the college in some way or another. If that is true, the Ram's Horn is the place to put the opinion.

Many students have wanted to express an objection about something connected with the college but do not do so because they do not wish their names connected with their communications.

If such is the case, the writer need only mention his wishes to the editor and his name will be withheld.

Meet The Students

By EVE BURKEY

Shades of Houdini!

There's magic at Balboa Park and it's not just in the moonlight! What started to be a casual Meet-the-Students interview ended up—but, settle down by the fire while a strange tale unravels.

"Why don't you interview Fred Burke?" asked Miss Wong (how'd she get in here?) Little forseeing the consequences, we allowed her to drag us over to a fellow in a khaki shirt. What happened later made us forget most of the stock questions such as height and weight, but we did get an impression of blond hair, grey eyes and a nice grin. Not very weird yet? Just wait.

An engineering major, Fred is studying German and chemistry. Born in New York, he has lived in Illinois, Colorado, China,—anyway, he's been around. (he must have wasted little time in one place for he's only twenty-three now).

Fred has worked in most of those places too. In Denver, Colorado, he worked in an army hospital, in China, with the American legation—at least, we think that's what he said. It sounded like double talk to us, but Miss Wong vouched for it as being a Mandarin dialect. (probably sounded like double talk to her too)

In the evening, Burke is a dancing teacher at one of the schools downtown—which institution he praises highly. He fills in the rest of the day selling drawing instruments, photo supplies, and doing commercial photography. Oh yes Mr. Burke—practices—MAGIC!

"For instance," he said, "if someone offered you a nickle—like this—and then it disappeared—like this"—Burke, talking like Lee Tracy at his glibest, flashed the nickle from his hand and took it out of his elbow, out of his knee, out of his shoulder, out of every portion of his anatomy—"you might call it magic. I don't—I call it a trick!"

Wrong, Mr. Burke. We call it unfair to disorganized reporters.

The Spectator

IN THE world of the motion picture, the name Alfred Hitchcock is synonymous with the tops in suspense and adventure. This rotund English gentleman happens to be a master in producing films of breathless excitement and dramatic intensity. Such films as Thirty-nine Steps, The Lady Vanishes, and Rebecca are typical examples of Hitchcock's gripping emotional style.

Walter Wanger's new production, Foreign Correspondent, based remotely on Sheean's book Personal History, is Hitchcock at his best. Frankly, the film is the most thrilling celluloid drama to hit the screen in many a moon. This tale of a newspaper man vainly attempting to fathom the intricate by-ways of European intrigue, is overpowering in its shocking impact. For two hours it holds audiences, to a man, in a state of tense expectation that rises to a dramatic conclusion as spectacular as any ever presented by the screen.

Joel McCrea interprets the role of an American newspaperman sent to Europe to dig beneath the cover of shifting rumors and unearth concrete truths. Immediately he becomes involved in a startling mystery that revolves around the assassination of a high governmental official. That suffices for the main plot element. Hitchcock with his genius for dramatic effect, does the rest.

A superior cast including Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Larraine Day and Robert Benchely, all give splendid accounts with their diversified talents. Sanders, in particular has numerous opportunities to shine and takes full advantage of them. This lad can really act.

The changing map of Europe necessitated continued shifts in the script. All credit to Hitchcock and Co. for producing such a masterpiece in the face of many obstacles. Foreign Correspondent becomes our nomination as top "Thrill" Film of the Year.

Quotable Quotes

"Perhaps the most frightening aspect of modern war is the intellectual blackout which it creates. One does not have to subscribe to H. G. Well's grim prophecy that 'mankind, which began in a cave behind a windbreak, will end in the disease-soaked ruins of a slum'; but certainly the night in Europe cannot be long continued without the sacrifice of cultural values on so vast a scale that the chance of an enlightened and gracious life, not alone for this generation in Europe but for the children and grandchildren of this generation, will be irretrievably lost."—Rockefeller Foundation's President Raymond B. Fosdick.

Hold That Line ... By Sullivan

Malone

On The Feminine Side

IF A surrealistic artist were to take "Miss Junior College" as a subject for a more or less disjointed piece of work, he could cover the subject pretty well by painting a couple of worn text books, a heavy camel's hair coat, some rather used looking saddle shoes, and a half filled glass of coca cola.

Certainly those articles mentioned above are most in prominence upon the campus as far as the feminine population is concerned. It is rather amazing to the casual observer that women at this college have become so very conservative in their actions and clothing.

Looking back to the beginning of the semester, we remember our rather naive hopes that at last we would see something startling and different in the line of college clothes. We anticipated every woman as a potential illustration for Mademoiselle or Harper's college issue with the lecture halls and cafeteria fairly teeming with novel ideas in college fashions. But no. Here we find a campus with smart looking women in abundance, to be sure, but where, oh where are the tricky new styles that were going to set us all on our style conscious ears?

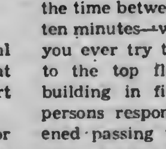
What ever happened to knee length stockings on the campus, or does anyone know? According to the magazines and the discussions of pre-lecture "bull sessions", we were led to expect to become practically blase on the matter. And it can be truthfully said that not more than half a dozen women have had the nerve to wear them on campus.

Yet, despite the evident taboo on knee length stockings, we can remember seeing one exceptionally smart woman wearing them. Her stockings were of an ultra cable knit in a red shade that was really brilliant. With her stockings (or vice versa) she wore a corduroy jumper in the same vivid shade and a long-sleeved plaid shirt. Heads turned to look as she passed along the hall, and those glances were really admiring.

Another rather amusing outfit that has been seen about the college consisted of a navy jumper dress with a long-sleeved red flannel shirt and a cocky little jockey cap topping the costume. Those little beanies with long feathers or plumes and jockey caps are on the way to becoming a popular hit from all indications, comments of benighted males to the contrary.

Faintly reminiscent of the "barrel" sweaters we wore in high school days are the new sleeveless sweaters being sported by women in the fashion show. They're mostly in bright, soft wooly knits and the smartest ones, to our mind, are those in expensive looking cable stitch knits.

In the jewelry line, we've noticed several women wearing natural colored polished cantaloupe seeds for necklaces and bracelets. They really are smart, especially when worn with a tailored sharkskin long-sleeved shirt. Quite the best looking and most original bracelet we have seen all semester is the one made entirely of polished safety pins on a wrist-fitting metal band. It's very sporty and yet creates a tremendously smart effect.



Then, of course, there are those ankle socks which fasten with three little bows through eyelet fasteners. They come in shades to match sweaters and bows and provide a bit of an uplift in an otherwise conservative outfit.

Perhaps as time goes along more and more new ideas will turn up. At least we hope that we'll have a chance to see some of those fads that periodically sweep the colleges taken up here.

Why not be different, anyway? It should be a lot of fun.

50 Minute Period Seconded; Cafe Music Lambasted

● That Five Minute Question
Editor, The Guardsman:

I noticed a front page editorial in your paper last week asking that something be done about the short time between periods.

I wish to commend the editor for his fine editorial, and I believe that the majority of the students agree with his views on the matter.

However something bothers us. The editorial was a good one. But what has it done to help the situation? As far as most of us can see nothing has been done by the college faculty or officials to alleviate the condition.

I remember the old Powell Street days, when even ten minutes wasn't too much time between classes.

Here's hoping that something is done by the proper authorities in the very near future to lengthen the time between periods to at least ten minutes—we really need it. Did you ever try to get from the gym to the top floor of the Science building in five minutes? If the persons responsible for the shortened passing time were to try it once, we are sure that everything would be fixed up in short order.

Yours for a change in the very near future,

Philip Kline

Editor's note: The administration is being contacted concerning this situation and it is to be hoped that a satisfactory solution can be reached.

● Paging Mr. Strauss
Editor, The Guardsman:

I don't like to speak against any attempt to make things more enjoyable at the college, but I think the attempt in the cafeteria is going too far. I have just returned from a hectic lunch in the cafe, and my digestive system feels like an abstract painting by Picasso. The cause: the blaring, noisy rhythm that is still erroniously termed music.

Don't think we're not in favor of lunch hour music, far from it. But please lay off swing music and anything in a similar category. Don't think we advocate Hayden or Mozart, for we would gladly settle for some Viennese waltzes or something similarly relaxing. How about, it?

Shots At RAMdom . . .

Richard Halliburton. His Story of His Life's Adventure. New York: The Bobbs-Merrill Co. 433 pp.

RICHARD HALLIBURTON, the modern Ulysses, has been both hailed as a symbol of the gay, carefree life, and jeered as a vainglorious publicity seeker. Before his twentieth year he had begun the vagabond life that millions were to admire and more than a few were to hold as an ideal for a full life.

Those countless readers who have followed Richard Halliburton in his books that were more than travel books will welcome this last volume of his writings; for in more than 1000 letters to his father and mother and close friends written over a space of 22 years, there is a personal history as intensely engrossing as any of his most daring accomplishments. In these lively letters, sometimes mirth-provoking, sometimes serious, there can be observed at close range the philosophy and impetus of this product of a modern civilization. Even more fully than is revealed in his books, do we see the tremendous sincerity and the healthful naivlete and boundless enthusiasm that made up Halliburton's character.

When only 19, while attending Princeton University, Halliburton worked his way to England because he felt he would burst if he did not gain some outlet for his nervous spirit. This voyage was just the commencement of a chart for living that was to carry him the world over. It was on this trip that he characteristically said, ". . . when I die there will have been few better traveled men than I." Few will dispute his fulfillment of that prophecy.

At Princeton he toiled endlessly as editor of the Princeton Pictorial magazine. Under his hands the magazine grew to a position of real prominence, reflecting his originality and writing talent. On his graduation from Princeton he began his future life in earnest. Within a few years, still in his early twenties, Halliburton published the stories of his experiences that brought him sweeping recognition in this country.

Book after book emerged from his incredibly swift pen as he flew, swam, hitch-hiked, walked from one land to another. Back of all these roamings was the philosophy that he expressed on his first trip to England. He said then in a letter to his father, "When impulse and spontaneity fail to make my way as uneven as possible then I shall sit up nights inventing means of making life as conglomerate and vivid as possible. Those who live in the even tenor of their way simply exist until death ends their monotonous tranquillity. No, there's going to be no even tenor with me . . . And when my time comes to die, I'll be able to die happy, for I will have done and seen and heard and experienced all the joy, pain, thrills—every emotion that any human ever had—and I'll be especially happy if I am spared a stupid, common death in bed."

The people who have attacked Halliburton's sincerity would change their views were they to read these letters. The adjective "publicity seeker" would fall in the discard when they read private comments of the man who ever remained like a child seeking for pirate gold and who knew the Spanish Armada was always just around the backyard fence.

The story of how Halliburton perished in his attempt to sail a genuine Chinese junk from Hongkong to the Golden Gate International Exposition is known to everyone. The volume ends with Halliburton's last message radioed on March 24, 1939, somewhere in the Pacific. The message read:

CAPTAIN JOHN WELCH OF THE SEADRAGON TO LINER PRESIDENT COOLIDGE SOUTHERLY GALES RAIN SQUALLS LEE RAIL UNDER WATER WET BUNKS HARDTACK BULLY BEEF HAVING WONDERFUL TIME WISH YOU WERE HERE INSTEAD OF ME.

We know an envious life was "spared a common death in bed."

Football Squad Downs Milk To Make Downs

JUST between our three readers and ourself, the football squad consumes enough milk after practices than a cow can produce in a day. According to economical statistics, it would be cheaper if the team bought a cow and kept it for the sole purpose of feeding themselves. Dormant Spirit An Excuse?

With bewilderment, this columnist wonders why there is a "dormant" spirit, when football games are free to the holders of Associated Students cards. Perhaps the college needs some pep talks. Perhaps the excuse was that the college has not been organized enough. However, this initial game with Placer should tell whether former "excuses" are based on actual facts.

Dick Wilson and Pinky Laracou have promised touchdowns if we give them a line. So . . . Jim Honnert claims he will hang up his suit if he does not give a good showing tonight. His coathanger will not see much action this season, we figger.

Pedometer Needed

Many of the students came back last Monday morn-looking like remnants from a fire sale. According to them, dancing in the Gold Room was like going through a Southern Cal forward wall. Will someone get a pedometer and find out just about how far one goes in three hours of dancing in an equally crowded place? Hand it in Room 134, please.

Roster Omission Unavoidable

Students of the college deserve an explanation for the omission from this issue of The Guardsman of the complete football roster and starting line-ups. Reason for this was that the players were not officially numbered in time for publication of this issue. It is to be hoped that for future games such information will be made available by the coaching staff in time for publication.

Recollections From Last Year

This year, Dave Cunningham will probably take over the job of attempting the important extra point.

Tonight's game opens the season for both the college and the Placer Mountaineers of Auburn. Coach Eisan plans an intricate system of plays to foil the Placer team, probably depending on sheer power for points.

District WAA Meets To Plan For Fall Schedule: Spread Details Are Complete

Sports Days

Sports advisers and Women's Athletic Association presidents from north bay district colleges, will meet today to plan the fall schedule of sports days at a 4 o'clock tea, to be held at the St. Francis Hotel.

Representing the college will be Bertha Mae Keller, WAA adviser, and Barbara Smith, WAA president. Representatives from San Jose State, San Francisco State, Santa Rosa Junior College, San Mateo Junior College, Marin Junior College, and Salinas Junior College, as well as others, will also attend the tea.

Round Robin Schedule

Forthcoming from today's meeting should be a rotational schedule for WAA play days, whereby each college will be expected to be hostess for some particular playday in some particular sport, Miss Keller said.

San Mateo Junior College will stage the sectional playday this year, playing hostess to the other colleges, Miss Keller revealed. Last May, Santa Rosa Junior College was the scene of the sectional playday, while this college will not present the playday until five years from now. . .

Cayuse Revue

Expected to be held here sometime this semester is the sectional horse show, Laurine Bergin, physical education instructor, said.

A request for the holding of the archery postal meet will be made today, at the meeting, Miss Bergin said. Main purpose of the playday will be to standardize archery competition for high schools in this section.

Barnyard Golf

"New sports activity to be initiated by the college WAA will be horse shoe pitching, better known as barnyard golf," Miss Keller announced. New equipment for the sport has already been purchased and WAA classes in this sport will begin as soon as the tract of ground in front of the women's gym has been leveled off. Enrolled in the college is Virginia Coker, Northern California Champion of barnyard golf. Women who are interested in this sport are urged by Barbara Smith, WAA president, to sign up as soon as possible.

Still Signing Up

Although instruction in many WAA sports has already begun, it is not too late to sign up. Women of the college have until September 25, to enroll in WAA classes. More members are especially wanted for the swimming, ice skating, volleyball and hockey classes, Miss Smith said.

Only A Dime

College advanced golf classes are receiving special rates of only 10 cents a round at the Ingleside golf course, according to Mrs. Bergin. "Women who have had some golf, as well as those who have signed up for the WAA golf club will be eligible for this low rate," she said.

Elections are being held this week for managers of the various WAA teams. Already elected are Betty Teter, rifle team manager, Jane Visella, hockey manager, and Jane McKinnon, swimming manager.

Party

Tickets were placed on sale last Wednesday for the Women's Athletic Association spread, to be held at Sigmund Stern Grove on September 25, from 4:30 to 10 p.m.

Especially invited to the affair are the newer women students of the college, Barbara Smith, WAA president said. Admission will be by student body card and the purchase of a ticket, which entitles the holder to barbecued food, she said. Tickets may be purchased from the following: Betty Teter, Irene Schunick, Allene Watt, June Schunick, Dorothy Nelson, Bernice Strube, Rita Weiman, and Rita McDonald.

Replacing the traditional splash party, the main purpose of the affair will be to acquaint new members with the aims and activities of the WAA.

Amusements of the evening will include games, selected entertainment and the introduction of the songs judged winners in the WAA song contest, now being held.

In charge of the song contest, which is being held as a competitive contest between freshmen and sophomores, is Jeanne Arnold, chairman of the sophomore group. "More participants in the contest are badly needed," she said.

Either lyrics composed to old folk songs, or original words and music may be submitted, she said. Three types of songs are acceptable. One type should be suitable for introducing people at social functions, the second type for commemorating particular sports, and the third for signifying the WAA as a whole.

In celebration of the sixth year anniversary of the WAA in the college, a "kiddy party" will be held during the first or second week of November, Barbara Smith, WAA president said.

Women who attend the party are to dress in costumes of six year olds. Diversions of the evening will include kiddy-car races and other childhood games, it was revealed.

Goldstone

Without Benefit Of Crystal

As I was saying, Dr. Schuyler Goop stands at the tip-top peak of his profession—a warlock without a peer. Just why he should squander his ectoplasmic prognosticating football contests is, for the moment, beyond me. Nevertheless, he is taking a genuine interest in the Ram grid contests, and, in return for being allowed to squat in the Seals Stadium press-box, he has consented to analyze tonight's game in advance.

Goop To Be Ethical

First I want to make it quite clear that Dr. Goop is telling you how the game will come out; he is not, wherever his sympathies may lie, using his talents to influence the outcome. You can undoubtedly find a few scab goblins breezing about the more proletarian sections of town who would try to fix the game for a bribe. But this college and Placer have long since concluded a gentleman's agreement requiring that both parties play the chips on the table and refrain from thaumaturgic tampering with the cricket traditions. In addition, John L. Lucifer's industrial organization of Hell on a pay-through-the-nose-closed-shop basis has had the dual effect of clogging Purgatory with strikebreakers and establishing a code of ethics which Dr. Goop wouldn't even dream of violating.

Two Dimension Logic

"In the first place," says Dr. Goop, anent this evening's game, "we must determine which team is the bummest, to wax ungrammatical. We might ask which is bestest, but that would be like asking 'is the earth round or is the earth round,' when any paid up member knows that either alternative is idiotic in the extreme."

Dr. Goop solves the problem by a unique form of inverted cabalism. "P being not R, and R being not P, RP can equal but not exceed PR."

"P is as bad as R, but differs from R; the value X is a constant representing the relative probability on a given night of precipitation, earthquake, fire and unfavorable conditions for projected invasions."

Goop Smiles On Rams

Rams 24—Placer 7! Dr. Goop skips lightly into the wings, and his harsh, demoniac laughter floats back, tauntingly: "Also State to get slapped by Nevada . . . If I'm wrong, sue me!"

He vanishes. Return to those dark realms whence you came, Dr. Schuyler, Goop! Never darken our door again! Back to Hell, you satanic flunky! Don't show up again if you're off by more than six points; but if you're right . . . all of us around here will sell out cheap.

Rams In Top Condition For Placer Game At Seals

By KEI HORI

Under the reflecting arc-lights of Seals Stadium, the initial game of the 1940 season will see the college Rams and the Placer Mountaineers vieing for honors tonight at 8 o'clock.

Straining at the leash held by Coach Leland Eisan, the Rambling Eleven is in the pink of condition, despite the loss of George Meyers, stellar tackle, who has been taken out of practice because of internal injuries, and Norman Simon. In all probability, Coach Eisan said, Meyers will not see action tonight.

Looming above the many potential threats is the veteran Al Nauman, seasoned ball-packer of '39. An expert in passing, running and kicking, Nauman has shown more fight and power than last year. Close behind is Jolting Jim Honnert, whom Coach Eisan promises heavy duty this season.

This year, the college has one of the fastest, yet the most powerful backfields under Eisan's regime. Luke Lowell and Dave Cunningham, the halves, have the speed to lead interference as well as come around for reverses.

Ends Howard Council and Herb Taylor, according to statistics, have the speed to cover the punts and kick-offs, and the line boasts an impenetrable wall. Dick Wilson, chunky center backs the line like a dam holds back water. Despite his 190 pounds, Wilson is fast enough to cover the whole short secondary.

Placer, on the other hand, has not been idle since the drubbings received by the Rams two years in succession. Their roster averages well over 170 pounds, their ends are tall and rangy, while the line looks solid and heavy. The Mountaineers from Auburn have tasted defeat twice to the tune of 19 to 0.

With the rumor of a new coach at Placer may also come a new attack, more ferocious, more determined than the last. It was the passing attack that downed the Placer team for the last two years, and the Mountaineers have concentrated upon the short flat passes that proved so effective in those games.

Eisan, in order to have a well balanced team, claims speed and power in the backfield, fast and secure ends and a dependable line. Pinky Laracou and Clark Johnson will hold the adjacent positions to Wilson, while Bill Windeler stands alone at the tackle position. Coach Eisan has not definitely placed a man in the gap left open by Meyers.

Planning a wide open attack for the initial game, Eisan has also some trick plays which are good for precious yardage. Speed, which is so essential for trick plays, is plentiful, and the game looks to be one of the most colorful of the season.

Soccer

League Play To Begin Soon

Opening league competition within two weeks, Joe Lantagne, head soccer coach, started the Rams in a practice game yesterday against a local high school team.

Lantagne still declines to comment on the future possibilities of his team, until the practice season is under full steam. "We are going to have tough sledding during the coming league season," Lantagne said. "Of the nine teams in the league, only two, besides ourselves, come from two year colleges."

Competition this season is confined to one league, The California Intercollegiate Soccer League, which includes both two and four year colleges. California, Stanford, U.S.F., San Jose State, San Francisco State, Cal Aggies, Menlo, and San Mateo Junior Colleges are included in our league, Lantagne said.

During the last two weeks, the shinkickers have been engaged in workouts to bring themselves back into playing condition after the long summer layoff, Lantagne revealed.

The boys have been using the practice field at the far end of the campus in their workouts, but haven't been able to practice goal kicking since no goal posts have been built at the field, Lantagne said.

At the coaches' meeting held last Monday, Lantagne obtained a tentative soccer scheduled for this season.

Official Ice Breaker Today At Winterland

Today, the initial ice breaker for the college will be held at Winterland, from 2 until 5 p.m., according to Joseph E. Williams, college instructor.

Main recipients of instruction will be members of the college skating club, and members of the Women's Athletic Association ice skating club, but all men and women of the college who are interested in skating are invited to attend, Williams said.

Admission prices are 25 cents with skates, and 40 cents without. Location of Winterland, ice skating rink, is at Post and Steiner Streets.

William Hart and Ed Bodel, star skaters of the college, have returned this semester, according to Williams, and will be on hand at today's ice breaker.

Men skaters of the college are invited to enter a speed skating contest. Further details may be obtained from Williams.

Winterland has been the scene of former ice skating activities of the college. Students of the college were unable to practice for the Ice Carnival during the summer months because the Ice Follies had been occupying the rink. However, with the opening of the rink, college skaters are increasing with the sport, Williams said.

Swimmers Look To Spring For Competition

Segregation of the college swimming classes is now getting under way, with the swimmers being classified according to their stroke, John Hurley, college swimming coach, announced this week.

"The mermen with the best strokes are being placed in an advanced group," Hurley said. "These men will work to improve their stroke and will probably be taught life-saving later in the semester," he added.

Although there will be no competition this semester, Hurley expects to put a swimming team in the field in the spring. Although there are a few likely looking prospects in his classes, these men would not stand a chance, at the present, with other teams, he added.

Facilities for the local aquatic performers are limited at present, Hurley announced. Even with the limited facilities, he said that he would be glad to interview anyone who would like to swim for the locals next semester.

Tennis Competition This Semester In Intramurals

Although there is no tennis team during the fall semester, tennis stars will be able to win their laurels during an intramural tennis ladder, to be staged later this semester, Tom Wilson, head tennis coach announced early this week.

The ladder will be open to all members of the Associated Students who have an ability in tennis, Wilson added. Members of the tennis classes will compete as part of their regular class work, and other players may play when they can schedule it.

Both singles and doubles tournaments will be included in the tourney, Wilson mentioned. Plans are not complete at the present time, but hopes to release the plans for the tournament soon, he said.

Since the college now boasts a court of its own, the players can now train during their spare time instead of going to the Palace of Fine Arts as they have been doing. Although the court is not of excellent condition, it provides an exclusive ground for the Ram tennisers.

AMS Bon-Fire

Pre-Game Celebration Bans Women; September 26 Date

Although the date was changed once, the Associated Men Students' bonfire will positively take place Thursday night, September 26, Ted Theodus, AMS president, announced.

One other change has also been made, according to the men's club leader. The affair is to be for men only instead of both sexes, he revealed.

The fire will be in anticipation of the game with San Francisco State, a more-or-less traditional rival, Theodus said. The purpose of the event is to build up spirit and produce a good turn-out at the game the following night, he said.

Fire Between Gyms

The fire will be in between the two gyms, and will be lighted at 8 p.m. that night. All men possessing a student body card are expected to put in an appearance, he pointed out.

The bonfire committee, announced Theodus, is working to make the fire a success. The committee is made up of Bob Dolman, Hugh Waite, Lyle Shultz, Kenneth Rea, Pete Aydelotte, Dan "Meadow-mouse" McHugh, Earl Thollander, Junior Clay, and Theodus.

Stagz May Appear

Efforts are being made to obtain an outside coach for presentation at the event, according to the men's leader. Right now, the possibilities of getting Amos Alonzo Stagg from the College of the Pacific look very bright, he said. Malley is another possibility, he indicated.

Theodus claims that the bonfire will make up for the smoker in every conceivable way. All entertainment, refreshments and accessories that were to have been at the smoker, will be found at the bonfire, the AMS chief commented.

Smith, Malls Expected

In addition to the outside coach, he expects to present the local coaching staff, some of the members of the football squad, Ernie Smith, or Walter Mails, or both, and the inimitable Frank P. "Doc" Sewell. "Sewell will explain his 'Sewell System' and perhaps tell a few of his famous jokes," Theodus said.

"All of the above-mentioned talent free food and accessories, and a big fire are all for the asking and one student body card for any man of the college," ended Theodus.

In Sympathy

Editor's note: We note with sorrow the passing of Barbara Crespi, former Lowell High student who attended the college for two years. Miss Crespi was well known and well liked in college circles, and the students join us in sending condolences to members of her family.

Salesman Wanted

Taylor Type Preferred

Any tall men of the college who want a job and who can double for an Esquire advertisement are advised by Virginia Gohn, business instructor, to see her immediately.

A position as salesman has been offered through the merchandising course to a student of the college who can meet qualifications. It pays 40 cents an hour and entails 15 hours a week of work according to Miss Gohn, who said the position is with a highly reputable men's specialty shop in San Francisco.

The job is open only to students enrolled in the college merchandising course she pointed out. The course, business 101a, is a two hour one from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. daily.

Miss Gohn announced she would be in her office, Room 224, daily except Thursday until 11 o'clock. Students should see her this week she said.

The store has insisted upon the applicant's being a "good-dresser" and has expressed a preference for a rather tall man, she said in explaining the requirements.

More On Intramural

a. All members of the student body and faculty are eligible, except a student may not compete in a sport in which he has won an award or a faculty member may not enter a sport that he is coaching.

2. Protests.

a. The decision of officials will not be disputed. In any case of doubt that cannot be settled on the spot, the team captain will state that he objects and play will be resumed. The protest will then be filed and the student manager, assistant manager and intramural director will make the final decision.

9. Schedules.

a. Schedules and results will be published in The Guardsman.

b. A team that is not on the field ready to play within 15 minutes after scheduled starting time will be considered to have forfeited the game.

10. General.

a. If necessary to postpone games because of rain, etc., the following games will be played as scheduled and the games postponed played at the end of the round-robin.

Space Open In Flight Courses

Places are still open for students in flight training, Captain George Richards, college director of the Civilian Pilot Training program, said today.

All sophomore students between the ages of 19 and 26 on October 1 of this year are eligible for the training, Captain Richards said.

Freshmen are eligible to enter the theory courses given twice each week.

In addition; all persons who have completed two years of college and who are within the age limit, are eligible for the course.

Anyone who meets these requirements, whether or not they are students at the present time, may sign up for training.

Aviation is meeting five mornings each week, offers from 35 to 50 hours of flight training and has a university value of five units.

Interviews are given by Captain Richards in his office, Room 237, every morning from 8 to 10 o'clock.

Songsters To Tryout Tuesday For Hotel Night Friday

Students wishing to try out for the singing contest at the Junior College Night at the Palace Hotel on September 27 should be prepared to sing in Room 100 at 4 o'clock next Tuesday, Mary Frances Malone, campus representative, announced today.

"One man and one woman will be chosen," Miss Malone declared. "Winners will receive free cover charges for dancing that evening."

Judges for the contest will be Miss Malone, Len Gross, and Lyle Shultz, she added.

Featuring a special price of $2.07 per couple including one coca-cola per person, the affair will take place in the Rose Room Bowl immediately after the College-State football game at Seals Stadium, Miss Malone said.

"Artie Shaw and his famous band will be a tremendous attraction for the affair, especially since students at the college will receive such unusual financial consideration," she declared.

She urged that students place their reservations with Gross, Shultz, or herself as soon as possible to assure themselves of being able to get in that night.

"Last semester's night honoring the college was declared a very definite success," Miss Malone continued, "and those who had made early reservations were accorded privileges."

There is a possibility of having the college song sung at the affair, provided that words and music for the song may be obtained in time.

Gross While Thinking

THE rally last Thursday brought out some interesting sidelights.

Most noticeable of these was the absolute lack of enthusiasm concerning the football team and the game with Placer. The yell leaders weren't to blame either, for they tried their best to instill some spirit into the gathering.

The only conclusion that it is possible to draw from this situation is that the majority of the students attending the college are a bunch of deadheads that haven't the ambition or the desire to support their team.

If this be so, it is indeed a deplorable situation and one which gives the college an undesirable reputation in the eyes of the public and the other colleges around us.

Our traditional rival, San Francisco State does not have as many students as we have, but they have two or three times as much spirit.

RECENTLY this column commented upon the Forum Club choosing the night of the first football game as the date of its first club meeting.

Forum didn't care much for this criticism, so the following letter was received by the writer:

Editor, The Guardsman:

In regard to your statement concerning the lack of school spirit and cooperation of the Forum Club, may we offer the following reasons why the Forum Club held its meeting on the same night as the college football game: (1) We had already changed our meeting because of a dance on a previous night. (2) The announcement of our meeting had already gone into The Guardsman when we were informed that our meeting conflicted with the football game. (3) If we were to postpone our activities because of conflicting school functions, we would never be able to hold a meeting. (4) We believe that the Forum is just as much an activity of the college as the football game.

Dear Forum: The date of the Placer game was published in The Guardsman on September 3, and has been published every issue since then. Do you ever read The Guardsman when there is a notice about Forum in it?

Surely you can find a time when there isn't a college function to hold your meetings. Other organizations manage to get along.

There is undoubtedly a place in the college for a club such as Forum but as to the club being important enough to hold an equal place with the support of the college athletic endeavors, we are inclined to be slightly skeptical.

If the students had to decide which to eliminate, the Forum or the football team, which one do you think would remain?

LAST Friday this column mentioned a student who traveled all the way from Benicia to attend classes.

After the paper came out we found that another student lives in Martinez, about the same distance from the college as Benicia.

We wonder how many more there are? Bouquets to all of them, they're getting an education the hard way, but it will probably be worth more to them than the students who live a couple of blocks from the campus.

NATIONAL

Whether one likes Wendell Willkie or not, he must give the man credit for having plenty of energy.

It is a pretty tough grind to travel all over the nation stopping at almost every point to make a speech. He certainly draws the crowds but one is inclined to wonder how many of the people that hear him speak will vote for him?

It seems to us that the hardest part of the whole job is having to smile every minute of the day, whether or not he feels like it.

FOREIGN

SAFEST place in the European war at this time seems to be aboard a British naval vessel cruising in the Mediterranean.

After reading Mussolini's speeches and Virginio Gayda's editorials we thought the Italians were the most courageous, and warlike peoples on the face of the earth. Well, they may be courageous, but they certainly aren't warlike.

British sailors have been hoping for days to catch a brief glimpse of the Italian Navy, but even this hope was denied them, or the highly vaunted Roman fleet is spending all its time avoiding the Royal navy.

Of course, we can't blame the Italians too much, for if the British ever do meet them, they'll blow the Italian navy out of the water and chase what is left right back to the gates of Rome.

Yes sir, the Italians surely talk a good fight.

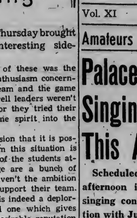
Palace Night Singing Tryout This Afternoon

Scheduled for 3 o'clock this afternoon in Room 100 is the singing contest held in connection with Junior College night at the Palace Hotel on Friday night, Mary Frances Malone, campus representative, revealed today.

"One man and one woman will be chosen to sing in the Rose Room Bowl Friday night," Miss Malone said. "Judges will be Len Gross, Lyle Shultz, and myself."



Last semester's Junior College night at the Palace also featured the singing of a college student, Anita Welt. Miss Welt is this semester's low sophomore class secretary.

"Winners of the contest will receive complimentary cover charges for Friday night," Miss Malone declared.

She emphasized that even though students had not notified Gross, Shultz or herself of their intention to try out this afternoon, that any student might take part.

"Last semester's Palace Night was acclaimed a tremendous success, Miss Malone said. "This semester's special feature price of $2.07 per couple including one coca-cola per person is expected to prove an added attraction."

Stressing the fact that reservations must be made early, she said that reservations could be made by telephoning or getting in touch with the campus representatives at college.

Anita Welt

"Artie Shaw and his orchestra are expected to be a special feature of the evening," Miss Malone remarked. "His orchestra is known for the fact that they are advocates of music 'newer than swing' and this is the first appearance of Shaw's musical organization in the Bay Region."

A special performance of the college song will probably be given if the music and words are obtained from the music department, she declared.

"Since the football game with State takes place on the same night, it is thought that the affair will have a large attendance of college students," Miss Malone said.

NYA Slips Due October 6; Extra Funds Requested

Applications for NYA employment will be accepted in Room 148, Edward H. Redford, college NYA director, declared recently.

"I should like to inform students working on NYA that slips are due on October 6, and that regulations concerning those slips must be strictly observed," Redford said.

He also warned supervisors that they will be denied NYA help if any of their workers fail to follow instructions.

"Extra funds have been requested from the government because of this semester's increased enrollment and subsequent increase in NYA applications," he announced. "However, no answer has been received from the authorities as yet."

Work in NYA office was delayed somewhat by a rush of applications following registration, but order has been restored, Redford said. "Typists and experienced laboratory assistants are especially needed," he announced, "because of our increased facilities."

Ready For Dedication Day

Twelve days more and the Science Building, an architect's version of which appears above, will be officially dedicated in a ceremony open to the public.

On this day of days for the college, the various departments will put on their best faces for the throngs of visitors that are expected to be present.

The college building itself will be brightly adorned in red and white bunting; students and faculty members will exhibit their work.

In all, a dedication that will make San Francisco proud of its junior college has been planned by hard-working students and faculty members alike.

AMS Bonfire Thursday Night To Feature Guest Speakers

All men students are invited to attend the Associated Men Student's bonfire, to be held next Thursday evening at 8 between the two gyms, Ted Theodus, AMS president, announced this week.

A possibility that the evening's entertainment might be highlighted by the appearance of Amos Alonzo Stagg, head football coach of the College of the Pacific, was mentioned by Theodus.

"There will be at least one outside coach at the bonfire," Theodus revealed, "and either Ernie Smith or Walter Mails of the San Francisco baseball club will appear."

If present plans are a success, Theodus said, the bonfire will not only be "just as good as the cancelled smoker, but will be the talk of the college for generations to come."

Also scheduled to appear at the affair are Coach Leland Elsan of the college, some of the members of the football squad, several student leaders, and Franklin P. Sewell, of the college faculty. Elsan is expected to enlighten the students of the college on the football situation.

"Not only will the event combine these attractions already mentioned, but also there will be free food before the evening is over," Theodus promised.

One student body card per person is required for admission, according to the committee. No women are to be admitted, although they were previously invited.

Theodus revealed that the AMS was pushing plans for the forthcoming barn dance. As soon as the bonfire celebration is over, a committee will be named, he said.

As soon as the committee is formed and plans get under way, Theodus announced that a prize would be awarded to the best costumed couple. At present he has no definite plans.

The site for the dance has been set for the women's gym, but it is rumored that it will be held in the Alvarado barn, north of Richmond in the East Bay.

The barn dance is one of the traditional affairs of the AMS, the bonfire is a newcomer, the AMS prexy revealed. The officers are working hard to make both a success, he added.

The success of last semester's barn dance was due, in part, to the splendid surroundings of Alvarado Park, Theodus also noted.

Cafeteria Requests Student Cooperation

Hilda Watson, supervisor of the college cafeteria, said today that no extra help is needed in the cafeteria but that the situation may change in the future.

Students are requested, Mrs. Watson declared, to refrain from doing class assignments at cafeteria tables during the rush hour, between eleven and twelve, or to remain at a table and prevent other students from making use of the cafeteria.

"However," she said, "the majority of the students have been cooperating splendidly and have helped to alleviate the confused situation."

Students are also requested not to remove plates or trays from the cafeteria room, not only because it hinders efficient operation but also because of the unfavorable appearance that scattered utensils give to the college, Mrs. Watson commented.

Activities

Semester Social Calendar Ready

Completed at the Social Committee meeting of last Thursday, the college social calendar has been released by Jean Arnold, chairman of the group.

In the list of events to come are class dances, AWS and AMS functions, football meets and WAA activities.

From this date, the calendar reads as follows:

September 25—WAA sport spread
September 26—AMS bonfire
September 27—Game, San Francisco State at Roberts Field
October 1—Game, Cal frosh at Berkeley
October 9-10—AWS senior reception
October 11—Game, Los Angeles at Los Angeles
October 11—High freshman dance
October 18—Game, Sacramento at Sacramento
October 24—WAA swim party
October 25—U.S.F. frosh at Seals
November 1—Game, San Mateo at Seals
November 1—AMS barn dance
November 7—WAA kid party
November 11—Pasadena at Kezar
November 16—Modesto at Seals
December 3—A Capella trip
December 6 (indefinite)—AWS function
December 9-13—WAA Tourney Week
December 12—WAA banquet
December 13—Low sophomore dance
January 10—High soph formal

Concerning other dates to be cleared on the calendar, Miss Arnold added that all groups planning an affair open to the college confer with the committee to assure that the date set will be the most favorable one.

"We will have regular meetings this semester, the day and hour to be set later this week. Clubs and other groups planning a social function are welcome to send a representative to these meetings at any time," she said. "We are working in every way to encourage college spirit and to make the dances a success for everyone."

The next college dance scheduled is the high freshman event on October 11. Although indications are that it will probably be held in one of the college gymnasiums, no definite announcement can be made at this time. Problems brought up at the last meeting of the social group in this connection were chiefly concerning the lighting system, the parking space available, and that of weather, according to Jean Arnold.

"If it should rain on the night we hold a dance, there will be one big mess, as the cars will not be able to go over the campus grounds and students will have to battle through the mud to reach the gym," a member of the social committee declared, recalling a dance of the previous semester when pluvial weather descended.

Because of the limited Associated Student budget this semester and in line with a policy of holding most of the social functions on this new campus, plans were to have all future college dances except the high soph formal take place in the women's gymnasium. However, a majority of committee members present last Thursday were in favor of holding the traditional AMS barn dance elsewhere,

Building Progress In Final Stages This Week

Registrar J. Paul Mohr announced today that final work on the college building proper is nearing completion and that all classrooms will soon be adequately equipped.

Blackboards and other necessary fixtures have been placed in almost all laboratories and classrooms and only sliding boards and a few minor adjustments remain to be placed.

"Large blackboards to be used in lecture halls should arrive some time this week," the registrar added.

There has been no further development in the plans to widen Phelan Avenue, so that diagonal parking may be permitted safely, or in the development of a parking area immediately surrounding the main building, Mohr said.

"However," he added, "a parking area is being constructed in the vicinity of gymnasiums and work there is progressing rapidly."

Pathways about the college grounds have very nearly been completed, the registrar continued, and work will be begun shortly on lights for these pathways so that dances may be held in the women's gymnasium.

Beautification of the grounds has been speeded up a great deal and within a few weeks should be mostly completed, Mohr concluded.

More Than 200 Periodicals Now In College Library

Current periodicals on file in the library now number more than 200 with more scheduled to be added from time to time. These periodicals are on the shelves in back of the loan desk and are not to be taken out of the library. They may be used informally in the section of the library set aside for that purpose. The magazines have been chosen for various departments, and cover numerous fields and topics.

"The most up to date information will be found in periodicals," Dr. Marcus Skarstedt, head librarian said. "The students just starting college, as well as students who have been here before, should get to know the periodicals as they would a friend."

New records of attendance are being set as evidenced by the large number of students who use the library during the periods of the day. All are appreciating the privilege of "browsing around the stacks" and mastering assignments in an atmosphere conducive for studying, Skarstedt observed.

Eleanor Blinn, assistant librarian, is busy training students from the NYA office who are new at library technique. The assistants add to the speed of service and lessen the work which has formerly rested entirely on the shoulders of the librarian, she said.

A Week From Sunday

Program Complete For Oct. 6 Building Dedication Ceremony

By THEODORA WONG

Marking the formal presentation of this new San Francisco Junior College to the public, a dedication ceremony on Sunday, October 6, at 1 o'clock, will open the building to the public, Lloyd D. Luckmann, president of the Faculty Association and chairman for all arrangements, announced.

The dedication opens in the women's gymnasium on the hour, and will continue until about 2 p.m., according to Luckmann's plans. Acting as master of ceremonies, Richard E. Doyle, chairman of the physical properties of the Board of Education, will introduce as speaker of the day C. Harold Caulfield, president of the board.

Prominent Speakers

Other speakers scheduled for the program are Angelo J. Rossi, mayor; Joseph P. Nourse, superintendent of schools; and Archibald J. Cloud, college president.

Completing this formal ceremony will be the singing of the college hymn by the A Cappella choir, under the direction of Flossita Badger, instructor. "Music for this portion of the program will be supplied by Ralph Murray's American Legion band of Post 223, which by that time will have completed a year's engagement at the Exposition as its official band," Luckmann revealed.

Radio Broadcast Planned

From 3 o'clock on, open house will be held in the main unit, the Science Building, where the public will be invited to inspect the various classrooms and exhibits, Luckmann announced. Moving pictures will be shown in Rooms 100 and 136, and according to the college radio department a half-hour program will be broadcast from Room 200 by the radio production class and repeated at 4. The broadcast will dramatize the life of Franz Schubert, centering on his composition of Hark, Hark, the Lark, and will feature some of his famous music.

All classrooms and laboratories designated for single purposes will be labelled and described, Luckmann commented. Special displays will be those of published works by the faculty and of art works by Richard M. Allman and Evans M. Ecke, instructors in that field. The Guardsman, college publication, will also prepare an exhibit, he added.

Members of the Block Society will act as ushers in the main building, Luckmann disclosed, while the Women's Service Society and students in the block letter group will serve in the gymnasium.

Gay Colors To Deck College

In front of the Science Building, the columns below the motto, "The Truth Shall Make You Free," will appear in solid red and white, alternately. Festive red and white bunting will cover the front and back stairways of the women's gym also, it is planned.

Some of the works of contemporary artists which have been long anticipated as valuable additions to the building will be in evidence, Luckmann said. A ram's head carved from California redwood will be completed and placed in the cafeteria, and the limestone head of Thomas A. Edison now being fashioned, will be seen to the east of the building, although the latter will not be finished. However, should the sculptor working on it feel inclined to continue the job on Sunday, Luckmann smiled, the public

Appointments

Administrative Changes Made

With the resignation last week of J. Graham Sullivan and the appointment of Louis G. Conlan to fill his position as Coordinator of Educational Management, several changes have been effected in college administrative offices.

John J. Brady has been named to fill the vacancy created by the elevation of Conlan, according to President Archibald J. Cloud. Conlan will retain his position as acting head of the physical education department, however.

Sullivan, in addition to his duties as coordinator, was general adviser to the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division. Because of his departure, some duties within the division have been reassigned, and new appointments made.

Ernest J. Hjorth, instructor in charge of chef training will have assistant, Terry Sindelin graduate student, who will assist in directing production in the kitchen.

Cynthia Richardson, graduate of last season, will be manager of the cafeteria under the supervision of Hilda Watson.

Placement problems of the hotel students, Dean Edwin C. Browne said, will be handled by a committee headed by him and including Mrs. Watson and Wendell.

High School Seniors To Be Honored By AWS

Plans for the Associated Women Students' teas honoring high school seniors on October 9 and 10 are being formed, according to Margaret Dougherty, AWS adviser.

"Because of the large attendance anticipated, we have decided to hold this traditional event on two consecutive days," Miss Dougherty said. "By doing this we expect to be able to give the visitors better attention and also to carry on tours of the campus."

Final plans for the affair and the appointment of various committees to take part in the teas will be accomplished soon, she declared. "This semester we shall not provide dancing and singing as entertainment as in past semesters, but we shall feature instead tours of the college grounds," she commented.

Future AWS plans are still tentative, of course, Miss Dougherty said.

It is believed, however, that the traditional tea for parents of college women will be held later in the semester.

● File Graduation Petitions, Please!

Last warning to students who expect to graduate in January to file graduation petitions with the registrar's office was made by Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

● Tomorrow Last Day For Textbook Money

Last day to call for text books or money from the Women's Service Society at the bank will be tomorrow, Mildred Bartosiewski, WSS president, announced today.

"We will definitely close at 1 o'clock tomorrow," Miss Bartosiewski said. "I should like to urge those students who haven't as yet called for their books or money to do so immediately."

● Market Street Railway Dicker Hanging Fire

No definite understanding has yet been made regarding the possible sale here of Market Street Railway tickets to junior college students, Michael M. Zarchin, faculty treasurer, announced.

It is hoped that in a few weeks a definite "yes" or "no" can be given, Zarchin said.

Intolerance Should Be Kept Out Of United States

THE other evening in one of San Francisco's districts an incident occurred which was extremely interesting.

A crowd had gathered around a soap box speaker of the Communist party and was listening to the orator haranguing against the administration, conscription, democracy and other allied subjects.

The crowd was very unreceptive toward the speaker and a few angry remarks were muttered.

Several soldiers were standing on the fringe of the audience and one woman turned to one of the soldiers and said, "Why doesn't the army do something about stopping the lies of those filthy Communists? They ought to be thrown out or shot!"

The soldier after pausing a moment calmly replied, "Communist, eh, well they have their point of view too."

The incident in itself is nothing, but the underlying principles it involves are of tremendous importance.

Although the point of view of the woman is understandable, it is the attitude of the soldier which should make us pause and think for a second.

Perhaps one thing more than any other stands out when reviewing the recent actions of people and nations. That one thing is intolerance.

During the past few years when Europe is mentioned, the word "intolerance" is unfortunately linked with the actions of most of the nations across the seas.

America and Americans should remember this fact and bend over backwards to avoid duplicating it.

It has been said that the United States is too free. This may well be true but it is also true that it is infinitely better to be too free as exemplified by this nation than have no freedom at all.

Closing Date Near For Golden Gate Exposition

FIVE days more and the Golden Gate International Exposition will be filed away with the rest of the world's fairs. As fairs go, this one has ranked at the top. There probably will not be any more Expositions like ours. In fact, there probably will not be any fairs in any country for a very long time.

If you haven't had your fill of the Fair, if you haven't had enough of the Guatemala Marimba Band, if you're one of those persons who never tires of the Court of the Moon, you had better sate yourself within the next few days left.

There are so many things to see and so little time to see them. Many people consider a trip to the Gayway the prime attraction at the Fair while others may consider the most interesting exhibit to be the Science Building. Although there is a wide difference in the two attractions just named, they serve splendidly to illustrate the wide contrast in entertainment that was presented by the Exposition this year. Nothing but praise can be given the Fair officials for the most splendid and diversified list of attractions lined up for daily presentation to the public. There is no denying that the Fair had variety in the full sense of the word.

Last year, near the Fair's closing, most people were rather certain of its continuation. This year, its definite closing is practically a closed issue, so don't defer your visit in the belief that the Fair will be extended.

The Exposition officials purposely do not plan on an extension because they want the Fair to finish with a real "bang." They do not wish to drag out the Fair's run, and, in doing so, bring the Exposition to a slow end.

From all appearances the Fair will "go down" in a real riot of color and noise and gaiety. Everyday, from now to the last, should be well worth attending. B. H. '41

Meet The Students
By DOROTHY PIERCE

WANDERING into the cafeteria with as much sense of direction as an egg-beater, this interviewer happened upon Ted Penland, Great Falls High School graduate. (Don't know where Great Falls is? Wait a minute—Hey, where's that map. Ah, Montana.) Oh, Ted you're a long way from home.

He started this chummy little interview off with "My two strongest dislikes are the conceit of The Guardsman and commuting from Oakland to San Francisco every day." Not being able to let that remark about The Guardsman slip by we asked "how come", praying hopefully that ye dear old editor would walk in and offer some defense.

"Our high school paper won third place in its division but we didn't keep mentioning the fact in every edition as The Guardsman does." (Come now, Mr. Penland, not EVERY edition). Penland was associate and sports editor of that third placed phenomenon.

"I have nothing against the editor, for a matter of fact, I don't even know what he looks like" (you're in for a treat) "but I think he ought to quit resting on the laurels of the former editor," Penland volunteered.

We volunteered with "How do the women at junior college compare with those in Montana." Replied he—looking squarely at your interviewer—"I think the girls in Montana are much prettier." (Mr. Gross, move over in the dog-house to make room for me).

Deciding to confine our remarks to Ted himself, this blundering reporter found out he was a major in mechanical engineering, intending to futher his education at the University of California. He's interested in photography, skiing, swimming, and skating.

Frankness is to be admired so your reporter tends now to give a brief description of the honored guest. Being tall, but not too tall, he was built so that you could either see over his shoulder or around him. This always saves valuable time, not having to walk around great hulks. (Excuse it please, males).

He had a head covered with wavy, blond hair (sounds like Nelson Eddy, doesn't it), eyes that shone mischief, and a smile that explained why little children are taught to wash their teeth three times a day. In other words, he was quite a man in the estimation of this writer (or so I call myself).

Next week the women have their chance to make news. In the meantime leave the men to their sports, studies (presuming they do study). and to the wiles of the opposite sex.

Quotable Quotes ACP

"The reason for our lawlessness is that at present we are just changing over from authoritative control to internal control. The former, as employed by parents of the old days, has been released without the establishment of good internal control by modern day fathers and mothers. Our schools are placing increased emphasis on character development and through the study of music, art, literature and science are providing an 'education for leisure,' so that our future citizens will not spend their time in unprofitable and frivolous pursuits." George Melcher, 72-year-old superintendent of Kansas City schools and a teacher since he was 16, makes the point that education has not failed, declaring that increasing lawlessness is not the fault of the education system.

The Spectator

FOR his first release under the newly organized Frank Lloyd Productions Company, the aforementioned Lloyd translated into strips of celluloid the context of Elizabeth Page's mighty novel, The Tree of Liberty, switched the title to Howards of Virginia, and made his debut as producer-director a most auspicious one.

The Howards of Virginia is the tale of a burly, uncouth backwoodsman, Matt Howard, portrayed by Cary Grant, who, through the friendship of young Thomas Jefferson, meets a young, gentle, aristocratic lass (Martha Scott). Despite the obvious antagonism of her snobbish brother (Cedric Hardwicke), a brief courtship follows, culminating in their marriage. Into the rough, tough back country, Matt takes his delicate bride to face the endless ardors and labor that were slowly to build his wilderness plantation into a thing of beauty and style. Their marriage is happy despite the wide divergence in their upbringing. Three children are born. And then, the Revolutionary War strikes to disrupt the tranquility of their existence. Mrs. Howard flees to the isolated splendor of her brother's home while Matt goes out to suffer with the "lowly rebels" and their general, George Washington. But war, starvation and tyranny can not hold down the Howards of Virginia.

This Frank Lloyd production is done with broad, sweeping scope, and meticulous detail that is reflected in the authentic settings and backgrounds. Part of the film was actually photographed in the restored city of Williamsburg with all the quaint buildings of the 18th century rebuilt and refurnished. The major portion of the film is devoted entirely to the personal story of Matt and his wife while the last reel or two deviates considerably to present a stirring and coherent montage of the American Revolution. This shift in story presentation does no harm, however. On the contrary, The Howards of Virginia is a magnificent piece of history-telling that presents in vivid style the momentous steps that transformed this scrawney group of thirteen colonies into the great nation we are today.

The film moves with a smoothness and fluidity that prestiges the delicate handling of Lloyd. The Howards of Virginia is no slow-moving, somber costume drama, but it's as swiftly-paced as any depiction of modern life.

The tumultuous events leading up to the American Revolution are presented in a series of rapid, tingling shots . . . the "give me liberty or give me death" speech of Patrick Henry; the stifling declaration of the Stamp Tax; the Boston Tea Party; the days of suffering at Valley Forge; the final surrender of Cornwallis . . . all constitute integral parts of this saga of the foundation of American tradition.

We're saving acting honors for the last. Grant and Scott in the leads give splendid performances, but it is the memory of Richard Carlston as Jefferson that lingers warmly in one's memory after you leave the theater.

On The Feminine Side

IT'S rather hard to believe that we've only one more week to go to the Fair.

We can remember the curiously vacant feeling we had last year when the lights went out on the island for the last time. Not to wax sentimental, but we could understand the rather nostalgic note that creeps into our parents' voices when they speak about the old Palace of Fine Arts and the Tower of Jewels. Perhaps some day we'll sigh, too, and tell our children about the Aquacade, the Tower of the Sun, Pacifica, and the Court of the Moon.

One of the things we'll tell them about is the way the lights came on when the day was over, transforming the island into a veritable fairy-land of lights, sparkling fountains, and luminous flowers. We'll tell them how incredibly beautiful the colors were, how brilliant, and how strangely alive. And they (being our very fictitious offspring) will undoubtedly give each other meaning glances, reflecting on how sad it is to see someone going to pieces like that and living in the past.

Treasure Island was always exciting, we will continue, undisturbed. There was always something new, something different to quicken one's imagination. The Gayway was alive, vital, with its barkers, spectators, outside shows, penny arcades, hot dog stands, thrill concessions, and omnipresent empty coke bottles. Those were the days!

Of an equally thrilling nature was the Cavalcade, we will tell our long-suffering chidren who have heard it all a hundred times before, anyway. At night it was really a spectacle, with its huge cast of picturesquely costumed men and women, its quaint old props (especially the old cable cars and automobiles), and the magnificent horses and teams that thundered on and off the stage in the best approved "horse-opery" manner. And one of the most moving minutes of all came when the audience arose in silence while the "Star Spangled Banner" was played. (You remember, children, that was 1940, the year of the World War II.)

On we'll rave, about music, about art, about the scientific and mechanical exhibits. The time we heard Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore in one concert, the breath-taking clarity of Lily Pons' truest coloratura notes, the day we heard George Stinson sing the prologue to Pagliacci while tears came into our eyes, the amazing Oscar Levant and his almost inspired Gershwin program. The hours we spent in the science building trying to understand what color hair and eyes our children would have, without having 32 to make it come out right.

There were all sorts of added thrills. One of the most stirring was the nightly retreat in which the Treasure Island company of the United States Army took part. All the men were within a half inch of the same size and drilled with an almost automatic precision. And when the national anthem was played and we all stood at attention, a chill would run up and down your spine, we will say. (For pete's sake, will she never finish, the children fidget.)

The Women's Club, it was the Yerba Buena Club the first year we explain, was simply gorgeous. It faced the setting sun and from its windows you could see the ships sweep into the Yacht Harber. And when the Clippers (old stuff, the kiddies snort) were taking off, it was wonderful.

Oh well, all this is very future and may not actually take place. We may not feel like this at all, but that funny feeling is beginning to take over already.

As we said before, it's rather hard to believe that we've only one more week to go to the Fair.

"No college ever manages a system of registration that works, but each system is a marvel of theory." —Stephen Leacock.

Shots At RAMdom . . .

WILLIAM SAROYAN'S new play, Something About a Soldier, was staged last Friday night by the Theater Arts Colony. (No, they didn't send us passes.) We went slumming in a dramaturgical sort of way Friday just to see what kind of defeatism the paradoxical Armenian has turned out this time. If this publication's censor board doesn't tighten, we'll attempt to render some sort of judgment, in a prejudiced sort of way, on Saroyan's Third Street-born literature. And do we stretch a point on that last word!

PLEASE DON'T THINK we went ignoring the manly tussles Friday purposely. Our defection boils down to a question of ethics. We posed this question: Which would vitiate our youthful spirit most, the post-football game nocturnal "bust" or one of Saroyan's monsterpieces? We chose the unknown quantity, not having any advance announcement of Saroyan's text.

This fellow Saroyan is an interesting creature. In some of his earlier stories he used to ramble in what we presume to be an impenetrable autobiographical cloak about freezing in some rooming house on the wrong side of Market Street and hocking his typewriter and blowing on numbed fingers. Several years after these stories were published, he refused a $1000 Pulitzer award saying that "Such awards vitiate and embarrass art at its source." But then who are we to say what embarrasses art and what doesn't.

IF YOU LIKE CONTRASTS Obtain Willie's Seventeen and begin contrasting. We feel it's one of his better short stories from a writing standpoint, but enthusiasm lags after that. The odd part of it is—don't ask what "it" refers to—that Willie is a nice, respectable looking fellow.

THE GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST is going to stay in moth-balls this opera season if the expensive throat of Lawrence Tibbett has anything to say about it. The thing that the inhaling of something else is supposed to ease has laid Mr. Tibbett lower than the death scene of Aida. All of which means that that lusty drama of the days when the West was golden in a literal sort of way will not be tossed to the Diamond Circle. They will also be denied the privilege of hearing, if the balcony doesn't throw its support on peanuts, that rugged American, Three-fingered Jack, warble in his best Italian accents.

One or two operas have been written in English, but we hear they're for foreign consumption only; it seems an English opera might force our prima donnas to articulate in a reasonable fashion.

Council Blamed For No Cuts; Bad Road Ruins Ford

• Take Notice, Ex-Council!
Editor, The Guardsman:

I noticed in last Tuesday's issue two letters complaining about the lack of "cuts" or illustration in The Guardsman. I would like to add my three cents worth to the complaints.

Those of us who remember The Guardsman in the past, know that it published plenty of pictures when issued only once a week. Even last semester it managed to publish pictures when issued twice a week.

One look at the budget allotments for this semester (as contrasted to last) will explain why. Last semester The Guardsman published a four page paper on Fridays, and only a two page issue on Tuesdays. They were allotted over $3300 dollars against $2750 for this semester.

The figures speak for themselves. It costs more to print two four page issues a week, than one and a half.

The trouble lies in the executive council and finance committee. The gentlemen controlling the money this semester must have decided that they really didn't want a good paper. They must have received more money through the sale of student body cards, yet cut the allowance for the paper.

When the gentlemen (I won't mention any names) of the Ex Council finally wake up to the facts of the case, they might reconsider, and allow The Guardsman enough money to keep from having to use pictures that were taken three or four years ago. At least we hope so.

Sincerely yours,
Philip Kline

• The Road To Ruin
Editor, The Guardsman:

I recently read an editorial in the college paper which stated that the parking facilities of the college are pretty bad.

Pretty bad doesn't describe the condition of my rear axel which was darn near broken going over the dirt road. I park my car there so I don't have to walk a half mile to get to class.

Why doesn't the college have these roads paved?

Yours truly,
A Ford Owner

NEEDED, vehicles of any size, shape, or form. Must be able to make steep hill in high. Comfortable seats desired, but not essential.

Somethin' must be done about this jaunt to the gym. Why? Have you heard of the terrible things that happen to sufferers of this climb and descent? If not, listen my children and you shall hear of the effect it has on we students who are unaccustomed to such strenuous exercise and yours truly means strenuous. Results: weak knees, lack of breath, total exhaustion and so many stiff, sore joints that, by glory, if they don't do something about that hill!—Ah, well, guess we'll just have to partake of some of that well publicized energy giving food of the green, leafy variety. Won't someone hear our plea and start some sort of contraption moving regularly up and down that thar hill? V. B.

Louie's Goop Turns Out As Big Gooph In Guess 1

IN recent issues of The Guardsman, you may have seen the column, "Without Benefit . . . " by our associate editor, Lou Goldstone. In his features, Louie is not attempting to discourage sport fans from reading this page. In those words that only he could use, Louie is telling you, and us, that he has found a character (not unlike our Oscar, who was not unlike Yehudi, the guy who makes the wooden nickels people shouldn't take) whom he has named Schuyler Goop, the gooph. With the aid of Goop's prowesses as a magician, a thing that possesses supernatural powers (like Eugene, the Jeep), Louie is going to outguess the rational system of statistical knowledge and predict Ram scores. Only Louie has to write 12 inches of what some call slop to tell you this. And so what? Does he guess the score? Does Goop turn out to be a gooph? Ha! You tell US!!

Reactions On Maps

See the reaction on Jim Honnert's face when you call him the "Green Hornet"—and when you call Dick Wilson "Meatball"—and when you ask Pete Aydelotte whether he has passed his Subject A in English yet. Some claim he entered college to major in Subject A.

The Coming Carnival

Bill Hart, college ice demon, says Winterland has been remodeled so that it now looks "appealing". Incidentally, Bill says that when the college throws it's next Ice Carnival, he will be able to get, as part of the entertainment, one George Wallace of Norway. Wallace, says Bill, has many Olympic titles and was to compete in the 1940 Olympics if it hadn't been for a certain paper hanger of the old world.

A Wide-Open Letter

Miss Schmultze, take a letter—
To the Oakland Tribune:
Mr. Art Cohn, Columnist:

So sorry did not see Hedy in Ecstacy period Will attempt to catch re-runs and give full opinion period By the way did you see "That" picture question mark Also if you are to quote me comma quote in full period What you did is a sample of poor journalism period Yes comma I am telling you period By the way lay off of our Helen exclamation point Could it be that because Miss Crlenkovich is a San Franciscan and thatOakland—no, cross out—make it Metropolitan Oakland—hasn't any divers of Miss Crlenkovich's caliber that you are turning green question mark Yours respectfully because you are olden than I etcetera etcetera. Mail it immediately Miss Schmultze. No add a post script. P.S. You should read the masthead of The Guardsman and then write your colyum period It is a bi-weekly if you will notice period

Aged Gator

The Golden Tide of the Saffasisco State team "boasts" (again) that it has the "Great Chad Reade" in the line-up. Just how old is this guy Reade anyhow. He went to Lowell while we were still in grammer school. Which should make him about 26.

Paint And Finals

Every man student we have met wished to yelp about the "rapidity" in which the gymnasium is being painted. "At this rate, we will use it during final examination," one personality

AMS's Conflagration

We sometimes wish the AMS would make up its mind. At least, they have finally gotten together, anyway, for the date of the bonfire, which, by the way, Theodus claims, is to be for men students only. Like the smoker.

Benedict Arnold In Skirts

Calmly sitting in the college rooting section surrounded by her WAA prodigees was our favorite women's gym instructor. So far, that is okay with us. She could even have a couple of rrrrrred hots, as far as that part is concerned. But listen, A. K., the minute you start rooting for Placer in our rooting section . . . (no publicity! Hah!)

WAA Barbecue Tomorrow Afternoon At Sigmund Stern

Tomorrow afternoon, members of the Women's Athletic Association and their friends will take over Sigmund Stern Grove from the hours of 4:30 to 9 p.m., when the WAA spread under the chairmanship of Betty Teter, will be held.

Main purpose of the spread, which replaces the traditional splash party this semester, will be that of familiarizing new and prospective members with the aims and activities of the WAA.

"Everyone who attends this affair will be assured of having a good time," Miss Teter said. "This will be the last time we will be able to remind women students, as tomorrow is the big night. Don't forget that the barbecue is in honor of the new students of the college and we hope to see a large group of women representing the Freshman class. Old students are also urged to come out and get acquainted with some of the newer members of the college."

Tickets for the affair have been placed on sale at the college bank and may be purchased for the price of 40 cents.

Bertha Mae Keller, physical education instructor, and Barbara Smith, president of the WAA, will present short talks on WAA aims to those women present at the spread.

Another feature of the evening will be the introduction of those songs judged winners in the Frosh-Sophomore Contest which closes tomorrow at noon, according to Jeanne Arnold, general chairman of the contest.

Entries in the song contest, which calls for original lyrics to old folk tunes or original music and words, commemorating WAA, as well as songs for introducing people, and songs dedicated to specific sports, are still being accepted. A list of old folk tunes suitable for the contest may still be obtained by late entrants in the checkroom on the second floor of the gymnasium.

Members of the WAA comprising the Spread committee include: Betty Teter, general chairman, June Schunick and Irene Schunick, entertainment, Dorothy Nelson, hostess, invitations, Alleen Watt, publicity, Bernice Strube, sports, Rita Welman, arrangements, Rita McDonald, rearrangements.
